WANT TO SPLIT UP THE DEBTS.

Appraisal of Property of Itasca and Koochiching Counties.

A hearing has been ordered for Sept. 6 by Gov. Johnson on the application of the county commissioners of Koochiching county for the appointment of three commissioners to appraise the property of Itasca and Koochiching counties for the purpose of arriving at the division of the debts between the two counties.

The petition for the appointment of the commissioners was presented to the governor by C. W. Stanton, county attorney of Koochiching county, and R. S. McDonald, one of the commissioners of that county. It recites the creation of Koochiching county out of a part of Itasca county on Dec. 12, 1906. At that time, the petition states, the total indebtedness of the original county of Itasca was $183,938.80, and the total amount of funds in the treasury of Itasca county at that time was $60,188.20. It states that certain buildings and real estate owned by the original county still remain in the ownership of Itasca county, including a court house, jail and sheriff's residence and certain buildings on a tract of land used as the county poor farm.

The commissioners of the two counties, the petition states, met at Grand Rapids on Aug. 21 and endeavored to agree upon the value of the buildings and realty, but were unable to agree on the valuation. They represent that the assessed valuation of the original county for the year 1906 was $14,246,473, of which $11,046,973 was in the territory which still comprises Itasca county, and $3,198.500 was in the territory which now comprises Koochiching county.

The statute under which the appraisement will be made is section 393 of the code, which provides that in the separation of a part of one county and the formation of a new county all territory so transferred shall continue liable for its proportion of the excess, if any, of the indebtedness of the original county above the value of its county buildings and of the balance of funds in its treasury. Such share shall be based upon the last assessment, and the value of the buildings, unless agreed upon by the respective county boards, shall be fixed by the sworn appraisal of three disinterested citizens, none of whom shall be a resident or taxpayer in either county, and who shall be appointed by the governor upon the written application of the board of either county. The appraisal shall be in writing, subscribed and verified by at least two of the appraisers, and filed with the secretary of state, who shall within five days transmit to the auditors of the two counties a verified copy of the appraisal.

At the hearing on Sept. 6, unless the officials of the two counties can agree upon the basis of division, the governor will appoint the appraisers.

Stays Till Oct. 1.

FIXES LIMIT ON TEACHERS' PAY.

State High School Board Adopts Minimum.

In some respects the most important action taken by the state high school board, at its meeting at the capitol in St. Paul, was the adoption of a rule fixing the minimum salaries for principals of graded schools receiving state aid $75 and for teachers in such schools $40 a month. The board adopted a new set of rules for state graded schools receiving state aid among which this was one.

A rule was also adopted providing that the school buildings must be equipped with a system of ventilation which will meet the approval of the state board of health, while others related to the equipment of the schools. Under the new rules no teacher who has not been graduated from a course affording special training in primary work shall be qualified to teach in a primary room in any graded school; teachers in grades from the second to the sixth, inclusive, shall hold at least second grade state certificates, and teachers of the seventh and eighth grades shall hold at least first grade state certificates. The principal of a graded school is required to hold a professional state certificate or a diploma from the advanced course of a Minnesota state normal school or of a reputable college or university or a diploma of an equal rank from a state normal school outside of Minnesota which diploma must be first endorsed by the superintendent of public instruction before it is valid. A limited certificate is not valid in any graded school.

Schools failing to comply with the requirements of the new rules or neglecting to maintain a satisfactory standard of efficiency may be dropped from the list of schools receiving state aid.

MANY SMALLPOX CASES.

There Are 360 Reported During Nine Weeks.

The reports of new cases of smallpox received at the office of the state board of health during the nine weeks ending Aug. 19 shows a total of 360 cases. The largest number was in the week ending June 24, when 149 cases were reported, of which 36 were in Hennepin county, 17 in Scott, 16 in Grant, 12 in St. Louis and 8 in Ramsey. In the following week the total number dropped to 64, of which 25 were in Renville, 13 in Stearns, 8 in Chippewa and 7 in Ramsey.

During the week ending July 8 there were 49 cases, of which 12 were in Stearns; Hennepin and Grant counties reported 11 and Ramsey 3. The following week out of a total of 12 cases 5 were in Stearns, 4 in Ramsey, while Hennepin, Carver and Renville each reported 1 case, but no report was received from Minneapolis. During the week ending July 22 Hennepin county reported 12, Big Stone and Stearns 6 each, and Ramsey 3 out of a total of 36. During the following week Ramsey headed the list in the number of cases with 13, Stearns reported 6 and no report was received from Minneapolis.

For the next three weeks the totals were, respectively, 12, 9 and 9, of which Ramsey had but 3 in the week ending Aug. 5.

MASONS HOLD JUBILEE.

Fiftieth Anniversary Is Observed by Lodge at Rochester, Minn.

Aug. 23 will go down in the history of the Rochester Masonic lodge as the greatest day in its first half century of organization, for on that day the fiftieth anniversary was celebrated. Masons from all parts of the state were in the city, and the number included those in highest authority. More than 300 sat down to the banquet in the evening.

BANNER YEAR FOR CANNING.

Minnesota Will Show Big Increase in This Industry This Year.

The indications are that the product of the canning factories of Minnesota will show a considerable increase this year over last, and probably exceed the output of any previous year. In the number of cans of all kinds of vegetables and fruit packed in this state the output was less last year than in 1905, but this was due to the great decrease in the amount of corn canned. The pack of all other vegetables, however, showed a considerable increase over the record for 1905.

The decrease in the number of cans of corn was due largely to the fact that for several years the number of factories canning corn has grown with surprising rapidity in all of the states in which any considerable quantity of corn is raised, resulting in glutting the market. With a surplus stock and falling prices some of the factories found the business unprofitable and did not do any canning last year, while others turned their attention to canning other products, with the result that while in Minnesota there was a very considerable falling off in the production of canned corn, there was a large increase in the other lines.

This somewhat automatic adjustment of the canning industry had the effect of strengthening the market all around, and from reports being received by the inspectors of the state dairy and food department it seems likely that there will be a large increase in the output of all the canneries of the state this year. The products of the canneries are generally contracted for by the jobbers before the packing, and most of the canneries in the state now report that their output this year is practically disposed of already.

The biennial report of Edward K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner, amounted to 7,287,000 cans, while in 1906 it dropped to 6,446,000 cans, a decrease of 1,842,000 cans. In 1905 the total output of all of the canneries was 7,524,000 cans, of which all but 237,000 cans were of corn. The 237,000 were divided among the other lines as follows: Tomatoes, 21,000; sauerkraut, 11,000; pumpkins, 60,000; baked beans, 110,000, and berries, 35,000 cans.

The change which has taken place in the canning industry of the state is shown by the fact that whereas the total output of all products, except corn, in 1905, was 237,000 cans, in 1906 it was 947,100 cans, or practically four times as many. This, however, was not enough to make up for the decrease in the total output, owing to the falling off of the output in canned corn. The growing diversity in the products of the canneries is also shown by the fact that in 1905 there were only five articles packed, besides corn, while in 1906 this number had increased to ten. The 1906 statistics show the following pack of articles not mentioned in the 1905 figures: Peas, 331,100; string beans, 182,400; beets, 3,000; rhubarb, 15,000, and spinach, 2,400 cans.

In addition to this output of vegetables, to which the canners had not turned their attention prior to 1906, an increase in the output of all other products, except pumpkins and berries, is shown. In 1906 21,000 cans of tomatoes were packed, as against 112,000 cans last year; the production of sauerkraut grew from 11,000 cans in 1906 to 30,000 cans in 1906, and the output of baked beans more than doubled, the output in 1906 being 110,000, whereas in 1906 it was 261,900 cans. Decreases are shown in the output of pumpkins and berries, the output of the former being 60,000 cans in 1906, as compared with 10,000 in 1906, and of the latter 88,000 cans in 1905 and 10,000 cans last year.

OPEN NEW SANATORIUM.

State Institution for Consumptives Will Accommodate 60 or More By Oct. 1.

The state sanatorium at Walker will probably open about Oct. 1 with a capacity of sixty to seventy patients. The progress of the work was viewed recently by members of the state board of control. A water plant is being installed, and two large sleeping shacks pushed to completion.

With this small capacity the institution can hardly be self-supporting yet, as intended, and the revolving fund of $60,000 will probably be broken into somewhat.

Rules for admission of patients will be framed after consultation with the physicians on the advisory board. It is intended to admit only patients in the early stages of tuberculosis, and not to accept incurables.

S. W. Leavitt, chairman of the board of control, says they inspected two sites offered near Brainerd for the girls' industrial school. One is beautifully located, but the other is more practical for the state's purposes.

IF CAPITAL SHOULD STRIKE

The Wall Street Journal, ablest of all the organs of finance, has been neither wise nor clever in its covert threat to the country that the capital may go on a strike if the "persecutions" of eminent capitalists do not cease. For it is a silly and short-sighted Wall Street Journal that does not know that for capital to strike would sound the knell of private capital in some of the most important fields; that does not know that even the threat of a "capitalistic strike" is foolhardy to a degree. It is like the heartless and cynical taunt to the French proletariats that they might "eat grass" for a change: a taunt that speeded the revolution that wiped out feudalism and the exemptions and privileges it conferred, says the Omaha World-Herald.

Suppose that the Wall Street Journal's dream should be realized: that the day should come when "capital had gone on a strike", when in the Journal's words, "every wheel in the country will cease to turn; manufacturing establishments to be closed; railroad trains to be brought to a standstill: banking houses to close their doors, and stock exchange take an indefinate recess." Suppose capital should do all this "to teach the country a lesson" Suppose 15,000,000 people to be thrown out of employment, again quoting the Journal, while "the many of the rich men gathered their available funds and prepared to leave the country."

What then?

Could the rich men take their mines and their railroads and their mills and their lands with them? Or would they have to leave them behind?

Leaving them behind, would they continue to "own" and "control" them? Would the government make no move, would 15,000,000 men remain idle while 15,000,000 families starved?

Or would government and 15,000,000 men and the mills and the mines and railroads and lands get together? And in a short time would the train be moving and the grain growing and the mills turning and the mines pouring forth their wealth as of old, responding to the concerted effort of 30,000,000 hands? And would the only important difference between the then and the now being the whole country would be starved into capitulation as the Journal seems to think, or would it be that the whole country would continue to prosper as now, with the same willing hands applied to the same inexhaustible resources, while only the expatriated "rich men" starved gazing the while on paper securities representing wealth no longer theirs?

That, dear Wall Street Journal, is a supremely silly idea for "capitalism" to put into the heads of the mob! The wisest thing capitalism can do is go right along, devoting itself to the reproduction of wealth as it has been doing, thankful of its privileges and immunities, and obeying the laws of the land as enthusitically as it has hitherto flouted them.

If a bill drawn by Pierce Underwood, a Chicago stockbroker, for presentation to congress is ever placed on the statute book "wildcat" mining companies will not have such easy sailing as at present. Anent this measure the Duluth Herald says in part:

In brief, the proposal is to make the postoffice department the judge of whether or not advertisement of mining stock shall be permitted to go through the mails. For this purpose it is required that each such mining company shall furnish to the postmaster general a full statement of its affairs, the details of which statement are prescribed in said bill. Until the postmaster general approves the statement the company promoters are not to be allowed to seek stock through advertising or other use of mails. The statement is to be accompanied by an engineer's report and it is provided that any false statement made by an engineer or any forged signature of an engineer, shall be punished by fine and imprisonment. A heavy fine is provided for advertising mineral stock for sale without complying with the provisions of the bill. It is required that when such a company issues a prospectus it must contain a statement as to uncertainty of speculative enterprises where stock is issued on a property in which ores have not been actually developed.

MASTER RAIN.

STRIDING, striding over the sea,
Calming the rage of the waves goes he,
Lulling the moan of the mighty main,
Assuaging Master Rain!

Marching, marching over the land,
Scattering wide with a lavish hand
Drafts for the thirsting seed of the grain,
Bountiful Master Rain!

Never, never a wanderer long;
Ever, ever a-brim with song—
A plaintive, pleading, pleasuring strain—
Musical Master Rain!

Welcome thou when the shadows sleep!
Welcome thou when the dreams are deep!
Bearing peace to penance and pain,
Merciful Master Rain!

Old as the host of the hills of earth,
Yet as young as the soul of mirth,
Fain we are of thee all of us, fain,
Brotherly Master Rain!

HUDSON.

ROLL to the sea,
Bright river of the mountains!
Poured through the hills
From Adirondack crags,
Buoying the waifs
Of tributary fountains,
Rocking the fleets
That fly a hundred flags!

FORESTS are thine
And fair embowered islands,
Cities are thine
Whose towers touch the skies.
Curve grandly down
Thy goblin haunted highlands;
Lave, silver waved,
The vale where Irving lies.

DEEP breasted stream,
What tales thy hills have told me!
Playmate and friend
In days of youthful glow,
Now, as of old,
In crystal arms enfold me;
Take me again
Within thy cooling flow!

PLUNGING, I watch
Thy deeper waters changing,
Gold lighted green
To amethystine shade;
Strong, armed and free,
Thy boundless bosom raging,
My heart is thine
Beats warm and unafraid.

RISE ABOVE IT.

WHATSOEVER mars your life,
Rise above it.
Whatsoever brings you strife,
Rise above it.
Whatsoever gives you fear,
Whatsoever makes you veer
From the path of duty clear,
Rise above it.

Whatsoever checks your growth,
Rise above it.
Be it selfishness or sloth,
Rise above it.
Whatsoever bars your soul
From its kingdom of control,
Keeps you from the final goal,
Rise above it.

In your past has error been?
Rise above it.
Be not slave unto your sin;
Rise above it.
Set your face unto the dawn,
Never mind the thing that's gone;
Rise above it.

Do you meet the knocking crew?
Rise above it.
Prove it false by what you do;
Rise above it.
Give out love and strength and light,
And the carper's petty spite
All will vanish out of sight;
Rise above it.

Naught without can keep you back;
Rise above it.
In yourself is all the lack;
Rise above it.
There is nothing that can mar
Life for you but what you are.
If there's any inward bar,
Rise above it.

Be the master. Quell the beast.
Rise above it.
Till the voice of self has ceased,
Rise above it.
This is truth the sages taught
From the soul of being caught;
Evil rests within your thought;
Rise above it.

THE WILD ROSE.

SINCE on my suit, alas,
My lady dear doth frown
I lay where she may pass
A wild rose down.

BUT first, lest it should grieve
Thus to be laid so low,
Into its heart I breathe
All my heart's woe:

"HER nature is so sweet
(Save only unto me!)
Even her little feet
Will not wound thee.

"WHERE thine own color glows,
Warm on her dainty cheek,
She'll lift thee, happy rose!
Then, dear rose, speak!

"MY intercessor be,
And in her tiny ear
Whisper, He loveth thee
Who sent me, dear!' "

SISTER ROSE.

A STORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"So I said to him, 'I am sure Louis will agree with me, that our time is yours, and that we shall only be too glad to advance our departure so as to make traveling leisure enough for you to come with us to Rouen. We should be worse than ungrateful——' He stopped me. 'You have always been good to me,' he said, 'I must not impose on your kindness now. No! No! You have formalities to settle before you can leave this place.' 'Not one,' I said—for we have not, as you know, Louis. 'Why, here is your furniture to begin with,' he said. 'A few chairs and tables hired from the inn,' I answered; 'we have only to give the landlady our key, to leave a letter for the owner of the cottage, and then——' He laughed. 'Why, to hear you talk one would think you were as ready to travel as I am!' 'So we are,' I said, 'quite as ready, living in the way we do here.' He shook his head, but you will not shake yours, Louis, I am sure, now you have heard all my long story? You can't blame me, can you?"

Before Trudaine could answer, Lomaque looked out of the cottage window.

"I have just been telling my brother everything," said Rose, turning round towards him.

"And what does he say?" asked Lomaque.

"He says what I say," replied Rose, answering for her brother; "that our time is your time—the time of our best and dearest friend."

"Shall it be done, then?" asked Lomaque, with a meaning look at Trudaine.

Rose glanced anxiously at her brother; his face was much graver than she had expected to see it, but his answer relieved her from all suspense.

"You were quite right, love, to speak as you did," he said, gently. Then, turning to Lomaque, he added in a firmer voice, "It shall be done!"

CHAPTER XXII.

TWO days after the traveling carriage described by Lomaque had passed the diligence on the road to Paris, Madame Danville sat in the drawing-room of an apartment in the Rue de Grenello, handsomely dressed for driving out. After consulting a large gold watch that hung at her side, and finding that it wanted a quarter of an hour only to two o'clock, she rang her handbell, and said to the old servant who answered the summons: "I have five minutes to spare. Send Dubois here with my chocolate."

The old man made his appearance with great alacrity. After handing the cup of chocolate to his mistress, he ventured to use the privilege of talking, to which his long and faithful services entitled him, and paid the old lady a compliment. "I am rejoiced to see madame looking so young and in such good spirits this morning," he said, with a low bow and a mild, deferential smile.

"I think I have reason for being in good spirits on the day when my son's marriage-contract is to be signed," said Madame Danville, with a gracious nod of the head. "Ha, Dubois, I shall yet live to see him with a patent of nobility in his hand. The mob has done its worst; the end of this infamous revolution is not far off; our order will have its turn again, and then who will have such a chance at court as my son? He is noble already through his mother; he will then be noble also through his wife. Yes, yes, let that coarse-mannered, passionate, old soldier father of hers be as unnaturally republican as he pleases, he has inherited a name which will help my son to a peerage. The Vicomte D'Anville (D with an apostrophe, Dubois, you understand?). The Vicomte D'Anville—how prettily it sounds!"

"Charmingly, madame—charmingly. Ah! this second marriage of my young master begins under much better auspices than the first."

The remark was an unfortunate one. Madame Danville frowned portentously, and rose in a great hurry from her chair.

"Are your wits failing you, you old fool?" she cried indignantly; "what do you mean by referring to such a subject as that, on this day of all others? You are always harping on those two wretched people who were guillotined, as if you thought I could have saved their lives. Were you not present when my son and I met, after the time of the Terror? Did you not hear my first words to him, when he told me of the catastrophe? Were they not—'Charles, I love you; but if I thought you had let those two unfortunates, who risked themselves to save me, die without risking your life in return to save them, I would break my heart rather than ever look at you or speak to you again!' Did I not say that? And did not he answer, 'Mother, my life was risked for them. I proved my devotion by exposing myself to arrest—I was imprisoned for my exertions—and then I could do no more!' Did you not stand by and hear him give that answer, overwhelmed while he spoke by generous emotion? Do you not know that he really was imprisoned in the Temple? Do you dare to think we are to blame after that? I owe you much, Dubois, but if you are to take liberties with me——"

"Oh, madame! I beg pardon a thousand times. I was thoughtless—only thoughtless——"

"Silence! Is my coach at the door? Very well. Get ready to accompany me. Your master will not have time to return here. He will meet me for the signing of the contract, at General Berthelin's house, at two o'clock precisely. Stop! Are there many people in the street? I can't be stared at by the mob, as I go to my carriage."

Dubois hobbled penitently to the window, and looked out, while his mistress walked to the door.

"The street is almost empty, madame," he said. "Only a man, with a woman on his arm, stopping and admiring your carriage. They seem like decent people, as well as I can tell without my spectacles. Not a mob, I should say, madame, certainly not a mob."

"Very well. Attend me down stairs; and bring some loose silver with you, in case those two decent people should be fit objects for charity. No orders for the coachman, except that he is to go straight to the general's house."

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE party assembled at General Berthelin's to witness the signature of the marriage-contracts, comprised, besides the persons immediately interested in the ceremony of the day, some young ladies, friends of the bride, and a few officers, who had been comrades of her father's in past years. The guests were distributed, rather unequally, in two handsome apartments, opening into each other—one called in the house the drawing-room, and the other the library. In the drawing-room were assembled the notary, with the contract ready, the bride, the young ladies, and the majority of General Berthelin's friends. In the library the remainder of the military guests were amusing themselves at a billiard-table until the signing of the contract should take place; while Danville and his future father-in-law walked up and down the room together; the first listening absently, the last talking with all his accustomed energy, and with more than his accustomed allowance of barrack-room expletives. The general had taken it into his head to explain some of the clauses in the marriage-contract to the bridegroom, who, though far better acquainted with their full scope and meaning than his father-in-law, was obliged to listen for civility's sake. While the old soldier was in the midst of his long and confused harangue, a clock struck on the library mantelpiece.

"Two o'clock!" exclaimed Danville, glad of any pretext for interrupting the talk about the contract. "Two o'clock, and my mother not here yet! What can be delaying her?"

"Nothing," cried the general. "When did you ever hear of a woman punctual, my lad? If we wait your mother—and she's such a rabid aristocrat that she would never forgive us for not waiting—we shan't sign this contract yet this half-hour. Never mind! let's go on with what we were talking about. Where the devil was I when that cursed clock struck and interrupted us? Now then, Black Eyes, what's the matter?"

This last question was addressed to Mademoiselle Berthelin, who at that moment hastily entered the library from the drawing-room. She was a tall and rather masculine-looking girl, with superb black eyes, dark hair growing low on her forehead, and something of her father's decision and bluntness in her manner of speaking.

"A stranger in the other room, papa, who wants to see you. I suppose the servants showed him upstairs, thinking he was one of the guests. Ought I to have had him shown down again?"

"A nice question! How should I know? Wait till I've seen him, miss, and then I'll tell you." With these words the general turned on his heel, and went into the drawing-room.

His daughter would have followed him, but Danville caught her by the hand.

"Can you be hard-hearted enough to leave me here alone?" he asked.

"What is to become of my bosom friends in the next room, you selfish man, if I stop with you?" retorted Mademoiselle, struggling to free herself.

"Call them in here," said Danville, gaily making himself master of her other hand.

She laughed, and drew him away towards the drawing-room.

"Come!" she cried, and let all the ladies see what a tyrant I am going to marry. Come and show them what an obstinate, unreasonable, wearisome—"

Her voice suddenly failed her, she shuddered and turned faint. Danville's hand had in one instant grown cold as death in hers; the momentary touch of his fingers, as she felt their grasp loosen, struck some mysterious chill through her from head to foot. She glanced around at him affrightedly; and saw his eyes looking straight into the drawing-room. They were fixed in a strange, unwavering, awful stare; while from the rest of his face all expression, all character, all recognizable play and movement of feature had utterly gone. It was a breathless, lifeless mask—a white blank. With a cry of terror, she looked where he appeared to be looking, and could see nothing but the stranger standing in the middle of the drawing-room. Before she could ask a question, before she could speak even a single word, her father came to her, caught Danville by the arm, and pushed her roughly back into the library.

"Go there, and take the women with you," he said in a quick, fierce whisper. "Into the library!" he continued, turning to the ladies, and raising his voice. "Into the library, all of you, along with my daughter."

The women, terrified by his manner, obeyed him in the greatest confusion. As they hurried past him into the library, he signed to the notary to follow; and then closed the door of communication between the two rooms.

"Stop where you are!" he cried, addressing the old officers, who had risen from their chairs. "Stay, I insist on it! Whatever happens, Jacques Berthelin has done nothing to be ashamed of in the presence of his old friends and companions. You have seen the beginning, now stay and see the end."

While he spoke, he walked into the middle of the room. He had never quitted his hold on Danville's arm—step by step, they advanced together to the place where Trudaine was standing.

"You have come into my house, and asked me for my daughter in marriage—and I have given her to you," said the general, addressing Danville quietly. "You told me that your first wife and her brother were guillotined three years ago in the time of the Terror—and I believed you. Now look at that man—look at him straight in the face. He has announced himself to me as the brother of your wife, and he asserts that his sister is alive at this moment. One of you two has deceived me. Which is it?"

Danville tried to speak; but no sound passed his lips: he tried to wrench his arm from the grasp that was on it, but could not stir the old soldier's steady hand.

"Are you afraid? are you a coward? Can't you look him in the face?" asked the general, tightening his hold sternly.

"Stop! Stop!" interposed one of the old officers, coming forward. "Give him time. This may be a case of strange accidental resemblance, which would be enough under the circumstances, to discompose any man. "You will excuse me, citizen," he continued, turning to Trudaine. "But you are a stranger; you have given no proof of your identity."

"There is the proof," said Trudaine, pointing to Danville's face.

"Yes, yes," pursued the other; "he looks pale and startled enough, certainly. But I say again—let us not be too hasty; there are strange cases on record of accidental resemblance, and this may be one of them!"

As he repeated these words, Danville looked at him with a faint, cringing gratitude stealing slowly over the blank terror of his face. He bowed his head, murmured something, and gesticulated confusedly with the hand that he was free to use.

"Look!" cried the old officer; "look, Berthelin, he denies the man's identity."

"Do you hear that?" said the general, appealing to Trudaine. "Have you proofs to confute him? If you have produce them instantly."

Before the answer could be given, the door leading into the drawing-room from the staircase was violently flung open, and Madame Danville—her hair in disorder, her face in its colorless terror, looking like the very counterpart of her son's—appeared on the threshold, with the old man Dubois and a group of amazed and startled servants behind her.

"For God's sake, don't sign! for God's sake come away!" she cried. "I have seen your wife—in the spirit or in the flesh, I know not which—but I have seen her. Charles! Charles! as true as heaven is above us, I have seen your wife!"

"You have seen her in the flesh, living and breathing as you see her brother yonder," said a firm, quiet voice from among the servants on the landing outside.

WHERE IT IS REALLY COLD.

A Country Where a Lighted Candle Finds It Very Hard to Keep Warm.

From the Popular Science News.

Cold is merely a relative term. The resident of semi-tropical countries shivers when the thermometer falls to 50 degrees, while the Laplander and Esquimau think it is comfortable at zero. For real cold and plenty of it, one must go to the Polar regions. Think of living where the mercury goes down to 35 degrees below zero in the house, in spite of the stove. Of course, in such a case, fur garments are piled on until a man looks like a great bundle of skins. Dr. Moss, of the Polar expedition of 1875-76, among other odd things, tells of the effect of cold on a wax candle which he burned there. The temperature was 35 degrees below zero; and the doctor must have been considerably discouraged when, upon looking at his candle, he discovered that the flame had all it could do to keep warm. It was so cold that the flame could not melt all the wax of the candle, but was forced to cut its way down, leaving a sort of skeleton of the candle standing. There was heat enough, however, to melt oddly-shaped holes in the thin walls of wax; and the result was a beautiful lace-like cylinder of white, with a tongue of yellow flame burning inside it, and sending out into the darkness many streaks of light.

R. W. Emerson.

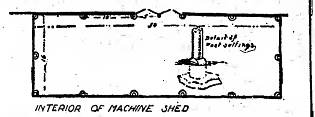
The first article of Emerson's religion was the existence of Mind in the universe, and his second article was the fact of man's relationship to the original Mind from whom man derives all heroisms, character, virtues, aspirations. A more devout believer in God never breathed. His God consciousness was the foundation of his faith and of his life.—Rev. W. A. Martin.

Practical Machine Shed for Farm

A good machine shed is one of the money saving buildings of a well regulated farm. It should be so located that the implements can be placed therein with the least possible inconvenience. If it is to shelter the implements of every day use as wagons, manure spreader, etc., it should be as near as possible to the place where the unhitching is done, as a man is very apt to yield to the temptation of leaving a machine out of doors when he must go far out of the way to put it into a shed. Another inconvenience is to have it located on ground inclining ing in front of the wagons where it will be necessary to have swinging doors with openings for the tongues which must extend partially outside. The balance of the front may be covered with sliding doors either hung on a double track that they may slide past each other, or on a single track that must extend beyond the end of the building as it is often desired to have a large part of the building open at the same time.

The ground should be very level about the shed that the boarding and doors may come close to the ground to slightly toward the shed, and in this way heavy machinery may be backed in by hand, all that is necessary being to raise the tongue and direct its course down the incline and into the shed. Every man who has backed machinery into a shed with horses realizes that there is more or less liability to accidents in placing vehicles or machinery in a shed by horse power, especially if the building is well filled with machinery. It should be at least 16 feet wide to accommodate wagons and manure spreaders and even then a portion of the tongues must be on the outside.

OUTSIDE VIEW OF SHED



INTERIOR OF MACHINE SHED

As to length, this may be arranged to suit the amount of machinery that it will be necessary to shelter.

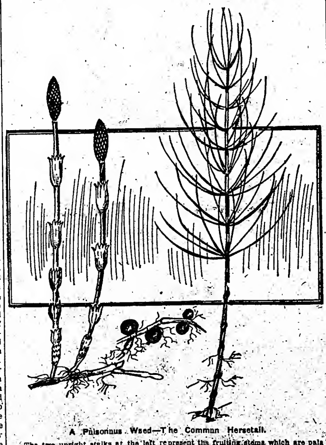
Take large cedar posts, which are kept at most lumber yards or in timbered sections, or suitable posts may be taken from the timber lot. These should be set in the ground eight or ten feet apart, or at such distances as will permit the machinery of various sizes to pass between. The post holes should be dug sufficiently large to allow tamping them with grout made of cement and sand. It is also advisable to place a flat rock in the bottom of each hole to afford a substantial support to the posts. This shed can be boarded and roofed to suit the tastes of the builder. The entire front should be provided with sliding doors, except keep out the poultry, as there is no other place as attractive for roosting places for chickens and turkeys as on the machinery in the machine shed. It is well to have the doors high so that the binder may be put in without taking off the reel, or top buggies without lowering the tops.

The difficulty of the posts rotting at the top of the cement as they do when set out of doors, is not experienced when they are placed on the inside of a building.

Chicks Improve Land.—A well-known poultryman says that on a field where three years ago scarcely enough grass grew to wipe a scythe and where chicks have been raised during the past three seasons he raised this year a heavy crop of grass. He says that nothing will make grass land as productive as using it as a range for the fowls during the late summer and fall.

Watering the Horse.—There are many rules for watering horses. The horse himself would be a pretty good judge if he had opportunity. A little water at a time, hot or cold, and when they need it is a safe rule. Let them have water that comes from the same source each time and at about the same temperature. Don't mix hot and cold water.

Danger from Common Horsetail Weed



A Poisonous Weed—The Common Horsetail.

The two upright stalks at the left represent the fruiting stems which are pale yellowish in color and come up in early spring (April-May) from the rooting branch below. In the center is such an underground branch bearing bulbs or tubers. From these same underground parts the much-branched, many-jointed green shoots arise a little later (May-June) as represented at the right. These continue to grow all summer and it is these which cause the poisoning.

It has long been suspected that the common horsetail weed when growing in pastures or hayfields in large quantities, has a poisonous effect on horses, and the results of an experiment in Vermont confirm the idea to some extent. The horses for the experiment were, of course, not valuable ones. They were fed hay containing increasing quantities of horsetail weed, until after five weeks nearly half the hay was of this material. For the first few days the animals seemed to like the weed, but took it more and more reluctantly until at last they could not be induced to take it. The effects were shown on the muscular system, the loss of control in the leg movements and in loss of flesh, also looseness of the hair and sensitive condition of the sides and shoulders. The feeding was continued about two months. Neither of the animals died, but were in a serious condition from the effects of the weed. Horsetail grows chiefly in run-out mowings; where the weed is at all plentiful the land should be plowed and reseeded.

FOR SELFISH ENDS.

The Efforts Being Made by the American Medical Association.

The Political activity of the American Medical Association has become so pronounced as to cause comment in political circles especially as the avowed purpose of the Doctors of the "Regular" or Allopathic school, of which the Association is chiefly composed, is to secure the passage of such laws as will not only prevent the sale of so-called "Patent" medicines, but will restrict the practice of medicine and healing to the "schools" now recognized. This in many states would prevent the growing practice of Osteopathy, and in nearly every state would prevent the healers of the Christian Science and mental science belief from practicing those sciences in which the faith of so many intelligent people is so firmly rooted.

The American Medical Association has a "Committee on Legislation," and the committee has correspondents in practically every township—some 16,000 correspondents in all. This committee at the last session of the American Medical Association held in June of this year expressed a hope that a larger number of physicians than heretofore will offer themselves as candidates for Congress at the first opportunity. In its annual report this Committee said: "To meet the growing demands of the movement, however, particularly if the work of active participation in State legislation is undertaken, a larger clerical force must be employed."

This is almost the first time in the history of the United States that any organized class has frankly avowed the purpose of capturing legislatures and dominating legislation in their own selfish interests.

The American Medical Association has about 65,000 members of whom 27,000 are "fully constituted members" and the rest are members because of their affiliation with state or local societies. The Association owns real estate in Chicago valued at $111,781.91 and its total assets are $291,567.89. Its liabilities, at the time of the annual report which was made at the June meeting, amounted to only $21,906. The excess of assets over liabilities is increasing at the rate of about $30,000 a year, and the purpose of the organization is to dominate the field of medicine, and by crushing all competitions by securing the passage of prohibitive legislation, compel all of the people of the United States to pay a doctor's fee every time the most simple remedy is needed.

SOUTH AMERICAN RAILWAYS.

They Run East and West Instead of North and South.

Although to the North American exponents of that project there has seemed a discouraging lack of interest in the Pan-American railway scheme on the part of South American railroad men, there has really been no cessation of the activity in their more immediate spheres, says the American Review of Reviews.

"Let us build the lines the country needs," they say, "and don't ask us to go out of our way to further a scheme which, however practicable from an engineering point of view, would not pay us dividends in this century, and possibly not in the next.

"We concede that we might benefit indirectly through the increased stability of government that would follow the building of an intercontinental line, but that benefit is too remote to interest us at a time when we have ample opportunity for expending all our available funds in the construction of lines that will yield returns from the day they are opened."

So it happens that while there has never been so much activity in railway construction in South America as at the present time, almost without exception the new lines are following the parallels rather than the meridians, running east and west rather than north and south.

BAD DREAMS

Frequently Due to Coffee Drinking.

One of the common symptoms of coffee poisoning is the bad dreams that spoil what should be restful sleep. A man who found the reason says:

"Formerly I was a slave to coffee. I was like a morphine fiend, could not sleep at night, would roll and toss in my bed and when I did get to sleep was disturbed by dreams and hobgoblins, would wake up with headaches and feel bad all day, so nervous I could not attend to business. My writing looked like bird tracks, I had sour belchings from the stomach, indigestion, heartburn and palpitation of the heart, constipation, irregularity of the kidneys, etc.

"Indeed, I began to feel I had all the troubles that human flesh could suffer, but when a friend advised me to leave off coffee I felt as if he had insulted me. I could not bear the idea, it had such a hold on me and I refused to believe it the cause.

"But it turned out that no advice was ever given at a more needed time for I finally consented to try Postum and with the going of coffee and the coming of Postum all my troubles have gone and health has returned. I eat and sleep well now, nerves steadied down and I write a fair hand (as you can see), can attend to business again and rejoice that I am free from the monster coffee."

Ten days' trial of Postum in place of coffee will bring sound, restful, refreshing sleep. "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. Some physicians call it "a little health classic."

MAN-A-LIN

MAN-A-LIN Is An Excellent Remedy for Constipation

There are many ailments directly dependent upon constipation, such as biliousness, discolored and pimpled skin, inactive liver, dyspepsia, overworked kidneys and headache.

Remove constipation and all of these ailments disappear.

MAN-A-LIN can be relied upon to produce a gentle action of the bowels, making pills and drastic cathartics entirely unnecessary.

A dose or two of Man-a-lin is advisable in slight febrile attacks, la grippe, colds and influenza.

THE MULES WON.

Judge Decided That They Couldn't Possibly Make a Sudden Start.

"Men in the East," said a well-known Westerner while talking to some friends in the lobby of a downtown hotel, "appear to me to be mostly short and stocky built, except the Down East Yankee, who is usually long and lank.

"Now, out in God's country you seldom see a man under six feet, and broad in proportion. But I'll admit it sometimes pays to be small.

"I remember that in the early 70s," the speaker went on, after taking a copious drink of whisky straight, "a man lived in my town who was over six feet four, and he was about as broad as he was long, and weighed 400 pounds or so.

"In those good old days the festive mule pulled the street cars.

"Well, my friend brought suit against the street railway company for damages sustained by their suddenly starting a car in which he was standing.

"During the trial the company brought two of their mules into the court room as witnesses for the defense.

"The jury viewed the complainant, took a casual glance at the mules, and at once brought in a verdict for the company on the ground that the sudden start was plainly impossible.

A Disfigured Face

By WILLIAM WALLACE COOK

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"We, his college chums, called him Apollo, quite as often as peerless Pierre, for not only was he a handsome fellow, but he seemed a perfect paragon of noble manhood, excelling alike in athletic exercises, in his studies and in a disposition which made him the prime favorite of classmates as well as tutors. I can give you no truer picture of Mr. Merrivale, my dear coz, for to go into details would exhaust all the good adjectives in Webster's Unabridged. All I can say is, you will like him, for you cannot help it."

Lenore looked at Ralph a little defiantly.

"So far as his beauty is concerned, Ralph Bronson, whether I like him, or not, that will weigh little one way or the other. In my estimation, a man's fortune is not, necessarily, a handsome face."

Ralph interrupted her with a laugh. "Oh, well, Miss Lenox, it counts for a great deal. I can bear witness to that, for I have been cut out any number of times by handsomer fellows. But you will have a chance to form your own estimate of Pierre, as he has notified me of his intention to accept an invitation which I tendered him some time ago, and make me a visit."

"Indeed!" The blue eyes of Miss Lenox opened wide with surprise. "And when will your paragon appear at the manor?"

"Very soon; in fact, I expect him any day, now. He writes from New Orleans and tells me that he is just recovering from a severe injury and feels that a few weeks in my jolly society will do him a world of good, so that I can look for him any moment. You must prepare for a quick surrender to his charms, Lenore."

"I shall prepare for nothing of the sort, cousin Ralph. You shall see into what a rare piece of marble I can matempsychose my heart."

"Perhaps; but I warn you!"

"And I thank you for it, but it is unnecessary."

Although she had told her cousin his warning was unnecessary, Lenore's curiosity was strong to see his peerless friend. Visitors at the manor house were very few and she looked forward to the arrival of their guest as an event in the monotonous round of her life. Ralph had so expatiated upon his friend's personal appearance that, if she found not a god, surely her disappointment would be woeful.

Seated upon a ledge or rock which had been torn from the mountain side above her in some great, cataclysmic upheaval of the past ages, she held a novel listlessly and marveled if, seeing him in all his peerless glory, she should succumb to his charms—what then? She laughed. Such an idea was absurd.

Hearing a step behind her, she sprang up in alarm.

"Pardon me if I have frightened you," said a stranger, bowing gracefully, "but I am looking for a gentleman by the name of Bronson, Ralph Bronson; does he reside near here?"

So this was peerless Pierre! He had a magnificent form, a clear, sweet voice and, as he raised his cap, a mass of yellow curls were visible; but his face! although regular in form, with large, fine eyes, a sensitive nose, and refined mouth, his right cheek was disfigured by a terrible scar. Miss Lenox caught these little details of his appearance in the brief moment he was speaking.

"You are half a mile from the road," she answered, pointing in its direction; "the house is only a short distance north, after you reach that. I am Mr. Bronson's cousin and live at the manor house. I was just about ready to return and, if you like, I will show you the way?"

"Thank you; you are very kind. So this is Miss Lenox? Many a time have I heard Ralph eulogize his cousin." He stooped, picked up the novel which she had dropped in her alarm, and handed it to her with a pretty gesture. "In fact, I think all of Ralph's college friends were more or less acquainted with Miss Lenox."

From this point the conversation lapsed into various subjects. Lenore, becoming deeply interested in their talk, found themselves approaching the manor house all too soon. Ralph saw them coming and hastened down the walk to meet them. At the first glimpse of his friend, Pierre Merrivale became strangely silent and a pained expression settled about his brows.

"Why, old fellow, this is quite a surprise," said Ralph as he drew near and caught his friend's hand; then, looking into his face, he started and a sharp cry of astonishment escaped him. "Great heavens, Pierre! what terrible—"

Mr. Merrivale turned his head away sadly and his friend recollected himself.

"Forgive me, forgive me, old chap; but you know you—"

"Yes, I know, Ralph. I have not always been this way, but," with a sigh, "misfortunes come to us all."

It was in this manner that Pierre Merrivale came to visit them. He was bright in conversation and agreeable in manner, but was neither gay nor careless. If handsome looks impel men to become coxcombs and Lotharios, Lenore thought it very easy to understand how peerless Pierre had fallen from foppery. That dreadful scar would impress upon him with terrible power the fact that he was made of a common clay with other men. As she came to converse with him more and more and to know him better, she was perfectly ready to believe that Pierre had never set himself above common men because of his peerless person. And as their companionship lengthened with the long summer months, her pity grew into an attachment which she could hardly persuade herself to believe. In truth her heart, which she had steeled to resist the charms of the perfect Pierre, had surrendered first to pity and then to love at the sight of that noble, but disfigured face.

More than once Pierre was at the point of telling how madly he loved her, but in a trice he thought of the scar that disfigured his face. What woman could love a man with that hideous mark? No, he would not tell her. She should never know that his heart had been wheedled away by a miserable feeling of pity.

The last day of Pierre Merrivale's visit at Bronson Manor had arrived.

Apparently, it was not hard to bid Lenore adieu. There was a clasp of the hand and a conventional "God speed you," but behind these formalities lurked a feeling so passionate on the part of both that one relenting glance from Pierre would have opened the floodgates of their mutual happiness. Yet this glance for which Lenore would have given almost her very life was not vouchsafed, for stubborn pride had quite enthralled the bosom of Pierre Merrivale.

Seated Upon a Ledge of Rock.

Lenore Lenox saw them enter the carriage and vanish down the road among the trees. She felt that the light had forever gone out of her life, and that the future existence would be miserable to her.

The day wore on. The afternoon came and, just as the sun was setting, Lenore heard the sound of advancing wheels. Her cousin was returning. He could tell her something of Pierre! The thought electrified her and she jumped to a window that commanded a view of the road. It was not a carriage that was approaching, but a heavy wagon, with two or three men. One of them was in the back part of the vehicle and—merciful heavens! whose head was that he held upon his knee? Who was that stretched out in the wagon-box, so still and death-like? It was Pierre Merrivale!

Suddenly she heard a step on the stair; it approached, drew near and paused before her door. Then some one entered. A second later and a strong arm was thrown around her and a voice, tremulous with emotion came to her ears. It was Ralph.

"Oh, my poor Lenore, is it not terrible?"

"He is not dead?" she cried, clutching his arm with her white, nervous hands; "oh, Ralph tell me, tell me he is not dead!"

"No, no, he is not dead. God knows he is too noble to die. You must be calm, Lenore."

She gave way to her feelings, but gradually grew more calm.

"How did it happen, Ralph?"

"He nearly sacrificed his life to save another."

"How brave, how noble he is!" said Lenore, when she learned the story.

Pierre Merrivale had a long fight in the illness thus imposed upon him. He had come to visit the Bronsons to recover from a similar disaster—one which left the red scar upon his face. In that battle he had faced the flames to rescue a child. Ralph told Lenore of this in the long hours when they watched at Pierre's bedside. Ralph told her, too, that Pierre had made him solemnly promise never to reveal the secret of that scar to any living persons. And he had not; but now, in the face of this last deed of heroism, he must needs recount to his cousin the story of that scar which had humiliated his friend.

"I love him now," declared Lenore with flashing eyes, "better than ever, if such were possible."

And when Pierre Merrivale opened his eyes and came out of the lethargy in which he had been encompassed so long, he understood the loving eyes that bent above him, and Lenore, heeding the inclination of his hand, bent down. Their lips met in one passionate kiss.

GOOD JOKE ON STUDENT.

Fell Victim to the Old Game of "Catching the Snipe."

A number of George Washington University students who are in the employ of the geological survey during the summer months, near Browning, Mont., recently sprung the old game of "catching the snipe" on one of their number, a junior student of the university.

For those who have never heard of the game it will be explained as it was played upon the victim. A large sack and two candles were secured, after which, to divert suspicion, a foot race was arranged, and of course, the junior had to lose, and thus he was to hold the bag. The entire party started out after dark and took such an irregular course that the intended victim did not know in what direction he had traveled from the camp. After going about three miles it was decided that they could catch "snipe." The junior was told to lay down on his stomach and hold the bag wide open, the two candles being lighted on either side. The other boys then started off, presumably to drive in the "snipe," but instead went directly to their camp and to bed.

When they started to depart the victim called to them, "I'll wait here until you come back." He waited! At one a. m. he began to get suspicious, but then he was afraid the boys might think him a quitter if they came back and found him gone. At two o'clock, however, his convictions were confirmed, and he left for home, but found to his dismay that he was lost. After a great deal of tramping about on the prairie he came to a railroad depot, which was four miles from the camp. He followed the tracks and arrived shortly before four o'clock and found all of the jokers in their bunks. The boys have branded him "snipe."

PUT END TO CENOTAPHS.

Senator Hoar's Plea Did Away with "Works of Art."

The late Senator Hoar made a characteristic speech when he was a member of the house on the subject of the cenotaphs in the Congressional cemetery. It was upon the occasion of the passage of the bill which finally abolished by law the erecting of monuments in the Congressional cemetery unless they were above remains interred there. The bill proposed that all monuments thereafter to be erected be in the form that had always been used. Senator Hoar offered an amendment striking out the provision, and in support of his amendment he said:

"I wish the gentleman having charge of this bill would allow an amendment. . . . It is certainly adding new terrors to death to propose that in any contingency, whatever may be the poverty or degradation of any member of congress, his body should be put under a structure similar to the cenotaphs now there, which are only excusable on the ground that nobody is buried under them. I cannot conceive of an uglier shape to be made out of granite or marble than those cenotaphs now there. To propose gravely to require by law that for all time structures of that fashion shall be placed over deceased congressmen seems to me a little too bad. I move to amend the bill by striking out the words 'in the form of the cenotaphs heretofore provided.'"

Senator Hoar's amendment was agreed to. It was hardly necessary, however. Since that time but few monuments of any sort have been erected for officials in the Congressional cemetery. Sentiment seems to have changed. Perhaps great men are scarcer.

Book Vandals at Washington.

In spite of the watchfulness of the employes of the Library of Congress book scribblers are said to have become a common nuisance in Uncle Sam's large and artistic reading rooms up on Capitol Hill. It is also said they have "made their marks" on volumes in the public library. A librarian of experience, in discussing this subject, said the men or women who indulge in book scribbling are usually egotists who think the book is valueless after they have read it. Sometimes they strike out the passages they do not like, while those that appeal to them are heavily underscored or placed in brackets.

It is said considerable time is expended by attaches of libraries in erasing the work of the scribblers, including criticisms or suggestions written on the margins of the pages.

In many cases the officers of the libraries learn who defaces the books, but in almost every instance the perpetrator denies the deed. He is evidently ashamed of the thoughts he was so proud of when he wrote them in the margin of the book.

Elihu Root's Repartee.

Long before Elihu Root had ever been dreamed of in connection with a cabinet portfolio he visited Washington on business. At the hotel at which he stopped Thomas L. James, then postmaster general, was also a guest. Upon retiring each gentleman put his shoes outside the door, in order that the porter might polish them. The porter got mixed and delivered James's shoes to Root, and Root's shoes to James. The mistake was discovered next morning, when each found that he could not wear the shoes delivered to him.

The hotel folks made restitution and explanations. Messrs. James and Root met at breakfast.

"Really, Mr. James," Mr. Root remarked, "I have no ambition to step into your shoes."

This is a queer rule that not one in a thousand know. Buyers of stamps or any purchase at a postoffice must furnish their own change. The postmaster could insist on purchasers furnishing their own change if he saw fit to do so, but usually he is glad enough to get rid of his "chicken feed" and is always ready to accommodate the public by making all the change it asks for.—Ex.

N. N. Larson, buttermaker at the creamery, has resigned and with his family will go to Dakota in October for the purpose of proving up on a claim. The creamery officials have hired Mr. Lauritzen of the Plummer creamery to take the position left vacant, but it is likely that another man will have to be employed temporarily as Mr. Lauritzen cannot leave his present position until about Jan. 1st. He comes well recommended from Plummer, where he has had charge of the creamery for several years.—Thief River Falls Press.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a mortgage executed by Edmond Bray and Mary Bray, his wife, mortgagors to Duluth Brewing & Malting Company, a corporation, as Mortgagee, bearing date the 5th day of January, 1904, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, on the 7th day of January, 1904, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 21 of mortgages on page 193.

Said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to pay the sum of $348.98, which amount is claimed to be due and which is due upon the note which said mortgage was given to secure, at date hereof. By reason thereof, the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has ever been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, in accordance with the provisions of said mortgage and because of said default said Duluth Brewing & Malting Company hereby elects to declare and does hereby declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage to be due and payable.

The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged is situated in the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota and is described as follows; to-wit Lots numbered twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in Block numbered eight (8) in Buse & Bottineau's Addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, according to the plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county Minnesota, together with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be forclosed by sale of the premises above described which sale will be made at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county at the Front Door of the County Court House at Red Lake Falls in said county, on Saturday, the 21st day of September, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage and fifty dollars ($50.00) attorneys' fees, as stipulated in said mortgage, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law.

THRESHERS AT IT

Golden Grain Being Ground Out in Large Quantities in This Section.

The merry hum of the threshing machine is again heard in this part of the land, and it will be a busy time among the farmers of Red Lake county from this week on.

The grain is practically all cut and ready for the threshing, with the exception of some late flax, and with the present favorable weather the fall work will be well taken care of before the winter season sets in. The prospects for a prosperous fall were never better. The grain is all better than was really hoped for, and while at the present time no threshing returns are available, it is stated by those who are most familiar with conditions that the machines will tell a story of big yields in this section of the valley.

The prevailing prices of grain and produce are high, and the farmers will reap a harvest of shekels for their year's work that will repay for the past several years of adversity.

It has been the history of all grain countries that good crops as well as poor run in series, and many close observers are now freely predicting that the Red River valley will get back to its own in the matter of crop production.

At any rate the yield this year will prove highly satisfactory, and THE GAZETTE expects to have some figures to prove the assertion for next week's issue.

Gang Plows!!

COURT IN OCTOBER

Judge Watts Will Be Here To Try Court Cases—Jury Called Later.

The October term of the Red Lake county district court will be held in this city during the last week in October, the session to start on the 28th inst.

At this session Judge Watts will only try the court cases that are listed on the calendar, and will return later, the petit jury having been summoned for November 11. This is done in order that the farmer members of the jury may have an opportunity to get their fall work well out of the way and preparations made for winter, and there is no doubt but what it will be appreciated.

There are several important cases on the calendar for the fall term, and there promises to be much doing for a couple of weeks at least.

The Man With a Grouch.

The man who has a perpetual grouch is often surprised to find it reflected in those he meets. Just think of the times when everything seems to go wrong—those days when one is accused of having got out of bed the wrong side. Then you feel your nerves unstrung from a day of mishaps a glass of golden grain belt beer will soothe the tired nerves and cure indigestion, which is sometimes the cause of a grouch. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Out of Sight.

"Out of sight, out of mind." is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 25c.

A BIG MARKET DAY

Red Lake Falls Business People Will Join in Arranging Gala Day For Farmers on Wednesday, September 25.

Preliminary arrangements have been made for a big celebration and Market Day at Red Lake Falls on Wednesday, September 25, and from the outlook this affair will be on a larger scale than any like event ever before attempted in northern Minnesota.

The merchants of the city plan on making this a unique event, sort of a forerunner to what promises to be a prosperous fall to the people of this section of the state, and to this end will see that there is nothing left undone that will make the day one long to be remembered.

The work of arranging the regular program has not been completed but early next week bills and programs will be issued giving full particulars. There will be prizes offered from every business house in the city, a long program of sports and amusements, a grand concert by the Red Lake Falls band and other things to make the day pleasant and profitable. A new feature will be a big auction sale, so that the farmers may bring whatever they want to town and have it sold free of cost.

The merchants are all preparing to make big special sales for this occasion, and will get together in earnest to give their patrons the time of their lives.

This should be an ideal time for a Market Day of this sort, as the farmer will have his grain ready for the thresherman and can easily take one day off to celebrate the wind-up of a prosperous season's work. The business people will extend a most cordial invitation, and with the weather doing a fairly favorable stunt there is not the least reason why the big Market Day on Sept. 25 should not be a success.

Remember the date; and watch out for bills, programs and further particulars. Plan on coming to Red Lake Falls that day with the whole family. You will be treated royally.

DENTISTS WILL MEET.

Red River Valley Society to Gather at Crookston.

President J. E. Argue, of the Red River Valley Dental society, this week issued programs for the annual meeting of the society which will be held at Crookston Saturday of this week, the 14th inst.

Three sessions will be held, morning, afternoon and evening, and an elaborate program of clinics and other matters of interest has been arranged.

Dr. J. O. Wells, of Minneapolis, one of the most prominent dental workers of the state, will be present and give a demonstration on porcelain inlay Saturday morning, and another talk in the afternoon. Dr. Wells is spoken of as a brilliant talker and the society is looking forward with pleasure to hearing him.

Dentists from Hillsboro, Grand Forks, Hallock, Cass Lake and Crookston are down for clinics and the program will be very interesting. President Argue is down for an address at the evening session.

The present officers of the association are as follows: President, Dr. J. E. Argue, Red Lake Falls; vice-president, Dr. Thos. Speace, Crookston; secretary, Dr. J. F. Tuomy, Bemidji; treasurer, Dr. C. L. Tompkins, Grand Forks.

Good Time at Fair.

The members of the local band organization arrived home Monday and Tuesday from the cities, where they had played an engagement of three days at the big Minnesota state fair last week. The fair was one of the greatest in the history, and was attended by the biggest crowd of people that ever congregated at a like amusement center.

The exhibits and displays were complete in every detail, and there was much to see and more to do. The band played on different parts of the grounds during the three days of their engagement and on every hand were given an ovation. The boys had practiced faithfully for this work, and the way they got over their music was pleasing to the large crowd of listeners that was always around them. The board of managers were very considerate in their treatment of our boys, and they were given plenty of time to see all there was of the big show. The band's engagement at the fair was a great ad for Red Lake Falls, and the results will be felt in more ways than one.

His Dear Old Mother

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old, thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children too, are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist. 50 cents.

A SUDDEN SUMMONS

Mrs. Mathias Waldorf, of Lake Pleasant, Drops Dead in Her Buggy.

Mrs. Mathias Waldorf, who lived with her family four miles south of Red Lake Falls in Lake Pleasant, died very suddenly from an attack of heart failure last Saturday evening.

About four thirty in the afternoon she started to town accompanied by her fourteen-year-old son. Before reaching town she complained of not feeling well, and the young man urged the horse as fast as possible in order to get her where help was available. When just at the south part of town, passing the residence of Dr. Wilkinson, Mrs. Waldorf gave a gasp and sank back in her seat. The young man drove up into the yard of Eddie Meyer, former neighbors of the Waldorfs, but when they reached the buggy Mrs. Waldorf was beyond the need of human assistance.

Minnesota Historical Society

She was taken into the house and the family notified, and later the body was moved to the Lake Pleasant home. Mrs. Waldorf had suffered for about a year with heart trouble, and while at times it gave her considerable annoyance, nevertheless it was never dreamed by those with her daily that her life was to be cut off so soon.

Deceased was born in Stearns county this state 37 years ago. In 1888 she was married to Mathias Waldorf and lived in Stearns county until eight years ago, when the family moved to Red Lake county, settling on the present farm in Lake Pleasant. Mrs. Waldorf was the mother of ten children, seven of whom are living, the oldest a boy of seventeen years and the youngest but a babe of seven weeks. These with the husband are left to mourn the loss of a good wife and loving mother.

The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Monday afternoon, the remains being laid at rest in the Catholic cemetery east of town. A large number of friends and neighbors followed the body to its place of eternal sleep.

The following relatives from out out of town were present at the funeral: John Waldorf and Mike Krebsbach and wife, of Spring Hill; Mrs, Frank Waldorf and Mrs. Ben Haskamp, of Melrose; Mrs. A. Blaeser and son Ben, of St. Anthony.

THE GAZETTE joins with the people of Red Lake Falls in extending its heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved father and motherless little ones.

Card of Thanks.

To the many kind friends and neighbors who rendered us such valuable aid during our recent bereavement we desire to express our heartfelt thanks. To the members of the C. O. F. and W. C. O. F. of Red Lake Falls we are especially grateful.—M. Waldorf and family.

'TIS BANNER YEAR

Prices of Farm Produce This Year Away in Advance of Those of 1906.

The comparison of prices of all farm produce this year and those of last, and several previous years, is very much in the farmer's favor. Not in many years have the prices on all farm produce been so high as at the present time. The quality and yield are also much better than in any previous year. For several years past wheat which graded No. 1 Northern was not a common commodity in the market. That grade of wheat in 1907 started in at 63 cents. This week new wheat was selling for 95 cents for No. 1 northern and a large per cent of the wheat from the shock was given that grade. The yields are good, some reports giving over 20 bushels per acre. After stack threshing begins buyers expect the grade to be No. 1 northern. The same difference exists in the price of all grains. Last year oats sold at 25 cents, now 40; barley 28, now 65; rye 46, now 65; flax $1.01, now $1.06; potatoes 30, now 50; butter 20, now 25; eggs only remain at the same price, 15 cents.

It does not matter much to the farmer why prices are so high so long as that is the fact. The potato market, however, should be of interest to the farmer and the business man of this section. The crop of tubers south and east was a partial failure, while that of Minnesota is abundant and of fine quality. Minnesota is known as the "Bread and Butter State," and it is fast becoming a vast potato storehouse for thousands of people to the south, south west and southeast. In some sections of the state the potato is staple crop and buyers frequent those sections the same as stock buyers visit other sections.

The farmer this year is on the winning side. With a good yield and top prices for all grains, butter and cream bringing an excellent price, with the price of stock good and the largest hay crop ever harvested in this county mowed away in good condition, the tiller of the soil is coming into his own.

STATE LAWS KILL INTERSTATE RATES

CONTENTION OF RAILROADS IN FIERCE ATTACK ON 2-CENT LAW.

DENIES POWER TO FIX RATES

ATTORNEY ARGUES THAT STATE RATES IN EFFECT RULE INTERSTATE RATES.

St. Paul, Sept. 6.—That the making of intrastate rates in practice makes interstate rates was the burden of the arguments yesterday before Judge Lochren, in the United States circuit court, in the Minnesota railroad rate cases. The suits are brought by stockholders of the railroads doing business in Minnesota to restrain the enforcement of the 2-cent passenger fare law and the commodity rate law passed by the last legislature, and the merchandise rate schedule ordered by the state railroad and warehouse commission.

The contention of the stockholders is that since state rates in practice control interstate rates, the state is exceeding its authority in making rates, since the regulation of interstate commerce is not a state but a national function.

Railroads' Contention.

The contention of the complaints is that the prescribed rates interfere with interstate laws, are confiscatory and in practice entail unlawful discrimination.

Pierce Butler of How, Butler & Mitchell, who represent the complainants in eight of the ten or more suits, occupied the attention of the court yesterday with a consideration of the effect of the prescribed rates upon interstate rates as well as upon the property of the roads. Affidavits in support of the contentions of the bills were submitted and discussed by Mr. Butler. The affidavits were offered to show that the effect of the prescribed local rates was to destroy interstate rates and that their enforcement in many cases would make dividends impossible and in some cases would result in forcing the roads into a receiver's hands.

TAKE TO OTHER TRADES.

Striking Telegraphers Are Finding Work.

New York, Sept. 6. — From now on the striking telegraphers will seek temporary employment in other trades. The 400 girls in this city started yesterday morning to get employment in dry goods stores. The summer vacations are over and they say they can easily find other employment. They will seek employment also as telephone operators.

Twenty of the men obtained employment yesterday and on Oct. 1 next, when the eight-hour law goes into effect compelling railroads to make three shifts of eight hours each in twenty-two states, 600 men from New York and Chicago will become operators on railroads.

TO AVERT A COAL FAMINE

TRANSPORTATION OF COAL AND PROBABLE CAR SHORTAGE TO BE LOOKED INTO.

Washington, Sept. 5. — An inquiry into the railroads of the West is to be made by Commissioner Franklin K. Lane of the interstate commerce commission. Commissioner Lane left last night for an extended trip through the West and Northwest and along the Pacific coast. Incidentally he will hear several cases arising out of complaints filed with the commission from Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Look Into Coal Problem.

Commissioner Lane will make special inquiries concerning the transportation of coal in the West and Northwest and will be prepared to extend to both the railroads and shippers the assistance of the commission to avert a coal famine, such was occurred last winter. He will also make a special investigation into a probable shortage of cars for moving crops this fall and winter. Agents of the commission have been investigating the question of car shortage and will report their conclusions to Commissioner Lane. Mr. Lane will take up the matter with officials of the roads.

ASSASSIN HELPS REBELS.

Tazzi Brothers, Who Dominate Sultan, Are Murdered at Fez.

Casablanca, Sept. 5. — Letters received here from Fez declare that the Tazzi brothers—Abdelkrum Ben Sliman, the Moroccan foreign minister, and Ganam, the sultan's second representative at Tanger—have been assassinated by partisans of the caid of Mechuar, the official who introduces ambassadors to the court of the sultan.

The Tazzi brothers exercised almost complete domination over the sultan, and to them is attributed the ruin of the empire.

It is alleged that they sought only their personal aggrandizement. Their fortune is counted by millions, and is said to be sufficient to pay the entire debt of Morocco.

Violence Before Sultan.

Some time ago the caid of Mechuar was on the point of killing the Tazzi brothers in the presence of the sultan. The name of the caid is Driss Ben Aich and he is the descendant of the Bujaris, one of the four tribes which founded the Moroccan monarchy.

ALTON CASE IS POSTPONED.

Judge Landis Grants Stay at Request of Government.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Judge Landis, in the United States district court, yesterday ordered the postponement of the grand jury investigation of rebating charges against the Chicago & Alton road growing out of the recent trial and conviction of the Standard Oil company, until Sept. 24.

It was generally believed when court opened Tuesday that a letter would be presented from Attorney General Bonaparte defining the action intended by the government against the Alton road. The railroad company has made a claim of immunity, asserting that it was promised by Former District Attorney Morrison that if it aided the government in good faith in the prosecution of the Standard Oil company it would be exempt. No such letter, however, was presented in court, either by Judge Landis or by District Attorney Sims, the successor of District Attorney Morrison.

When the court opened yesterday, District Attorney Sims said in part:

"A situation has arisen which, in my judgment, makes it highly desirable that I have time to submit to the department certain facts and circumstances in addition to those already submitted.

"For these reasons I request that further action in the matter be postponed for three or four weeks."

Judge Landis then postponed the case until Sept. 24.

GEN. PORTER WINS HIS POINT.

Proposals for Collection of Contractual Debts Approved.

The Hague, Sept. 5. — Gen. Horace Porter of the American delegation to the peace conference led his proposal for the collection of contractual debts to practically unanimous approval yesterday by the committee of examination, and at the conclusion of the meeting he was the recipient of many congratulations upon the success of his efforts. The importance of the American suggestion, it is pointed out, lies in the principle which it establishes rather than in its practical application, which may be very seldom.

Gen. Porter met all the objections raised with ready argument and finally brought all the countries represented, debtor as well as creditor countries, into line, with the single exception of Switzerland, which is neither a debtor nor a creditor country. There is reason to believe, however, that even the Swiss government will sign the convention, with reserve regarding the matter of jurisdiction.

BIG BROKERS ARE FORCED TO WALL

WATSON & CO., BIGGEST GRAIN BROKERS IN COUNTRY, CLOSE DOORS.

FAILURE WAS A SURPRISE

HIT BY SHRINKAGE IN GREAT NORTHERN AND NORTHERN PACIFIC STOCKS.

New York, Sept. 7.—The failure of Watson & Co., members of the New York Stock and Produce exchanges and of the Chicago Board of Trade, was announced in those exchanges yesterday. No cause was assigned for the failure, nor was any estimate of the liabilities and assets made public. The firm has extensive connections in the West, maintaining offices in Duluth, Minneapolis, Fargo and Winnipeg. They are said to have carried on one of the biggest grain brokerage businesses in the country, besides trading actively in railroad stocks, particularly those of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads.

Accountants at Work.

W. Frank Newell, manager of the firm's New York office, was named as assignee. Expert accountants have been put to work on the books and a statement of the financial condition of the firm will soon be issued. The members of the firm are Louis T. Watson, Henry P. Watson, Charles E. Anderson and Herschell V. Jones. Louis T. Watson is the only member of the firm residing in this city, the others being residents of Minneapolis.

Since its organization in 1901 the firm had made a specialty of dealing in grain futures. H. V. Jones, formerly publisher of a newspaper devoted to the grain interests of the West, traveled extensively in the wheat belt and issued frequent reports of crop conditions.

Failure Unexpected.

It was generally understood that the firm had advised its patrons to buy grain this year and that both the company and its patrons profited thereby. The announcement of its failure was therefore unexpected on the Produce exchange.

On the Stock exchange, however, it was understood that the firm had heavy commitments in Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroad stocks and that they suffered chiefly from the enormous shrinkage in the market values of those securities.

HOTEL FIRE FATAL TO ELEVEN.

All but Three Killed by Jumping From Windows.

Shelton, Wash., Sept. 7. — Fire destroyed the Webb hotel yesterday. Ten persons are known to be dead and one is dying. All but three were killed by jumping from the windows.

The fire was discovered at 1:40 yesterday morning. The hotel was a three-story structure. Within a few minutes the hotel was a mass of flames. Screams and cries for help were coming from almost every window. Those in the upper stories were completely cut off from the stairway and at least seven or eight jumped from the windows before help could reach them from the outside.

STATE GAINS $300,000.

Ad Valorem System Raises Railroad Tax in Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 7.—Under the ad valorem system the railroads doing business in Wisconsin have paid $1,647,124.97 in taxes into the state treasury. This is over $300,000 more than was paid during August last year. The North-Western Railway company paid in a single check $518,017.42, which was the largest check ever received at the treasury department. The smallest tax paid was 64 cents, by the Chicago & Lake Superior road, which has a short branch between London and Cambridge, Dane county.

DAY OF TRIUMPH AT FAIR

OLD SETTLERS HOLD BIGGEST MEETING EVER HELD IN MINNESOTA.

St. Paul, Sept. 7.—Bright skies made yesterday another day of triumph at the big state fair. It was the second best day of the week from the point of attendance and showed considerably more gain than did the opening day over the corresponding day last year.

It was Old Settlers' day. Pioneers from all parts of the state assembled on the grounds and held the biggest meeting of the kind ever held in Minnesota. The movement to celebrate the semi-centennial of the state gained considerable momentum through the adoption of a resolution calling upon the people of the state to aid the association in its efforts to have the jubilee held next year in connection with the state fair.

Sweet Marie was the big attraction for the majority of visitors. She trotted a mile in 2:06 in her attempt to break her world's record of 2:02. She gave a magnificent exhibition and the immense crowd gave her a big ovation.

The Shorthorn auction sale was held in the big amphitheater and was attended by hundreds of spectators.

The receipts up to last night were enough to pay all expenses and what comes after will be profit.

COW SETS PRAIRIE AFIRE.

Flames Spread Rapidly and a Hard Fight Saves Buildings.

Pierre, S. D., Sept. 7.—Prairie fires are started in a number of different ways and from numerous different causes, but a fire started by a cow is reported from the vicinity of Reliance.

Of course the cow would never have started the trouble had not some person been along ahead of her and dropped a box of matches on the prairie. These were stepped upon by the animal, igniting the matches in the box and a small corner of it burned away in the flare, but enough to start the grass burning. After the blaze had been gotten under control a search was made to find the cause of its starting, and the partly burned match box and the cow track stood as evidence of of the cause. It required a hard fight to save the farm buildings of Fred Duefall from being destroyed by the fire.

BRENNANS GO BACK TO JAIL.

Defense Offers No Testimony—Father and Son Held to Grand Jury.

Lakeville, Minn., Sept. 7. — Michael Brennan, who on Aug. 27 shot and killed Anthony Brennan at the Brennan farm near this place, and Michael's father, Michael Nolan Brennan, who witnessed the tragedy and who was arrested as well as his son, were returned here for a hearing yesterday morning from the Ramsey county jail in St. Paul.

They were both remanded to jail without bail to await the action of the grand jury that meets in December in Hastings.

The prisoners, who were in charge of Sheriff McDevitt and Deputy Sheriff Reichow, were taken back to St. Paul late yesterday afternoon.

Congressman Volstead Studies Conditions at Browns Valley.

Browns Valley, Minn., Sept. 7.—Congressman Volstead of Granite Falls was in Browns Valley yesterday looking up the proposition for a reservoir system at Traverse and Big Stone lakes. This proposition consists of the turning of the Otter Tail river in the Mustinka river and thence into Traverse lake, connecting Traverse and Big Stone by canal at Browns Valley and storing the water in the lakes by means of locks and dams. Senator Clapp was here last May and made a personal inspection with a view to the proposition. The people are growing enthusiastic over the prospects of having the project carried out.

FINED FOR PROMOTING FIGHT.

St. Paul Man Fined $200 and Costs at Ellsworth.

Ellsworth, Wis., Sept. 7.—Charles De Witt, a St. Paul saloonkeeper, pleaded guilty to the charge of promoting a prize fight in Pierce county Sunday and was fined $200 and costs by Justice Charles Fenton here yesterday. The total amount of the fine, with costs, amounted to $303.

A deputy sheriff went to St. Paul after De Witt Wednesday and the St. Paul man returned with him voluntarily.

The fight is the one pulled off in connection with the excursion run from St. Paul Sunday.

Fined for Illegal Shooting.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Sept. 7.—George Brown and Harry Johnson, the two young men who were gathered in by Deputy Game Warden Jones for shooting chickens before the season opened, pleaded guilty and paid fines of $10 and $20 and costs.

State News of Interest

TREES GET A START.

Young Forests Near Hinckley Are Growing Splendidly.

Gen. C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner, has just made a trip in the district devastated by the great Hinckley fire of 1894, where he found that in some places the young forests had gained a considerable start. Land suitable for agriculture is being cleared and converted into prosperous farms. An interesting feature of the development of this fire-stricken tract is the fact that the Norway pine stumps are being used for the preparation of turpentine, tar, citric acid and charcoal.

In speaking of the trip Gen. Andrews said:

"It will be thirteen years Sept. 1 since the forest fire in which 418 persons perished in the vicinity of Hinckley. I visited the country swept by that fire to examine especially any pine that has grown since the fire. Three miles east of Hinckley I saw a tract of several hundred acres of close standing jack pine, about ten feet high, intermixed with some Norway pine and with poplar which has grown since 1894. The tract borders the Grindstone river and is a little too rocky for field crops. It is the sort of land that should be kept for forest. I was informed of several other bodies of young pine forest that have grown since the Hinckley fire.

"Most of the land in that region is suitable for agriculture, and I saw quite a number of well-cultivated and prosperous looking farms and with buildings that would be a credit to any farming community. Senator Clapp has a farm only a few miles east of the place I visited.

"Owing to the quality of the soil some of the pine which I have mentioned will be large enough to cut in twenty-five years, and it shows how important it is to keep out fires.

"As the removal of the old pine stumps has much to do with the successful opening of farms on cut-over land, made a particular inquiry about the business of producing turpentine from such stumps. There is a plant for this manufacture, under a Russian invention, a dozen miles or so east of Hinckley. Only Norway pine stumps are used and they must be old enough to have had the sap wood, which is the part nearest the bark, decayed. The company pays $4 for 3,000 pounds, reckoned a cord, of stump and roots; and the product from such quantity is forty bushels of charcoal, twenty-five gallons of turpentine, twenty gallons of tar and some citric acid."

SNAP THEIR CLAIMS.

Proof of Improvement of Land is Secured With Camera.

Determined that no dispute shall arise between themselves and the special agents of the government when the time for them to prove up, a number of homesteaders in the St. Louis valley country have adopted the novel experiment of photographing their claims. To show what they tell of their homesteads is true the photographs will be on hand when the hearing on the final proof is held.

The photographs are taken from different views and will give a clear idea of the amount of land which has been cleared and placed under cultivation and if there is any dispute the homesteaders will be able to present strong evidence to support their contentions. The photographs being made now will show the growing crops and other photographs will be taken from time to time to show other improvements which are being made upon the claims.

Gust Eklund and Frank E. Anderson, two homesteaders, have set the example in having these photographs taken, and now every claimholder in this vicinity has provided himself or herself with a camera and is engaged in taking snap shots showing the buildings and other improvements upon their claims.

PACKAGE RATE INCREASE.

Railroad Commission Says No Change Has Been Permitted.

Complaints are coming from several points in Minnesota of an increase in the freight rate on small packages.

Judge Mills of the railroad commission said that no change has been authorized between Minnesota points, but on interstate business the roads have raised the minimum from 25 to 40 cents. If higher rates are being collected within the state, it is done without authority, as the commission denied the application for a similar increase in minimums on state business.

One complaint from Minneiska reached the railroad commission. It was taken up with the Milwaukee officials, who said that the collection of a higher rate was a mistake of the agent, was unauthorized and would be corrected. It is probable that other agents have made the same mistake on account of the increase in the interstate rate.

AFTER STATE LAND.

Another batch of swamp land contests, covering fifty tracts in newly opened townships in Lake county, has been filed against the state. Owing to the general campaign to deprive the state of swamp land selections, W. E. Culkin of Duluth has been retained as special counsel to contest all these claims before the interior department. As former register of the Duluth land office, he has special experience adapt-

MAKES GREAT SHOWING.

Minnesota Leads in High School Enrollment Increase.

The enrollment of students in the high schools of the state last year showed an increase of 7.15 per cent over that of the previous year, according to the annual report of George B. Aiton, state high school inspector, to the superintendent of public instruction. The latest statistics available, the report states, show an annual increase in the united States of 6.62 per cent, while the percentage of increase for the North Central states, taken as a whole, is 6.42 per cent, so that the showing made in Minnesota is above the average for the surrounding states, as well as for the country as a whole.

The increase in the total enrollment was 1,581, which includes an increase of 521 in the number of non-resident students, a growth of 18 per cent for the year. This, the report states, would indicate that the number of non-resident students is increasing more rapidly than the total enrollment. There was also a gain of 326 in the number of graduates, the total number last year being 3,109. In other ways, 13.12 per cent of the students enrolled during the year were graduated in June. The commissioner of education gives the percentage for the United States as 12.81 per cent.

The report states that the number of superintendents teaching four or more classes is falling off slightly. The number of instructors has risen from 970 to 928, a gain of 58. The average is one instructor for each twenty-five students. In the large cities of the United States, the average is twenty-eight students to one teacher, and in the country towns, twenty-one students to a teacher. According to the statistics, the number of college graduates teaching has been increased by fifty. The number of normal graduates instructing in high schools remains stationary, while the number of high school graduates, a term used in the report to represent miscellaneous preparation, has risen from fifty seven to seventy-two. This is due to an increased number of instructors in special departments, such as music, drawing, cooking, sewing, manual training and commercial departments. It is so difficult to obtain suitable teachers for these special lines, the inspector states, that little effort has been made to require college education.

The report gives the following comparative figures on the attendance at the high schools for the past two years:

	1905-6.	1906-7.
Number of state high schools	192	201
Boys enrolled	8,937	9,560
Girls enrolled	13,169	14,127
Number of resident students	19,173	20,233
Number of non-resident students	2,933	3,454
Total enrollment	22,106	23,687
Number of graduates	2,783	3,109

COUNTIES DON'T AGREE.

Gov. Johnson May Be Asked to Appoint Appraisers.

Gov. Johnson may be called upon to appoint a board of appraisers to settle the question of the division of the debt of Itasca county between that and the new county of Koochiching.

The county commissioners of the two counties, after having been in joint session at Grand Rapids for some time, have been unable to reach an agreement. The Itasca board wanted to fix the value of the county buildings at between $32,500 and $50,000, while the Koochiching commissioners desired to make it $82,000, which would leave to their county a smaller proportion of the debt to pay.

Another joint meeting will be held, and then if it is found impossible to reach an agreement the governor will be called upon to appoint appraisers.

RECLAIMS 9,000 ACRES.

Drainage Ditches Will Place Land Among Best in the State.

By the completion of eight county ditches in Sherburne county about 9,000 acres of land has been reclaimed at an average cost of $4.55 an acre, and this land soon will become some of the most valuable in this part of the state. The ditches aggregate more than fifty miles in length, and the total amount of money expended on their construction is $40,000. This amount has been raised by the sale of bonds, the farmers to pay for this valuable improvement in a small additional taxation, which will extend during a period of ten years. Four more ditches are still under construction, which will more than double the value of an additional 1,900 acres at a cost of $12,000.

Ducks Are Plentiful.

Triumph, Minn., Aug. 30. — Young ducks seem to be quite plentiful in this section, and the local nimrods are anticipating some fine sport on Sept. 1. Prairie chickens are reported scarce.

Two Hurt in Collision.

Custer, S. D., Aug. 30.—Two men were hurt, one probably fatally, three engines were badly damaged and considerable track was torn up by a freight collision that occurred here at

SUMMER SCHOOLS GROW.

Attendance This Year Showed Large Increase.

The state summer schools recently closed had a total enrollment of 4,097, including 1,039 at the university summer school, but not including those enrolled at the summer terms of the normals. Last year the enrollment was 5,635, including 2,400 in summer schools at the normals, or 3,235 in the university and county schools, indicating quite an increase.

The total cost to the state this year was $27,250.69, of which $6,650 came from the university. The average age of all enrolled was 20.3 years, and the average age at which they began teaching was 18.4 years. First grade certificates were held by 564, second grade by 1,565, and third grade by 381.

Of those enrolled 108 were college graduates, 206 graduates of normal schools, 1,256 from high schools, and 1,753 only from common schools. There were 990 certificates of perfect attendance issued outside the university, and the average daily attendance was 2,400.

PASTOR IN HARVEST FIELD.

On account of the scarcity of help Rev. Brown of the Kerns and Hebron churches, across the river from Mankato, has taken off his vestments and gone into the harvest field and assisted his parishioners to garner their crops. WANT PAY; STOP GRADING.

Twin City & Lake Superior Road Held Up by Farmers.

The Twin City & Lake Superior railroad, which has commenced grading east of North Branch on its Arrow Line between the Twin Cities and the Head of the Lakes, has had to cease work on some of the land owing to the fact that the farmers owning the property wish to have their money before their land is cut up and spoiled with the grading. Notices to the railroad to stop work on their land have been served by at least two of the large farmers.

The railroad has been doing its grading on the strength of options secured from the farmers with a small payment down, and a large number of the owners of land have let the grading proceed, but others, who feel that considerable damage will be done to their property, demand advance pay on the land.

It is understood that the company is making arrangements to settle and grading will go forward again in a few days.

Would Buy Pine Tract.

The state forestry board, desiring to obtain for the state certain pine that borders the main road through the Itasca forest reserve and that is still the property of private owners, has just "estimated" the total quantity of the growth to be acquired. The board calculated that the pine amounts to about 2,000,000 feet. It is found on six 40-acre tracts belonging to Walker & Akeley of Minneapolis. What the firm will ask for their trees [illegible]

ON A REDWOOD FALLS MILK ROUTE

A combination of work and pleasure whereby the drudgery of the former is lost in the fun of the latter is the happy thought which has been put into execution by Esther Ziemer of Redwood Falls. The fun consists of driving her team of goats hitched to a neat rubber-tired cart, and while driving through the city she incidentally delivers milk to her customers.

Miss Esther is the daughter of R. W. Ziemer, agent for the Western Elevator company at Redwood Falls. Mr. Ziemer is also an excellent judge of cows, and the knowledge of this fact makes the neighbors eager to obtain their supply of milk from the cows of his selection. This gave rise to the business in which Miss Esther is engaged and from which she derives a great deal of pleasure.

Goats are not noted for their tractability, but these goats seem to realize that the arrangement of which they are an important part is only for fun, because Miss Esther has never had any trouble in managing them. Other children have their pets, some of them stocky little shetland ponies, but the chief attraction among them all is the team of goats.

Miss Esther has been using her goat team all summer, and when a circus arrived in town a short time ago it did not take the manager long to decide that the odd little rig would be an attractive feature for the parade, and he immediately made arrangements for her to take a leading position with the little rig which has become a familiar sight in the town.

BEST SCORES IN BUTTER.

Fifty Competitors Had Marks of 94 or Higher in Creamery Division.

Creamery butter which will score .94 points in a competitive contest, such as is carried on at the state fair, is very good butter, and the number of exhibitors who scored .94 or better is imposing. An additional large number scored .92 and better and a few went below .90.

The dairy butter contest was won by Mrs. J. H. Nicholson of Minneota, with a score of 93 1-2. The following had scores of .94 and above:

CHANGES AT CARLETON.

Miss Evans Gives Up Teaching, but Retains Deanship.

The fall semester for Carleton college begins Wednesday, Sept. 11. The following changes in the faculty are published in the college bulletin: Miss Margaret Evans retires from teaching, but retains the deanship of the women's department. Miss Alice Emerson, a graduate from Wellesley, takes Miss Evans' English work. Prof. Horace Goodhue retires, after forty years' active work, on the Carnegie pension fund. His successor has not been named. Neil S. Dungay of the University of Minnesota will take charge of the department of biology, vice L. W. Chaney, resigned. Rev. Fred B. Hill will take up his work as instructor in Biblical literature, returning to the college after a leave of absence.

J. W. Olsen, state superintendent of instruction, will make the opening address at chapel exercises Wednesday morning, Sept. 11.

The engagement of Myron S. Curtis, Brown university, 1907, as coach of Carleton's football team has been announced by the athletic department.

NEW CITY HALL AT FAIRMONT.

The contract for building the new city hall at Fairmont has been let to O. C. Gould & Son for $11,968. It will be of cement blocks, 50x80 feet on the ground and two stories high. The contract calls for its completion by Feb. 1, 1908.

Five cars of machinery have arrived for the new electric light plant and will be installed as rapidly as possible, but will probably not be completed [illegible]

ORE ROYALTIES ONLY $300,000.

Reports of Money Obtained by Great Northern Exaggerated.

There is a revival of talk over the Great Northern ore deal, now that a dividend has been paid on these ore certificates, and some very incorrect information is printed in the East. It is said that the royalties paid on independent mines owned in fee by the Great Northern and leased to independent concerns will this year be $3,000,000. This is almost one cipher too high. There are three of these mines owned in full by the Great Northern, and one-half of another. The three are Mahoning, Stevenson and Kinney, and the gross royalties they will pay this year will be in the neighborhood of $300,000.

Mahoning and Stevenson will produce a little more than 2,000,000 tons and Kinney about 125,000 tons. Royalties on the three range from 12 1-2 cents a ton to 16, which is the figure for the Kinney. The Great Northern owns a half-interest in the fee of the Leetonia, the other half being held by Cavour Langdon and G. H. Warren of Minneapolis. This mine will produce this year about 250,000 tons and will pay 36 cents a ton, or $45,000, to the Great Northern. It is also said that the Steel corporation is to pay this year $750,000 on its royalty account, as agreed for the first year.

The Steel corporation can scarcely pay anything this year, for the ore deal is of too recent occurrence to have any royalties accrue thereon. There may be large sums of money in the way of back royalties on the Mahoning, Stevenson and Kinney, accumulated during past years, that may be distributed to ore certificate holders, in which case the dividends will be large for some time from this source.

The Oliver Mining company will doubtless soon get to work on some of these lands preparatory to mining, but no step to this end has yet been undertaken. There should be during 1908 payments by the various operators on Great Northern lands of something less than $1,100,000; how much less will be determined by two factors—first by the proportion of Hill fee lands.

WHEN in doubt about the constitutionality of a state law ask the nearest Federal judge.

THE trouble in postponing a revision of the tariff "until after election" is that the people never know which election is meant.

IF the rate case goes against the state, what could a special session of the legislature do to remedy the situation? Re-enact the same laws?

EVERY man saves a lot of clothes to go hunting in, but the only hunting he ever does is for the clothes, only to discover that his wife has given them away.

A MEDICAL journol asserts that "fat legs are indicative of great mental power." Even an ordinary mortal can readily see that they indicate a good understanding.

ONE trouble with the Republican party in Minnesota is the fact that too many of its members are after vindication. Our own idea is that it needs a few more martyrs.

OWING to President Roosevelt's attitude toward the trusts we are forced to the conclusion that the chief executive does not want the abolishment of capital punishment.

IF Judge Lochren decides the Minnesota rate case against the railroads he will be obliged to turn a lot of his own precedents to the wall. The Judge so far has never disappointed the corporations.

AN Arkansas prophet declared that the world would come to an end on August 31st, but when he woke up Sunday morning he decided there was something the matter with his liver.

THE Red Lake Falls merchants have a bigger and better line than ever in the way of harvest and threshing supplies and their fall goods, which are arriving on every train, are of the best. It will pay you to do your trading here.

RED LAKE county lost a great opportunity in not having a display at the state fair. A good showing of our grains, grasses and dairy products would have been an object lesson to the older sections of the state. It is not too early to plan for next year.

USUALLY we enjoy hearing prosperity talk as well as anybody, says the Washington Herald, but when the United Undertakers announce that the past year was the most prosperous in their history, and that the next is even more promising, we submit that it is time to call a halt.

A KANSAS mon has paid his subscription to the local newspaper 20 years in advance, up to September, 1927. Here we have been lavishing praise upon the founders of libraries and patrons of colleges as great friends of humanity and promoters of happiness, when along comes this impulsive and kindly son of the Sunflower state and by his one act pales all their benefactions into insignificance.

THE St. Peter Free Press still insists that the timber frauds in Minnesota is a dead issue. Fortunately, this is true, but it is no fault of the long line of Republican state administrations. In this connection we are pleased to call Brer. Miller's attention to the fact that the other day the Shevlin-Carpenter company was mulcted in the sum of $35,000 for trespass, but in deference to the feelings of these patriotic citizens we pass the incident without further comment. It would be an unpardonable offense to criticize a timber thief.

It Looked Suspicious.

Five-year-old Lewis hod on several occosions successfully evoded his nurse and paid surreptitious and delightful visits to the workmen on an apartment house in process of building at the corner of his block. As the result of his observations there he unconcernedly and without prejudice emitted a choice and varied assortment of profanity at the luncheon table. His shocked mother tried to impress upon him thot never, never again must he repeat such words. But Lewis either lacked discrimination or his porent's warning had not been sufficiently impressive, for o few days afterward he vented a notable addition to his vocabulory of expletives. His mother this time waited not for speech, but promptly and firmly seized the young mon and washed his mouth out with soapsuds, which she had already demonstrated as an effectual spiritual cleanser.

A few days afterward Lewis was watching the nurse giving his six-weeks-old sister her bath, and when nurse carefully washed out the little mouth Lewis asked interestedly. "Nurse, hos baby been saying naughty words?"—New York Times.

Notice of Mortgage Forclosure Sale.

DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a mortgage executed by Edmond Bray and Mary Bray, his wife, mortgagors to Duluth Brewing & Malting Company, a corporation, as Mortgagee, bearing date the 5th day of January, 1904, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, on the 7th day of January, 1904, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 21 of mortgages on page 199.

Said default consists in the failure of the mortgagors to pay the sum of $348.98, which amount is claimed to be due and which is due upon the note which said mortgage was given to secure, at date hereof. By reason thereof, the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has ever been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, in accordance with the provisions of said mortgage and because of said default said Duluth Brewing & Malting Company hereby elects to declare and does hereby declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage to be due and payable.

The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged is situated in the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota and is described as follows; to-wit: Lots numbered twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in Block numbered eight (8) in Buse & Bottineau's Addition to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, according to the plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county Minnesota, together with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be forclosed by sale of the premises above described which sale will be made at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county at the Front Door of the County Court House at Red Lake Falls in said county, on Saturday, the 21st day of September, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage and fifty dollars ($50.00) attorneys' fees, as stipulated in said mortgage, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated this [illegible]th day of August, 1907.

Mrs. Robert Fritz, of St. Paul, is a guest this week of her mother, Mrs. John Sutor. She visited with her sister, Mrs. Chas. Chapman, of Crookston, several days while on her way here.

The members of the teaching staff of the Red Lake Falls schools arrived here the last of the week to take up their work Monday morning. They all express themselves as pleased to be back in Red Lake Falls.

Agent J. L. Tracy, of the Great Northern, is spending this week at Lake City, and points in Wisconsin, where he is renewing old time scenes and enjoying a rest from his duties. He is expected home tomorrow.

J. F. Grey came up from Royalton Friday and remained over Sunday with his family here. Joe reports his railroad contract work as progressing finely, and he expects to be employed steadily until the freeze-up.

Mrs. C. L. Grey and daughter, Katherine, returned home Monday from a several weeks visit at the cities and points in other parts of the state. They will open up their millinery store and get ready for the big fall business.

Fred Wilford and daughter, of Galena, Illinois, are guests at the home of Mr. Wilford's brother-in-law, John Drier, having arrived here last Thursday. This is Mr. Wilford's first visit to this part of the country and he is enjoying himself immensely.

Leon Huot, of Wylie, returned home Tuesday morning from St. Paul, where he went Saturday evening with a carload of cattle raised on his farm in Louisville. Mr. Huot spent a couple of days taking in the sights of the cities and had a most enjoyable time.

The venerable J. W. Bourdoa is able to be down town again after being laid up for a couple of months with an attack of blood-poisoning in one of his feet. He is still compelled to use crutches, but the injury is healing very rapidly and he will shortly be as well as ever.

Frank Jeffers came up from Minneapolis this morning and will spend several days with his family and friends here. Frank has been enjoying a brief rest and took in the state fair last week, and he did not want to go back to active work without first spending a few days at home.

There will be a meeting of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church of Red Lake Falls, Minn., on Friday evening, Sept. 13, at 8 o'clock for the purpose of considering the advisability of renewing the pastor relation of this church. By order of Session—W. A. Ricchel, clerk.

The Red Lake Falls Milling company's elevator at Thief River Falls now occupies its new site on the Great Northern right-of-way, having being moved there last week. The elevator is being completely overhauled and will be ready for business by the time the crop is moving.

S. M. Sivertson left Tuesday evening for a trip up the St. Vincent line, on business for the Red Lake Falls Milling company. The movement of the fall crop makes lots of additional work for the mill people, and Mr. Sivertson will be kept constantly on the go for the next several weeks.

Have you pulled yourself up by your own boot-straps? Do you think you have too much to lose it all? The San Francisco earthquake proved the folly of this kind of thinking. Fidelity life insurance was all some persons had left.—The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co., Philadelphia.

Harry Garceau has entered Carleton college at Northfield, and will spend the next year taking a course in music and one or two other studies. Harry has not fully decided on what profession he will follow, but will spend one year at least in work that will be of great benefit to him in later life.

Judge of Probate Tarrant officiated at the marriage of Paul Weiss, of Black River, to Miss Sophia Yette, of Louisville, Tuesday morning. The newly married pair will make their home on the groom's fine farm in Black River township and expect to go house-keeping at once. Mr. Weiss is a son of one of Black River's oldest residents, and is a young man of excellent habits and bright prospects. The bride is a well-known young lady of Louisville, well fitted for a wife's companion of the man of her choice. THE GAZETTE takes pleasure in extending its hearty congratulations.

Chas. Brady left last evening for Minneapolis where he will again resume his studies at the University of Minnesota.

Miss Laura Detert, one of the teachers in our schools, was in the bad railroad wreck on the Rock Island road near Waterloo, Iowa, last week. A fast passenger train left the track and crashed into a freight standing on a siding, killing several people outright and injuring a number of others. Miss Detert escaped unhurt, but does not care to repeat the thrilling experience.

John F. Naughtin, special agent of the Fidelity Life, is in Red Lake Falls this week interviewing prospective policy-holders. The Fidelity is one of the old reliable companies and during the recent scandal in insurance circles there was not the slightest suspicion of dishonesty or mismanagement lodged against it. If you want good insurance at a reasonable price Mr. Naughtin is the man to see.

August Morin and son, Alvah, arrived home yesterday from Bellecourt, North Dakota, where Mr. Morin has been working on a big job of government building work during the summer. He finished up for this year on Monday of this week, but expects to go back next summer and do considerable more work at the same place. Joe Lachance and Homer Laurent, who have been working with him, will return home this week also.

The Fosston Thirteen Towns comments as follows regarding two young ladies who are teaching in the public schools of that place this year: "Miss Marchand starts in with her work in a way that augurs well for the interests of the second graders. There are 22 bright little folks there hard at work and there are still others to come. The fourth grade pupils are fortunate in having a teacher of the enthusiasm and ability of Miss Tibbetts. Both the third and the fourth grades number 28 pupils."

The public schools opened for the years work on schedule time Monday morning, and from all appearances prospects for a highly successful year are particularly bright. The exact figures are not available at present, but Superintendent Chamberlain announces that the enrollment on the opening day was larger than the corresponding day last year. The school spirit seems to be manifest in every department and the pupils are there this year for the purpose of learning. The public school system is the grandest institution in the world, and that Red Lake Falls schools keep their place well at the top should be gratifying to the people generally.

Rev. Philip A. Schwarz, of Windom, who has occupied the pulpit at the Presbyterian church here for the past two weeks, will preach his final sermon Sunday morning, it being his intention to leave that evening for the Twin cities, where he will visit a few days before returning home. Rev. Schwarz came here a month ago to find relief from hay fever, with which he is afflicted every year in southern Minnesota, and he states to THE GAZETTE that he has never spent a more enjoyable outing. Not only was he completely rid of all traces of the hay fever, but the outing in this delightful northern Minnesota clime has done him a world of good, and he says he will long remember Red Lake Falls and her excellent people.

The Crookston Times took particular pains to note the fact that "the Red Lake Falls band was ably assisted by five professional players from Fargo" at the band concert given at Crookston while en route to the state fair last week. It is true that the local band did hire four players to accompany them on this trip, as the loss of several good men in the last few months necessitated hiring one or two men to keep the band up to its old standard. But there is no significance in this, as every engagement the Crookston band has played for several years past. Prof. Riggs has hired players to bring his organization up to where it had to be. The Times couldn't knock any other way, so it tried to make it appear that the "five professionals," as they were called, were entirely responsible for the excellent concert given at Crookston. But then, that's easy—considering that it came from Crookston.

SISTER ROSE.

A STORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"Let that man enter, whoever he is!" cried the general.

Lomaque passed Madame Danville on the threshold. She trembled as he brushed by her; then, supporting herself by the wall, followed him a few paces into the room. She looked first at her son—after that, at Trudaine—after that, back again at her son. Something in her presence silenced every one. There fell a sudden stillness over all the assembly—a stillness so deep that the eager, frightened whispering, and sharpened rustling of dresses among the women in the library became audible from the other side of the closed door.

"Charles," she said, slowly advancing, "why do you look?" She stopped, and fixed her eyes again on her son more earnestly than before; then turned them suddenly on Trudaine. "You are looking at my son, sir," she said; "and I see contempt in your face. By what right do you insult a man whose grateful sense of his mother's obligations to you made him risk his life for the saving of yours and your sister's? By what right have you kept the escape of my son's wife from death by the guillotine—an escape which, for all I know to the contrary, his generous exertions were instrumental in effecting—a secret from my son? By what right, I demand to know, has your treacherous secrecy placed us in such a position as we now stand in before the master of this house?"

An expression of sorrow and pity passed over Trudaine's face while she spoke. He retired a few steps, and gave her no answer. The general looked at him with eager curiosity, and dropping his hold of Danville's arm, seemed about to speak; but Lomaque stepped forward at the same time, and held up his hand to claim attention.

"I think I shall express the wishes of Citizen Trudaine," he said, addressing Madame Danville, "if I recommend this lady not to press for too public an answer to her questions."

"Pray, who are you, sir, who take it on yourself to advise me?" she retorted haughtily. "I have nothing to say to you, except that I repeat those questions, and that I insist on their being answered."

"Who is this man?" asked the general addressing Trudaine, and pointing to Lomaque.

"A man unworthy of credit," cried Danville, speaking audibly for the first time, and darting a look of deadly hatred at Lomaque. "An agent of police under Robespierre."

"And in that capacity capable of answering questions which refer to the transactions of Robespierre's tribunals," remarked the ex-chief agent with his old official self-possession.

"True!" exclaimed the general; "the man is right—let him be heard."

"There is no help for it," said Lomaque, looking at Trudaine; "leave it to me—it is fittest that I should speak. I was present," he continued in a louder voice, "at the trial of Citizen Trudaine and his sister. They were brought to the bar through the denunciation of Citizen Danville. Till the confession of the male prisoner exposed the fact, I can answer for Danville's not being aware of the real nature of the offenses charged against Trudaine and his sister. When it became known that they were secretly helping this lady to escape from France, and when Danville's own head was consequently in danger, I myself heard him save it by false assertion that he had been aware of Trudaine's conspiracy from the first——"

"Do you mean to say," interrupted the general, "that he proclaimed himself in open court, as having knowingly denounced the man who was on trial for saving his mother?"

"I do," answered Lomaque. (A murmur of horror and indignation rose from all the strangers present at that reply.) "The reports of the tribunal are existing to prove the truth of what I say," he went on. "As to the escape of Citizen Trudaine and the wife of Danville from the guillotine, it was the work of political circumstances, which there are persons living to speak to if necessary, and a little stratagem of mine, which need not be referred to now. And last, with reference to the concealment which followed the escape, I beg to inform you that it was abandoned the moment we knew what was going on here; and that it was only persevered in up to this time, as a natural measure of precaution on the part of Citizen Trudaine. From a similar motive we now abstain from exposing his sister to the shock and the peril of being present here. What man with an atom of feeling would risk letting her even look again on such a husband as that?"

CHAPTER XXIV.

HE glanced round him, and pointed to Danville, as he put the question. Before a word could be spoken by any one else in the room, a low wailing cry of "My mistress! my dear, dear mistress!" directed all eyes first on the old man Dubois, then on Madame Danville.

She had been leaning against the wall before Lomaque began to speak; but she stood perfectly upright now. [illegible] of the light gaudy ribands, flaunting on her disordered head-dress, so much as trembled. The old servant Dubois was crouched on his knees at her side, kissing her cold right hand, chafing it in his, reiterating his faint, mournful cry: "Oh, my mistress, my dear, dear mistress!" but she did not appear to know that he was near her. It was only when her son advanced a step or two towards her that she seemed to awaken suddenly from that death-trance of mental pain. Then she slowly raised the hand that was free, and waved him back from her. Her lips moved a little—she spoke:

"Oblige me, sir, for the last time, by keeping silence. You and I have henceforth nothing to say to each other. I am the daughter of a race of nobles, and the widow of a man of honor. You are a traitor and a false witness, a thing from which all true men and true women turn with contempt. I renounce you! Publicly, in the presence of these gentlemen, I say it—I have no son."

She turned her back on him, and bowing to the other persons in the room with the old formal courtesy of bygone times, walked slowly and steadily to the door. Stopping there, she looked back; and then the artificial courage of the moment failed her. With a faint, suppressed cry, she clutched at the hand of the old servant, who still kept faithfully at her side; he caught her in his arms, and her head sank on his shoulder.

"Help him!" cried the general to the servants near the door. "Help him take her into the next room!"

The old man looked up suspiciously from his mistress to the persons who were assisting him to support her. With a strange, sudden jealousy he shook his hand at them. "Home," he cried, "she shall go home, and I will take care of her. Away! you there—nobody holds her head but Dubois. Down-stairs! down-stairs to her carriage! She has nobody but me now, and I say she shall be taken home."

As the door closed, General Berthelin approached Trudaine, who had stood silent and apart, from the time when Lomaque first appeared in the drawing-room.

"I wish to ask your pardon," said the old soldier, "because I have wronged you by a moment of unjust suspicion. For my daughter's sake, I bitterly regret that we did not see each other long ago; but I thank you, nevertheless, for coming here, even at the eleventh hour."

Another Big Naphtha.

Up at the works of the Gas Engine and Power company at Morris Heights they are building a seventy-six foot naphtha boat for T. Adolph Mollenbauer of Brooklyn that is a yacht in every sense of the word. The use of naptha as a motive power always suggests that the craft which it drives must be a launch but when that boat is seventy-six feet long and has twin screws it surely has a right to the more pretentious title. The interior arrangements of the new craft, which is well in hand, are very comfortable, the absence of coal bunkers and all the other necessary appurtenances of a steam yacht giving so much more cabin room. Forward of the pilothouse is a clear deck space of 10 feet. The house itself is 9 feet 8 inches long and is mahogany, handsomely paneled. The main saloon is finished in ivory and gold. It is 14 feet 3 inches long, with roomy lockers and bookcases at either end. The two engines that propel the boat occupy a space amidships of 6 feet 6 inches in length. In the crew's quarters there are three berths, while below the pilothouse is a cabin fitted with two berths for the captain and engineer. The boat is to be schooner rigged and from mast to mast there is a space of 25 feet, a flush deck, with the exception of one skylight.—New York World.

A Paper Restaurant.

An eating-house made of paper has been erected in the port of Hamburg. Its walls are composed of a double layer of paper stretched on frames and impregnated with a fire and water proof solution. A thin wooden partition affords further protection against the inclemency of the weather. The roofs and walls are fastened together by means of bolts and hinges, so that the entire structure may be rapidly taken to pieces and put up again. The dining-room itself measures 30 meters by 6 meters, and is capable of accommodating about 150 persons. There are twenty-two windows and four skylights, and the heating is effected by a couple of isolated stoves. A side erection contains the manager's offices, kitchen, larder and dwelling-rooms. The total cost of the construction is said to have amounted to 1,500 marks

The Egg.

In all ages the egg has been a symbol of life, and in the east, for thousands of years, the use of the egg at the spring festival, to symbolize the resurrection of nature, has been known. Its employment among the early Christians was probably borrowed from the Roman practices prevalent at that time of sending colored eggs as presents during the spring festival. It was condemned as a pagan custom by the Christian clergy in A. D. 321, and again in A. D. 416, but could not, apparently, be suppressed, so was permitted, a new symbolic meaning, that of the [illegible]

PHASES OF AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN FOUL BROOD

A Disease Which Works Havoc in the Hive—By G. F. White, Ph. D., U. S. Department of Agriculture.

American foul brood (often called simply "foul brood") is distributed through all parts of the United States, and from the symptoms published in European journals and texts one is led to believe that it is also the prevalent brood disease in Europe. Although it is found in almost all sections of the United States, there are many localities entirely free from disease of any kind.

The adult bees of an infected colony are usually rather inactive and do little toward cleaning out infected material. When the larvae are first affected, they turn to a light chocolate color, and in the advanced stages of decay they become darker, resembling roasted coffee in color. Usually the larvae are attacked at about the time of capping, and most of the cells containing infected larvae are capped. As decay proceeds, these cappings become sunken and perforated, and, as the healthy brood emerges, the comb shows the scattered cells containing larvae which have died of disease, still capped. The most noticeable characteristic of this infection is the fact that when a small stick is inserted in a larva which has died of the disease, and slowly removed, the broken-down tissues adhere to it and will often stretch out for several inches before breaking. When the larva dies, it forms a tightly adhering scale of very dark brown color, which can best be observed when the comb is held so that a bright light strikes the lower side wall. Decaying larvae which have died of this disease have a very characteristic odor, which resembles a poor quality of glue. This disease seldom attacks drone or queen larvae. It appears to be much more virulent in the western part of the United States then in the east.

Adult bees in infected colonies are not very active, but do succeed in cleaning out some of the dried scales. This disease attacks larvae earlier than does American foul brood, and a comparatively small percentage of the diseased brood is ever capped. The diseased larvae which are capped over have sunken and perforated cappings. The larvae when first attacked show a small yellow spot on the body near the head and move uneasily in the cell. When death occurs, they turn yellow, then brown, and finally almost black. Decaying larvae which have died of this disease do not usually stretch out in a long thread when a small stick is inserted and slowly removed. Occasionally there is a very slight "ropiness," but this is never very marked. The thoroughly dried larvae form irregular scales which are not strongly adherent to the lower side wall of the cell. There is very little odor from decaying larvae which have died from this disease, and when an odor is noticeable it is not the "glue pot" odor of the American foul brood, but more nearly resembles that of soured dead brood. This disease attacks drone and queen larvae very soon after the colony is infected. It is as a rule much more infectious than American foul brood and spreads rapidly. On the other hand, it sometimes happens that the disease will disappear of its own accord, a thing which the author never knew to occur in a genuine case of American foul brood. European foul brood is most destructive during the spring and early summer, often almost disappearing in late summer and autumn.

The nature of foul brood as a germ disease.—If a comb be removed from near the center of a healthy hive during the summer months its cells will normally be filled with eggs, larvae, and pupae in every stage of development. The eggs as left by the ovipositor of the queen or mother adhere commonly by the end to the base of the cells they occupy, and favored by the high temperature constantly maintained within the hive, the germinal vesicle at about three days matures into a larva ready for hatching. These eggs I have shown as liable to the disease even before they leave the body of the mother, but most careful microscopic examination is needful to make this apparent (and of which I shall speak presently more particularly). On the contrary, the larvae, which are constantly fed by the workers, so change in appearance soon after infection that a practiced eye at once detects the presence of the disease. Whilst healthy, their bodies are of a beautiful pearly whiteness, lying, at first floating, in the abundant pabulum the nurses are ever ready to supply. As they grow they curl themselves at the bottom of the cells until they become too strait for their occupants, which now advance to the head to be in readiness for the cocoon spinning, which follows upon the close of the eating stage. When the disease strikes the larvae they move uneasily in their cells, and often then present the dorsal surface to its mouth, * * * so that mere posture is no insufficient evidence of an unhealthy condition. The color changes to yellow, passing on by degrees toward a pale brown, whilst the skin becomes flaccid and opaque; death soon occurs, when the body, now shrunken by evaporation, lies on the lower side of the cell, increasing in depth of tone, until in a few days nothing more than a nearly black scale remains. Should the larvae, however, escape contamination until nearly the period of pupahood, they are sealed over in the normal way by a cover made of pollen-grains and wax, * * * and which is pervious to air. The cover furnishes a screen on which part of the cocoon is soon after spread, but the inhabitant of the cell is marked out for death, and before very long the capping or sealing sinks and becomes concave, and in it punctures of an irregular character appear, * * * and this is a nearly conclusive sign of the diseased condition of the colony. The sense of smell is also appealed to, as a peculiar, very offensive, and extremely characteristic odor now escapes from the diseased combs. The bees, in addition, lose energy, but become unusually active in ventilating their hive by standing at the door, heads towards home, and flapping their wings persistently so that a strong out-current, and as a necessary consequence, a correspondingly indraught are set up. Should any attempt be made at removing a dead larva which has assumed a deep brown tint, its body, tenaciously adhering to the cell wall will stretch out into long and thin strings like half-dried glue. The microscopist can easily explain this. The thin chitinous aerating sacs and tracheae do not undergo decomposition at all easily, and these remaining, occasion the peculiarity referred to. * * * The disease is terribly infectious, and once started soon spreads from cell to cell and often from stock to stock.

AGRICULTURE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

By Prof. D. O. Barto, University of Illinois, Agricultural College.

First there must be a body of teachers with special training for this work; second, pupils must remain longer in school; third, the work should be adapted to local conditions and the capacity of the pupils.

The agricultural colleges have already worked out and formulated a vast amount of scientific knowledge admirably adapted to instructional work in the secondary schools. Our own college of agriculture has begun the training of teachers for such schools.

I would like to make the study of agriculture a permanent feature in the course of every high school, because the deepest interest of this community is agriculture, and I believe it to be the duty of the high school to advance the interest of the people who are supporting it and give the child that training which shall best fit him for his vocation; because the environment of these pupils is wholly of the country and the farm, and therefore agriculture provides the most effective field in which to reach and teach them; because agricultural science offers a subject for educational purposes unsurpassed by any other in our schools.

Instruction for these boys and girls should be about things which enter into their daily life, and have to do with the interests of the home and the farm, with earning a living, and making money—why these are real things, and have never been associated in their minds with school and education. These young people have learned by daily contact many of the commoner theories and practices of farm life, but when they learn in these schools how the key of science can unlock for them the mysteries of the soil and give them a power to control plant and animal life as they will, the indifference which has walled in so many pupils will rapidly crumble [illegible]

TELLS LOVE IN LEGAL FORM.

Wooer of Washington Widow Makes Deposition He Adores Her.

Of a score or more of prominent Washington widows, one of the most conspicuous is Mrs. Albert Clifford Barney, who sailed for Europe a few days ago, after receiving the most extraordinary declaration of affection ever bestowed on mortal woman. Mrs. Barney has the assurance that she possesses all the charm of her girlhood days, despite the fact that she is the mother of two daughters to all outward appearance as old as herself, for one of her adorers—she has several—has just gone before a notary and made solemn deposition in legal form that he loves her for herself alone and furthermore, that should she consent to marry him he will never accept one penny of her fortune in life or make any claim on her estate should he survive her.

He has proposed orally so many times without getting any results that in desperation he has at last resorted to this method. And even after this Mrs. Barney sailed away without encouraging, much less accepting, the suit of so disinterested a lover. The latter is, however, not wholly discouraged, and proposes following his adored one to Paris.

The object of this disinterested affection was born a Miss Pike, of Cincinnati, the daughter of that war-time manufacturer of a whisky which laid the foundation of the vast fortune this twentieth century knight treats with noble sc[illegible]. She is a handsome woman, possessed of great talent, as a portrait painter, several of her pictures having received distinguished notice at the exhibitions of the Corcoran art gallery. As a practical illustration of artistic temperament, she has taken to architecture, having built herself a wonderful house, combining in a delightful fashion the purposes of a home, a garage, and a studio.

DRIVER WAS NOT IMPRESSED.

Ambassador Jusserand Probably Now Carries Credentials.

Ambassador Jusserand, from France, was one of the party of diplomatists who accompanied the president to the opening of the Jamestown exposition.

The ambassador, who is small and nervous, grew tired of the exercises before they were over, and concluded to go back to the hotel. He left, accompanied by Mme. Jusserand. Conveyances were few. The ambassador looked around and saw several surreys standing.

He clapped his hands, whistled and shouted, but the drivers paid no attention to him. Then he trudged over and said: "I desire to engage this carriage."

"Can't," replied the driver.

"Cannot? And why?"

"Because these carriages is reserved for the president's friends."

The ambassador hopped up and down. "But I am ze president's friend," he exclaimed, lapsing slightly from the punctilious English he usually employs.

The driver looked the ambassador over. "You one of the president's friends?" he inquired scornfully. "Which one?"

"I am ze ambassador from France—ze ambassador from France, I tell you."

The driver grinned. He leaned out and shook a warning finger in the diplomat's face. "Now see here," he said, "you can't come that over me, Alphonse."—Saturday Evening Post.

Brought Capital Up to Date.

When President Roosevelt adopted a livery and put the national colors on his coachman's hat, he gave the finishing touch to Washington as an aristocratic and up to date capital. Now, at least the gentry can be distinguished at a glance from the commoner. Six years ago, Washington boasted of but one state equipage, and that was the property of the mikado's envoy. Now, Mr. and Mrs. Everybody, and those who want to get into the same family circle, has his coach embellished with coats of arms, his attendants bedecked in gay livery and ribbons of the same colors, fluttering from their horses' blinders. When the president goes out to drive, his driver and footman wear buff trousers, dark green coats embellished with shiny brass buttons, and a cockade of tricolored ribbon in their silk hats. Each of the horses also has a bunch of glory ribbon tied to his head dress. When Mrs. Roosevelt goes for an outing the outfit is made more festive by the use of a tan harness on which the national emblem appears several times, and the driver's whip is decorated with the national colors. The boys and Miss Ethel have individual ways of using bits of red, white and blue, about their pony turnouts, and even old Pinckney, as he goes marketing for the family, marks his horse with distinction by fastening a tri-colored rosette on either blinder.

Reclaiming Wife Deserter.

A barber named Bunch charged with deserting his wife was recently paroled by a Washington court on the following conditions: He is to stay out of the country for a period, to be determined by his father-in-law. He has a family of five boys, and he cannot see them unless his behavior justifies it. He has to go to church every Sunday, work in a first-class barber shop, and have a recommendation from the minister of the church that he has been trying to be a man. Should any of the conditions be broken, Bunch will have to go to prison for three months.

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Profit by the Experience of One Who Has Found Relief.

James R. Keeler, retired farmer, of Fanner St., Cazenovia, N. Y., says: "About fifteen years ago I suffered with my back and kidneys. I doctored and used many remedies without getting relief. Beginning with Doan's Kidney Pills, I found relief from the first box, and two boxes restored me to good, sound condition. My wife and many of my friends have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results and I can earnestly recommend them."

Too Many Wolves in Iowa.

Wolves have become so numerous in the vicinity of Anita, Iowa, and their depredations so frequent that the sheep owners have united, agreeing to pay a bounty for all wolves killed in the four northeast townships of Cass county, equal to that now paid by the county, thus making the bounty $10 and $4, respectively, for old and young wolves.

CHILDREN TORTURED.

Girl Had Running Sores from Eczema—Boy Tortured by Poison Oak—Both Cured by Cuticura.

"Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills. When we commenced with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble.

"In July of this year a little boy in our family poisoned his hands and arms with poison oak, and in twenty-four hours his hands and arms were a mass of torturing sores. We used only the Cuticura Remedies, and in about three weeks his hands and arms healed up. Mrs. Lizzie Vincent Thomas, Fairmont, Walden's Ridge Tenn., Oct. 13, 1905."

Right Foot on the Rail.

In every police station in the city a magistrate sits at 7 o'clock each morning to hear the petty cases of the day before. Nine out of ten of the arrests are drunks. Observant persons who attend these hearings notice a peculiar gesture made by almost every prisoner as he is brought before the bar of justice.

As each one places his hands on the rail before him and faces the Magistrate his right foot involuntarily is lifted a trifle off the ground as if to place it on a foot rail that graces almost every barroom in the city. It has also been noticed that the policemen who are brought up to testify against the prisoners do the same thing.—Philadelphia Record.

Sang at Her Work.

A well known clergyman relates that while on a recent visit to Shropshire he was in a small town where owing to the scarcity of good servants most of the ladies preferred to do their own work.

He was awakened quite early by the tones of a clear soprano voice singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee." As the clergyman lay in bed he meditated upon the piety his hostess must possess which enabled her to go about her tasks early in the morning singing such a noble hymn.

At breakfast he spoke to her about it and told her how pleased he was.

"Oh law!" she replied, "that's the hymn I boil eggs by; three verses for soft and five for hard."

FEET OUT.

She Had Curious Habits.

When a person has to keep the feet out from under cover during the coldest nights in winter because of the heat and prickly sensation, it is time that coffee, which causes the trouble, be left off.

There is no end to the nervous conditions that coffee will produce. It shows in one way in one person and in another way in another. In this case the lady lived in S. Dak. She says:

"I have had to lie awake half the night, with my feet and limbs out of the bed on the coldest nights, and felt afraid to sleep for fear of catching cold. I had been troubled for years with twitching and jerking of the lower limbs, and for most of the time I have been unable to go to church or to lectures because of that awful feeling that I must keep on the move.

"When it was brought to my attention that coffee caused so many nervous diseases, I concluded to drop coffee and take Postum Food Coffee to see if my trouble was caused by coffee drinking.

"I only drank one cup of coffee for breakfast but that was enough to do the business for me. When I quit it my troubles disappeared in an almost miraculous way. Now I have no more of the jerking and twitching and can sleep with any amount of bedding over me and sleep all night in sound, peaceful rest.

"Postum Food Coffee is absolutely worth its weight in gold to me." [illegible]

MOTHERHOOD

The first requisite of a good mother is good health, and the experience of maternity should not be approached without careful physical preparation, as a woman who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from native roots and herbs, more successfully than by any other medicine because it gives tone and strength to the entire feminine organism, curing displacements, ulceration and inflammation, and the result is less suffering and more children healthy at birth. For more than thirty years has been the standby of American mothers in preparing for childbirth.

MRS. JAMES CHESTER

Note what Mrs James Chester, of 427 W. 35th St., New York says in this letter:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"I wish every expectant mother knew about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A neighbor who had learned of its great value at this trying period of a woman's life urged me to try it and I did so, and I cannot say enough in regard to the good it did me. I recovered quickly and am in the best of health now."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is certainly a successful remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women.

It has cured almost every form of Female Complaints, Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation, Ulcerations and Organic Diseases of Women and is invaluable in preparing for Childbirth and during the Change of Life.

"Why that boy is morally certain to put some of those animals in his mouth, and even swallow them, perhaps!"

PRESCRIPTIONS IN LATIN.

The Public Should Have Them Translated by the Druggists.

What virtue is there in the secrecy with which the doctor hedges about his profession?

"Professional etiquette" occupies a prominent place in the curriculum of every medical school, and when strictly analyzed "professional etiquette" seems to mean "doing what is best for the doctor, individually and collectively."

Among the things that "is best for the doctor" is the writing of his prescriptions in Latin, and thus keeping the public in ignorance not only of what it is taking for its ills, but forcing a call upon the doctor each time a prescription is needed.

In plain and unmistakable English the writing of prescriptions in Latin makes business for the doctors.

Let us say that you have the ague. You had it last year and the year before. Each time you have visited the doctor and he has prescribed for you—in Latin. You have never known what he has given you for the disease, and so each time you are forced to go to him again and give him an opportunity to repeat his prescription—in Latin, and his fee—in dollars.

If you ask the doctor why he uses Latin in writing his prescriptions, why he writes "aqua" when he means water, he will give you a technical dissertation on the purity of the Latin language, and the fact that all words are derived from it, etc. It will be a dissertation that you may not be able to answer, but it will hardly convince you.

It would be a good thing for the public to devise a little code of ethics of its own; ethics that will be "a good thing for the public individually and collectively."

Let us apply one of the rules of this code of ethics to you, the individual.

You call in the physician when you have the ague, the grippe, or any of the other ills to which human flesh is heir, and which you may have again some day. The doctor prescribes—in Latin, and you take this, to you, meaningless scribble to the druggist to have it compounded. Right here is where you come in, if you are wise. Say to the druggist that you want a translation of that prescription. It is your privilege to know what you are taking. While the doctor's code of ethics may not recognize this right it is yours just the same.

With the translated prescription in your possession you have two distinct advantages. You know what you are taking, and should you wish to call some other doctor at some time you will be able to tell him what drugs you have been putting into your system, and also if you should have the same disease again you can save yourself a visit to the doctor, and his fee, by taking this translated prescription to [illegible]

CAPITAL IS SHABBY

DISREPUTABLE SURROUNDINGS OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Many Blocks Along Pennsylvania Avenue, the Great Artery of the City, Are Lined with Wretched Hovels.

The national capital has for years been content with the magnificence of its public buildings and has endured shabby dwellings and business houses as one of the inevitable conditions of life. Even the filthy and disreputable surroundings of the great marble building itself have been tolerated, though a disgrace to decency and a menace to safety and health.

But at last Washington is waking up from its Rip Van Winkle sleep and heroic efforts are being made to get the lawmakers to realize their duty to the people not only of the District, but of the entire United States. There is a demand for laws which will clean out, burn out or drown out the rows of squalid hovels which almost hem in the great building on the hill, while the main approach—Pennsylvania avenue—must be looked after and purified.

It would be a difficult undertaking to depict the miserably wretched condition of affairs which exist for several blocks on Pennsylvania avenue—the chief boast of the city—extending from historic Georgetown to the Eastern Branch bridge. For several blocks at the foot of the capitol this world-renowned avenue is lined with low saloons, cheap boarding houses, shoes-half-soled-while-you-wait shops, shooting galleries, Chinese restaurants, laundries, junk shops, second-hand stores and cheap lunch rooms.

Perhaps in no city could be found a prominent street or avenue of more disreputable surroundings than this "Washington Bowery." Instead of growing better and more reputable in recent years it has grown steadily worse, though under the strongest possible police protection. Many of the buildings are unsanitary and unsafe, but the owners decline to tear down and rebuild or to sell at any reasonable price, for the rents are always good and a house is seldom vacant. On the Bowery can always be found, day and night, an ever changing panorama of human nature. Men of all conditions mingle promiscuously together. Well dressed men and ill-dressed ones, men of intelligence and stupid ones, old and young, foreigners and natives, all mix up in a general jumble, and, of course, there is no scarcity of the other sex. The color line is not rigidly drawn and every one is a good fellow so long as his money holds out, be he white man, negro or Chinese.

A higher moral tone of the population may be found in the southwestern and southeastern sections which surround the capitol, but in many instances the buildings occupied as homes are just about as shabby and disreputable and with not the least hope of being improved so long as tenants can be found. Worse still, and a burning disgrace to the city of Washington, is the fact that several of the really respectable-looking residences are disreputable resorts, but so well managed that the police have been unable to close them. At any rate, these houses have existed for years and there has been no interference.

Names That Are Suggestive.

When the Seattle high school baseball nine was in Washington recently it had as one of its players a young man named Ten Million.

Civil Service Commissioner Greene in commenting on the unusual appellation, recalled an instance of a queer cognomen that had come under his observation, somewhat in the same class with D-Cady Herrick, unsuccessful candidate for the governorship of New York against the late Gov. Higgins, and W. J. McGee of the Smithsonian Institution. But while in the case of these gentlemen the initials are not really such since they begin no word and are abbreviations for nothing whatever, in the instance cited by Commissioner Greene the initial had a meaning, making the whole name a parental admonition.

"I remember that years ago I knew a good woman who followed what used to be the humble occupation of monthly nurse," said the commissioner. "This Mrs. Quick was full of wise saws and modern instances, and used to lose no opportunity to give good advice. Her only son she burdened with a name which never let him forget his duty to the business world. She named him John B. Quick.

Danger to Consular Service.

"There is a doubt in my mind," said an official of the state department, apropos of a recent examination of candidates for consulships, "whether the best consuls will be secured, ultimately, by the entrance of these young men into the service, as permanent members of it. No matter how desirable they may be, personally, I cannot help feeling that with long service abroad, unless in countries positively repulsive, they will become denationalized, un-Americanized and willing expatriates. Their only sight of this country will be during brief and infrequent vacations, and imperceptibly their individual interests will become bound up with those of foreign countries. I may not take the right view of it, and my fears appear not to worry my superiors, but that's the [illegible]

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

Changed Schools.

Miss Ella Olson, who went to Fargo to attend a business college, found that she had selected the wrong school, changed over to the Dakota Business College and has recently been placed in a fine position as stenographer for the Gaar Scott Machine Company of that city. Professor Watkins of the "D. B. C." has been very successful not only in training young people for business life but in locating all his graduates with the best business firms.

Caught.

A clergyman recently, addressing those who criticise others while they themselves are open to criticism, told this story: "When I was a boy we had a schoolmaster who had odd ways of catching idle boys. Says he one day: 'Boys, I must have closer attention to books. The first one of you that sees another boy idle I want you to inform me and I will attend to the case.' 'Ah,' thought I to myself, 'there's Joe Simmons, that I don't like. I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his book I'll tell on him.'

"It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master. 'Indeed,' said he. 'How did you know he was idle?' 'I saw him,' was the reply. 'You did. And were your eyes on your book when you saw him?' I was caught, but I didn't watch for the boys again."

The Walking Delegate.

When it first became a part of my duty to come in constant and direct contact with employers and trades union men, it was with little comprehension of the intensely human elements that persist, however the industrial environment changes. For example, it was a cause of much surprise to hear a very active business agent—"walking delegate," if you like—in telling the story of a labor trouble he had been handling and upon which a good deal depended remark that he couldn't follow it up on a certain day because it was his last chance to buy Christmas presents for the babies. Previously looked upon as a sort of impersonal economic automaton, he suddenly became understandable in the light of what he really is—simply an honest, somewhat narrow, tender hearted, pugnacious, jolly good fellow.—H. Robbins in Atlantic

OLD FAVORITES.

WHATEVER IS IS RIGHT.

KNOW thy own point: This kind, this due degree
Of blindness, weakness, heaven bestows on thee.
Submit: In this or any other sphere
Secure to be as blest as thou canst bear,
Safe in the hand of one disposing power,
Or in the natal or the mortal hour.
All nature is but art unknown to thee;
All chance, direction which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good:
And, spite of pride, in erring reason's spite,
One truth is clear—whatever is is right.

THE WAY TO SHADOWTOWN.

SWAY to and fro in the twilight gray;
This is the ferry for Shadowtown.
It sails away at the end of the day
Just as the darkness closes round.

REST, little head, on my shoulder—so;
A sleepy kiss is the only fare.
Drifting away from the world we go—
Baby and I in the rocking chair.

SEE, where the firelogs glow and spark,
Glitter the lights of Shadowland.
The raining drops on the window—hark,
Are ripples lapping upon its strand.

THERE where a mirror is glancing dim
A lake lies shimmering, cool and still;
Blossoms are wavering o'er its brim—
Those over there on the window sill.

ROCK slow, more slow, in the dusky light.
Silently lower the anchor down.
Dear little passenger say "Good night."
We've reached the harbor of Shadowtown.

THE RULER OF THE QUEEN'S NAVEE.

WHEN I was a lad I served a term
As office boy to an attorney's firm.
I cleaned the windows and swept the floor,
And I polished up the handle of the big front door.
I polished up the handle so care-ful-lee
That now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

As office boy I made such a mark
That they gave me the post of junior clerk.
I served the writs with a smile so bland,
And I copied all the letters in a big round hand.
I copied all the letters in a hand so free,
And now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

In serving writs I made such a name
That an articled clerk I soon became.
I wore clean collars and a brand new suit
For the pass examination at the Institute.
And that pass examination did so well for me
That now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

Of legal knowledge I acquired such a grip
That they took me into the partnership.
And that junior partnership, I ween,
Was the only ship that I ever had seen,
But that kind of ship so suited me
That now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

I grew so rich that I was sent
By a pocket borough into parliament.
I always voted at my party's call,
And I never thought of thinking for myself at all.
I thought so little they rewarded me
By making me the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

Now, landsmen all, whoever you may be,
If you want to rise to the top of the tree;
If your soul isn't fettered to an office stool,
Be careful to be guided by this golden rule—
Stick close to your desks and never go to sea,
And you may all be rulers of the queen's na-vee.

—William S. Gilbert.

HIGHLAND MARY.

YE banks and braes and streams around
The castle o' Montgomery,
Green be your woods and fair your flowers,
Your waters never drumlie!
There simmer first unfauld her robes
And there the langest tarry,
For there I took the last fareweel
O' my sweet Highland Mary.

How sweetly bloomed the gay green birk,
How rich the hawthorn's blossom,
As underneath their fragrant shade
I clasped her to my bosom!
The golden hours on angel wings
Flew o'er me and my dearie,
For dear to me as light and life
Was my sweet Highland Mary.

Wi' mony a vow and locked embrace,
Our parting was fu' tender,
And, pledging oft to meet again,
We tore oursels asunder.
But, oh, fell Death's untimely frost,
That nipped my flower sae early!
Now green's the sod and cauld's the clay
That wraps my Highland Mary!

Oh, pale, pale now those rosy lips
I aft ha'e kissed sae fondly,
And closed for aye the sparkling glance
That dwalt on me sae kindly,
And moldering now in silent dust
That heart that lo'ed me dearly,
But still within my bosom's core
Shall live my Highland Mary!

TWO SHIPS.

TWO ships of war met on the sea,
And each had sailors brave and free.
And the sun on high was shining.

But it was plain they were enemies,
For a shot from each boomed on the breeze,
While the sun on high was shining.

They roared and charged and backed and swerved.
Each gave the other what he deserved.
And the sun on high was shining.

They shelled each other an hour or so,
And then they suddenly went below!
Yet the sun on high was shining!

And no one knew which ship had won!
And neither knew where the other had gone!
But the sun on high was shining.

So live that, sinking in thy last long sleep,
Thou still mayst smile while all around thee weep.

BOYS ROB A FARMER.

Joe Livee and Harvey Lachance Get In Law's Toils.

Joe Livee and Harvey Lachance were arrested at Thief River Monday on the charge of robbing J. B. Johnson, a resident of Grygla, Marshall county. It is alleged that the culprits secured $55 from Mr. Johnson. At a hearing before Municipal Judge Bishop Tuesday Livoe was bound over to the grand jury, and is at present languishing in the Red Lake county jail.

Young Lachance signified a disposition to plead guilty, and upon information by County Attorney Gerno he will be taken before Judge Watts at Crookston for sentence. It is likely he will be given a reformatory sentence. Harvey was formerly a resident of Red Lake Falls and comes from a highly respected family. It is too bad that he has fallen in evil ways.

His Dear Old Mother

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old, thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children too, are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50 cents.

Decision In Ditch Case.

Crookston Journal: The findings of Judge Watts in the case of the Merchants State Bank of St. Hileire vs. commissioners of the county of Polk have been filed and in brief he holds that the labor and parties furnishing material must be paid before the parties holding asignments of ditch contractors for balance due from the county can receive one cent.

The St. Hilaire bank sued to recover over $800 due for the construction of Judicial ditch number 48 near Fosston and Judicial ditch number 2 near Neilsville which amount was assigned by contractors Anderson and Larson to the bank. A. A. Miller appeared for the bank, and W. E. Rowe appeared for Polk county, having been named by the county commissioners to represent the county during the absence of County Attorney Mayhury last winter in California.

In a previous case W. E. Black, as assignee of the claims of laborers and parties furnishing materials, sued the company to recover the amount still due the contractors of Polk county.

The bank demurred to the complaint and the case went to the supreme court which dismissed the demurrer and sent the case back for trial on its merits. This case will be tried at the December term of district court in this city. The questions involved in the two cases were identical.

This means that all the bills which have been assigned to W. E. Black for collection by the laborers and those who furnished the supplies in the construction of Ditch No. 48 near Fosston and Judicial ditch No. 2 near Neilsville will be paid.

The decision is a most important one as it establishes a precedent in the protection of labor that will be state wide importance.

WANTS NEW TRIAL.

Paul Fournier Thinks That He Was Not Given Fair Chance.

An important matter which was considered by Judge Spooner, of Bemidji, this week, was the application for a new trial which was made by Charles W. Schrutchin, the Bemidji colored attorney, on behalf of Paul Fournier, who was convicted last April on charge of having killed N. O. Dehl, and who is now an inmate of the state prison at Stillwater, serving a life sentence for the crime of which he was convicted.

In appearing for Fournier, Mr. Schrutchin argued in favor of a motion to set aside the verdict render in the Fournier trial, and to grant a new trial in the case of the state vs. Paul Fournier. County Attorney Henry Funkley represented the state.

Mr. Schrutchin's application for setting aside the verdict and giving a new trial was based mainly on the allegation that improved testimony was admitted in the case. Especial reference to the testimony of Florence Melquist, wherein the latter swore that Fournier was possessed of the hallucination that a looking glass would reproduce the features of any person looking into it, the testimony of the young woman having had considerable weight with the jury in connecting Fournier with the removal of a looking glass that was claimed to have been in the cabin of Miss Dahl at the time she was killed. Mr. Schrutchin also took exception to the manner in which the cross examination of Fournier was conducted relative to the killing of a man named Berkley at Pine River, and also as to the death of a squaw at that place.

Dr. Spofford is at the Grand View hotel Red Lake Falls the 7th day of every month. See him if your eyes trouble you.

FOR MARKET DAY

Wednesday, October 9, the Big Day—Large List of Prizes to Be Offered.

Red Lake Falls will hold its first big market day on Wednesday, October 9, and it will be to the advantage of every farmer within twenty-five miles to come here that day.

While the arrangements are not yet completed, the work has progressed far enough that THE GAZETTE can announce that a splendid program of sports and amusements is in preparation. A concert by the celebrated Red Lake Falls band will also be rendered.

A large list of valuable prizes will also be offered, more valuable than ordinarily given on market days. There are no strings to these prizes and they will be given to the ones who win in the several competitions without any charge whatever.

There will be special sales at the stores that will be of real benefit to the purchaser, for the reductions are genuine and upon goods that are in season.

The full list of prizes will be announced next week, and the following business houses have already signified their intention of offering a valuable prize:

Theo. LaBissoniere, Garceau & Zaiser, G. A. Kankel, Hunt Hardware Co., Red Lake Falls GAZETTE, Merchants State Bank, First State Bank, Brunelle Bros., Groshong & Blake, E. A. Nelson, Joseph Miller, H. W. Anderson, Chatel's Cash Grocery, Anderson & Wander.

Watch THE GAZETTE next week for full list of prizes and the complete program.

STOCK MAPLE LAKE.

Bunch of Black Bass Planted There by Game Warden.

Sam Fullerton of the State Game and Fish commission arrived in Crookston last week with 22 cans of elegant black bass which were taken to Maple lake by Deputy Game Warden Munch. They were very fine specimens, beyond the experimental age, being from an inch and a half to four inches in length.

Later on this year another consignment of pike will be received for Maple lake and before long that beautiful resort will be teeming with as fine fish as can be found in the entire state.

"The commission realizes," said Mr. Fullerton, "that Maple lake is about the only one available for the people of Crookston and vicinity, and for this reason every effort will be made to keep it well stocked."

Mr. Fullerton also promised to send several pairs of ring-necked pheasants which will be placed in a locality where there is some brush and good cover and feed. They are a fine game bird, larger than the prairie chicken and have very beautiful plumage. They cannot be shot till 1910 and are very prolific, the hens laying from 16 to 40 eggs per year. At Fergus Falls, Brainerd, St. Peter and other places where birds have been placed by the commission they have thrived well and multiplied very rapidly. The ring-necked pheasant came from China originally but the Minnesota State Game and Fish commission have received their consignments from Oregon where they are now plentiful,

To the Public.

In view of the fact that the barbers in the surrounding towns have long ago raised the prices for tonsorial work, and also from the fact that everything in the line of commodities has raised in price, we, the proprietors of the Red Lake Falls tonsorial parlors, will on and after October 1, 1907, adopt a new schedule of prices as follows: Shaving, 15c straight; hair cutting and all present 25c jobs, 35c. We feel that we are entitled to the same prices as surrounding towns are paying, and we trust that the public will heartily approve of the new arrangement. Signed:

Jos. Miller.

BAND AT FERTILE

Red Lake Falls Organization Furnishing Music For the Polk County Fair.

The Red Lake Falls Concert band is again in the lime-light, and this week they are furnishing music at the Polk county fair being held at Fertile.

The band left Tuesday evening and will return tomorrow, and reports from there are that the boys are covering themselves with glory as usual.

Only about twenty of the band boys could get away for this trip, but with that number the band is equipped to furnish a good quality of music, and the visitors at the Fertile fair are hearing some good concerts.

The band is furnishing music for the fair day times, and each evening there they are giving a concert in the opera house.

WON'T BUILD THIS YEAR.

Great Northern Promises to Get to Roseau in 1908.

Roseau Region: O. B. Ekman returned from St. Paul Tuesday, where he had been as the representative of Roseau to confer with the Great Northern as to the extension of the line from Greenbush.

Mr. Ekman informed the Region that he had interviews with both Mr. James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill. Mr. Louis Hill informed him that the Great Northern would build no more roads in Minnesota; that legislation had been so pronouncedly adverse to their road as well as to other corporations that the company would let the extension go, and he stated that the farmers could build a farmers' road if they wanted to—and see what running a railroad really meant. Mr. Ekman got no encouragement whatever from the present head of the system.

However, later on he was able to secure an interview with Mr. James J. Hill, the real head of the Great Northern system, and from him Mr. Ekman learned that were it not for the fact that the company had the grade in readiness and had promised our people the extension of the road from Greenbush east, he would concur in all that his son had stated. As it was, Mr. Hill declared that he would keep his promise and endeavor to lay the steel the midsummer of 1908 but no earlier. He declared further that the foolish legislation of past years had driven eastern capital away from Minnesota. He stated that stockholders of the road and capitalists generally refused to finance any Minnesota corporation, giving as reason the aggressive propaganda of recent legislatures against corporations en masse. He illustrated this by saying that after expending several thousand dollars of his own money to secure data from Germany and other European countries to show that the introduction of smelters and the burning of charcoal on the iron ranges would bring a good profit, he attempted to interest Eastern capital to the extent of $12,000,000, but that he utterly failed, because the project was in Minnesota and capital was scared. Be this as it may, it is evident the great money centres of the country do not take kindly to Minnesota's attack upon corporations and that the extension of the road from Greenbush to Roseau is still in the future.

It is a shame it is so, but judging from what Mr. Ekman learned and informed us, there is nothing to be done but wait—wait—wait or else interest another road. The latter would be a difficult proposition.

Hereditary Ill Humor.

Herbert Bismarck had none of his father's bright wit in conversation but had his overbearing temper. Bismarck in anger was as ferocious as a mastiff and he grew worse in the evening before his dinner hour. Most men are in better humor after a good meal especially if they have a glass or two of golden grain belt beer, which is very famous for its soothing tonic effect. Keep a case for your table use. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Autumn Styles in

Stationery

For polite correspondence there should be no more slighting of the tone and correctness of a lady's stationery than of her clothing, or shoes.

Styles in paper vary with the year, what was in style last year seems out of place today. Everybody likes to receive a letter on new style grade.

We have correct stationery here—correct for every use and occasion and correct in price boxes or bulk, many grades.

NEWS OF WEEK SUMMARIZED

IMPORTANT EVENTS AT HOME AND ON FOREIGN SHORES BRIEFLY TOLD.

Washington Notes.

The president has appointed Gen. S. M. B. Young, retired, who was his old commander in Cuba, superintendent of the Yellowstone National Park.

According to a government report just issued pearls to the value of [illegible] were found in the United States during the year 1906, and other precious stones to the value of $208,000 were produced.

The war department has directed the return to duty as an assistant military aid to the president, Capt. Frank McCoy, Third cavalry, who has been spending most of the summer in Yellowstone Park with his troop. This means that there are not likely to be any more changes in the president's family of military and naval aids at present.

People Talked About.

August Gisin, founder of the Baltimore Journal, German, died at his home in Baltimore of acute indigestion.

Dr. Michael Beshoar, pioneer, prominent citizen, founder of the Pueblo Chieftain and Trinidad Advertiser, died at Trinidad, Colo., at the age of seventy-four.

John M. Turner, writer, humorist, actor and originator of trick banjo playing, is dead at the Post Graduate hospital in New York city, following an operation for appendicitis. Turner was founder of the Vampire club and his ready wit and mimicry were known from coast to coast.

James Bellows McGregor, said to be the oldest Mason in the world, celebrated his 106th birthday at Mount Sunapee, N. H., with a public reception. He was born in 1801, a mile from where he now lives. His joining of the Masonic order in 1827 makes him a member of eighty years' standing and the oldest Mason on record in the world.

Foreign.

The first Jewish synagogue to be erected in Moscow was opened last week.

PROFITS OF OIL TRUST ENORMOUS

KELLOGG BRINGS OUT STARTLING INFORMATION ABOUT STANDARD.

$490,315,934 IN EIGHT YEARS

CAREFULLY GUARDED SECRETS REVEALED—CONTROLS SEVENTY COMPANIES.

New York, Sept. 19.—Delving into the financial workings of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, the holding company of all the subsidiary organizations of the so-called oil trust, Frank B. Kellogg, conducting the federal suit for the dissolution of the company, brought forth yesterday to public view for the first time the enormous profits made by the Standard Oil company.

Fabulous Profits Shown.

In a period of eight years, from 1899 to 1906, inclusive, the Standard Oil company, in a statement spread upon the record of yesterday's hearing, was shown to have earned the total profits of $490,315,934, or at the rate of more than $61,000,000 a year, and distributed to its shareholders in the same period $303,354,403.

While the company was earning these vast sums in the refining of oil the statements adduced at the hearing yesterday show that between 1899 and 1906 the assets of the company grew by leaps and bounds from $200,791,523 to $371,366,531. The capital stock is $93,338,386.

Always Carefully Guarded.

Financiers and those seeking knowledge of the exact profits of the Standard Oil company have striven vainly to obtain the figures, which Mr. Kellogg succeeded yesterday in placing upon the record of the court. The Standard Oil company makes no statement of its business, and other than these declarations of a dividend, it makes no public announcement by which its business may be gauged.

The hearing yesterday brought out much information which Mr. Kellogg obtained from the Standard Oil company.

Controls Seventy Companies.

Mr. Kellogg obtained a statement showing that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey controlled by a stock ownership over seventy companies engaged in the refining and the transportation of oil on Sept. 14, 1907. The list showed that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey owned $999,000 of the total capital stock of $1,000,000 of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, which was recently fined $29,240,000 by Judge Landis in the United States circuit court in Chicago for rebating.

Records Disappear.

Mr. Kellogg's efforts at yesterday's hearing to obtain information of the records of liquidating trustees who had charge of the liquidation of the Standard Oil trust, and the exchange of the liquidating trust certificates for the shares of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey were not rewarded.

Just before the hearing closed Mr. Kellogg remarked that he thought it strange that no one in the Standard Oil company seemed to know where the records of the liquidating trustees could be found.

PRIEST CONVICTED OF MURDER.

Trial Full of Sensational Features—Priest Admits Shortcomings.

Pittsburg, Sept. 19.—Ludwig Szczglei, the Roman Catholic priest from Chicago who has been on trial for the murder of Andrew and Stephen Starzynski, brothers, was convicted of murder in the second degree last night. District Attorney Geehring severely arraigned the priest and closed by saying:

"He parades his shame, his drunkenness, as a shield to protect himself from the penalty for the breaking of the commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill.' He is an imposter."

The trial was a conglomeration of sensational testimony and features. To protect himself from the supreme penalty the prisoner unburdened his past life, frankly confessing his many shortcomings, especially his drunkenness. During his testimony he admitted that Francesca Sprow, his housekeeper, who was in the house when the double murder was committed, had accompanied him to this city from Chicago. It developed that the housekeeper occupied the same room with one of the Starzynski brothers, following which admission District Attorney Geehring remarked:

"There you have the motive."

The priest on the stand said he supposed it was correct that he had killed the brothers, but that it was done in self-defense and that he was drunk at the time.

Chicago Rejects New Charter.

Chicago, Sept. 19—The new charter authorized by the state legislature at its last session for the city of Chicago was rejected by the voters at yesterday's special election by a majority of over $2,000.

Many Hurt, None Killed.

Easton, Pa., Sept. 19.—A Lehigh Valley express train was wrecked near Pattenburg tunnel, in New Jersey. A number of trainmen and passengers were injured, but none of the latter fatally.

EXPLOSION ON JAP WARSHIP

FORTY-THREE OF THE OFFICERS AND MEN ARE KILLED OR INJURED.

Tokio, Sept. 19.—Forty-three of the crew were killed or injured on board the Japanese battleship battleship Kashima by an explosion within the shield after target practice, near Kura, at 4 p. m. on Sept. 9. The Kashima, under command of Capt. Koizumi, reached Kure at 6 a. m., where the injured were placed in the hospital. The fatalities included a lieutenant, two cadets and one staff officer, the rank and name of whom is not given.

Details regarding the effects of the explosion are lacking, but it was terrific, and the ship is badly damaged.

The explosion followed an attempt to remove an unexploded shell from the gun.

Fearfully Mutilated.

A majority of the bystanders were fearfully mutilated. The casualties reported as the result of the explosion are as follows:

Killed—Five officers, names not given, and twenty-two men.

Severely Wounded — Two officers and six men.

Slightly Wounded—Two officers and six men.

The cause of the explosion is under investigation. It occurred inside of the shield of the starboard after ten-inch gun.

It was not the shell which exploded, but powder which evidently caught fire from the gas emitted from the breech when opened for the purpose of reloading the gun. The hull of the Kashima is not damaged.

Thirty Are Drowned.

Tokio, Sept. 19. — Thirty persons were drowned and a hundred houses burned at the Kosakahi mine, near Kotaru.

A fire started in the mining works, and while attempts were being made to save the mine the water reservoir was broken, flooding a portion of the village. Many women and children were among the victims.

MADMAN SEEKS PRESIDENT.

Wants Roosevelt to Help Him Collect $10,000,000 From Rockefeller.

Oyster Bay, Sept. 19.—The monotony of official routine at Sagamore Hill was relieved last night by the arrival of another unexpected caller, who thought that he had urgent business with the president. The stranger, who described himself as Orlando Toland, farmer, of Oxford, Ala., had reached the front door of the president's home when he was detected and headed off by a secret service agent. To the officer Toland explained that he wished to enlist the aid of Mr. Roosevelt in the collection of an obligation of $10,000,000 from John D. Rockefeller. He was hustled on the first train for New York.

Wants $10,000,000 From John D.

It was about 7 o'clock when a man of perhaps thirty years, clad in blue jeans and with the general appearance of a hard worker, mounted the steps at the president's front door. There he was seen by Secret Service Agent Washer, who asked the man's business. Toland had no hesitancy in telling it. He had come to Sagamore Hill, he said to request President Roosevelt to collect a debt of $10,000,000 which he said John D. Rockefeller owed him. This sum, he explained, Mr. Rockefeller had promised him in return for his services in connection with a murder trial at St. Paul.

BOND IS FIXED AT $6,000,000.

Judge Grosscup Rules in Oil Trust Case—Fine May Be Wiped Out.

Chicago, Sept. 19. — The Standard Oil Company of Indiana, in order to obtain a supersedeas staying execution on its property to satisfy the judgment of $29,240,000 recently imposed by Judge Landis in the United States district court, must furnish bonds to the amount of $6,000,000.

This was determined yesterday by Judge Grosscup, in the United States circuit court. The $29,240,000 fine would be wiped out of existence on a technicality if the scheme of the Standard Oil lawyers, which became known yesterday, is carried out.

In the event that the Alton is granted the immunity which it has been fully established was promised to the railroads through agreement with Former Atttorney General Moody, the Standard Oil attorneys will demand that Judge Landis' fine be set aside. The grounds for this plea will be that the Standard Oil attorneys should have been apprised of this immunity agreement in order that they might question the Alton railroad witnesses properly.

The lawyers claim that the procedure in the case was illegal and that it furnishes sufficient grounds for setting aside the fine.

DIETZ IS VICTOR IN BITTER FIGHT

CAMERON DAM MAN WINS OUT IN CONTEST WITH LUMBER COMPANY.

IS SETTLED ON SECRET TERMS

BLOODSHED IS PART OF RECORD MADE IN LONG, BITTER STRIFE.

Winter, Wis., Sept. 21.—The famous Dietz dam dispute has been settled. It is stated that an agreement has been reached between the contending parties and that the logs that have long been held up by the intrepid defender of Cameron dam, on the Thornapple river, near here, will be moved at once.

This was the statement made as the result of conferences held between W. F. Moses, representing the Weyerhaeuser interests, and William Dietz, representing his brother.

Just what the terms of the settlement are has not been made public, but the first payment was made to Dietz on Monday, and the details were arranged satisfactorily to both parties.

The recent failure of the company to get the legislature or governor to take a hand in the game against Dietz is believed to have decided the company to yield.

Long, Bitter Fight.

Dietz procured a farm on the Thornapple river a few years ago, and upon discovering that Cameron dam was on his land, instead of upon the company's land, as was generally supposed, he put in a claim of 10 cents per thousand for every foot of logs which the company sluiced through the dam, aggregating several thousand dollars. The company ignored the claim until Dietz drove the log drivers away from the dam, after which the company offered to settle with Dietz for $10,000, which settlement was refused.

Innumerable attempts to capture him failed. Three different sheriffs were ordered to get him, but all failed. Large forces of armed men have attempted to get him, but all found the place well fortified and were obliged to give up the attempt. Blood has been shed several times.

ONLY ONE DEATH IN STORM.

Damage Amounting to $30,000 Done Wednesday Night.

St. Paul, Sept. 21.—Reports received here up to last night gave only one dead as the result of the terrific electrical storm of Wednesday night and yesterday morning, but they showed that the disturbance was widespread and that great losses had been sustained in various parts of Minnesota and Wisconin, mainly from the lightning. The rainfall was very heavy, and in some places washouts occurred, but as a rule the intermittent character of the rainfall gave the water a chance to run off without doing serious damage. Altogether the losses from the storm are estimated at about $30,000, confined principally to live stock and buildings.

The one fatality reported last night was the death of Mrs. John Hayes, wife of a farmer living near Buffalo, Minn. The house was struck by lightning and burned, and the woman received a shock that later caused her death. The farmhouse was located three miles south of Buffalo.

FINE CHURCH DESTROYED.

Presbyterian House of Worship at Hastings Burned by Lightning.

Hastings, Minn., Sept. 21. — Lightning destroyed the Presbyterian church of this city, one of the most beautiful structures to be found anywhere, leaving the edifice a mass of ruins. It was built of stone and brick and valued at $25,000. The estimated damage is $10,000; insurance only $5,000.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Woman Fatally Wounded — Assailant Then Commits Suicide.

Larimore, N. D., Sept. 21.—Yesterday morning George Welsh shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Matt Lootz. Welsh then turned the gun on himself and blew out his brains. Details of the cause which led up to the shooting are lacking. The woman is still alive, but will die.

ARRESTED FORTY-SIX TIMES.

Jake Ressler of St. Cloud Holds Local and Possibly State Record.

St. Cloud, Minn., Sept. 21.—With his latest arrest by Chief Quinlivan, Jake Ressler holds the local and possibly the state record for numerous arrests. He has been hauled up no less than forty-six times, most of them being on charges of drunkenness.

Murderer Captured.

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 21.—Charles Worl, wanted here for the murder of Wallace Hogan, stabbed to death two weeks ago, was captured at Ashland, Wis., yesterday. Sheriff Rought left last night to bring him back to Marquette.

Wants $10,000 for Eye.

Perham, Minn., Sept. 21. — J. B. Hoover, who lives south of here, has just sued the Nichols-Chisholm Lumber company of Frazee for $10,000 damages for the loss of an eye.

BARLEY SALES BREAK RECORD

ONE MILLION DOLLARS' WORTH SOLD IN MINNEAPOLIS IN FOUR DAYS.

Minneapolis, Sept. 21.—Farmers attracted by the high prices of barley are sending in their grain in such quantities that over $1,000,000 worth of barley was sold at the Minneapolis chamber of commerce during the first four days of this week. A total of 1,012 car loads, or 1,248,300 bushels has been received in the city during the week, and most of it has been sold immediately upon receipt.

Despite the heavy increase in the shipment of barley, which is cutting down the shipment of wheat because of the lack of cars and facilities for moving more, the price of barley has not sagged. Solid train loads of barley are coming into the city every day.

The Soo, the Milwaukee and the Great Northern are bringing in the greatest amount from North and South Dakota, while all the other lines, the Minneapolis & St. Louis, the Omaha the Chicago Great Western, the Rock Island and the Northern Pacific, are bringing in more than they ever did before.

The best grade of barley is drawing between 85 and 90 cents every day and no evidences of a decline in the price has been noted.

STORM BRINGS GREAT LOSS.

Immense Amount of Property Destroyed.

Owatonna, Minn., Sept. 21. — The storm here last night did considerable damage. The large barn of George Brush, just outside the city, was struck by lightning and totally destroyed, with all its contents. Five thoroughbred horses were killed. They were valued at $1,500. One blooded Polled Angus bull, recently purchased at a fancy stock sale at the state fair and valued at $500, was also killed. Seventy-five tons of hay were consumed, together with harnesses and farm machinery. Many smaller buildings throughout the county were struck and damaged.

WOMAN LOST IN ROCKIES.

Indians Turn Out and Find Member of Longworth Party.

Grand Canyon, Ariz., Sept. 21.—Mrs. Frank Joy, wife of Frank Joy of St Louis and a member of Congressman Nicholas Longworth's party, took a stroll into the woods here yesterday and, becoming confused regarding directions, wandered away about ten miles. The power plant whistle was sounded and a searching party of Navajo Indians started out. She was found in the Long Jim canyon about 9 o'clock in the evening, somewhat fatigued and badly frightened.

PRISONERS BREAK JAIL.

Knock Down Sheriff's Wife and Escape.

La Porte, Ind., Sept. 21. — After knocking down the wife of Sheriff Sautzer with an iron rod wrenched from a bed, when she stepped into the cell corridor to give a drink of water to a sick prisoner last night, Arthur Cummings and John Edwards, awaiting grand jury action on grand larceny charges, escaped from the La Porte county jail. Mrs. Sautzer, though badly hurt, crawled to the outer door and locked it, preventing the escape of eleven other prisoners.

MILLIONAIRES ARE INDICTED.

Another Turn in the Wheel at Boise Idaho, Which May Have Results.

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 21.—A warrant was yesterday issued for the arrest of Sumner G. Moon and James L. Barber of Eau Claire, Wis., millionaire officers of the Barber Lumber company, and Horace S. Rand of Burlington, Conn. indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government.

They were indicted with Senator Borah and others. They will be brought to Boise at once to answer the charges.

MAY BE TRAIN ROBBERS.

Three Suspects Are Arrested on Hold up Charge.

Sioux City, Iowa, Sept. 21.—Special Agents Shields, Morwaiser and Meekin of the Rock Island railroad are in Sioux City to take James Williams, J. D. Daly and "Max" Hubbell back to Lincoln, where they are charged with having robbed three persons at the Rock Island depot and where they are suspected of having been implicated in the hold-up of the Rock Island train near Murdock.

CATCH DESERTED CUBS.

Wisconsin Hunters Take Little Bears When Mother Runs Off.

Grantsburg, Wis., Sept. 21.—A live bear cub has been brought to town from the upper part of the county. Three of the animals were captured. They were on a stub and when the hunters came upon them the old bear was in sight, but scampered off into the woods as soon as she saw the men.

Accused of Robbery.

Huron, S. D., Sept. 21.—A. W. Hopkin, sheriff of Spink county, was here Wednesday, having two men named Mack in charge. They are brothers and reside near Manchester and were arrested on a charge of robbing a store in Redfield a short time since.

Fierce Storm Sweeps Coast.

St. John's, N. F., Sept. 21. — The heaviest gale reported here in forty years swept the Newfoundland coast yesterday. Reports from settlements show that five lives were lost.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR RIVER TRIP

INLAND WATERWAYS COMMISSION WILL START ON INSPECTION TOUR.

PRESIDENT ON MISSISSIPPI

GEN. M'KENZIE MAKES ARRANGEMENTS FOR PRESIDENT'S PART OF TRIP.

Washington, Sept. 18—Telegrams received here yesterday announced that the members of the inland waterways commission will assemble at Loraine, Ohio, next Saturday. They will start from there for their inspection of the Great Lakes waterway, and particularly of the Soo route.

All arrangements have been made by Representative Theodore Burton, chairman of the commission. It is understood that the inspection tour will extend to Duluth and that the members of the commission will proceed from there to St. Paul by rail. The snag boat Col. Mackenzie has already been ordered to meet the commission at St. Paul, so the start can be made from there on the morning of the 26th.

President on River.

Members of the commission count on having a week's inspection trip of the Great Lakes waterway and another week on the Mississippi river. Three days of the latter trip on the upper stretch of the river from Keokuk, Iowa, will be in company with the president of the United States.

Gen. MacKenzie, head of the engineer corps of the army, had the responsibility placed upon him of making all the arrangements for the river trip of President Roosevelt. The general had three suitable boats offered to him, the "Mississippi," the "Col. MacKenzie" and the "Lily," each controlled by different branches of the government service. In addition to this the Business Men's league of St. Louis indicated its willingness to furnish the "Altor" or any other boat.

Neither MacKenzie Nor Lily.

A part of the rivalry to carry the president was eliminated by Gen. MacKenzie's announcement that the president would not travel on a boat not owned by the government. Then came the later rivalry between the three government boats. Gen. MacKenzie, being himself indifferent as to what this ultimate decision should be, sent complete descriptions and state room plans, with their dimensions and the general character of their furnishings, over to Oyster Bay to the president's secretary.

GIVE POLICE DESPTRATE FIGHT.

Italian Shoots Hardware Merchant Who Refused to Return Money.

New York, Sept. 18. — After Harry Becker had been killed, and Samuel Becker, his brother, had been mortally wounded by Francesco Sicca, a young Italian, last night, two detectives had a desperate fight with a mob led by the young men's mother and bent on lynching the assailant of the two young men, before the three were rescued by the police reserves.

The Becker brothers were proprietors of a hardware store on Upper Second avenue in "Little Italy." The police say Sicca Sunday purchased a revolver at the store. Last night he returned and wanted his money back, saying the revolver was not satisfactory.

Italian Opens Fire.

His demand was refused and he opened fire on Harry Becker, who fell dead at the first shot. His brother Samuel rushed to the rescue and the Italian fired three more shots in rapid succession, Samuel Becker falling, apparently dead with a bullet in his abdomen.

Detectives Higgins and Naughton rushed into the store and grappled with the Italian, who fought fiercely. A great crowd gathered and made an attempt to take the prisoner from the detectives.

Aged Mother Leads Mob.

At the head of the mob was the aged mother of the Becker boys, who was armed with an ax and who in her frenzy demanded that she be allowed to wreak vengeance on the slayer of her sons. The detectives were hard put between the struggles of their prisoner and the efforts of the mob to reach him. Finally the police reserves arrived and rescued the trio. Mrs. Becker was taken home and is in a serious condition from shock. The hospital surgeons say Samuel Backer will die.

TO START RIVAL TOWN.

North-Western Railroad Seeks to Offset Central's Action.

Arlington, S. D., Sept. 18. — The North-Western road has secured options on a tract of land about half way between Arlington and Volga, immediately east of Dray lake, and as soon as the deal is closed will plat a town on the site. The move is intended to offset the action of the Dakota Central, which has placed a town on its road almost directly south of this point.

EACH ROAD ON ITS OWN FEET

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL STONE ARGUES IN RATE SUITS.

St. Paul, Sept. 18.—The third week of the hearing in the United States circuit court on an application for a temporary injunction in the stockholders' railroad rate suits opened yesterday before Judge Lochren.

Senator F. H. Peterson of Moorhead, father of the rate law, spoke in its defense yesterday after Thomas D. O'Brien, special attorney for the state, concluded his analysis of the affidavits and argument on the facts. Late in the afternoon Assistant Attorney General Royal A. Stone began an argument on some phases of law involved in the case. He expects to finish today and he will be followed by Attorney General Young, who will reply to the contention of the complainants that the prescribed rates, in practice, necessarily and directly interfere with the exercise of the exclusive power of congress to regulate interstate commerce.

Assistant Attorney General Royal A Stone yesterday afternoon began a reply to the contention of the complainants that if the rate laws are found to be confiscatory as to any of the weaker roads they must fall as to all.

Mr. Stone contended that each road would have to stand or fall on the merits of its own case and declared that the stronger roads could not base their defense upon the claim that the law was confiscatory as to some of their weaker rivals.

TOO SICK TO GO TO COURT.

Members of Rogers' Family Say He Has Suffered a Stroke.

Boston, Sept. 18. — Upon the evidence of members of the family of Henry H. Rogers and the family physician that Mr. Rogers suffered a stroke last July and has since been unable to transact any business, Judge Hammond, in the supreme court, yesterday announced that it would be cruel to compel his attendance in court and dismissed a motion to that effect. The condition of Mr. Rogers was disclosed in the course of a hearing on a motion to show that he was incapable of attending the trial of a suit against him for $50,000,000 brought by C. M. Raymond of Somerville, for alleged conversion of certain royalties in connection with the production of petroleum.

Suffered a Stroke.

The hearing began last week with the testimony of Dr. Charles P. Pratt of New Bedford, who stated that Mr. Rogers had suffered from a stroke last July and was unable to attend to his business.

The hearing was resumed yesterday and two sessions of the court were consumed in hearing the testimony.

Counsel for Mr. Raymond sought to show by the testimony of personal and business friends of Mr. Rogers in New Bedford and Fairhaven, and also by numerous telephone tickets giving between New York and the home of Mr. Rogers in Fairhaven, that the Standard Oil financier had been about the streets, had participated in certain festivities, had engaged in certain business in New Bedford and had been in frequent communication with his associates in New York.

Several witnesses admitted that they had talked with Mr. Rogers within the past few weeks, but all declared that he was much changed.

In support of the claim that Mr Rogers was too ill to appear four witnesses were heard.

MRS. CHADWICK ILL.

Witch of Finance Will Not Live to Serve Out Sentence.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 18.—Mrs. Cassie M. Chadwick, noted witch of finance, who, posing as Andrew Carnegie's natural daughter, swindled Ohio and Eastern banks and capitalists out of millions in loans on bogus securities was stricken with a nervous collapse at the penitentiary, which has left her blind.

Her condition is serious, and it is the opinion of the prison physicians that she will never live to serve out her ten years' sentence, two years of which she has now completed.

I.O.O.F. WELCOMED TO ST. PAUL

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE HOLDS ITS EIGHTY-THIRD ANNUAL MEETING.

St. Paul, Sept. 18.—St. Paul yesterday formally became the host of the eighty-third annual communication of the sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows. The supreme governing body of the order, one of the largest in the world, met in executive session, after having been extended the greetings and welcome of the state and city at Central Presbyterian church. Immediately at the conclusion of the public ceremonies the sovereign grand lodge went into executive session at the old capitol to consider matters of import to the millions of the brotherhood throughout the United States and Canada.

Reports obtained from the information bureaus and headquarters indicated that there were last night 5,000 members of the order of I. O. O. F. in the city to spend the week.

The number of visitors is expected to reach the maximum late to-day or to-morrow, when Odd Fellows from Minnesota and neighboring states are expected to arrive for the grand parade which is to be one of the features of the week.

Although the gathering this year is not so large as usual the arrivals indicate that the number expected by the local arrangement committee will be attained. Aside from the attendance, however, the present communication is considered by the national officers one of the most successful ever held in the history of the sovereign grand lodge. The program as outlined is comprehensive and includes every branch of the order—the Odd Fellows proper, the encampment branch, the Patriarchs Militant and the Rebekah assembly.

The gathering is international in character in that every province in Canada is represented at the sessions of the sovereign grand lodge, in addition to two delegates from every state in the Union.

HELD FOR WOMAN'S DEATH.

Prisoner Is Accused of Murdering Mrs. Gifford Julian at Waseca.

Waseca, Minn., Sept. 18.—Held on a charge of murder as the result of the inquiries of a coroner's jury, Rudolph Munson, lately from Albert Lea and said to be a recent resident of Iowa, must answer for the death of Mrs. Gifford Julian, also known as Ida Gritton. Munson and Mrs. Julian had been living in a hotel here for about six weeks.

Saturday evening loud talking was heard from the room occupied by the couple and the quarrel was ended when a pistol shot was heard.

Investigation showed that Mrs. Julian had been shot in the heart with a .22-caliber revolver.

Munson gave himself up to the authorities.

EACH ROAD ON ITS OWN FEET

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL STONE ARGUES IN RATE SUITS.

St. Paul, Sept. 18.—The third week of the hearing in the United States circuit court on an application for a temporary injunction in the stockholders' railroad rate suits opened yesterday before Judge Lochren.

Senator F. H. Peterson of Moorhead, father of the rate law, spoke in its defense yesterday after Thomas D. O'Brien, special attorney for the state, concluded his analysis of the affidavits and argument on the facts. Late in the afternoon Assistant Attorney General Royal A. Stone began an argument on some phases of law involved in the case. He expects to finish today and he will be followed by Attorney General Young, who will reply to the contention of the complainants that the prescribed rates, in practice, necessarily and directly interfere with the exercise of the exclusive power of congress to regulate interstate commerce.

Assistant Attorney General Royal A. Stone yesterday afternoon began a reply to the contention of the complainants that if the rate laws are found to be confiscatory as to any of the weaker roads they must fall as to all.

Mr. Stone contended that each road would have to stand or fall on the merits of its own case and declared that the stronger roads could not base their defense upon the claim that the law was confiscatory as to some of their weaker rivals.

CASE FOR THE STATE COURTS.

State Claims Federal Court Has No Jurisdiction in Rate Cases.

St. Paul, Sept 19.—That the United States circuit court has no jurisdiction to grant the relief prayed for in the pending injunction suits was the contention of Assistant Attorney General Royal A. Stone in his argument before Judge Lochren yesterday.

Mr. Stone, in an argument well fortified by the citation of authorities, contended that in at least six of the suits there is really no diversity of citizenship between the parties and that there is no federal question on which the court can base jurisdiction, unless it be the alleged interference of the prescribed rates with the exercise of the exclusive power of congress to regulate interstate commerce.

Mr. Stone declared that in spite of every subtlety and subterfuge the attorneys for the complainants had succeeded in raising no question "under the laws and constitution of the United States." Mr. Stone urged that the allegation that the prescribed rates would, in effect, deprive the complainants of property without due process of law; raises only a question of fact, inasmuch as the answers admit that these rates, if found to be confiscatory, would be violative of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States.

There is no dispute, he said, between the parties to these suits as to the construction of the constitution or any law of the United States, hence there is nothing in this contention of confiscation of property which rises above the dignity of a pure question of fact. The whole controversy as to confiscation, said Mr. Stone, turns on the proof of facts for which the state law has made ample provision.

PREPARE UNIFORM LABEL.

Food Commissioners From Six States Meet in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Sept. 19.—Pure food commissioners from six states of the Northwest are in session in St. Paul formulating a uniform label for food products. It will be submitted to manufacturers, and is expected to do away with the argument made by manufacturers that the laws of the different states require a different set of labels for each state.

A uniform label for all staple articles is now being prepared. Those present at the sessions are: Commissioner A. H. Jones, Assistant Commissioner H. E. Schucknecht and Chemist J. Bryan of Illinois, Commissioner H. R. Wright of Iowa, Prof. E. F. Ladd, commissioner of North Dakota, Commissioner A. H. Wheaton and Chemist J. H. Shepard of South Dakota, Commissioner J. Q. Emery and Chemist William Fisher of Wisconsin and Commissioner Edwin K. Slater, Assistant Commissioner J. McCabe and Chemist Julius Hortvet of Minnesota.

To Hold Fair Next Week.

Wahpeton, N. D., Sept. 19.—Preparations for the second annual fair of the Richland County Fair association, which will be held in this city on Sept. 24, 26, 26 and 27, are about completed and a large crowd is expected in Wahpeton next week, the weather permitting. Besides the exhibits of grains, vegetables, horses and stock, etc., there will be a good amusement program, including races, ball games, a gun tournament and a tennis tournament.

State W. T. C. U. Meets.

Northfield, Minn., Sept. 19. — The thirty-first annual convention of the State Women's Christian Temperance union is in session in the First Congregational church. About 150 delegates are expected to attend the sessions, which last until Friday.

FARM SCHOOL OPENS OCT. 7.

Offers Practical Course to Fit Young Men and Women for Farm Life.

The school of agriculture of the University of Minnesota will open at St. Anthony Park, St. Paul, on Oct. 7. Students are advised to correspond with the registrar of the school, J. M. Drew, St. Anthony Park, St. Paul, prior to coming to the institution and to make the necessary preliminary arrangements for registration.

The school of agriculture was organized in 1888, with the object of giving a practical education to the young men and women who are unable to pursue the full college course in agriculture. It offers a practical course of study designed to fit young men and woman for successful farm life, and aim to give to its students the necessary preparation for useful citizenship. The course of study offered covers a wide range of subjects and is largely technical in character, but provision is made for some instruction in English and mathematics. The course requires three winters, of six months each for completion, and is co-educational. Instruction is given in the workshop, laboratories, barns and fields, as well as in the class room. The necessary expenses for the year do not exceed $85. This amount does not include the cost of the required military suit for the young men, traveling and personal expense.

The cost to the student for board, heat, light and laundry is the actual cost of maintaining the table (including management), and caring for the buildings. This has not exceeded $3 per week. Text books are furnished at a rental of $2 per year to students who do not desire to purchase. A competent nurse is kept on the ground to care for the sick. To meet this expense each student pays $1 per term. On entering school the student makes a payme f $12 board, $6 deposit, $2 book rent and reading room, $1 maintaining nurse, $5 entrance fee, $2 reserve fund; total, $27.

All male students are required to provide themselves with the prescribed uniform, which consists of navy blue blouse, trousers and cap. The suit complete to measure is furnished under special contract for $12.25.

Societies for the purpose of improvement in debate and elocution and for obtaining instruction in the form of lectures, give excellent opportunities for entertainment and culture.

STATE SCULPTORS FAVORED.

Minnesota Artists Asked to Furnish Designs for Statue of Col. Colvill.

Designs of Minnesota sculptors will be given preference in the selection of a model for the statue of Col. William Colvilli to be placed in the state capitol. The commission appointed to select the statue met in St. Paul, and although no definite action was taken it was decided that the choice shall be determined by competition.

Col. Colvill, now deceased, was the officer who led the famous First Minnesota regiment in the charge at the battle of Gettysburg, and the legislature of last winter provided a fund of $10,000 to pay the expense of placing a statue of him in one of the niches in the rotunda on the second floor of the new capitol.

The commission to which has been entrusted the selection of the statue consists of Maj. C. B. Heffelfinger, Minneapolis; J. Searles, Stillwater; M. F. Taylor, Anoka, and R. L. Gorman and H. T. Bevans, St. Paul.

The statue, which will show Col. Colvill in uniform, will be of heroic size and cast in bronze. A place has been selected for it in the niche on the north wall of the rotunda.

SUIT IS FOR $50,000.

Citizens' Bank of Faribault and F. A. Barry Are Defendants.

Papers have been received by the clerk of the courts at Faribault in the suit of Albert E. Grant, a Faribault railroad contractor, against the Citizens' State bank and F. A. Barry, its president, for $50,000 damages. D. W. Lawler of St. Paul is attorney for the plaintiff.

The litigation is based on transactions involving a note held by the bank and made by John G. Grant and his brother, the complainant, who alleges that to satisfy the note and without due notice to himself a sheriff's sale was held last December to convert certain of his property for the benefit of the holders of the note. It is alleged that because of this sale, which he contends he was not given reasonable opportunity to avert, Grant has suffered damages to his credit and standing to the amount of $50,000.

The case will be tried at the November term of court.

DAIRYMEN AT NORTHFIELD.

Annual State Meeting Will Be Held in January.

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the state dairymen's association it was decided to hold the annual meeting in Northfield. The dates for the sessions will be Jan. 21, 22 and 23. From the fact that Northfield is a great center for the dairying cattle, especially of the Holstein breed, it is expected that one of the largest meetings ever held will convene there.

ORDINANCE IS AMENDED.

Street Railway Agrees to Run Cars by Nov. 1, 1908.

At a recent meeting of the Bemidji council the matter of granting a franchise for the construction, and operation and maintenance of an electric street railway within the limits of the city of Bemidji was taken under consideration, through the reading of the amended ordinance which had been drafted under the direction of the committee appointed for that purpose, in conjunction with the representatives of the parties who desire the franchise.

The most important amendment, or rather the filling in of the provision that was left blank, is that the company binds itself to have constructed and in operation a fully equipped line of road on or before Nov. 1, 1908, beginning at Fourteenth street, on the west side of Lake Bemidji, continuing to a point near the site of the new Bemidji mill, on the east side of the lake.

The original ordinance placed no other limit as to the kind of power which the company could use, except to forbid locomotives or steam. The present ordinance was extended to prohibit the use of horsepower and explosive power. Another amendment allows the company to carry freight on its line for its own use. There was a provision in the old ordinance which might have been construed as allowing the company to maintain and operate a public telephone system. The wording of the new ordinance allows the company to maintain a telephone system only for its own use.

COLLEGE YEAR OPENS.

Macalester Students Hear an Address by Dr. Davis.

Macalester college, in St. Paul, opened its doors with a large increase in the attendance. During the vacation many improvements have been made about the college building and campus, Wallace hall, the new woman's dormitory will be ready for occupancy in the near future.

The exercises marking the opening of the school year took place in the college chapel. Dr. A. B. Marshall of the board of trustees addressed the students and welcomed them with a pleasing and forceful address. Dr. George W. Davis, who returns after an extended absence to take the chair of semetics and political science, was the speaker. His address dealt with the opportunities and responsibilities of the college career. Dr. Davis urged the students to stick to the prescribed curriculum and make concentration their aim.

Several changes have been made in the faculty. Three members have been added. Besides Dr. Davis, the new members are Dr. MacRae, who has been called to the pastorate of the Macalester Presbyterian church, who will occupy the chair of biblical history, and Miss Margaret Moore, who will be associate professor in modern languages and preceptress of Wallace hall.

RENEW THEIR LICENSES.

Two Foreign Companies Get New Permit to Operate Here.

The secretary of state has received the first returns from notices recently sent out to twelve foreign corporations announcing the expiration of their licenses to operate in this state. The Dubuque Mutual Fire Insurance company and the Musser-Sauntry Lumber company, both Iowa corporations, applied for new licenses recently. Mr. Schmahl also received a letter from General Manager Redfield of the Western Town Lot company, a subsidiary company of the Chicago & North-Western road, stating that it would soon renew its license. Three companies have withdrawn from the state and the other six have not yet been heard from.

STATE PRISON LEADS.

Stillwater Institution Returns the Largest Sum to the State.

The state institutions last month turned in to the state treasury $23,938.01, according to a report just made by the state board of control. The receipts from the various institutions were as follows: Anoka asylum, $28.75; Hastings asylum, $48.18; Fergus Falls hospital, $450.36; Rochester hospital, $624.29; St. Peter hospital, $545.79; Faribault school for the blind, $301.66; Faribault school for the deaf, $897.64; Faribault school for the feeble minded, $6,481.26; Owatonna state public school, $119.80; Red Wing training school, $687.81; St. Cloud reformatory, $2,020.85; Stillwater state prison, $11,731.62.

MEN ARE SCARCE.

State Employment Bureau Cannot Supply Demand in City.

The state free employment bureau in the old capitol at St. Paul, has a large number of applications for men to work in the city, but is having difficulty in finding enough men to go around. Requests for men are being received from contractors in the various building lines, as well as for common laborers. While the bureau is furnishing work to a large number of men the demand exceeds the supply.

LAWYER LEGISLATORS.

Lawyers are granted license to represent whatever cause offers the largest inducement—pecuniary or otherwise, and there is no objection from any source, but when a lawyer is also a public official it is a serious question whether that fact ought not preclude him from accepting retainers and making pleas for corporations in cases where the interests of the state conflict with the interests of his client. For instance only last week a well-known state senator living in the vicinity of Stillwater appeared before the state tax commission and also before the board of equalization to argue for a reduction in the proposed valuation of the Twin City street railway company. This is probably legitimate from the lawyer's point of view, but since as state sonator this gentleman ought to be interested in securing an equitable and adequate valuation it is hard to reconcile the the conflict of interests. There should be some method of keeping corporation lawyers out of th legislature. They cannot serve two masters and the history of the state records the lamentable fact that the state invariably is given the short end of the straw.

It is a well-known fact that at every election the corporations attempt to dominate the legislature. The railroads elect as many members as money and influence can secure; the street railway obtains four or five; the other public service corporations of St. Paul and Minneapolis as many more, while the steel trust and the brewing trust get as many of their agents as possible. It is noteworthy that all of these senators and representatives while primarily looking after the interests of the corporation responsible for their election combine in the general policy of favoring all of the corporations and special interests.

The remedy is in the hands of the people. When these senators and representatives come up for re-election the voters have the opportunity to elect some one not identified with the corporations. The records and characters of legislative candidates should be investigated more carefully.

WILL Frank Kellogg next be instructed to investigate the steel trust? He ought to know something about it.

THE paper trust is a great educator. It is teaching the high protection newspapers the necessity for tariff revision.

THE Redwood Reveille thinks the Republican political leaders seem to be more anxious just now about what John A. Johnson is going to do than who shall run for governor on the Republican ticket.

TAMS BIXBY, it is said, will again be active in Minnesota politics. But the Little Falls Herald reminds him that the days of the open check-book, railroad passes by the handful, free newspaper passes, etc., have passed away. It's done differently now.

DON'T prophesy hard times or other disasters. When tempted to do so remember the story about the long-faced corner-stone lounger, who made the remark, "if it doant rain we will hev a long dry spell," then smile out loud as the fellow did who heard him say it.

THE Cannon Falls Beacon surmises that "the railroads of Minnesota are not going to let go of the $10,000 per day which they are collecting in extortionate freight rates so long as there is a court to appeal to or a judge who will listen to the 'con' talk of their attorneys."

J. B. COTTON, solicitor for the U. S. Steel company, says that when J. J. Hill leased his iron range properties to the United States Steel corporation he drove a hard bargain and obtained considerably more than they were actually worth, getting nearly four times as much as the mining properties lease for on the average. How unkind of Jim to take such an unfair advantage of a poor, struggling little steel trust!

WE fear that Judge Lochren looks through the corporation end of the judicial telescope when he criticizes the legislature for passing a two-cent fare law and equalizing freight rates. Ordinarily the legislature is a fit subject for criticism, but the last Minnesota session did attempt to curb the rapacity of the railroads and should receive commendation for its efforts to remedy some of the evils the people of the state have endured.

THE Adams Express company recently divided a gift of two hundred per cent. among its stockholders, this action following a gift of one hundred per cent. in 1898. Thus the stockholders have been repaid threefold within less than ten years, besides regular and liberal dividends, and they still have the stock. The American public is "long suffering and kind," but some day there will be an end to the express and telegraph robbery.

THE St. Peter Free Press has its own peculiar views on the liquor question, saying "the people of Minnesota as a whole are temperate, but they have little time for prohibition; they like to indulge occasionally in a glass of beer, wine or liquor, but they detest a drunkard; but unless a wholesale system of effectual supervision of the traffic is inaugurated soon they will prefer prohibition to a wide-open saloon, and it is up to the authorities and to the dealers themselves to determine which it shall be."

A LARGE falling-off in the number of immigrants arriving in the Canadian northwest is reported, says the Roseau Region. No wonder. We predicted it three years ago. That country is now advertising itself, and thousands there be who wish they had never seen the over-much advertised country. There are many even from Roseau county who are writing back to their friends to stay where they are, and assuring them that the Canadian northwest is far from being what it is cracked up to be by the paid advertisements of the government.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is not adding to his reputation as a reformer by using the power of his great office in attempting to defeat Tom Johnson as mayor of Cleveland. Mayor Johnson has made a great fight for three-cent street car fares and has won. Moreover, he has stood for municipal decency, and Cleveland is one of the best-governed cities in the country. It is not in good taste for a president to interfere in local politics, and it will put his popularity to the straining point by continuing a course so repugnant to American ideals.

THE simplest and plainest laws of health are outraged every hour of the day by the average man, says an exchange. Did Adam smoke? Did Eve wear corsets? Did Solomon chew tobacco? Did Ruth chew gum? Did the children of Isreal make for a beer garden after crossing the Dead Sea? Did Rebecca eat gum drops and ice cream and call for soda water? Adam was the first man made perfect from head to heel. How long would he remain so after eating a mince pie before going to bed? Suppose he slept in a bedroom 5x7, with the windows down, the door shut and two dogs under the bed? Suppose Eve had laced herself in a corset pulled up tight, sat up all hours of the night eating her fill of trash and sizzled her hair. When you come to look how a man misbehaves himself you can only wonder how he ever lived to get there. Verily, the average man behaves as if he were little better than a fool.

RHEUMATISM

CAN NOT BE RUBBED AWAY

It is perfectly natural to rub the spot that hurts, and when the muscles, nerves, joints and bones are throbbing and twitching with the pains of Rheumatism the sufferer is apt to turn to the liniment bottle, or some other external application, in an effort to get relief from the disease, by producing counter-irritation on the flesh. Such treatment will quiet the pain temporarily, but can have no direct curative effect on the real disease because it does not reach the blood, where the cause is located. Rheumatism is more than skin deep—it is rooted and grounded in the blood and can only be reached by constitutional treatment—IT CANNOT BE RUBBED AWAY. Rheumatism is due to an excess of uric acid in the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural avenues of bodily waste, the Bowels and Kidneys, have failed to carry off. This refuse matter, coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. The aches and pains are only symptoms, and though they may be scattered or relieved for a time by surface treatment, they will reappear at the first exposure to cold or dampness, or after an attack of indigestion or other irregularity. Rheumatism can never be permanently cured while the circulation remains saturated with irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. The disease will shift from muscle to muscle or joint to joint, settling on the nerves, causing inflammation and swelling and such terrible pains that the nervous system is often shattered, the health undermined, and perhaps the patient becomes deformed and crippled for life. S. S. S. thoroughly cleanses the blood and renovates the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling all foreign matter from the system. It warms and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acrid and corrosive matter in the muscles, nerves, joints and bones, the body is fed and nourished by rich, health-sustaining blood which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. is composed of both purifying and tonic properties—just what is needed in every case of Rheumatism. It contains no potash, alkali or other mineral ingredient, but is made entirely of purifying, healing extracts and juices of roots, herbs and barks. If you are suffering from Rheumatism do not waste valuable time trying to rub a blood disease away, but begin the use of S. S. S. and write us about your case and our physicians will give you any information or advice desired free of charge and will send our special treatise on Rheumatism.

Cleaning Supremacy.

New and greatly improved methods are now employed in the art of cleaning and dyeing with the consequent result that articles of delicate texture, elaborate party gowns, fine laces, rich draperies, fine house furnishings, etc., etc., are now successfully cleaned or dyed and made to look almost like new without the slightest possibility of injury.

We have kept pace with the times in this respect and through a close study of our business and the constant application of new and improved methods have perfected a cleaning plant and gathered an organization of cleaning experts unequalled anywhere.

Having a thorough knowledge of the cleaning business, a consciousness of our ability to please the most exacting, and with facilities far more complete and perfect than has any competitor, we are better able to execute orders for cleaning and dyeing than any other concern in this line.

Think for a moment of the many discarded articles in your home which may be made serviceable through our efforts. Remember that the expense for cleaning and dyeing is moderate. We respectfully solicit your patronage with a guarantee of perfect satisfaction.

Candidates for the high school football team have commenced practice, and the work of getting ready for fall games will be got at in earnest from now on. The team will be a very light one this year, and will probably not seek games with the heavy teams from the larger towns, but there is already prospects of games with several elevens of about their own weight and some interesting contests may be looked for.

The Fort Cobb (Okla.) Record fathers this story about a bright little school girl's composition on men: "Men are what women marry. They drink, smoke and swear and have so many pockets, but they wont go to church. Perhaps if they wore bonnets they would. They are more logical than women and always more zoological. Both men and women have sprung from monkeys but the women certainly sprung much farther than the men."

Mrs. William Gervais of Two Harbors, who has been visiting relatives and friends in and around Red Lake Falls for the past couple of weeks, left Monday for Blackduck, where she will be joined by Mr. Gervais. They will visit at points along the line before returning home. Mrs. Gervais has a host of friends in Red Lake Falls who were delighted to see her again and who will hope that her stay in Blackduck will be as enjoyable as was her visit in our city.

Henry P. Johnson went through here on Monday's train bound for the Augustana Seminary, at Rock Island, where he is studying for the ministry. He was accompanied by his aunt, Mrs. Schieltz of Chicago, who has been visiting with relatives near Wylie. It will be remembered that Mr. Johnson was a great hustler for the Gazette during Kaufer's regime, at which time he acted as collector, reporter and general solicitor for Wylie and the surrounding country.

James E. Ford came up from St. Paul Friday and is this week packing his household goods and getting ready to move his family to St. Paul where they will reside for some time at least. Monday Jim received word from the public examiner to go to the town of Numedal and make such examination of the records of the school district and township officers as the county board requested at their last meeting. Mr. Ford went up Tuesday and will probably be there two or three days finishing up this work.

A farmer went to a veterinary surgeon to ask what he was to do about his horse, which had been ill. "Give him this powder," said the vet. Later the farmer came again and said that he couldn't get the horse to take the powder. "Oh," said the vet., "I forgot. Put this tube down his throat, then lay the powder in the tube and blow it down his throat." Within half an hour the farmer came running back, pale and excited. "What's up now?" asked the vet. "Didn't you do as I told you?" "Yes," said the farmer. "I put the tube down his throat and laid the powder in it, but the horse blew first."

In Unspoiled Tripoli

By Mabel Loomis Todd

Tripoli Most Enchanting of Oriental Cities—Quaint Characters and Costumes on the Streets—A Silver City in the Moonlight—Life in the Harem—Inmates Heavily Jeweled and Tatooed—Weird Wedding Celebration—Bride a Concentrated Nightmare of Color—Hands Covered with Gold-Leaf—Guests from the Desert.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

(Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd, wife of Prof. David P. Todd, the noted astronomer of Amherst college, has enjoyed unusual facilities for travelling in little known corners of the earth, having accompanied her husband on journeys undertaken for purposes of astronomical research. Her father was David Loomis, astronomer of Harvard university. Besides being a talented writer for the magazines and author of several books, Mrs. Todd is a successful lecturer.)

Pedestrians have few rights in the [illegible] thoroughfares of Tripoli. In pursuing one's devious way, the tiny feet of omnipresent donkeys perhaps are sound enough to indicate their approach, even if their drivers did not conscientiously shout "Balik! Balik!" to the unwary. But they never swerve from their course. If one succeeds in jumping out of the way in time, well and good. Not even so much notice is given of the soft-footed progress of the camel. During my weeks in Tripoli, most enchanting of unspoiled oriental cities, the first indication of the camel's presence was often the long, arched neck curving quite over my shoulder as he silently overtook me and the supremely scornful face close beside mine. It was quite indifferent to him where his next footstep fell, but not being equally so to me, he immediately possessed the street in clear and unrestricted ownership. Four feet, not two, reign in Tripoli.

Humanity indeed is harder to disentangle. Nationalities multiply with every step. Along the white walls and buildings, Arabs, Bedouins and Moors wrapped in white barracan flit swiftly, while Greeks, Maltese, black Sudanese and Fezzani—some polished like patent leather, others finished in dull tints like ebony—with fez and turban rags and bronze limbs, Turkish trousers and Albanian drapery give still further accent, and would absolutely defy one to identify one's locality if suddenly set down in the midst of it all.

In Tunis the Arabian women hide their faces, except the eyes, by a tightly strapped black veil, otherwise completely wrapped in a white burnoose. In Tripoli no veil is worn, but half of the left eye only is permitted to remain unshielded, and the barracan is put on differently. I took several lessons in adjusting it, attaining at last quite a degree of proficiency. But I fear the right manipulation of all the complicated, if graceful, folds would not be possible in a country of tailor-made suits and sealskin coats. One's mental fitness varies with environment. The peeping advantage of one bright black eye, or a small part of it, is rather an advantage than otherwise, for one may imagine all sorts of concealed beauty behind the white folds. A suggestion of something too choice and lovely for casual gaze envelops them, though in all my Tripoli experience actual sight of the street shrouded faces never failed to disenchant. American adoption of the barracan might enhance the attractiveness of our street parades.

Looking out of my window one morning—an entertaining employment hardly to be resisted—I witnessed an altercation which promised to turn into a genuine encounter. The combatants were apparently a jet-black vender of bottles carried about in a little push cart, and a lighter colored and more fully clothed and befezzed person with a table on his head. A crowd of all the nations of the earth speedily collected, and the conversation reached a pitch that suggested the tearing out of eyes and hair at once. But Arabic is curiously emphatic, voices at best loud and hoarse with a guttural "catch" in the throat quite inimitable; and this street fight turned out to be merely an amicable difference of opinion soon adjusted by a laugh from a bystander.

Maltese women in the black head cover and cloak combined, several [illegible]-eyed Moslem dames and two anxious-looking Roman Catholic sisters with a small brood of children whom they seemed to be initiating into the difficult art of wearing European clothes, were among the spectators; a Franciscan monk in brown robe and rope girdle stopped a moment as he passed, while a heavily turbaned Turk in a gorgeous red robe looked scornfully upon these inferior persons playing at emotions.

Days passed before I could intelligently study these types, or feel otherwise than that all were disporting themselves with histrionic intent.

If these ordinary street scenes were picturesque, how much more the great Tuesday market or fair on the beach or planura, where all the inhabitants for miles around from country and desert having anything to sell assemble by sunrise and establish the ephemeral but crowded city of tents close to the gentle Mediterranean surf! Thousands come every week, laying out the seats and blankets in rows facing each other like little streets. As in many oriental basars, articles of one kind are together. Next the water a narrow way led between booths where meat was displayed in tempting cuts; the next showed vegetables; another showed fruits, apricots, mulberries and a few belated oranges. Farther back, rude rugs and saddle-bags were displayed by strange men with wild but not unamiable faces, while barbarous old women sold bead bracelets and huge earrings, strings of coral, silver chains and handsome handkerchiefs. Plaid cottons, woven in Tripoli, in brilliant reds and yellows—barracans for the poorer class, who cannot afford the finer white ones—gave attractive suggestion of their utility as curtains and portieres in summer houses. But as usual much conversation on the subject was necessary before a bargain was made on the basis of a proper price. The sellers spoke Arabic to our attendant—the gorgeously impressive cavasse of the British consulate—who turned their remarks into modern Greek for the consul's daughter, she in turn reconstructing it all in French for me.

A row of Arab men made on the spot the close-fitting white caps worn under the fez by men, and wild desert women, hardly a degree above four-footed animals, were selling embroidered head coverings for little girls younger than four years. One of the most picturesque groups was composed of desert women seated flat in the sand surrounded by the woven straw covers for the bowls of cus-cus, a universal edible. These covers, like rather flat yet conical hats, with brilliant-colored strips of flannel woven in them, and of all sizes, were endlessly attractive, and I loaded the cavasse and my patient donkey with the spoils won by four languages.

But life in the harems, with the inner courtyard as its chief theater, is unique. My first morning spent in these visits is most memorable. No moslem young girl in Tripoli goes into the street after early childhood until she has been some time married and then only after the customary style of barracan shelter. And one or two young girls with whom I talked evinced a good deal of curiosity about the outer world, though never for a moment deeming it possible that they could see it for themselves before marriage. The coming husband is distinctly a liberator.

In one house the daughter was making a sort of coarse lace with a crochet needle. Her mother seemed to be washing some garment in a big flat bowl on the tiled floor of the court, her back bent double as she leaned, standing, to her task. Another middle-aged woman was seated on the floor of a room opening on the courtyard, sifting flour into different grades of fineness, preparatory to cuscus. A wizened little old woman crouched in a corner, grinding coffee in a tiny brass mill, and a few children seemed to be promiscuously scattered about. All the women were heavily laden with necklaces and bracelets and huge earrings. The courts were quite clean, many beautifully lined with Moorish tiles, but barbarously injured by the omnipresent whitewash. A handsome black woman from the interior seemed to be chief hostess in another harem, but a number of young married women of different nations hovered about with babies, pounds of jewelry and tattoo. One was quite covered with the blue-black symbols—face, hands, arms—and, as she proudly announced, she had done it all herself, though not after the usual gunpowder method.

Our shoes were removed, as in Japan, to go into the inner rooms, and a white sheepskin was brought for me to sit on. In one rather dirty little patio a forest of thread after dyeing was hanging overhead to dry in great skeins of scarlet and yellow and a pretty young girl was manipulating reels and bobbins as she sat in the shade. In another dwelling the chief apartment was shown—full of fine gold embroidery, on pillows and cushions and divans, hung on the wall, spread on the floor. Heavily curtained beds at each end were piled high with gorgeous cushions. It was still called the bridal chamber, though the bride showed her lusty babe of a year with evident pride, while a second, three weeks old, lay gurgling and meditating in a cradle close by.

Sounds in Tripoli are almost as picturesque as its sights, and several times, generally at night, one especially joyous cry echoed through the streets with a singularly penetrating vibration. This happy scream sometimes announces a birth, but it may be used to proclaim a wedding as well, or other fortunate happening. One Wednesday evening three genuine carriages passed, two containing Arab ladies and the last filled with black women, chanting weirdly, occasionally giving vent to the characteristic resonant tremolo.

All this signified that a prospective bridegroom's mother was announcing to the town her approaching happiness. Glad tidings filled the air. The next night, Thursday, a favorite night for weddings, a large procession passed up and down through the narrow streets for hours. Arab men closely wrapped in white barracans like ghosts marched ahead of a company of black men, beating drums, burning red fire and exploding rockets and fire crackers. Behind came Moslem boys swinging lanterns and occasionally singing. In the midst walked the expectant bridegroom, taking this emphatic farewell of bachelorhood. Until two o'clock in the morning he paraded the streets, entertaining his friends and giving them a fine supper at the end. Meantime, the little bride would be brought by her relatives to his house, with somewhat less flourish, and placed in charge of his mother. Some time during the day he has been to the mosque, but it is not necessary for the bride to go.

The next day, Friday, I was invited to the wedding festivities. The families were of a far higher class than those of the harems I had previously seen. The pleasant courtyard was lined with fine green tiles in good designs, the rooms opening directly upon it and also from a gallery above. In the center flat on the floor sat a dozen black women with coarse tambourines and small drums, keeping up an incessant though intermittent noise of chanting, but ranged about the sides on a platform slightly raised sat the chief female relatives and friends of the high contracting parties, and their effect was so theatrically dazzling that it was some time before I discovered which might be the bride. The love of aniline dyes rather than the lovely old soft oriental colors had infected all ranks, and as each Arab lady in Tripoli when indoors appeared in all the seven colors of the spectrum and a good many more not recognized by the rainbow, the effect of 40 or 50 together was overpowering. Jackets, blouses, short skirts, Turkish trousers, silk stockings, gold slippers and crimson, pink, cobalt blue, scarlet, yellow, silver gauze and gold brocade distributed liberally on each woman—words convey little of the effect. Each face was painted dead white, with startling crimson triangles accurately set upon the cheeks; eyebrows were heavily outlined in black and connected over the nose and yards of gold sequins and beads were looped around neck and arms and forehead.

In the center of all this gorgeousness sat the little bride, rigidly erect and immovable, with two especially resplendent friends on each side to fan and otherwise attend her. For hours she must neither move nor smile, nor even wink. Her hands were spread stiffly upon her knees, the fingers black with henna and gold leaf thickly laid on up to her wrists; while as to costume, she was a concentrated nightmare of color. Her hair was braided down with blue silk and silver, her vest was gold brocade, her trousers were of blue velvet; scarlet and crimson disported bewilderingly among yards of gold coins and chains of some white-petaled flower. Half a dozen holes in each ear supported an immense weight of ornaments; bracelets reached the shoulder. In every detail her decorations were bigger and brighter and more amazing than those of the others.

Friday, from just before sunset, the bride sits thus like a statue for an hour or two, while the bridal chamber is examined, the viands discussed and much hilarity prevails among the assembled women. The father of this particular bride had had but four wives, and there had been but 50 children altogether. Of these 25 or 30 had died young, so the poor man had not married into a very extensive connection. But he was grateful for even so many relatives-in-law.

The most really interesting figures in all this wedding party were a group of Bedouins, who had come up from the desert, strange, bright-eyed women, with the great Sahara spaces breathing from their weird personality. They were draped in silver chains and bangles, their dark robes being held together by splendid old silver clasps and buckles. Their earrings were so heavy that they had to be attached to the head covering as well. These were the real essence of the east, the breezy embodiment of free air, but showing, too, a shy distrust of ways other than their own.

Saturday, too, the little bride sits for hours in state, but afterward the ceremonies proper are over, though she is dressed and waited upon and made the guest of honor in her husband's house for a month. After that practical life begins.

Grotesque as are some customs, confused as are nationalities and races, there is yet a strange and inexplicable charm about Tripoli. It took a permanent hold upon my heart and imagination, and when I saw its white minarets and domes grow less upon the horizon, fading almost into the blue of the incomparable Mediterranean, I was glad to remember that I had surely stepped upon the little plate of brass at the sea gate as I came away, which by a native superstition means certain return to Tripolitan joys.

The Feeling Was the Same.

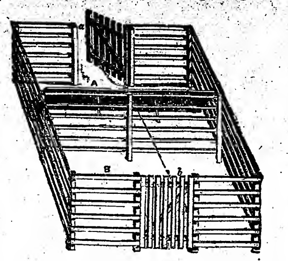
There is a little girl in a little town "up the state" who has been brought up most carefully, and whose father and mother have taken the utmost pains that she should hear nothing but English, absolutely untainted by slang, to say nothing of more forcible language. She was therefore kept from the society of children of her own age, and the weekly young people's meetings at one of the village churches were the only form of entertainment (if such they may be called) that she had ever attended.

One evening she was playing all by herself as usual, and had built on the side porch an imposing edifice of blocks. She sat looking at it, possibly planning additional improvements, when her elder brother, "a real grown-up young man," came up the steps with one of his college friends. One of them made a careless step, and in an instant the house of blocks was in ruins.

The little girl jumped to her feet and stood a moment, struggling with emotions that seemed too large for her, then she burst out:

"Christian Endeavor! Rock of Ages! Onward, Christian Soldiers!—I'm swearing, brother Henry."

Trap for Sheep-Killing Dogs



In the meadow or field where sheep are pastured during the day, is a small pen, which is divided by a cross fence and covered on the top by strong slats. Two gates are made so that they will swing open of their own accord and remain so, unless held closed or fastened. The gate is furnished with a latch by which it is fastened when closed. This gate is intended to admit the dog into the part of the pen A when he is attracted to it by a sheep confined for the purpose in the other part of the pen B. In the A part of the pen is a heavy board reaching across it. One edge of this board rests upon the ground against two pegs, which keep it from slipping backward. The other edge is kept up by means of two shaky, slender supports. A rope is fastened to the upper edge of this board and to the gates so that one-half of it when the board is propped up, allows the gate A to swing open and the other half holds the gate B shut and thus keeps the sheep confined. The trap is now set. A dog seeking entry into the pen finds the gate open and rushes over the board, thus knocking it down. The gate A is closed by the rope and fastened, while the gate B is allowed to swing open and set the sheep free.

THE CULTURE OF ASPARAGUS

By W. R. Beattie.

This crop can be grown on almost any well-drained soil, but will do best on a deep, mellow, sandy loam. There is little possibility of having the land too rich, and liberal applications of rotted barnyard manure should be made before the plants are set. It is usually more satisfactory to purchase two-year-old roots from some seedsmen or dealer. The price of good roots is generally about $1.25 per hundred, and 100 to 200 plants will be found sufficient to supply the ordinary family. The roots should be transplanted during the late autumn or early spring. Before setting out the plants the land should be loosened very deeply, either by subsoil plowing or deep spading. It is a good plan to remove the topsoil and spade manure into the subsoil to a depth of 14 or 16 inches; then replace the topsoil and add more manure. There are two methods of setting an asparagus bed, depending entirely upon the kind of cultivation to be employed in the garden. If horse tools are to be used, the plants should be set in rows three and a half feet apart and 14 inches apart in the row. On the other hand, if the garden space is limited the plants should be set in a solid bed, one foot apart each way, and cultivated by hand. In setting asparagus the crowns should be covered to a depth of four or five inches. At the north it will be desirable to mulch the asparagus bed during the winter with three or four inches of loose manure or straw. In the south the covering during the winter will not be necessary, but the bed should receive a dressing of manure or fertilizer at some time each year, preferably in the autumn.

Hard Milking.—"Hard milking" occurs from varied causes. Sometimes the trouble is due to an unnatural construction of the entire length of the canal of the teat, sometimes to new growths along its course, and not infrequently to little shot-like bodies attached to a pedicle, which drop down into the canal from above and form a sort of a ball-valve obstruction. Again, says Farm Journal, the trouble may come from injuries to the lower part (the sphincter of the teat). These last causes usually arise from injuries received from without, and occasionally are due to warty growths at the opening of the teat.

Needs a Separator.—The farmer that has a good-sized herd of cows and has no separator can well afford to sell his poorest cow and buy a separator. It will save him money in the end.

EFFECT OF SOILS ON PLANTS

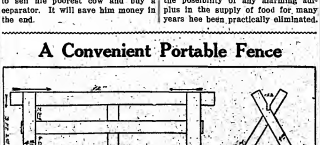
By C. L. Allen.

While variations of climate produce wonderful changes in vegetable forms, it is a well-established fact that any vegetable grown in a given soil will assume a very different form when grown on either a heavier or a lighter one. This has been shown in a remarkable degree with the cabbage. A given variety grown for a long number of years on a heavy soil, with a liberal supply of plant food, proper care in growing the plants and in transplanting them, and constant cultivation until the crop is matured, will develop a type remarkable for size and vigor, with excellent keeping qualities, and be what is known as a Late Flat Dutch or Drumhead cabbage. On the other hand, take the same stock seed, grow it on a light sandy soil, under the same climatic influences, with the same care in cultivation, always selecting with a view to earliness and solidity, and the result will be in the same number of years a variety of the same general form but of smaller size and very much earlier. Again, a soil intermediate in character, from the same stock, during the same period, with the same care in selection, will give a variety intermediate in character as well as in period of growth.

Red Cedar.—Red cedar, from which pencils are made, has become so scarce that it enjoys the unique distinction of being bought and sold by the pound. Most of this cedar comes from Tennessee, Alabama and Florida, and the supply in Tennessee is nearly gone. Fence rails that weathered the civil war have gone into pencils. Stumps have been dug up and sold for more than the trees which were cut from them to make railroad ties. Fence posts have given way to newer kinds of wood and have been carted to the pencil factory to be sold for ten cents a hundred pounds. And yet this red cedar will grow anywhere in the United States where the soil does not contain too much sand or clay; will flourish on land that is unfit for agriculture, and will reach a size fit for pencil making when 25 years old.—Department of Agriculture.

Good Prices for Stock.—The era of cheap meat seems to be as far off as ever and it looks as if consumption has overtaken and passed production. There is undoubtedly room for much increase in the production of live stock, but with the population increasing at the rate of 2,000,000 a year and plenty of work in sight for everybody, the possibility of any alarming surplus in the supply of food for many years has been practically eliminated.

A Convenient Portable Fence



The panels in the portable fence shown here are made of four-inch fencing, 14 feet long, with six-inch spaces between the boards, thus making a fence three feet high by allowing the cleats to project two inches. If the fence is to be used for pigs the lower space may be reduced to four inches and the upper one increased to eight inches. The fence is held in place by triangular frames. The ends of the panel overlap about six inches and fit into notches for the top and bottom boards. The brace should be on the outside of the foot. It may be necessary in some cases to stake the panels at the braces to secure greater stability.

HERITAGE OF CIVIL WAR.

Thousands of Soldiers Contracted Chronic Kidney Trouble While in the Service.

The experience of Capt. John L. Ely, of Co. E, 17th Ohio, now living at 500 East Second street, Newton, Kansas, will interest the thousands of veterans who came back from the Civil War suffering tortures with kidney complaint. Capt. Ely says: "I contracted kidney trouble during the Civil War, and the occasional attacks finally developed into a chronic case. At one time I had to use a crutch and cane to get about. My back was lame and weak, and besides the aching, there was a distressing retention of the kidney secretions. I was in a bad way when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills in 1901, but the remedy cured me, and I have been well ever since."

Were Treated at Dispensary—Did Not Improve—Suffered Five Months—Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"My three children had eczema for five months. A little sore would appear on the head and seemed very itchy, increasing day after day. The baby had had it about a week when the second boy took the disease and a few sores developed, then the third boy took it. For the first three months I took them to the N— Dispensary, but they did not seem to improve. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and in a few weeks they had improved, and when their heads were well you could see nothing of the sores. KISSING DAYS.

Observance of Ancient Custom by an English Fishing Town.

Yesterday, says a late issue of the London Evening Standard, was "kissing day" at Hungerford, a quiet community on the western borders of Berkshire, renowned for its trout fishery and its faithful adherence to the ancient customs of Hocktide, which have been observed since the days of John Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, who granted the rights and privileges to the commoners.

At daybreak the town crier, arrayed in a new livery, took his stand on the town hall balcony and blew his lusty blasts on the historic horn, which is the symbol of Hungerfordian liberty. Then the "tuttimen" went forth bearing staves garlanded with flowers and made a perambulation of the town, kissing every lady whom they met and demanding a penny from every male householder.

The sum thus obtained served to purchase oranges for scrambling among the crowd of children who followed in their footsteps. The ladies took the kissing in good part, and the males paid up smilingly.

Meanwhile the Hocktide jury was transacting more serious business in the town hall, electing a constable, who is both a coroner and a mayor, also appointing keepers of the keys of the common coffer, bailiff, portreeve and other ancient officers whose duties are rather obscure.

FOUND OUT.

A Trained Nurse Made Discovery.

No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse of Wilkes Barre, Pa., writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion. While on a visit to my brothers I had a good chance to try Postum Food Coffee, for they drank it altogether in place of ordinary coffee. In two weeks after using Postum I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion.

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used.

"I observed a curious fact about Postum when used among mothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up and where tea causes nervousness.

"I find trouble in getting servants to make Postum properly. They most always serve it before it has been boiled long enough. It should be boiled 15 to 20 minutes after boiling begins and served with cream, when it is certainly a delicious beverage." Read "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

WHAT FATHER AND HARRY ACCOMPLISHED

AN ILLINOIS MAN WRITES REGARDING HIS SUCCESS IN WESTERN CANADA.

Change In Homestead Regulations Makes Entry Easily Accomplished.

"Nothing succeeds like success" is an old and true saying having many applications in Western Canada. The following letter is an illustration. The writer, Mr. Gerts, left Chicago a short time ago and the success he has achieved may well be gained by anyone having pluck and energy by locating on the free homestead lands in Western Canada. A change recently made in the Canadian Land Regulations concerning homesteads makes it possible for any member of a family to make entry for any other member of the family entitled to a homestead. For instance, a man may now make entry before the local agent for his father or for his brother or brothers, or for his son or sons, or for a sister or daughter who may be the head of the family having minor children depending upon her for support. A sister, daughter or mother are also entitled to make entry upon a homestead. The only fee required is $10.00 for each entry. A great saving in railway expenses is thus made.

Read what Mr. Gerts has to say:

Battleford, Sask., Aug. 4, 1907.

Dear Sir.—

Thinking a letter from us Northwest settlers might interest you, and I write a few lines and let you know we are progressing finely and well pleased with our new home.

When I think of the many hard working, industrious men east with families who are struggling for a living and doing the strenuous, laying up practically nothing for old age and the thousands of acres of land here yet to be plowed and cultivated capable of raising sixty to eighty bushels of oats, thirty to forty bushels of wheat, it certainly seems a pity the two cannot be brought together. But I will repeat, this country is only for the industrious and thrifty; also I might add, it requires some capital to start.

A man should have at least a team of three good horses; better to have mares so as to have some colts coming along each year. It is best to bring them with him as work horses are high. He should be able to purchase plow, disc and drag, harrow, drill, binder and hay rake. Of course several taking up claims or buying land near together can divide up the purchasing of the above machinery and exchange work. This plan will work well for a few years or until crops will warrant each individual to purchase a full outfit.

We have 480 acres of as good farm land as lies in the famous Cut Knife district. Every foot can be plowed. Last year our oats run 60 bushels per acre. I sold them for 50c per bushel on the place.

The indications are for a good crop this year, though we were very late in seeding owing to the late spring. Last winter was the coldest known in this country by the oldest settlers (some who have been here 35 years), but with a comfortable house and plenty of firewood, which we hauled four miles, we passed the winter quite pleasantly. The air is clear and dry. Some of the days I came from work I was surprised to find the thermometer registering 40° below zero. Though we never keep fire at night, we had nothing freeze in our cellar.

Our stock and chickens wintered fine. I have a yearling heifer, who would hold her own in any "fat stock show." She has never had a drop of milk since she was four months old and has never had a mouthful of grain. A gentleman who saw her made the remark, "He bet that heifer had eaten her head off with grain," but would hardly believe she had never had any grain.

This is a great country for growing all kinds of vegetables and we are certainly enjoying our garden. The flavor of the green peas is especially fine. Last season Mrs. G. canned a lot of them, and we have enjoyed them up to the fresh crop.

I am sorry I did not have time this past season to attend to transplanting trees, but will keep the land I had prepared worked up for next season's planting. I received a number of small trees (ash and maple) from the Government Experimental Farm at Indian Head. I put them around the edge of the garden and they are doing fine. I also received quite a lot of other seeds, oats, wheat, potatoes and rhubarb roots which were acceptable.

It is useless for us to bother with garden flowers as wild ones grow in profusion. We are located near a fine creek, the water of which is soft and fine for bathing and washing. We have a well of water near the house, 32 feet deep and 21 feet of water all the time, though it is harder than the creek water.

Land which could be bought for five dollars per acre three years ago is now worth $14 per acre and steadily advancing each year.

All kinds of improvements are going on. Steam plows and large threshing outfits are already in. Roads are being graded, bridges being built across rivers and creeks. Last year I took my family, also wagon, across the Saskatchewan river in a row boat, swam my team across and now the contract has been let for $200,000 bridge at that place.

The C. N. R. have run their final survey from Battleford to Calgary, running west about one mile north of us. The C. P. R. have run a survey, which runs northwest passes about 500 feet from the northeast corner of our farm. The country will soon be covered with a net work of railroads and it will keep them busy hauling the output of grain. It is certainly encouraging to us settlers.

Two years ago, Harry, my son, and I as you know unloaded our car at Saskatoon and drove 139 miles to our claim. Last fall we had only 18 miles to haul our wheat to railroad and as you see, the prospects are we will have a railroad at our very door and a town near-by. This district can support a good town and it will be well patronized.

Harry arrived home at 12 p. m. last night after going fourteen miles to blacksmith shop to get plowshares beat out. The shop was full of work and it was eight p. m. when Harry left for home and parties still in line to have work done. We will need stores nearer and good mechanics.

We are all enjoying the best of health which is a great blessing. When we left Chicago over a year ago my youngest son's (four years of age) health was so poor that I almost despaired of raising him, but he is certainly a hearty, healthy little fellow now. The pure fresh air has done him worlds of good.

So to sum up the whole. Why should we not be glad we made the break? A good farm, stock increasing, health and an independent life. What more can we expect?

Did we have to make an effort? You can bet we did and hustle, too. Should you pass this way with your shotgun this fall, we should be pleased to let you shoot prairie chickens off our grain stocks.

Respectfully yours,

CHAS. M. GERTS AND FAMILY.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A FASHION FROM WAR.

How Flat Watches Took Place of the Old-Time "Turnips."

When the neat man takes unto himself a watch as thin as parchment he little thinks that that thin watch results from army regulations.

Up to the time of the Allies taking Paris the ordinary watch was convex in shape and called from its outline a "turnip." The officers of the Russian and other armies objected to this because its bulbous form made the uniform of a man on parade look untidy, whether it were carried in the coat or the fob. Here in Paris, however, they found that the watchmakers of the Palais Royal had contrived a chronometer which got over the difficulty. Flat watches were the fashion in Paris. The English when they appeared in the streets of the French capital marched in not in gala dress such as the others wore, but in the raiment which they had worn on campaign. Great was the impression which their habiliments created. But they at once adopted the smart flat watch and brought it back to England for our own manufacturers to copy.

Induced the French to Walk.

The celebrated Dr. Tronchin, friend of Voltaire, Rousseau and Diderot, whose biography has just been published, was the inventor of walking.

In France until his epoch (1709-1781) the leisured class never walked either for health or recreation. Walking was only practiced by the Tiers Etat; folks footed it from one place to another simply because they possessed neither coach nor sedan chair. Dr. Tronchin, an initiator in many other respects, induced "les elegants et les elegantes," writes a historian, to take what is now called a constitutional.

To stroll abroad was named tronchiner, after the inventor, and for their airings both sexes had special costumes and shoes, the latter being more especially necessary. The verb tronchiner, by the way, has not had the fate of our "to boycott," having passed into disuse long ago.

Stars and Stripes on Gloves.

A new glove design has been brought out for use on men's fabric gloves only, the features a "star and stripes" in colors of red, white and blue. The glove with the design on will be used for parades during national, state and city election campaigns, or upon any occasion when a display of patriotic sentiment in wearing apparel is desired. The design is very simple and easily made, and is used mostly on cheap stores for 15 cents, and with the design on will cost 25 cents. The patriotic sentiment is always in evidence during election periods in this country, and the glove with this design is introduced to be used during the presidential campaign of 1908.

Wanted Things Clear.

The Dutch housewives of old New York, ever noted for their housekeeping qualities, created the agitation which resulted in the appointment of the first public street cleaner in New York in 1692. He was Laurens Van Der Spiegle, a baker. His daughter married Rip Van Dam, who afterward became governor of New York, an illustration of the democracy of that day.

First American Gas Engine.

The first American gas engine patent, issued May 25, 1844, was granted to Stuart Perry, Newport, N. Y., for his two-cycle, double-acting, air-cooled gas engine. Perry proposed to inclose the cylinder and its immediate appendages in a case, through which cold air could be blown by means of a rotary fan or other blowing apparatus.

Awakening of the East.

Damascus, the oldest surviving city in the world, and the most typically Oriental one in these dominions, leads in Turkey in adopting electricity for purposes of light and locomotion. The harnessing of the Barada (the Abana of the Bible) for such ends emphasizes the change which is fast overtaking Ottoman industrial and social life.

Porto Rican Invited.

The convention of state legislatures which is to assemble at the Jamestown exposition has invited Jose de Diego, speaker of the Porto Rican house of delegates, poet, lawyer and politician, to attend the meeting. The status of Porto Rico will be subject on which De Diego will address the convention.

Electric Bath.

Foolish Litigation.

Sixty years ago a Pennsylvania farmer cut down a chestnut tree on a neighbor's property. Recently the heirs of the two farmers paid the costs upon final decision of the suit. The total expenses have been $30,000.

Favorite Mode of Suicide.

According to the coroner's records asphyxiation is the favorite mode of suicide in New York city, there being an average of one suicide each three days, while there is about one in four days from shooting.

Girls Outlast Boys.

Of a million girl babies born, 871,266 are alive at twelve months. Of the boys, 30,000 fewer live through the first year.

MEDICAL FAILURES.

An Authority Says Three-Fourths of Graduates Are Unfitted to Practice.

That 3,000 out of the 4,000 graduates turned out by the Medical Colleges each year are wholly unfitted to practice medicine and are menaces to the communities in which they settle was stated by Dr. Chester Mayer, of the State Board of Medical Examiners of Kentucky at a meeting of the American Medical Association's Committee on Medical Education, held in Chicago not long ago. Dr. Mayer said that only 25 to 28 per cent of the graduates are qualified. Fifty-eight per cent of the graduates examined in 28 states were refused licenses. With few exceptions these failures took a second examination in a few weeks and only 50 per cent of them passed.

"This does not mean that deficiencies in their training were corrected in those few weeks," Dr. Mayer said. "It probably shows that experience showed them what the test would probably be and they 'crammed' for the examination. Dr. W. T. Gott, Secretary of the Indiana Board said: "The majority of our schools now teach their students how to pass examinations, not how to be good physicians."

At the session of the American Medical Association held in Atlantic City in June, Dr. M. Clayton Thrush, a professor in the Medico Chirurgical College in Philadelphia said: "Many doctors turned out of the Medical Schools are so ignorant in matters pertaining to pharmacy that they know nothing about the properties of the drugs they prescribe for their patients!" Dr. Henry Beets, Jr., President of the Pennsylvania State Board of Medical Examiners, after scrutinizing the papers of a class of candidates for licensure said: "About one quarter of the papers show a degree of illiteracy that renders the candidates for licensure incapable of understanding medicine."

A great many more physicians and chemists might be quoted in support of the astounding charge that 3,000 incompetents are being dumped onto an unsuspecting public each year. What the damage done amounts to can never be estimated for these incompetents enjoy the privilege of diagnosing, prescribing or dispensing drugs regarding the properties of which they know nothing and then of signing death certificates that are not passed upon by anyone unless the coroner is called in. Probably there is not a grave yard from one end of the country to the other that does not contain the buried evidences of the mistakes or criminal carelessness of incompetent physicians.

During the last year there have been perhaps, half a dozen known cases where surgeons, after performing operations have sewed up the incisions without first removing the gauze sponges used to absorb the blood, and in some cases forceps and even surgeon's scissors have been left in the wound. How many of these cases there have been, where the patient died, there is no means of knowing and comparatively few of the cases where the discovery is made in time to save life become generally public. Reports from Sanitariums for the treatment of the Drug Habit show that members of the medical profession are more often treated in these institutions than members of any other profession, and that a majority of the patients, excluding the physicians themselves, can trace their downfall directly to a careless physician.

How many criminal operations are performed by physicians is also a matter of conjecture. Operations of this class are, unfortunately, very frequent in large cities. Some graduated and licensed physicians, many of them of supposed respectability, make an exclusive practice of criminal medical and surgical treatment. Dr. Henry G. W. Rheinhart, Coroner's physician of Chicago, estimates the number of criminal operations, annually, in Chicago alone at 38,000. How many resulted fatally are unknown, as when death results, the real cause is disguised in the death certificate, which the physician signs, and which no one but himself and a clerk sees.

Probably not one case of malpractice in 1,000 ever becomes the subject of a law suit but in the last year approximately 150 cases wherein the plaintiff has alleged malpractice have been reported in the newspapers, and owing to the social prominence and the favored positions of many physicians not more than half the new suits stated, probably, result in any newspaper publicity, but it would probably not be an exaggeration to state that the total cases of malpractice, not involving criminal operations or criminal medical practice, would amount to 150,000 or more than one case to each physician in the country. This estimate is, of course, more or less conjecture. Untimely deaths and permanent disabilities are frequent, and occur within the knowledge of almost every one, when life could have been saved, or health restored had the physician been skillful, careful and competent.

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

MUST ATTEND SOME SCHOOL

Children Between the Ages of 8 and 18 Years Must Study.

It is an opportune time to suggest the importance of children attending school. No matter what station in life parents of a child may hold, it is highly necessary that their offspring receive at least a common school education. A person without a fair education in this age is doomed to earn a livlihood by common labor, and is unable to grasp the opportunity of advancement should it present itself. The facilities for free education in this country has made it possible for children of the lowly to compete with those who possess wealth for high positions in political and social life, and the child who does not take advantage of the opportunities afforded it to learn, or is denied this privilege by its parents, is to be pitied. The higher educated the masses, the great and stronger the government and the nation. It may not be generally known that a compulsory education law exists in Minnesota, which, in brief, is as follows:

Section 1. Every parent, guardian, or other person who resides in any school district or city, who has control of any child or children of or between the ages of eight or eighteen years shall send such child to a public school, parochial or private school in each year during the entire time the public schools of such district or city are in session. Provided, however, that such child or children may be excused from such attendance for the whole or any part of such period by the school board of education of the school district or city in which such parent, guardian or person having control resides, upon its being shown to the satisfaction of such board, (1) that such parent, guardian or other person having control is not able by reason of poverty to clothe such child properly; or (2) that child's bodily or mental condition is such as to prevent his attendance at school or application to study for the period required; or (3) that such child is taught at home in such branches of study as are usually taught in public schools, subject to same examinations as other pupils of such district or city; or (4) that such child has already acquired the ordinary branches required by law; (5) that such child is actually engaged in some useful occupation, employment or service permitted by law.

Doesn't Pay to Ship Cream.

This item from the Wabasso Standard should be of local interest: "Buttermaker Small shipped a can of cream taken from one of his patrons to a well known creamery in St. Paul. This cream had been carefully weighed and shipped so there could be no possible chance of mistake and was done for the purpose of ascertaining whether these centralized plants do better or rather to prove that they did not do better than the local creamery. The statement showed that the St. Paul concern paid one cent a pound more for butter than the local creamery did at the time. But to offset this they gave one point less in test and one pound less in weight besides it cost 31 cents to ship the cream, making a total loss above the gain in price of 37 cents—not a great amount but if figured for a whole year it would amount to quite a sum.

Animals' Long Fasts.

"Snakes," said the zoo keeper, "have been known to do without food for two years. I know personally of a South American anaconda that in seven years has only eaten four times—that is to say, two meals per annum. The noctule, a bat, fasts regularly seven months out of the twelve, but the noctule while fasting hibernates, and of the snake this cannot be said. An antelope can live twenty days without food, an eagle twenty-eight days, a badger thirty days, a horse twenty-five days, a dog thirty-five days. But that is nothing. A crocodile can fast two months, a scorpion three months, a bear six months, a chameleon eight months and a viper ten months. How do I know all this? From my zoological studies. These facts are easy to learn. Scientists have proved them time and again in the various zoological gardens of the world."

Wasted Irish Land.

The landlords own most of the land in Ireland and rent it out to the farmers, who assert that it is poor, and consequently they have a hard time to produce enough to support their families and pay the rent. Most of the land seems to be used for pasturage, and but little of it is under cultivation, as are the lands of Italy, Germany and France. Besides, there is a great waste caused by the building of wide turf fences. There are more fences to a farm in Ireland than in any other country.—Travel Magazine.

Couldn't Toss With Them.

While the late Lord Goschen was chancellor of the exchequer under Lord Salisbury it was proposed to bring out one pound notes. Mr. Goschen, as he was then, was rather doubtful of the value of such notes, and he consulted a well known financier as to the advisability of the innovation. "It would be a great mistake," said the financier. "Why?" queried Mr. Goschen. "Well, you see, you can toss with a sovereign, but you can't with a one pound note," was the reply, and the one pound notes were shelved.—Bellman.

Brown Bros. from Sauk Centre shipped a bunch of cattle from here last Saturday. They are heavy buyers and have shipped several carloads from this place lately and will continue to do so for a while yet.

Abraham Paquin tells us that for his last shipment of butter to New York, he received 29½ cents a pound for his butter. J. W. Welch from Minneapolis is the buttermaker and he scored 92 points on the last test of the butter.

W. B. Cheshire, our popular cashier of First State Bank, took the Soo line flyer Tuesday evening last week to St. Paul, and the next morning got married to Miss Jennie Dahle. We extend our very best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cheshire.

Postmaster Arthur Laniel went to the county seat on some business matters last Tuesday morning.

L. C. Simons is taking care of the First State Bank in the absence of W. B. Cheshire.

J. E. Buskirk, manager of the lumberyard here is building a fine residence for himself and will move his family here in a few days.

Mrs. K. Ronnestrand from Thief River Falls has been visiting with Mrs. A. E. Sorenson for the last few days.

Aug. Morin from Red Lake Falls is at present engaged in fixing up the rooms above the Brooks Mercantile Co.'s store building to be occupied by Mr. Cheshire and bride when coming home from their honeymoon trip.

W. L. Orme raised 20 bushels of wheat and about 30 bushels of oats on his farm this year, all machine measure.

Mud Lake is acquiring natiooel repute as a resort for duck bunting. Men have come here this fall from St. Paul, Minneopolis, Duluth, Chicago and even Cincinnatti. Besides those from these larger oities there bave been numerous parties from Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls, Greenbush nnd other Minnesota points. Aod most of them come to Middle River nnd drive ont from here to the lake, all of which is a good thing for Middle River, making business for the hotel, the restaurant, the livery and the local hunters who go along to officiate as guides for the visitors. Just now some of the shooters are protesting to be on onxious seat for feor the government ditch will be put through next year and drain out the lake and spoil the shooting. Of course that would be hard on the hunters, but in view of the fact thot it would open up several thousand acres of good land, the public in general is aotsympathizing with the fears of the hunters but will manege to subsist without the ducks in case the ditch goes through.—Middle River Pioneer.

TRUTH COMING OUT.

Canada No Longer Sending Out Claims of Big Crops.

Canada has changed its policy of sending out felse and misleading claims concerning its wbent crop. Glowing accounts of the bumper crop have been sent out persistently duriug the lote summer and early fall. These claims were not justified by the octual conditions, for, as a matter of fact, the wheat crop is small.

The true facts are now coming out. The Canadian crop has been greatly domoged. This wes known loog ago, but the policy of optimism was adhered to, aad glowing accounts of the bumper crop were given out to the world nt large. This was done to help the financial interests aod land men, but the true facts could not longer be concealed. Not only this, but it was found that the false and misleading iuformetion was doing Canada more harm than good.

The Twiu city papers have recently been full of these adverse reports coocerning the Ceoadiau wheat crop, and the following from the market page of the Mioneapolis Journal will be of interest.

The Winnipeg Free Press has an editoriel article thet attracted some nttention. The gist of it is that it is folly to try to conceal the facts nbout that couotry and that claims of a big crop are doing more harm than good. There is no doubt, to judge from the article, that there is full realization of the situation. Looked at from the Minneapolis end, it would seem to on impartial observer thet the Cenadian west, instead of trying to minimize the damege and trying to put on a bold front in the interest of the land business might do better frankly to come out aod admit that the orop it small. No sensible person would blame that country, aod it is wholly improbobly that any unfavorable opinion would be created, for in all truth it could be pointed out that this has been n most extrnordinary year, thet oats in Wisconsin, fruit in Missouri, winter whent in Kansas and cottoa in the far south all suffered, and that the September report of the government indicates that the United States is in for a total shortage of nearly 500,000,000 bushels of grain of all kinds, spring and winter wheat, corn, oats, barley aod buckwheat all promisiog less than last year. Yet no one in the United States feels that the country is not all right, for all know that the late spring, the frosts through Kansas on May 27th, and the bed weather that followed, mark the development of period unfavorable beyond enythiog for a generatioo, and Western Canada can justly show that conditions such es affected her crops this yeer are in many respects, quite unprecedented and might not come again in a lifetime.

But the policy bas been different. Persistent hope and optomism hes led to reports of big yields up to dete. Certeioly no one here wants to deny the country above tbe line everything it is entitled to, but no one believes that the recent estimate of a yield of 95,000,000 bushels is warranted. Moreover, some of the best informed in the Canadinn trade do not believe it themselves. The theory seems to be that insistence upoa the fact that there has been no damege and that a big crop was raised will help the lond and finoncial interests, while as a mntter of fect such statements fool no one and the effect, if any, can only be to cut out additional influence ngainst the price, whereas west Canada's salvation this year lies in the big money that will come that way as a result of the bigh prices, which prices will be the better maiatained the sooner the Canadians come out frankly with the facts.

A Good Fair.

The members of the local band organizetion arrived home lest Friday morning from Fertile, where they had played for three days at the Polk county fair held there last week. The fair was a very good one, and while the crowd was not very large, those who stayed away missed something fine. The exhibits in every department were away above the averoge county fair, aad in the fruit and vegetable liae especially was there a fine showing. The display of stock was also very good, and the stock parade the last afternoon was a pleasing feature. The race program was very fair, and some exciting conteste were beld both afternoons. The officers of the fair association are a fine lot of geatlemen, and spared no pains to make the visitor comfortable; in fact, the people of Fertile as a whole, are a good lot to be with and our boys enjoyed their stay there immensely.

CROOKED WORK OF OIL TRUST SHOWN

MORE EVIDENCE OF STANDARD'S SAILING UNDER FALSE COLORS IN TEXAS.

LOMBARD TELLS HIS TROUBLES

HAMPERED BY RAILROADS IN ATTEMPT TO FORCE HIM INTO TRUST.

New York, Sept. 26.—Accountants of the Standard Oil company finally audited the books of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri after 1900, when its name disappeared from the list of companies controlled by the Standard, according to Wade Hampton, general auditor of the Standard Oil company, who testified yesterday in the government's suit against the oil company.

In 1900 the Waters-Pierce Oil company was prohibited from doing business in Texas under the anti-trust law because of its relations with the Standard. The Waters-Pierce company was reorganized and the stock held by the Standard was sold.

Held in Standard's Interests.

Testimony had previously been adduced that Charles Pratt, secretary of the Standard, bought the stock and held it in the Standard's interests. Mr. Hampton testified yesterday that he had sent each year accountants to the Waters-Pierce Oil company to audit the books at the request of the officers of the company. Mr. Kellogg produced a letter sent by the witness to one of the officials of the Waters-Pierce company stating that an accountant was on his way and that, for reasons which he would understand, his name had better be put on the pay rolls of the Waters-Pierce company until the accounting was completed. Mr. Hampton said he had forgotten what the reasons were that he mentioned in the letter.

Lombard and Trust.

The troubles of the oil firm of Lombard & Ayres in the early '70s was an interesting feature of the day's hearing. Mr. Lombard said that he had difficulties in obtaining tank cars to ship oil and that his company felt the difficulty of competing with the Standard, which, he said, was receiving rebates from the trunk lines. He had two conferences with A. J. Cassatt of the Pennsylvania railroad, but was told that the rebates which were given the Standard did not amount to much. Mr. Cassatt, the witness said, suggested that his difficulties would doubtless cease if he united the Lombard company with the Standard.

Mr. Lombard testified that he had a conference with Col. Thomas Scott, president of the Pennsylvania, in which he was told that the Lombard company was getting all the tank cars it could obtain under the allotment. Col. Scott, according to the witness, said the Pennsylvania railroad would not haul tank cars built by the Lombard company. Col. Scott also expressed the opinion that the Lombard & Ayres company would do well to unite with the Standard.

Anthony N. Brady of Albany told yesterday how the Manhattan Oil company of Ohio was sold to a London company. Mr. Brady said he had no idea when the sale was made that the company was going into the hands of the Standard company.

PERFORMS STUNTS IN THE AIR.

Count Zeppelin Makes Most Successful Aerial Voyage Ever Made.

Constance, Grand Duchy of Baden, Sept. 26.—Count Ferdinand Zeppelin, the German aeronaut, yesterday made the most successful aerial voyage hitherto achieved in any dirigible balloon. He spent four hours and seventeen minutes in the air, completely circumnavigating the Lake of Constance and passing over five different states. The speed of the airship is estimated to have been at least thirty-eight miles an hour.

Count Zeppelin, who is sixty-nine years of age, was in command of the airship, which bears his name. He had with him two assistants and a crew of seven men to run the motors. The airship executed the most diverse evolutions with the greatest ease. It moved back and forth before the windows of the royal castle at Friedrichshafen, making the turns on a small radius, and, coming down the homeward stretch, it ascended or descended at the will of the pilot, at times almost dipping into the water and then rising to a height of 600 feet.

The balloon used yesterday is on a rigid frame, 420 feet long over all. It holds 11,000 cubic meters of gas. Count Zeppelin was most enthusiastic over the day's work.

CUTTING TRACKS; BEARS?

Veteran Hunters Busy Preparing Ground for the Roosevelt Camp.

Lake Providence, La., Sept. 26—The proposed bear hunt of President Roosevelt will be made in East Carroll parish, opposite Alsatia station, on the Iron Mountain railroad. The camp will be located about eighteen miles from Lake Providence. Several noted bear hunters of this parish have been on the ground for more than a month preparing a place for a camp, cutting tracks, etc.

CHICAGO AND ALTON GOES FREE

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT MAKES GOOD ITS PROMISE OF IMMUNITY.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—It was decided yesterday by Judge Landis, in the United States district court, that the Chicago & Alton railway shall not be further prosecuted for its connection with the Standard Oil company granting of rebates between Whiting, Ind., and East St. Louis, Ill.

It was claimed by Attorney General Bonaparte, whose letter was read to the court by District Attorney Sims, that Mr. Morrison, the predecessor of Mr. Sims in office, had promised immunity to the Alton road, provided it assisted in good faith in the prosecution of the Standard Oil company.

Take No Further Steps.

The attorney general, therefore, claimed that it was the duty of the government to see that no further steps toward the punishment of the railroad for its part in the granting of the rebates be taken. The attorney general asked that the grand jury which had been summoned at the instance of Judge Landis to investigate the Alton railroad be discharged, and that the matter be allowed to drop as far as the Chicago & Alton were concerned.

Judge Landis in a statement which required fully thirty minutes for its delivery, declined to discharge the jury, but instructed its members that they had no further duty to perform in connection with the Chicago & Alton railroad. The court then called attention to a statement issued by President Moffett of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, in which it was claimed that if the Standard Oil company was guilty of receiving rebates, no other manufacturer was innocent. The court directed the jury to investigate the conduct of other manufacturers, and directed that a subpoena be issued for President Moffett.

OPENS CASE AGAINST BORAH.

Jury to Try Idaho Senator Is Completed in United States Court.

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 26.—A jury to try United States Senator-elect W. E. Borah on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the government of public lands was completed yesterday afternoon in the United States court. The opening address to the jury on behalf of the United States was made at the afternoon session by Mr. Burch of Detroit, special representative of the attorney general of the United States. He dealt at length on the details of the charges set forth in the indictments—that of conspiracy to defraud the government out of timber lands by inducing persons to make false entries, and asserted that the prosecution was without malice, but would be carried out without fear or favor to the end, and that no guilty man should escape.

Mr. Burch declared that Former Governor Frank Steunenberg was one of the leading members of the conspiracy and had openly stated that he was interested in obtaining timber lands by causing others to enter claims for his benefit. He induced others to go in with him—one of those approached being the present governor of Idaho, Frank Gooding. Mr. Burch quickly added, because he turned his back on the scheme and declined to go into it.

MADWOMAN KILLS THREE TOTS.

Tells Police She Fears They Would Become Crazy Like Herself.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Mrs. Bertha Mund, aged thirty-seven years, early yesterday strangled her three children, Christopher, aged eight years; Helen, aged two, and Freda, aged eight months, at their home in Clinton street. Immediately after she went to the Pennsylvania railroad yards, where her husband is employed, and informed him of her action. Mrs. Mund was arrested.

Supt. Regan said she made a statement in which she said:

"I killed the children because I did not want them to grow up and be crazy like me."

The police say the woman does not realize the enormity of her crime and that she killed the children while suffering from a sudden attack of insanity.

She has been ill with nervous troubles for about six months, but never prior to yesterday morning had manifested signs of mental derangement.

TRAIN KILLS INSANE MAN.

Fugitive From Asylum Is Crushed by Locomotive.

New Richmond, Wis., Sept. 26.—Alexander Kuz, a Russian, was run down by an Omaha locomotive in the freight yards in this city last night, and instantly killed. The remains were frightfully mangled. He was an inmate of the county asylum for the chronic insane, located near this city, and Monday afternoon managed to elude his keepers.

GOTHAM CAR LINE BROKE.

New York, Sept. 26.—The New York City Railway company, one of the maze of corporations formed in connection with the operation of the surface traction lines on Manhattan, was placed in the hands of receivers yesterday on petition of creditors and the admission by the company that it is unable to pay its debts. Douglas Robinson and Adrian H. Joline were named as receivers. No statement of liabilities was made.

MORE FABULOUS PROFITS SHOWN

PIPE LINE MAKES $4,091,022 IN ONE YEAR ON INVESTMENT OF $2,228,758.

KELLOGG BARES MORE SECRETS

PROFITS IN SOME CASES TWENTY TIMES ACTUAL COST OF OPERATION.

New York, Sept. 28. — The Indiana Pipe Line company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil, made a profit of $4,091,022 in 1903 on a total investment of $2,228,758, according to the company's figures produced by George Chesebro, controller of the National Pipe Line company, who appeared as a witness yesterday in the federal suit against the oil combine. Mr. Chesebro testified that the Indiana Pipe Line company was a common carrier and engaged only in the transportation of oil. From balance sheets of the company Frank B. Kellogg, conducting the government's case, sought to show that the Indiana company was making excessive profits and that it maintained a high schedule of tariffs to prevent shipments of oil by independent oil producers.

Profits Are Enormous.

Mr. Chesebro testified that the Indiana company transported practically only the oil of the Standard company. The counsel for the government allege that it will be shown that the profits made by these pipe line companies have in some cases been twenty times the actual cost of operation.

Calvin N. Payne, who with H. C. Folger, Jr., owns the Corsicana Refining company of Texas, under examination yesterday, stated that tanks and receiving stations at the end of the pipe line of the New York Transit company, now called the National Transit Company of New Jersey, and at the terminals of the pipe lines of the National Transit company at Center Bridge, Pa., and Fond Grove, Pa., were built the year the Hepburn law went into effect.

Not Public Carriers.

Mr. Payne was stating that he supposed there was some legal reason for building these receiving stations on the state lines of New York and New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and Pennsylvania and Maryland, when John G. Milburn, chief of the defendant's counsel, interposed and said he gave the advice. Mr. Milburn, cross-examining the witness, developed the testimony that the pipe lines connecting the terminals at Unionville Center Bridge and Fond Grove with tidewater at New York and Baltimore were the private lines of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and were not public carriers. Mr. Payne said that the National and New York Transit companies were prepared to accept business over the lines and to deliver it at their receiving stations.

DELAYED BY GALE.

Commissioners Arrive in Duluth Behind Their Schedule.

Duluth, Sept. 28.—The inland waterways commission arrived here at 3 o'clock on the big steamer Thomas F Cole, flagship of the Pittsburg Steamship company, and left in the private car of President Elliott of the Northern Pacific for St. Paul on the night train.

The commissioners were a day late in arriving, owing to the northwest gale that has been blowing on Lake Superior, and they had a rough voyage. The commission was obliged to cut short its program here in order to adhere to the schedules.

HARRIMAN UNDER KNIFE.

Operation Will Keep Him From Work a Few Days.

New York, Sept. 28.—E. H. Harriman was not at his office yesterday having undergone a surgical operation Wednesday for the trouble from which he suffered last winter.

The operation is stated to be trifling in comparison with that which Mr. Harriman underwent eight months ago, but he is not expected to return to his office until next week.

IMPALED ON MEAT HOOK.

C. C. Whistler of Watertown Is Suspended by His Thigh.

Watertown, S. D., Sept. 28. — Suspended from a meat hook caught in the fleshy part of his thigh, C. C. Whistler, one of Watertown's prosperous business men, hung in the basement of his market last evening till rescued by an employe. Mr. Whistler fell down the elevator shaft from the first floor and was impaled on the hook.

Bank's Money Gone.

Helena, Mont., Sept. 28. — C. W. Thurston, cashier of the State Bank of Moore, Fergus county, has been deposed, it being alleged that he made wrongful use of the funds of the institution. He has disappeared, and not even his wife, said to be in St. Paul, is aware of his whereabouts.

Hit by Train; May Die.

Keenan, Wis., Sept. 28.—F. [illegible] Beals, with of Defiance, Ohio, was struck by a freight train here. His injuries may prove fatal.

CROPS MEET EXPECTATIONS

MORE BARLEY AND FLAX AND ABOUT SAME AMOUNT OF WHEAT AND OATS.

Winona, Minn., Sept. 28.—The final report on crop conditions along the line of the North-Western railway west of Winona has just been issued and the summary bears out the favorable reports that have been issued weekly during the past summer. This final report has been delayed until more complete returns, upon which to base conclusions, could be secured. However, with threshing now well under way it is possible to make a report.

It is believed there will be more barley and flax in Minnesota and South Dakota and about the same amount of wheat and oats. The corn crop is fully matured at the present time but because of the lateness of the spring and the unevenness of the year it is estimated that this crop this year will not be over 75 per cent of last year's corn crop of feeding quality. In Minnesota the crop is slightly better in quality.

On the whole the quality of small grain is very much better than last year. In South Dakota there has been very little rain since early harvest, and threshing has been done under the most favorable conditions. The result is the largest per cent of milling wheat in South Dakota in a number of years. The highest grade of barley also comes from that section. This also applies to Western Minnesota, while in Eastern Minnesota the quality is about the same as last year because of the frequent storms this year the same as a year ago. Taking the whole territory into consideration, the quality is much superior to a year ago.

STOCK LAW FIZZLES OUT.

Board Can Demand Information, but Cannot Refuse Certificates.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 28.—The stock and bond bill enacted into law by the last legislature, having for its purpose the restraining of corporations from watering stock, was declared ineffective to prevent the unrighteous issue of $300,000 in bonds by the Southern Wisconsin Railway company by the Wisconsin railroad rate commission yesterday. The commission declared all it can do is to demand full information from corporations which make application for certificates of permission to issue bonds, and that after all necessary information has been furnished the law is mandatory in its requirement for the commission to grant the desired permission.

NO CHANGES IN METHODISM.

Members of Minnesota Conference Vote Down Proposals.

Marshall, Minn., Sept. 28. — Proposals for radical changes in the administration of the Methodist Episcopal church received some hard knocks at yesterday's session of the Minnesota conference, race bishops and the cutting down of representation in the general conference being declared inadvisable by the vote of that body. On the other hand, a memorial was ordered prepared calling on the next general conference to take the power of appointing presiding elders from the the bishops and to make these officers elective by various conferences.

DON'T OPPOSE DIVORCE.

Sixteen Husbands Let Wives Have Their Own Way.

Waterloo, Iowa, Sept. 28. — Seventeen divorce cases, sixteen brought by women, went by default yesterday in the Blackhawk county courts for want of answer. This places the plaintiffs in position to secure the coveted documents of separation on proving up their claims, a formality of law. Divorce actions in which defendants have given notice of intention to contest the claims made in resistance of decrees and alimony being granted number twenty-five.

ARMED MADMAN AT LARGE.

Iowa Community Disturbed by His Presence.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Sept. 28.—Heavily armed and violently insane, Henry Kaiser escaped from his home in the southern part of the county last night. When his condition became known the entire community was thrown into a furore of excitement lest he attack unprotected homes. The sheriff and a posse of thirty men searched all day in the woods and cornfields, but did not find him.

IS HELD TO GRAND JURY.

Suppla Acted in Self-defense, Three Witnesses Say.

Moorhead, Minn., Sept. 28.—Antonio Supple, charged with stabbing two Italians at Dillworth, has been held to the grand jury. Three witnesses at the hearing claimed that Ferrero and Garrell, the injured men, were trying to do Suppla bodily harm and were battering in the end door of the car when Suppla fired the shots.

Roberts County Fair Opens.

Sisseton, S. D., Sept. 28.—The Roberts county fair opened here yesterday and the display of fruit, vegetables and grains is gratifying. The exhibition of live stock is not large, but good. The association has hung up $1,000 in prizes and purses.

First Snow Falls.

Roseau, Minn., Sept. 28.—Reports received here tell of the first snowfall in Warroad. Roads leading to Warroad are so bad that the daily mail now is being carried on horseback.

The long-considered milk inspection ordinance has been passed by the city council of Albert Lea, but it does not take effect until the first of the year. All cows from which milk is secured for the people of the city must be inspected for tuberculosis.

Claus Thomssen hanged himself in the cellar of his home in St. Paul. The body was found by Mrs. Thomssen, who had gone into the cellar to get some vegetables for dinner. Thomssen had not been in good health for some years, and it is thought that his mind had become affected.

A stranger giving his name as Pat Noon and his residence as Toledo, Ohio, threw himself under the wheels of an east-bound train at Lake City and was badly hurt. Despondency over his unsuccessful attempt to stop drinking is the cause of the attempted suicide.

John A. Korstaad, who lived out on the Yellow Medicine river, near Granite Falls, met with an accident that cost him his life. While starting a gasoline engine to grind feed his left arm was caught in the wheel and so badly torn that he was unable to withstand the shock and died from the effects.

John Richie, foreman of the switching crew for the Great Northern, was instantly killed in the railroad yards at Willmar in coupling cars. His foot caught, throwing him to the ground, and the switch engine passed over him, crushing the body almost beyond recognition.

John Eberhartson, a young engineer on the Milwaukee road, was crushed to death at Minneapolis when his engine crashed into a freight train. A mistake in signals is said to have been the cause of the accident.

MINNESOTA M. E. CONFERENCE CONVENES IN MARSHALL

MARSHALL M. E. CHURCH AND PASTOR.

Rev. Benjamin C. Gillis is pastor of congregation that entertains delegates to state Methodist conference.

PLUM CROP IS CORNERED.

Minnesota Output Limited to One Richfield Orchard.

One man holds the local plum market in his hand to do with it what he will. That man, who, by the way, is a Minneapolis fruit merchant, came into this advantageous position by contracting to purchase the output of the orchard owned by James Elwin at Richfield, Minn.

By a freak of nature it happens that Mr. Elwin's trees are the only ones in the whole state of Minnesota, cultivated and wild, that are bearing this year. The late spring frost, blight or one thing or another, caused a general destruction of the plum crop, with this single exception, as far as reports at the central market disclose.

Mr. Elwin has a fine orchard of 2,000 trees, loaded almost to the point of breaking, with luscious red plums. But nobody can get any of them from him, as he has sold out the entire crop to a wholesaler on Commission row, Minneapolis, and he gets the fancy price of $1.75 for every case of sixteen quarts.

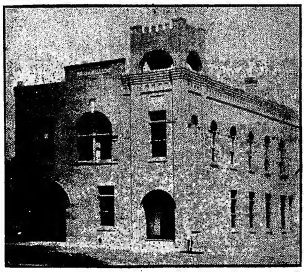
WOMAN'S BUILDING COMPLETED.

Macalester College Plans Housewarming to Open New Structure.

Macalester college is making preparations for the opening of its new $75,000 women's building which has been named Wallace Hall after Dr. James Wallace, formerly president of the college, now on leave of absence in the east. The opening is expected to be some time early in October, but may be delayed to a later time if the work on the building is not completed as soon as expected.

The plans for the opening include a house warming in the form of a general reception, to which Presbyterians and others interested in the college, will be especially invited; speechmaking by representative men of the church and the state, music, refreshments and opportunity to see the handsome new dormitory from cellar to attic. The young women of the hall will serve as guides for the visitors.

The attendance at the college is now about at the two hundred mark, and is expected, before the year closes, to reach at least 250.



LYLE (MINN.) CITY HALL.

Building that has been erected for $15,000 for municipal departments.

ST. PETER SELECTED.

Butter and Cheesemakers Will Meet There on Oct. 1.

St. Peter has been selected by the officers of the Minnesota State Butter and Cheesemakers' association as the place in which to hold the next state convention. Several cities, including St. Cloud and Owatonna, made overtures for the meeting, but James Sorenson of Maple Plain, president; G. E. Lindahl of Milaca, vice president, and E. P. Greeley of Alden, secretary, met in St. Peter recently and decided to accept the invitation presented by St. Peter.

The convention will be held on Oct. 30 and 31 and Nov. 1, and will be attended by upwards of 300 buttermakers. The officers have voted to set aside a fund of $1,200, the largest ever appropriated by the association, to be paid in premiums in the butter-scoring contest.

PETITIONER WINS CASE.

Devil Creek Ditch Will Be Constructed as Engineer Specifies.

Judgment has been filed in the clerk of court's office at Faribault in the Devil Creek ditch case. The decision is in favor of the petitioners, who appealed from the report of the county commissioners. The ditch will be constructed as specified in the report of the civil engineer. It runs through Morristown and Shieldsville townships and is long.

WILL FIX VALUES.

Commissioners Go to Grand Rapids to Settle County Dispute.

The commissioners appointed by Gov. Johnson to appraise the value of the county buildings in Itasca county in order to arrive at the basis of division of the county indebtedness between Itasca and the newly erected Koochiching county have gone to Grand Rapids to inspect the property. Under the law the new county is liable for its proportion of the debts of the county from which it was created, less the value of the county buildings and the amount in the county treasury at the time of the separation. The officials of the two counties were unable to agree on the value of the property and the governor appointed Einar Hoidale, Thomas Downs and M. C. Tifft commissioners to determine upon the value of the property.

Glass Bath Tubs.

Glass bath tubs are being made in Germany, and are said to have advantages over the metal and enamel, the principal one being that they are much cheaper. They are made in a solid piece, and one can be turned out complete in about five minutes.

How Wealth Is Divided.

The states west of the Mississippi possess a combined wealth of more than $25,000,000,000, and the states east of that river $80,000,000,000, nearly three and a half times this amount.

PUTS HIGH SCHOOL ON POPULAR BASIS

PROF. R. F. ROSS,

Superintendent of the Walker (Minn.) schools, has commenced his third year in his present office, and under his direction the schools are making splendid progress in all the various grades. The Walker schools in District No. 5 include the schools at Walker, Kabekona and Lake Alice which comprise an independent district. The work is under the direct management of Prof. Ross, who has had several years' experience in both rural and high school work and the management of the Walker schools for the last two years.

The work of the high school is especially gratifying to those who are directly interested, as the scholars on completing the course of instruction of the school there are fully equipped to enter any of the various colleges of the Northwest, including the University of Minnesota.

The school board is making arrangements to enlarge the present school building. This has become necessary owing to the fact that the population of the village of Walker is rapidly increasing and to the fact that many pupils from the surrounding villages are taking advantage of the excellent opportunity offered them by the Walker high school to prepare them for university work.

An athletic association has been organized and the basket ball teams, both girls and boys, stand ready to demonstrate their supremacy over any of the schools in the surrounding villages and towns.

MINNESOTA RANKS HIGH.

Capt. Shelton Gives Favorable Report of University Regiment.

Capt. George H. Shelton of the general staff of the regular army, who gave a two days' inspection to the cadets of the university last spring, has sent in his report to the war department, in which he gives Minnesota high rank for the efficiency of its military department. He comments especially upon the spirit shown by the cadets in their work.

For two days the university students went through all manner of maneuvers on the campus and in the drill hall of the armory. Not only the ability of the men to march and countermarch, but the manner in which they held themselves, the degree of efficiency they showed in handling their weapons and the care with which they cleaned their guns were all carefully looked into by the inspecting officer, who made a tour of all the colleges and universities receiving aid from the government because they maintain military drill.

In his report Capt. Shelton said: "There is a fine spirit among the student body at the University of Minnesota, and there is an excellent degree of pride in the military department." He also commends the officers and says that the material in the graduating class for second lieutenants in the regular army is good.

The Apt Pupil.

The philanthropical Fifth avenue lady was visiting a lower East side Sunday school. To test the aptness of a particularly indigent cluster of pupils, she took the class in hand to question them.

"Children, what is the greatest of all virtues?"

Not one answered.

"Think a little. What is it I am doing when I give up time and pleasure to come down among you for your moral good?"

A grimy fist went up.

"Well, what am I doing, little boy?"

"Buttin' in."

WATER PLANT WORK LATE.

Scarcity of Labor Hinders Progress at St. Cloud.

Owing to the impossibilities of obtaining sufficient labor and because of unforeseen delays it is announced that the St. Cloud pure water system cannot be placed in operation before the middle of October. The work is being rushed, however, and the huge 100-foot smokestack, which it will take 150,000 bricks to complete, has now passed the 80-foot mark. The stack when completed will have cost something like $1,500. The pumping station proper is nearly completed, and when this is finished the big boilers and pumps will be set, the foundations of which already have been begun. The great question now is the obtaining of labor. Brickmasons are being paid at the rate of 55 cents an hour and common laborers at the rate of $2 per day.

LIPTON WILL TRY AGAIN

IS QUITE WILLING TO ABIDE BY THT DECISION OF NEW YORK YACHT CLUB.

London, Sept. 28.—Sir Thomas Lipton was interviewed last night after he had learned the reasons why his challenge to race for the America's cup had been declined by the New York Yacht club and spoke as follows:

"I still have plenty of time to issue another challenge, but all depends upon what I am advised to do. Mr. Fife is coming especially to consult with me on the situation.

"I know the New York Yacht club feels its responsibility and I am quite willing to abide by its decision, as the club certainly understands its business better than any one else. I cannot help hoping that the existing difficulty may be overcome and that a race will occur in 1908. I will do everything in my power that is reasonable to meet the wishes of our American friends. I am willing to consider most favorably the idea of challenging with a ninety-foot boat if that will be received under the conditions existing in the New York Yacht club, and if Mr. Fife can design a boat which will give me a reasonable prospect of success, and, although such a boat might have to be constructed as a freak boat, even then I would be only too pleased to do it."

NEUHAUSEN TO PORTLAND.

St. Paul Man Who is Land Fraud Prosecutor Gets New Assignment.

Washington, Sept. 28. — Thomas B. Neuhausen of St. Paul, formerly secretary to Congressman Stevens and for several years connected with the investigation of land frauds in Oregon, has been assigned to duty with District Attorney Bristol at Portland for cases coming up for trial during the fall and winter. Neuhausen has been one of the active agents of the office in the prosecution of cases already tried, and the present appointment was made in recognition of good work in those cases.

CREMATED IN HIS HOME.

County Commissioner's Body Burned to a Crisp.

Crookston, Minn., Sept. 28.—County Commissioner John Driscoll was cremated yesterday morning when his farm residence was burned. All other members of the family escaped. He returned home late at night and the other members of the family did not know he was in the house till his charred remains were found in the ruins. Nothing is known as to the origin of the fire.

TO READ STRIKERS' PLEA.

Roosevelt Consents to Receive Documents From Telegraphers.

Washington, Sept. 28. — President Roosevelt said yesterday that he had consented to receive some documentary statements from the striking telegraph operators, and that when these are in his hands he will undoubtedly call into consultation Commissioner of Labor Neill. Further than this he said no arrangements had been made for any conference regarding the strike.

BRYAN dubs Taft "the great postponer," but William H. will probably not object if the people do not get it into their heads to postpone Taft.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT doesn't think much of the Oklahoma consitution, but he has decided to let 'em have it. Another great victory for states rights!

THE Fairmont Sentinel believes a sack of flour left on the doorstep of the needy will knock louder at heaven's gate than a wreath of flowers laid on the coffin of one beyond the reach of earthly comforts.

A CRAZY Jap when arrested near Moorhead last week was talking about Crookston. It is likely the fellow is an emissary of the 25,000 club, but failed to supply himself with the proper credentials.

CONGRESSMAN STEENERSON believes President Roosevelt ought to have a third term. Although it is not generally known we violate no confidence in saying that Halvor is also in favor of a fourth term for himself.

THE Albert Lea Standard, who doesn't forget that he was once young, observes that "woman's latest fashion waist is a small as her ankle, but the regular armful style are still more popular with the other sex."

BEER is going up. Horrible thought! Pretty soon we'll be buying beer tickets--seventeen for a dollar. Maybe when a fellow is asked to lay down a dollar all in a bunch for booze he'll dig up some of last January's good resolutions.

BRADSTREET'S has figured it out that the cost of living has increased 51 8 per cent. since 1896. If it cost you $100 a month in 1896 it now costs you $154. The outlook is not very encouraging for the man on a salary.

THIS is the time of the year when we are all poor. According to the assessment returns there isn't enough gold and silver plate in Minnesota to stock a battleship, and as for moneys and credits—why, bless you, who ever thought we had any.

IN the present state of political uncertainty and unrest the former disposition of party leaders to punish recalcitrants is not so apparent as formerly. A large and respectable element of the Republican press is even trying to coax John Lind back to his former idols.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON'S presidential boom wasn't blighted a bit by the early frosts. If the Governor has a publicity bureau it is doing good work. But Johnson doesn't need a promoting agency. The pleasing personality of his is enough in itself to win any sort of a political game.

C. G. SCHULZ, assistant superintendent of public instruction, believes that the Minnesota legislature did a wise thing when it put high school fraternities under the ban. In an interview Mr. Schulz asserts that the high school fraternities foster factions in high schools and distract the attention of students from their studies.

THE Montrose Herald enjoys the acquaintance of an editor who found it necessary to warn a careless reporter to write nothing unless he knew it to be correct. Later in the day the reporter handed in a society item as follows: "It is rumored that Mrs. Smith, who claims to reside in South Chestnut street, gave a so-called dinner party to a number of her alleged friends. Mrs. Smith asserts that they had a good time. In the progressive euchre feature, which followed the dinner, Mrs. Brown, who claims to be the wife of Postmaster Brown, was successful."

THE only way to get and hold a good business is to keep everlastingly at it. The successful merchant is always on the look-out for additional patronage, and one of the best ways to get new business is to invite people into your store by purchasing advertising space in well established papers. Call the attention of the public to some of your seasonable bargains, and if you do this through a paper that has a circulation, you will soon note the results. The GAZETTE can give good returns to all advertisers, for it has a remarkably large circulation for a local paper. Practically every one from whom the Red Lake Falls merchants get their business, take this paper.

SOCIETY women of Chicago are up in arms against the millinery association for its introduction of such ridiculous fashions in headwear and threaten a boycott—that is, they threaten to go about hatless unless the new styles are amended, says the Princeton Union. These styles, according to samples on exhibition at the Chicago convention of milliners, certainly run to extremes, the hats consisting of an inverted frying-pan shape top with two or three feet of feathers and a yard or two of gewgaws dangling over the edge. This is the first time in history, perhaps, that women have rebelled at the "latest fashions." and they should be given credit for beginning to look at these things from a commonsense viewpoint.

THE state prison binding twine plant has saved the farmers more than a quarter of a million dollars this year to say nothing about the effect of the state's competition on the product of other factories, says the Fairmont Sentinel. The men who fathered the scheme to make twine in Stillwater were populists whom it was common and popular to characterize as "cranks, agitators and socialists." Ignatius Donnelly, who went to his grave "unwept, unhonored and unsung," was chief promoter of the enterprise and to him the farmers owe a debt of gratitude which, alas, can never be paid.

PARTISAN newspapers are fond of saying that the Democrats favor independent voting only so long as Republicans vote for Democratic candidates. This proposition probably is true of any party. Political managers would not be true to their trust did they not labor for and earnestly hope for party success from president down to constable. But in Minnesota there is a formidable army of voters in all parties who give to the character of the candidates rather than to the necessity of party success. For instance in 1904 fully as many Democrats voted for Roosevelt as Republicans voted for Johnson. If Republicans are more prone to independence they are entitled to greater credit for intelligence and patriotism.

CATARRH BLOOD DISEASED

AND SYSTEM DISORDERED

Catarrh is not merely an inflammation of the tissues of the head and throat, as the symptoms of ringing noises in the ears, mucous dropping back into the throat, continual hawking and spitting, etc., would seem to indicate; it is a blood disease in which the entire circulation and the greater part of the system are involved. Catarrh is due to the presence of an excess of uric acid in the blood. The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels frequently become torpid and dull in their action and instead of carrying off the refuse and waste of the body, leave it to sour and form uric acid in the system. This is taken up by the blood and through its circulation distributed to all parts of the system. These impurities in the blood irritate and inflame the different membranes and tissues of the body, and the contracting of a cold will start the secretions and other disgusting and disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh. As the blood goes to all parts of the body the catarrhal poison affects all parts of the system. The head has a tight, full feeling, nose continually stopped up, pains above the eyes, slight fever comes and goes, the stomach is upset and the entire system disordered and affected by this disease. It is a waste of time to try to cure Catarrh with sprays, washes, inhalations, etc. Such treatment does not reach the blood, and can, therefore, do nothing more than temporarily relieve the discomfort of the trouble. To cure Catarrh permanently the blood must be thoroughly purified and the system cleansed of all poisons, and at the same time strengthened and built up. Nothing equals S. S. S. for this purpose. It attacks the disease at its head, goes down to the very bottom of the trouble and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. removes every particle of the catarrhal poison from the blood, making this vital stream pure, fresh and healthy. Then the inflamed membranes begin to heal, the head is loosened and cleared, the hawking and spitting cease, every symptom disappears, the constitution is built up and vigorous health restored. S. S. S. also tones up the stomach and digestion and acts as a fine tonic to the entire system. If you are suffering with Catarrh begin the use of S. S. S. and write us a statement of your case and our physicians will send you literature about Catarrh, and give you special medical advice without charge. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, but no good resulted. I then began S. S. S., and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a short while was cured. This was six years ago, and I am as well today as any man. I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know there is nothing on earth better for the blood than S. S. S. Nobody thinks more of S. S. S. than I do. M. MATSON, Lapeer, Mich.

Reformatory Sentence.

Harvey Lachance, who last week was arrested and plead guilty to being implicated in a stealing scrape at Thief River Falls, was taken before Judge Grindeland at Warren last Friday and given a reformatory sentence at St. Cloud, Sheriff Nelson and Nightwatchman Lizee taking him there Monday. No time sentence was given him, and it is thought that with good behavior he will be liberated within a short time. Levee, his partner in the deal, was released on bail Sunday morning and went back to Thief River Falls Monday. He will be tried at the fall term of court in this city.

Notice to the Public.

I have started up the Healy flour mill and am now prepared to furnish the famous "Gold Seal" fancy patent flour, and feed of all kinds on the shortest notice. Orders phoned to No. 87 will be given prompt attention. Farmers who desire to exchange wheat for flour will find it to their advantage to call on me. Will also always pay the highest cash price for wheat. Am prepared to do feed grinding every hour in the day. Give me a call.

Yours sincerely,

Met Death in Flames.

John Driscoll, one of the county commissioners of Polk county, was burned to death at his home near East Grand Forks on Thursday morning. His residence and contents valued at about $7,000 were entirely destroyed.

Mr. Driscoll had gone to town on Wednesday evening for the purpose of hiring some men. He returned some time after midnight and having put his team in the barn entered the house by a shed in the rear. It is supposed that he upset a can of gasoline which was standing in the shed and then struck a match to see what had happened. Mrs. Driscoll and five children were sleeping upstairs and were awakened by the smoke in time to escape in their night clothes. No member of the family knew that Mr. Driscoll was home until the charred remains were found in the ashes of the shed. The body was found lying face downward and his watch had stopped at 5 minutes of 2 o'clock. The funeral was held Saturday and was attended by the county officers of Polk county in a body.

Out of Sight.

"Out of sight, out of mind." is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 25c.

Cleaning Supremacy.

New and greatly improved methods are now employed in the art of cleaning and dyeing with the consequent result that articles of delicate texture, elaborate party gowns, fine laces, rich draperies, fine house furnishings, etc., etc., are now successfully cleaned or dyed and made to look almost like new without the slightest possibility of injury.

We have kept pace with the times in this respect and through a close study of our business and the constant application of new and improved methods have perfected a cleaning plant and gathered an organization of cleaning experts unequalled anywhere.

Having a thorough knowledge of the cleaning business, a consciousness of our ability to please the most exacting, and with facilities far more complete and perfect than has any competitor, we are better able to execute orders for cleaning and dyeing than any other concern in this line.

Think for a moment of the many discarded articles in your home which may be made serviceable through our efforts. Remember that the expense for cleaning and dyeing is moderate. We respectfully solicit your patronage with a guarantee of perfect satisfaction.

Heretofore the rate has been 5 cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof; the new rate will be 5 cents for the first ounce or fraction thereof, and 3 cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof. For instance, under the old rate a letter weighing two ounces, addressed to a foreign country, would cost the sender 20 cents in postage while under the new rate it costs only 8 cents.

Crookston Times: Judge Watts returned Friday from a nine days trip through western Canada. He went as far west as Edmomtoa, and stopped off at Dauphin, Man., and Regina, Sask. It was the Judge's first trip through that country, and he found it most enjoyable. The crops in Manitoba are turning out very well, as they escaped damage by frost almost entirely. Crops in Saskatchewan end farther west did not fare so well end much of the standing grain was badly nipped. A week ago half the grain in the western provinces was still uncut.

Does Your Heart Beat

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills.

Some of the best educators in the state will deliver addresses and the meeting will put new life and vigor into the school life of Minnesota.

P. K. Matus, of New York city, leader of the famous Hungarian Court Orchestra, spent last week here visiting with J. L. Tracy. Mr. Matus had been teaching a band at Portage la Prairie, Canada, for the past several months, and having at one time had some correspondence with Mr. Tracy regarding the leadership of the band here, he stopped off for a look at the town and a brief visit. He is one of the greatest musicians in the east, and on his return to New York will at once re-organize his famous orchestra for a concert trip of several months throughout the western states.

Phil Lizee, the crack Argyle pitcher who has played with the North Valley League during the past summer, and who is a native son of Argyle, passed thaough Crookston last week enroute home from Green Bay Wisconsin, where he has been playing since the close of the North Valley league. The Wisconsin league has finished the season, Freeport taking the pennant. Lizee has a remarkable record this summer. He has pitched 100 games this year and has not been taken out of one. Lezie has signed to play the next year with the Burlington team of the Iowa state league.

Louis Roy, one of the prominent rural school teechers of the county, died at his home in Rocksbury township Sunday, after an illness of but a few days with an attack of typhoid fever. He had been teaching near Wylie, and last week when he became too sick to continue his work he went to his home in Rocksbury. Medical aid was enlisted but to no avail, death occuring Sunday afternoon. Mr. Roy was a leader in the county school workers and had a host of warm friends who are greatly grieved at his sudden demise. The funeral was held from the family home in Rocksbury yesterday and was attended by a large number of sorrowing friends.

At St. Joseph's church in this city next Monday will occur the marriage of Miss Alma Leitzke, of Tigerton, Wisconsin, to John Verboncour, a young man well known here, but who now resides at Crookston. The Rev. Father Fayolle will perform the wedding ceremony and afterwards the bridal party will be banquetted at the home of Ed. Bray, a brother-in-law of the groom, leaving for Crookston in the evening. Johnny was raised in Red Lake Falls, and is known as a first-class young man. He is at the present time employed by the Great Northern as brakeman on the Greenbush passenger, with headquarters at Crookston. His bride-to-be is a strenger to most of the people here, but is highly spoken of by those who know her, and the people of Red Lake Falls are extending congratulations in advance.

Woman's Services to the Church

By the Rev. Anna H. Shaw

Hebrews Had Famous Prophetesses and Women Teachers—Woman's Activity in Early Apostolic Church—How Women Became Proscribed as Church Offices Became More Desirable—Salvation Army Shows What Women Can Accomplish—Many Denominations Ordain Women Grudgingly Today—No Sex Should Be Deified in Religion of Jesus.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

(The Rev. Anna Shaw, M. D., has the twofold distinction of being a regularly ordained minister of the gospel and a physician. The latter title was gained by study so that the gifted woman might widen her scope of usefulness in her charitable work among the poor. She was born in England, but her parents removed to this country when she was four years of age. Her first studies were carried on by reading the newspapers pasted on the walls of the log cabin in which she lived in a wild part of Michigan. At 15 years of age she became a teacher. In 1875 she was graduated from the theological department of Boston university. Her first pastorate was in a Methodist church at Hingham, Mass. She afterward filled other pulpits. For some years she has devoted her time to lecturing and preaching rather than to parish work.)

If the civilization of an age is measured by the degree of freedom accorded to women this age is making vast progress toward that much-desired goal of human development. The nineteenth was pre-eminently woman's century. In it more changes were wrought for the amelioration of her condition than in the 10 preceding centuries. Great as have been these changes there still remains much to be accomplished before women will be free to develop themselves or to exercise their highest powers along any line of human endeavor. This is particularly true of their position in the ministry.

A correct appreciation of the relation of women to the service of religion is exceedingly difficult. There has accumulated about the subject a vast amount of futile discussion, much of which is irrelevant, which has hidden its real and vital significance. The only hope of a clear understanding of the subject is to divorce our thought from the narrow view of our own time and study it from the vantage ground of the great religious movements of the past. And while this will not give a definite answer to our problem for to-day it will give us a clearer vision and a more rational basis for our hope of to-morrow.

There can be no question that in the development of ecclesiastical history and in the propagation of religious systems women have constituted one of the most effective agencies. In all ancient religions, as priestess, prophetess and sibyl, women participated in the worship and service of the temple. And as the government of all pagan countries was chiefly theocratic, women, after they ceased to meet in councils with men, enjoyed great dignity by virtue of their office as deliverers of the inspired oracles.

From the earliest history of the Hebrews women were teachers, prophetesses and servants of the church. The recorded ministry of Miriam, the prophetess and joint leader with her brother of the hosts of Israel; of Deborah, who became the theocratic ruler and judge of her nation; of the little Hebrew maid whose evangelistic fervor led Naaman to bow before the true God; of Anna, the prophetess who "departed not from the temple," with scores of other illustrious names, will remain forever famous in the history of the Hebrew nation.

If we turn to the story of the Founder of Christianity we learn that the three sublime events of His life, which form the basis of all orthodox creeds, were first revealed to women and announced by them to the world—the annunciation by the angel to Mary, the declaration of His Messianic mission by Jesus to the Samaritan woman, through whose ministry many believed and followed Him, and the manifestation of Himself to Mary Magdalene after His resurrection and her commission from the highest authority to preach a risen Lord.

His example paved the way for women's activity in the apostolic church. Here they stand out pre-eminently as teachers, preachers, evangelists and missionaries. The range of their activities covers the whole field of religious enterprise. Lydia, the merchant, whose zeal led to the conversion of all her trade people; Phoebe, a deacon of the church of Cenchrea, and its financial and missionary agent (Ignatius of Antioch tells us that these deacons were not ministers of meats and drinks, but ministers of the church of God); Priscilla, a lady of distinguished learning, who became the theological instructor of one of the most eloquent of the apostles; Philip's four daughters, who with their father were itinerant evangelists, and a vast number of other devout women, stand as a perpetual refutation to those who seek by scriptural authority to limit the field of woman's ministry in the modern church.

From preapostolic times to the present there has never been a period of great religious awakening when women and men have not stood together in the forefront of the struggle. Ecclesiastical history will forever associate the names of Helen and Constantine, Monica and Augustine, Eusebia with the Gregory of Nissa, Marcella with Athanasius and Paula with Jerome.

That many women were not only accorded positions of trust and honor but were ordained and set apart for the work of the ministry is shown by the writings of both sacred and profane historians. When, in the second century, Pliny the younger was sent by the Emperor Trajan to investigate the doings of the Christians he reported officially that he found women in the ministry of the church. From the apostolic constitution has come to us the following formula for the ordination of apostolic women: "Eternal God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Creator of men and women, Thou who didst fill with Thy spirit Miriam, Deborah, Hannah, and Hilda, look down Thou also upon this Thy handmaid and bestow on her the Holy Ghost, that she may worthily perform the work committed to her to Thy honor and the glory of Christ."

The simplicity of the democratic ideal of the unity of the human race, with its equality of honor, rights, duties and privileges, taught by Jesus, was not understood by even His immediate disciples. What wonder, then, that when these simple lessons were carried out by men of lesser spiritual insight and narrower sympathies the ethical teachings, with their deep spiritual significance, were gradually lost in dogma; that arrogance began to manifest itself in claims of superior wisdom and authority, and the simple service of loving ministry, which revealed itself in "honor preferring one another," was supplanted by a burdensome ceremonial and sybaritic and powerful hierarchy?

It is a well-established fact that in times of great religious awakening and persecution, where there are no honors of office or pecuniary compensation for service, women are accorded greater power and recognition than in periods of the church's prosperity. Therefore, when the hierarchy was established, when the position of minister became a prize to be contended for and not a burden to be borne, when the office of deacon, presbyter or bishop was a sinecure eagerly sought by men who employed every possible device or intrigue to reduce the number of classes eligible to these positions, women were naturally the first to be proscribed.

This reaction against women was begun in the third century by Tertullian. Influenced by his mighty ambition upon his conversion to the new religion, he immediately began to reconstruct the simple life of Christianity. Imbued by the pagan contempt for women, he waged unrelenting war against them, declaring "Woman! thou oughtest always to walk in mourning and rags, thine eyes filled with tears of repentance to make men forget that thou hast been the destruction of the race. Woman! thou art the gate of hell."

Many of his disciples were in accord with these sentiments and followed his example with unflagging zeal. They diligently preached of the beauty of self-effacement, of the loveliness of self-sacrifice and modesty, of the admirable qualities of womanly obedience and subjection, emphasizing the immodesty of her preaching and teaching.

While the church denounced woman as the source of all evil, in instituting the worship of the Virgin it deified her. It was not the woman with her human desires, hopes and aspirations that it exalted, but the saint, secluded from life's interests, struggles and temptations.

It was but natural that during the reactionary period of the church life, while the attitude of its foremost teachers and writers was that of arrogant contempt for women in all of their human capacities, they should gradually lose the position which they enjoyed in the early Christian church. For a thousand years they labored with unceasing devotion for the triumph of the faith, the difference being that with Jesus and the early church fathers they labored with honorable equality with men, and after the triumph of Tertullianism they served in obscure positions, neither receiving nor demanding recognition, and under the domination of men.

The worst result of any form of slavery is to produce in the enslaved a love of servitude and to create a spirit of protest against release from this bondage. Hence the persistent repetition from century to century in a grossly ignorant and superstitious age that woman is a sex of superior wickedness and mental inferiority, responsible not alone for her own sins but also for those of men, could have but one result. It created within women themselves a passion for self-depreciation, humility and self-hatred, and it also implanted in the minds of man a superstitious horror of the natural powers of women, the effect of which is not yet wholly eradicated from the mind of either sex.

Notwithstanding all that the forces of ignorance, superstition and ecclesiastical selfishness have accomplished in opposing the development of women and in preventing their highest usefulness in the church, the pages of history, even though written by prejudiced men, are resplendent with their remarkable achievements in religious propaganda. The mother of Wesley, who was the real founder of the methodist faith, influenced her son to recognize lay preachers and thus laid the basis for the great spiritual success of methodism. The Countess of Huntingdon was the founder of Calvinistic methodism. Mme. Guyon numbered among her converts Fenelon and several distinguished leaders of the court of Louise. Barbara Heck, the heroic Irishwoman who was the founder of American methodism. Elizabeth Fry in the prisons persuaded hundreds to turn from lives of crime to virtue and industry. Mrs. Bartlett in six years of her personal efforts added 600 members to Mr. Spurgeon's church. In later times the salvation army largely owes its existence and marvelous power to the energy, zeal and devotion of Mrs. Booth. In our own country scores of devout women, as ministers, evangelists and missionaries, have rendered invaluable service to the church and humanity.

Historically considered, the ministry seems to be a work for which women by nature are pre-eminently fitted. Here are women in all ages of the church found in almost every class and in every condition of life, who, while engaged in the ministry, have left records of which the church may well be proud.

The beginning of the twentieth century sees women recognized officially in nearly every Christian denomination. In many of them women are ordained, though in some cases rather grudgingly. In the more liberal denominations—notably among the unitarians, universalists and united brethren—they have been recognized in the ministerial office from the beginning, resulting in a stronger corps of women ministers among these than in any other denomination.

The prejudice of the past and the conservatism of the present prevent them from extending to women the same open, generous welcome which they extended to men. This reacts upon the women themselves, and those instincts toward self-annulment, which are the result of centuries of restraint and false ideas in women's education, make them ever conscious of antagonism, even though unexpressed and unacknowledged. This restrains the freedom of their thought and action, necessarily crippling their powers and preventing them from giving the best service of which they are capable. Until women are received into all positions of the church with the same cordial welcome that is accorded men, are granted the same rights in the ministerial office and are as heartily urged and assisted to enter it, there can be no fair estimate of the value of their service.

The Society of Friends and after them the salvation army and American volunteers present the best fields for estimating the value of the service of women in the Christian ministry. Their immense influence lies unquestionably in the fact that from the inception of these organizations women were received on equal terms with men. It is generally conceded that women make quite as efficient officers and in many instances more desirable soldiers than men. Their ability to govern and lead their forces is freely recognized. In the realm of the spiritual the governing forces are not brute strength, but love and justice.

The need of women in the service of humanity was never so great as it is to-day and they will not hesitate to enter it by the established and officially recognized channels of the church if they may, but by new and untried ones if they must.

There are scores of organized bodies of women doing the real work of the church, who, because they were restrained from performing service within, have been compelled to organize outside of the church.

The ministry of woman in the future development of religion is an established fact. The value of her ministry will be gauged not so much by its official recognition as by the motive and manner of her service to humanity.

Let her go back to the simplicity of Jesus' teaching; let her set up no sex which must be deified, no dogma which must be believed. Let her teach no ecclesiastical system which must be rigid and thus from its very nature retrograde. Let her go forth in the service of humanity and not to perpetuate a ponderous institution. Let her teach that the kingdom of heaven is set up here and now in the hearts of men. Let her show by example that service is the sum of human excellence. Let her declare that love is the fulfillment of the perfect law, that it alone is the dynamic force in human lives which is to redeem the world from its greed, its injustice and its barbarism. Let love be the keynote of all her thinking and acting, for out of it alone can come the great social, moral and religious harmony, which shall usher in "the new heaven and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

WOMAN'S SPHERE

NEW IN EMBROIDERY

AN EFFECTIVE AND SIMPLE COMBINATION.

Flower Design on Front of Blouse Has Caught the Fancy of Those Who Seek Originality.

Weary of embroidered blouses in French work, in eyelet and in shadow work, the girl who can have what she wants looks listlessly around for an inspiration which will tell her what she does want, says a writer in the New York Herald. The shops are full of these oft told tales of embroidery, and no new idea comes to her. It seems to be lurking on the horizon, or just over it, where she cannot see it. It must be something novel, something most effective and rich.

And then she sees it! A friend has seen something which gave her the idea and has adopted it to her own use. And, joy of joys! It is a kind of work which may be done on the beach, on the veranda, while waiting for the mail, by electric light, and, indeed, in any moment that is free from other joys and duties.

It is strikingly effective and yet so simple in construction as to be almost childish. And this is what it is: Any effective flower design is stamped on the front of a blouse—a sheer lawn or handkerchief linen one—and over this is basted a piece of heavy Brussels net. The edges are cut away at the outline of the whole design. If there is no outline at the edge of the design carry lines of stems or leaves around to meet, so that when embroidered the edge of the net shall be covered and securely anchored there by the stitches. Next stuff or pad the flower and leaf forms thickly with embroidery cotton or darning cotton and work solidly over them with a rather coarse mercerized thread. The work stands up beautifully and gives a very rich effect. When the embroidery is finished the lawn is cut away at the back, leaving the embroidered design as if worked directly on the net.

Such flower forms as honeysuckle, chrysanthemums, daisies, slim tiger lilies—in fact, any flower with a long narrow petal—are best. The embroidery stitch is carried across the petal the narrowest way. It is best to avoid too long stitches, as they are liable to catch and pull. For this reason, when working leaves it is a good plan to stuff the two sides from the center vein separately, and to embroider these two parts with a distinct line of division down the center. This makes more variety in the work and the short stitches wear best. The stuffing stitches lies in the opposite direction to the embroidery ones always.

The same idea may be carried out on the collar and cuffs. There may be also a little embroidery on the top of each sleeve. A complete yoke of this net embroidery is very affective, and the work goes very quickly. Even an impatient girl who loves to be "on the go," playing tennis, boating or swimming, may on rainy days accomplish this and be elated at the possession of a blouse quite different from those worn by her friends.

A simple method of using the net is to stamp a design suitable for cut work and buttonhole the edges of the design.

IN MATTERS OF HEADGEAR.

Downward or Upward Brim Is the Question to Decide.

Dip brims fight steadily to retain their hold upon feminine favor, and it will be some months before the battle between the downward and upward effect will be definitely decided. One thing, however, is certain. Wide brims are bound to prevail for all headgear to be worn with elaborate gowns, and a marked feature of their trimming is the tendency to use light flowers and ribbons on dark hats and vice versa, as is the case of a black hat trimmed with rose ribbon and roses to be worn with rose crepe gown, and with a white felt hat trimmed with black plumes and velvet. Flowers will be seen on many of the hats made of heavy materials, usually matching in tint the other trimmings. The milliner's bow has of late become a wonderful and eccentric production. At times it is a myriad of short loops and ends, on other occasions it lies stiffly and flatly like a bird's wing against the crown, and, again, plaited in clusters, it forms bulky loops, accented by a handsome buckle.

Concerning Coats.

Of the making of coats there is no end.

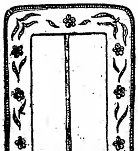
Long, short, medium, tight-fitting, with collars and without.

They are shown with long sleeves and with short, single-breasted and double-breasted.

When the season had advanced the separate coat will be seen in some one of the many remarkable imitations of fur fabrics which manufacturers and importers are preparing for women.

Broadcloth, with or without fur lining, is to enjoy another season of coat utility. Black will undoubtedly prove the most popular color for average wear, with white and pastel tints for carriage use.

PRETTY BUCKLE SLIDE.



Buckle slide of white embroidered linen. Foundation of heavy cardboard and several thicknesses of buckram.

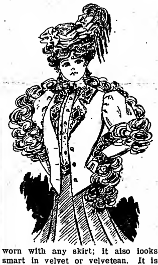
Hasty Engagements.

Nine times out of ten when a girl's parents oppose her marriage they have some excellent reason for their opposition. From their experience of life and its handicaps they know that the young man is not ready to shoulder the responsibilities of married life. Or perhaps they realize that he is not the man to make their willful little daughter happy. No girl should become formally engaged to a man until her parents have met him and passed judgment upon him.

JACKET FOR YOUNG GIRL.

Tight-Fitting Garment Smart in Velvet or Velveteen.

A little tight-fitting jacket like this may be made of the same material as the skirt, or in cloth that may be worn with any skirt; it also looks smart in velvet or velveteen. It is quite tight-fitting, fastening below the bust with buttons and buttonholes. The collars and revers are faced with silk and ornamented with silk and velvet appliques. The band that finishes the wrists of the coat sleeve matches the collar.



Turban-shaped hat of fancy straw, trimmed with ribbon and a feather mount.

Materials required for jacket: 1¾ yards 48 inches wide, 3½ yards lining silk, one-half yard silk for collar and revers.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Dresden and pompadour silk foundations are being used for chiffon and voile dresses.

Trimming ideas are numberless. Tiny ball drops, tassels and pendants of all descriptions are shown on the new models.

Somewhat heavier and rougher goods will be fashionable this fall. Scotch cheviots of fancy design will be much used in the construction of tailored gowns.

Two distinctive features may be noted about sleeves. They have much more fulness at the top, some of them even being laid in deep plaits, and they are very ornate, even to the point of fussiness.

When one does not have a skirt with a paneled front, a plain gored front is often trimmed with buttons and loops. This adornment sometimes goes to the bottom of the skirt, on both sides; at other times it extends a little below the hips.

There appears to be some controversy about the wearing of hatpins. Some say that none should be visible at all; but, on the other hand, the most exquisite designs are seen in wrought gold and colors to harmonize with hat or gown.

Hat Trimmings.

Hats for sombre-colored tailor-made costumes are an important consideration. Preferably they carry bird plumage in the form of wings and breasts rather than ostrich feathers, which belong rightly to the mauve, white and tan cloth costumes.

A MISSOURI WOMAN

Tells a Story of Awful Suffering and Wonderful Relief.

Mrs. J. D. Johnson, of 603 West Hickman St., Columbia, Mo., says: "Following an operation two years ago, dropsy set in, and my left side was so swollen the doctor said he would have to tap out the water. There was constant pain and a gurgling sensation around my heart, and I could not raise my arm above my head. The kidney action was disordered and passages of the secretions too frequent. On the advice of my husband I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using two boxes my trouble has not reappeared. This is wonderful, after suffering two years."

No man is worth much to society until he learns to make the most of himself.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CARE OF THE LAWN.

Mow It Often Water It Well, Use a Good Commercial Fertilizer.

The oftener grass is mowed the better it will withstand dry weather. If it becomes necessary to apply water during July or August, do it thoroughly. A litttle wetting with the good for nothing lawn sprinkler is worse than none.

Enough water should be applied, says the Village, so that the ground below the sod becomes thoroughly soaked, thus attracting the roots downward. Do not use the lawn mower when the grass is wet.

Try using a commercial fertilizer on the lawn at intervals during the summer. The result will surprise you. All fertilizer manufacturers make a lawn fertilizer that is much more efficacious than stable manure, more cleanly and sanitary.

If old, well rotted manure could be applied very thick and allowed to remain, some good might be accomplished, but the usual custom is to spread a thin coat, leave it a few weeks and then rake it off. It might about as well not be used at all.

The commercial fertilizer is much better in every way. By its use an old, worn out lawn may be rejuvenated. Any fertilizer dealer who knows his business is able to give full information about its cost and use.

If you have a thin, weedy spot in your lawn scratch it and sow grass seed very thick. If at first you don't succeed in getting turf try again. Thick grass will drive out the weeds in time.

PUTS THE "GINGER" IN.

The Kind of Food Used by Athletes.

A former college athlete, one of the long distance runners, began to lose his power of endurance. His experience with a change in food is interesting.

"While I was in training on the track athletic team, my daily 'jogs' became a task, until after I was put on Grape-Nuts food for two meals a day. After using the Food for two weeks I felt like a new man. My digestion was perfect, nerves steady and I was full of energy.

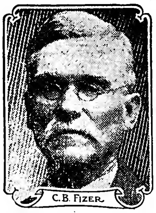
"I trained for the mile and the half mile runs (those events which require so much endurance) and then the long daily 'jogs,' which before had been such a task, were clipped off with ease. I won both events.

"The Grape-Nuts food put me in perfect condition and gave me my 'ginger.' Not only was my physical condition made perfect, and my weight increased, but my mind was made clear and vigorous so that I could get out my studies in about half the time formerly required. Now most all of the University men use Grape-Nuts for they have learned its value, but I think my testimony will not be amiss and may perhaps help some one to learn how the best results can be obtained."

There's a reason for the effect of Grape-Nuts food on the human body and brain. The certain elements in wheat and barley are selected with special reference to their power for rebuilding the brain and nerve centres. The product is then carefully and scientifically prepared so as to make it easy of digestion. The physical and mental results are so apparent after two or three week's use as to produce a profound impression. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Suffered Two Years—Relieved In Three Months.



C.B. FIZER.

MR. C. B. FIZER, Mt. Sterling, Ky., writes:

"I have suffered with kidney and other trouble for ten years past.

"Last March I commenced using Peruna and continued for three months. I have not used it since, nor have I felt a pain.

"I believe that I am well and I therefore give my highest commendation to the curative qualities of Peruna."

Peruna For Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Geo. H. Slnser, Grant, Ontario, Can., writes:

"I had not been well for about four years. I had kidney trouble, and, in fact, felt badly nearly all the time.

"This summer I got so very bad I thought I would try Peruna, so I wrote to you and began at once to take Peruna and Manalin.

"I took only two bottles of Peruna and one of Manalin, and now I feel better than I have for some time.

"I feel that Peruna and Manalin cured me and made a different woman of me altogether. I bless the day I picked up the little book and read of your Peruna."

It is the business of the kidneys to remove from the blood all poisonous materials. They must be active all the time, else the system suffers. There are times when they need a little assistance.

Peruna is exactly the sort of a remedy. It has saved many people from disaster by rendering the kidneys service at a time when they were not able to bear their own burdens.

FIFTEEN YEARS OF ECZEMA.

Terrible Itching Prevented Sleep—Hands, Arms and Legs Affected—Cuticura Cured in 6 Days.

"I had eczema nearly fifteen years. The affected parts were my hands, arms and legs. They were the worst in the winter time, and were always itchy, and I could not keep from scratching them. I had to keep both hands bandaged all the time, and at night I would have to scratch through the bandages as the itching was so severe, and at times I would have to tear everything off my hands to scratch the skin. I could not rest or sleep. I had several physicians treat me but they could not give me a permanent cure nor even could they stop the itching. After using the Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura Ointment and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent for about six days the itching had ceased, and now the sores have disappeared, and I never felt better in my life than I do now. INSPECTION OF DAIRIES

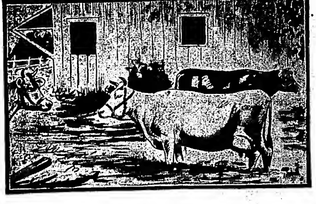
BY ED. H. WEBSTER, M.S. CHIEF DAIRY DIVISION U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.



A systematic sanitary inspection of dairy farms and milk distributing depots cannot be too strongly recommended. Recent investigations in various parts of the country have conclusively shown that the conditions on many of the farms and at many milk depots are anything but ideal; they are, in fact, about as bad as it is possible to conceive. Stables are poorly lighted, many having no windows whatever, and ventilation is not provided for. Little attention is paid to floors, ceilings, walls or stable yards. Swine, horses and poultry are often found in the same barn with the cows. Manure is not removed, or, when removed, is thrown through an opening in the wall or just outside the door, frequently near the milk room. The necessary appliances for sterilizing and cooling in the milk room are often lacking, making it impossible to properly wash and sterilize pails, cans, bottles, and other appliances, or to properly cool and hold at a low temperature the milk before delivery.

Milk dealers as a rule have more regard for sanitation and have better appliances than are to be found on the average farm, but some common practices are deplorable. Very few dealers have appliances for sterilizing bottles. Drivers not infrequently bottle milk on the wagon, using bottles that have come from some household and have not been sterilized. Wagons and appliances are not kept in as sanitary condition as should be required. A number of dealers do not separate business from home operations. Help of unknown origin and doubtful habits is employed and is a constant menace to purity of milk. Up to April 5 of the present year a careful examination had been made, under the supervision of the department of agriculture, of 727 dairies supplying milk to the District of Columbia. This examination took into account only the sanitary condition of the farms and did not include the health of the animals nor an examination of the water supply, except as these points would be revealed by observation on the premises at the time of the inspection. The average rating of these 727 dairies, on the basis of 100 as perfect, was 45.1 per cent. Thirty-three were above 75 per cent., 278 between 50 and 75 per cent., and 407 scored less than 50 per cent. The tuberculin test had been applied to but four of the herds, though many proprietors stated that the test would be applied in the near future. With tested herds and a pure water supply assured, this showing would be deplorable, but under existing conditions of probable water contaminations and but four out of 727 herds tuberculin tested, what shall be said?

A similar study has been made of conditions in the city, and the situation there is not nearly so bad as in the country. Seventy-three depots were examined, of which 45 were rated above 75 per cent. and 27 between 57.5 and 75 per cent.

The situation in Washington is not different from that confronting the health departments of most of the cities of any size throughout the country. The public is gradually awakening to the fact that these conditions must be changed.

The following are suggested as ideal conditions, which might be used as a basis for rules and regulations:

The Cows.

1. Have the herd examined frequently by a skilled veterinarian. Promptly remove any animals suspected of being in bad health. Never add an animal to the herd until certain it is free from disease, especially tuberculosis.

2. Never allow a cow to be excited by hard driving, abuse, loud talking, or unnecessary disturbance; do not unduly expose her to cold or storms.

3. Clean the entire body of the cow daily. Hair in the region of the udder should be kept short. Wipe the udder and surrounding parts with a clean, damp cloth before milking.

4. Do not allow any strong-flavored feed, such as garlic, cabbage or turnips, to be eaten except immediately after milking.

5. Salt should always be accessible.

6. Radical changes in feed should be made gradually.

7. Have fresh, pure water in abundance, easy of access, and not too cold.

The Stables.

8. Dairy cattle should be kept in a stable where no other animals are housed, preferably, without cellar or storage loft. Stable should be light (four square feet of glass per cow) and dry, with 500 cubic feet of air to each animal. It should have air inlets and outlets, so arranged as to give good ventilation without drafts of air on cows. The presence of flies may be reduced by darkening the stable and removing the manure as directed below:

9. Floor walls and ceilings of the stable should be tight, walls and ceilings being kept free of cobwebs and whitewashed twice a year. There should be as few dust-catching ledges and projections as possible.

10. Allow no musty or dirty litter or strong-smelling material in the stable. Store manure under cover at least 40 feet from the stable in a dark place. Use land plaster daily in gutter and on floor.

Milk House.

11. Cans should not remain in the stable while being filled. Remove the milk of each cow at once from the stable to a clean room; strain immediately through cotton flannel or absorbent cotton; cool to 50 degrees Fahrenheit, or lower. All milk houses should be screened.

12. Milk utensils should be made of metal, with all joints smoothly soldered, or, when possible, should be made of stamped metal. Never allow utensils to become rusty or rough inside. Use milk utensils for nothing but handling, storing or delivering milk.

13. To clean dairy utensils use pure water only. First rinse the utensils in warm water; then wash inside and out in hot water in which a cleansing material has been dissolved; rinse again; sterilize with boiling water or steam; then keep inverted in pure air that may have ready access, and sun if possible, until ready for use.

Milking and Handling of Milk.

14. The milker should wash his hands immediately before milking and should milk with dry hands. He should wear a clean outer garment, which should be kept in a clean place when not in use. Tobacco should not be used while milking.

15. In milking be quiet, quick, clean and thorough. Commence milking at the same hour every morning and evening, and milk the cows in the same order.

16. If any part of the milk is bloody, stringy, or unnatural in appearance, or if by accident dirt gets into the milk pail, the whole mess should be rejected.

17. Weigh and record the milk of each cow.

18. Never mix warm milk with that which has been cooled, and do not allow milk to freeze.

19. Feed no dry dusty feed just previous to milking.

20. Persons suffering from any disease, or who have been exposed to a contagious disease, must remain away from the cows and milk.

21. It is needless to say that the shorter the time between the production of milk and its delivery, and between delivery and use, the better will be the quality of the milk.

A GOOD GATE LATCH

The tidy farmer never likes to see his farm gates swinging, as they are sure to loosen and sag the gate posts by slamming back and forth in the wind, and are apt to be run into and broken by wagons in the dark. One that will hook itself when the gate is pushed to is the best as it is more likely to be heeded by the hired help than one which he must stop and fumble with. The above cut shows an ingenious and reliable latch for this purpose. The latch is made of iron and is so arranged that it will hook and hold the gate as soon as it is closed.

CUT OUT THE WORD LUCK.

Give Expert Sportsman Credit for Rich Hauls.

Speaking of fishing, "fishermen's luck," "lucky fishermen," etc., says the Miami (Fla.) Record, what does it all mean, anyhow?

To say a man is a lucky fisherman is merely to admit his superiority as a fisherman over other fishermen. The fish are in the water; we all have the same chance to get them, yet some "lucky fishermen" always come home with their fish boxes full and the other fellow gets nothing. In the parlance of the fisherman, the word "luck" really means "knowledge."

The "lucky fisherman" you will find, knows the rock holes where the grouper lurks; he knows the channels in and about the patches and passes where the amberjacks and barracuda live; he knows how to bait his hooks for different fish as occasion may require; he knows the style of hook to use for every kind of fish; he is a judge of what style of fishing to do under certain conditions of wind and weather and, above all, he is untiring in his efforts to use all of his knowledge when he is out for fish.

Last year when Gen. Shettue broke the world's record for catching a large number of tarpon in a few hours, other fishermen said he is "so lucky."

It is surely a peculiar coincidence how "luck" still sticks to the general. He just can not shake it off; it sticks to him like paper on the wall. All this season the Buckeye, the general's natty little yacht, has always returned from her day's pleasure fishing trips with her fish box full; on days, too, when others were wondering why the fish would not strike. The general is fond of outdoor exercise, and of late has been taking a couple of hours' run up the bay and back and, incidentally, catching a tarpon or two on each trip. Just because he is "lucky" and needs the exercise, and about the easiest way for some people to get regular exercise is to catch a tarpon every day. To do this one must be "lucky."

HE DEMONSTRATED.

Baggageman Showed What Would Happen to Gripsack.

The baggage handlers on the railroads are justly called "baggage smashers." In Washington one day a distinguished French visitor to this country pointed out to one of these men a rather frail gripsack.

"Is that strong enough," he asked, "to go in the baggage car?"

"I'll see," said the man. He lifted the grip high above his head and threw it on the platform with all his might.

"That," he said, "is what she'll get in Philadelphia."

He took it up again and banged it against the side of a car four or five times.

"That is what she'll get in Chicago," he went on.

He tossed it high in the air, and on its descent jumped on it. This broke the lock open, so that the contents were scattered over the platform.

"And that's what she'll get in Sioux City," he concluded.

"You'd better take her in the Pullman with you, boss," he added, graciously, "if you're going farther than Sioux City."

Costly Walls of Panama.

When the Spaniards built the city of Panama to be the great port of their Pacific commerce they put around it walls which they expected to save them from raiders of all sorts. Although these walls were built by natives forced to work almost for nothing, they cost, says Mr. Forbes-Lindsey, not less than $11,000,000.

The king of Spain, the story goes, looked wearily and long one day out of the westerly windows of his palace. One of his ministers inquired the reason for his apparent anxiety.

"I am looking," said the king, "for those costly walls of Panama. They ought to be visible even at this distance."

The Motto's Inspirations.

The proprietor of a large business house bought a number of signs reading "Do It Now" and had them hung around the office, hoping to inspire his people with promptness and energy in their work. In his private office one day soon afterward a friend asked him how the scheme affected the staff.

"Well, not just the way I thought it would," answered the proprietor. "The cashier skipped with $15,000, the head bookkeeper eloped with the private secretary, three clerks asked for an increase in salary and the office boy ran away to become a highwayman."

The Toughest Wood.

What is believed to be the toughest wood in the world has been found recently in Southwestern Australia. Until these late tests were made the yate tree was considered of no great value, but since it has been discovered that the wood is about as strong as cast iron, some of it even equaling wrought iron in strength, the price promises to soar.

Raid on Door Knockers.

An extraordinary raid has been made upon 130 houses at Sands End, Fulham.

Not a knocker is left upon the door of any of these premises. The tenants wondered why the milkman and the postman did not knock, as usual, and then discovered that in the early hours the knockers had been ripped off.

Thirteen streets were visited by the gang responsible for the outrage, and in one road on one side every door has lost its knocker.

TUMORS CONQUERED

Overwhelming Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy, Tumor.

The growth of a tumor is so insidious that frequently its presence is wholly unsuspected until it is well advanced.

So called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly periods accompanied by unusual pain, from the abdomen through the groin and thigh.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation or displacements, secure a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, right away and begin its use.

The following letters should convince every suffering woman of its virtue, and that it actually does conquer tumors.

Mrs. May Fry, of 836 W. Colfax Ave., South Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I take great pleasure in writing to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I also took the Blood Purifier in alternate doses with the Compound. Your medicine removed a cyst tumor of four years' growth, which three of the best physicians declared I had. They had said that only an operation could help me. I am very thankful that I followed a friend's advice and took your medicine. It has made me a strong and well woman and I shall recommend it as long as I live."

Mrs. E. F. Hayes, of 26 Ruggles St., Boston, Mass., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been under different doctors' treatment for a long time without relief. They told me I had a fibroid tumor, my abdomen was swollen and I suffered with great pain. I wrote to you for advice, you replied and I followed your directions carefully and today I am a well woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system."

Mrs. Perry Byers, of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was told by my physician that I had a fibroid tumor and that I would have to be operated upon, I wrote to you for advice, which I followed carefully and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am not only cured of the tumor but other female troubles and can do all my own work after eight years of suffering."

Mrs. S. J. Barber, of Scott, N. Y. writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Sometime ago I wrote you for advice about a tumor which the doctors thought would have to be removed. Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to-day am a well woman."

Mrs. M. M. Funk, Vandergrift, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had a tumor and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed it for me after two doctors had given me up. I was sick four years before I began to take the Compound. I now recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound far and near."

Such testimony as above is convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for Tumor Growths as well as other distressing ills of women, and such symptoms as Bearing-down Sensations, Displacements, Irregularities and Backache, etc. Women should remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women. Don't forget to insist upon it when some druggist asks you to accept something else which he calls "just as good."

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham in advising. Thus she is especially well qualified to guide sick women back to health.

There's Exceptional Style in this "Yale" Suit for Young Men

IT'S another of the Ederheimer-Stein garments we've selected to demonstrate in every sale we make that this is, in fact, a superior clothing store.

¶ The Yale is the smartest Young Man's style—striking in the weave and rich colors of the fabrics—combines good taste, service, satisfaction—lends the air of true refinement—is fashionable without being fancy.

¶ The young fellow who exercises common sense and good judgment in the selection of this style, cannot be commonplace. It's a suit for college men or any others who are particular. Let us show it to you.

Superior tailoring reaches its climax in the Yale. Each garment is made separately by skillful hand needlework throughout. Trimmings and fabrics all match. Every operation of the tailor contributes to make it distinctive, individual.

THE "YALE".—Coat is long and full chested; cuffs on sleeves; open seams down back of coat and sides of trousers. Trousers full at waist. Sizes 30 to 38. Prices $18 to $35.

EASY TO MIX IT.

Prepare It At home By Shaking Ingredients Well In a Bottle.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription, as formulated by a noted authority, who claims that he has found a positive remedy to cure almost any case of headach or kidney or bladder derangement, if taken before the stage of Bright's Disease:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Sarsaparilla, three ounces Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here at home when asked regarding this prescription stated that the ingredients are all harmless and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy, or mixture would be put up if asked to do so, He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic purposes with splendid results, he could see no reason why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and headache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sicknesses and suffering, Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

Hard Times in Kansas.

The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Codell, Earl Shamburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief till I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. It took less than one bottle to completely cure me." The safest and most reliable cough and cold remedy and lung and throat healer ever discovered. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter's drug store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Men's Clothes.

It is the most popular assumption that women care more about clothing than men do. Fashion has given women a much greater latitude in the matter of dress but men are often as particular as women in this matter. Men and women of particular taste agree that golden grain belt beer is a beneficial tonic and unsurpassed as a food tonic. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Judges of Election.

At the meeting of the city council last Thursday evening the following gentlemen were named as judges for the coming city election: First ward, P. E. Pirath, D. W. Brown, John Marleau; second ward, Eusebe Normandeau, J. P. Harren, Fred Krueger; third ward, J. C. Mathews, V. M. Higinbotham, J. W. Bourdon. The voting places will be: First ward, Schmitz's hotel; second ward, city hall; third ward, Montreal hotel.

'LECTION DAY NEAR

City Officers Must Be Chosen Again on Tuesday, November 7th.

City election day comes this year on November 7—less than a month away, but so far there has been no announcement as to who was ready to get into the arena.

The various offices do not appear to be great magnets and it is the general feeling that good men will be found to take them.

No word is passed as to the candidate for mayoralty honors. Mayor Duffy has given good satisfaction in the office, but has at times expressed a desire to retire. Dr. Watson's friends are urging him to become a candidate, but as he has served long and faithfully in that capacity the genial doctor does not appear anxious for further political honors. There is no question but that the voters will see to it that a good man is chosen, as at this particular time there is need for harmony in getting the best man possible.

In the first ward it is said that J. J. Pedden will be a candidate for alderman. James Brady, the present alderman, has not given out whether or not he will be a candidate for re-election.

In the second ward there seems to be no desire to change, and it is likely that the old wheel-horse, Fred Barchers, who has served so long and faithfully, will be given the honors without opposition.

Simon Paul will probably be a candidate for re-election from the third ward. Mr. Paul is a good official and looks after the interests of his constituents in good shape.

The places of aldermen-at-large will probably be contested for by three or four candidates. H. Hennemuth and T. A. Crompe are the present incumbents, and it is not given out whether or not they will be up again.

Ovide Emard will undoubtedly be a candidate for re-election as city treasurer and there is no one offered to oppose him as yet.

The election in Red Lake Falls does not promise to develop any scrap whatsoever, as it has been the policy of our people to put good men in charge of the affairs and keep them there.

A Good Result.

Under the operation of the new Pure Food Laws, baking powders now generally bear on the labels a statement of the ingredients. This is of utmost importance because of the harmful ingredients used in many cases.

Royal Baking Powder is known to be the only baking powder made of Royal Grape Cream of Tartar, and this no doubt explains its greatly increased sale here.

Careful housekeepers are taking advantage of the protection which the Laws afford, and are examining all the reading matter on the back of the label before adopting any brand for use in the home.

When in place of the words Cream of Tartar the words "alum," "aluminum" or "phosphate of lime" appear among the ingredients, they heed the warning and avoid baking powders containing these substitutes.

Notice to the Public.

I have started up the Healy flour mill and am now prepared to furnish the famous "Gold Seal" fancy patent flour, and feed of all kinds on the shortest notice. Orders phoned to No. 87 will be given prompt attention. Farmers who desire to exchange wheat for flour will find it to their advantage to call on me. Will also always pay the highest cash price for wheat. Am prepared to do feed grinding every hour in the day. Give me a call.

Yours sincerely,
1-3 Leo. Steinert.

PASTOR IS CALLED.

Rev. Phillip A. Schwarz Will Come to Red Lake Falls.

Rev. Phillip A. Schwarz, of Windom, has been tendered and accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church of Red Lake Falls, and will take up his work here about November 1.

Rev. Schwarz came here last August from Windom to escape the dreaded hay fever with which he is bothered every year, and while here he conducted services at the church for several Sundays. He was very favorably impressed with Red Lake Falls and her people, as well as they with him, and he was glad to accept a call to the work here.

Rev. Schwarz is a most excellent gentleman and conscientious worker, and THE GAZETTE takes pleasure in welcoming him to our city.

Young People Wed.

At St. Joseph's church in this Monday morning at 9 o'clock, the Rev. Father Feyolle pronounced the words that united for life Miss Alma Leitzke, of Tigerton, Wis., and John Verbancour, of Crookston. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends and was beautiful and impressive. Following the wedding ceremony a wedding breakfast was spread at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bray, at which members of the family to the number of twenty-five or more were present. In the evening at the Forester's hall a reception and dance was tendered the newly-married pair, and they were showered with congratulations and good wishes. They left Tuesday evening for their home at Crookston, and their many Red Lake Falls friends will trust that they may ever be successful and happy.

More Fish For Maple Lake.

Crookston Journal: Sam Fullerton, superintendent of the state Fish Hatcheries, accompanied by Major Handy of the St. Paul Pioneer Press arrived in the city Monday morning with 16 cans of fish croppies and black bass which were taken to Mentor, 10 cans being placed in Maple Lake and 6 cans in Twin Lake. This is the second consignment of fish for Maple Lake this fall, and it means that within a short time there is going to be as good fishing in the lakes around the valley as anywhere in the state. Mr. Fullerton also brought up 12 ring-necked pheasants which were placed in a timbered section near the Twin Lakes where the feeding is excellent and the cover fine. Game Warden Munch placed them and will keep an eye on them to see that they are protected. Any one who would kill these birds should be sent to the penitentiary, as if protected they will soon become one of the important birds of this section as they are very hardy and good breeders.

Tax Paying Time.

County Treasurer Tandberg requests THE GAZETTE to call the attention of readers to the fact the payment of the last half taxes for 1906 must be made prior to Nov. 1, at which time penalty attaches for delinquency. The penalty amounts to 10 per cent.

The tax for the first half became due on June 1st and quite a number of property owners throughout the county allowed themselves to become delinquent. By paying the tax in early October the work of the treasurer and his assistants will be considerably lightened. The last week in November is always marked by a great rush in the office of the treasurer.

For Sale Quick.

Two iron beds with springs and mattresses; 1 oak dresser; 1 good refrigerator; 1 new three-hole gasoline stove, with oven; ten-foot round extension table, oak; two good rocking chairs; one mahogany corner chair and numerous other articles. For particulars call at the GAZETTE office.

WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Market Day Was Well Attended and Everybody Had a Good Time.

Wednesday was the first Market Day of the season in Red Lake Falls and while the weather was favorable for the farmers to work and the people expected to see a slim crowd, contrary to expectations there was a big turn out of farmers and the merchants and business people were well satisfied with the results.

Owing to a misunderstanding the sport part of the program was not carried out, but aside from this everything was done to show the visitors a good time. At noon the Red Lake Falls band gave a concert, which was listened to and appreciated by all the visitors.

The various contests at the stores attracted a great deal of attention, and all day the stores were thronged with people anxious to take advantage of the many bargains offered.

The following is a list of the prize winners:

The Big Store—Geo. Luxemburger, for the greatest amount of butter and eggs, fine lamp. Hamer Laurent, prize for largest amount purchased.

H. W. Anderson—Sam Miller, for the largest ear of corn, $3 in trade. Ear of corn measured 59 and a fraction cubic inches. Several other fine exhibits were left there, but Miller's was the largest.

Groshong & Blake—Mrs George Orr and Norman Gervais tied in guessing nearest to the concealed number. Both guessed 60 and the number was 59. As to how the winner will be determined later, when the prize will be awarded.

At the First State Bank, X. Sauve guessed nearest to the number of pennies in the glass can. He guessed 525 and there 530 pennies in the glass. Mr. Sauve was given the fine mantel clock.

At the Merchants State Bank W. C. L. Demann won the prize of a $5 certificate of deposit for the nearest guess as to the amount of time deposits in the bank on that day. Mr. Demann guessed $104,050, and the correct figures were $105,882.24.

Ole Brustad, of Plummer, won the prize of a pair of shoes for the biggest bill of goods bought at Garceau & Zaiser's.

G. A. Kankel's "Flyer" washing machine for the biggest potato was won by Sam Miller, his potato weighing three pounds and seven ounces. The two next largest were those brought by Mrs. Rose, three and one fourth pounds, and Matt Steele, three pounds and three ounces. There were twenty-five contestants for the prize, and the crowd thronged this store all day.

The prize at the Hunt Hardware company was contested for by several couples, but as yet the winner is not announced.

Market Day was a success in every way and the business people will get together and keep the thing moving in good shape from now on, making these days regular affairs.

Autumn Styles in

Stationery

For polite correspondence there should be no more slighting of the tone and correctness of a lady's stationery than of her clothing, or hat, or shoes.

Styles in paper vary with the year, what was in style last year seems out of place today. Everybody likes to receive a letter on new style grade.

We have correct stationery here—correct for every one and occasion and correct in price boxes or bulk; many grades.

NEWS OF WEEK SUMMARIZED

DIGEST OF THE NEWS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

Washington Notes.

Capt. John E. Pillsbury of the navy has been designated by Secretary Metcalf as a member of the general board, of which Admiral Dewey is president. He is to take the place made vacant by the assignment of Capt. J. B. Murdock to command the Rhode Island.

Gen. Frederick D. Grant has ordered all field officers in the Department of the East above the rank of captain to report in service uniform at some one of three places, on given dates, to undergo the "horsemanship test" recommended by President Roosevelt in his much-commented-upon letter of May 13 to Secretary Taft.

Personal.

James J. Javelle, manager of the Rock (Ill.) Argus, died of a complication of diseases.

Col. Charles Euker, commandant of Lee Camp soldiers' home, at Richmond, Va., is dead.

Bill Macenee, the oldest sailor in the United States navy, celebrated his 104th birthday at the United States naval home at Philadelphia.

Theodore Waldron Downs, former United States consul at Quebec and prominent in national Democratic politics, died at his home in Bridgeport, Conn.

William S. Bayly, for ten years chief clerk of the United States pension bureau, a close friend of the late President McKinley, died in Washington.

Gen. Cecil Clay, general agent of the department of justice, died suddenly in Washington. Gen. Clay was sixty-five years old and a native of Philadelphia.

T. C. Patterson, postmaster of Toronto, died of pneumonia, aged seventy-one years. For years Mr. Patterson was the editor of the Daily Mail, which he founded.

Foreign.

The Geological Society of London has just celebrated its centennial anniversary.

The estate near Tchurnigov, Russia, belonging to Princess Dolgoroukova has been pillaged and burned by armed bandits, who carried off all the valuables.

The newspapers of Lyon, France, announce that a local inventor has discovered a method of transmitting electrical energy long distances by wireless telegraphy.

The armored cruiser Edgar d'Quinet, of 16,780 tons and 30,000 indicated horsepower, giving her an estimated speed of twenty-three knots, was successfully launched at Brest.

Official figures show that France will reap bountiful harvests this year. The wheat yield will be 130,377,000 hectoliters, against 114,501,000 last year; rye will yield 20,642,000, against 17,771,000.

Over 177,000 British and Irish emigrants went to the United States and Canada during the last year, according to a London board of trade return. The total is greater than that of any year since 1887.

The strike of the dock laborers at Antwerp, which has been going on since last June, has come to an end with a sweeping victory for the Federation of Ship Owners. The men decided to return to work unconditionally.

The sultan of Turkey has ordered the exemption of the import duty on wheat. This step is in accordance with the recommendations made by a commission which has been studying the best means of supplying the capital with the necessaries of life.

The municipality of Berlin is negotiating the purchase of a huge forest in the Sprea district, east of the city, from the state forestry board. The purchase price is $10,000,000. The purpose of the acquisition is to establish a new municipal waterworks and make it the people's park.

Crimes.

Fire at Attice, N. Y., destroyed the Wesley planing mills and lumber yards and the West Avenue flour mills. Loss, $150,000.

Mose Dossett, a negro, was lynched at Pritchard Station, Ala., for an attempted assault upon Mrs. J. Breedar, a white woman, ninety years old.

Oscar Kondert, formerly cashier of the First National bank at Baton Rouge, La., is missing. United States officers are searching for him with a warrant, charging him with a defalcation of $60,000.

In a desperate fight for freedom William E. Burch of Glendale, Ohio, a federal prisoner en route to Cincinnati, in custody of Deputy Marshal Sanderson, plunged head foremost from a fast-flying train near Dayton. His neck was broken and death was instantaneous.

District Attorney Covell applied in the United States district court at Grand Rapids, Mich., for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Private Cyrus Gillett, United States army, charged at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., with manslaughter after being acquitted by a military court-martial.

Rev. Benjamin F. Craff, a deposed minister, was arrested in Michigan and taken to Peoria, Ill., to answer to a charge of working an alleged confidence game.

For stealing a kiss from pretty Irene Hess, aged sixteen, Earl Stratton of Odebolt, Iowa, narrowly escaped a mobbing. He was later sent up for thirty days for assault and battery.

C. Parish of Wabash, Ind., who was colonel of the One Hundred and Third volunteers in the Civil war and who was brevetted brigadier general f valiant services at the battle of Nashville, committed suicide at Cleveland.

Mrs. Al G. Bedford of Jersey City, N. J., attempted to kill her daughter and herself at a hotel in Findlay, Ohio. Both were unconscious when found, but it is expected they will recover. Jealousy is alleged to have been the motive.

Unable to overcome their grief over the death of their nineteen-year-old son a year ago, Mr. and Mrs. Meurics Remi, a middle-aged couple who were deeply devoted to each other, ended their lives together in their home in New York.

The jury in the case of Porter and Reed Jones, charged with the murder of Robert F. Adams, brought in a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy, at Eaton, Ga. Judge Lewis sentenced both boys to life imprisonment. The prisoners displayed no emotion. The murder was the result of a family feud.

In a race riot at Hartshorne, I. T., at a street fair one young white man named Johnson was killed instantly by a negro and a young negro from Ishomingo, an innocent bystander, was killed by a white man. The fight lasted for some time and it seemed that the whites were getting the best of it when a negro walked up to young Johnson, placed a revolver at his breast and shot him through the body.

Accidental Happenings.

Five men were injured, some of them seriously, by the explosion of a boiler of a thrashing machine near Roland, Minn.

James Gaston of Detroit, a sailor on the steamer George Stone, was lost overboard during Saturday's storm on Lake Superior.

Fire originating in the postoffice destroyed the business section of Russellville, Ill. Five stores and six residences are in ruins. Loss, $25,000.

Hotel Amersant, at Saranac Lake, N. Y., was burned to the ground, entailing a loss of $270,000. The hotel had just been closed for the season.

While a ball game was being played at Dalhart, Tex., the grand stand, crowded with 1,000 spectators, collapsed. Fifteen persons were injured.

The big coal pockets of the Erie railroad at Hornell headquarters of the Susquehanna division were destroyed by fire, causing a loss of about $100,000.

A boiler exploded in the conservatories of George M. Kellogg, florist, near Pleasant Hill, Mo., partially destroying the plant and causing a loss of $75,000.

The old Watson elevator at the harbor entrance at Buffalo was burned. The elevator was built in 1859 and had not been in use for several years. Loss, $75,000.

Charles Rowland was killed while driving a team at Leon, Iowa. He fell beneath the wagon, the box falling upon him as the wagon by some means was overturned.

The home of James Dossatt of Oakland City, Ind., was burned to the ground and Dossett's two-months-old child perished in the flames. Dossett and his wife were carried from the flames badly burned and died later.

Stanley Weslisk, one of the prisoners who escaped from the county jail at Chicago, was recaptured near his home on Cottage Grove avenue. Weslisk put up a desperate fight and it required several officers to take him into custody.

GOES OUT OF LIQUOR BUSINESS

SOUTH CAROLINA, AFTER FOURTEEN YEARS ABOLISHES SYSTEM OF STATE CONTROL.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP IS IMPRACTICABLE

NOTHING GAINED BY RADICALISM —TEMPERANCE MUST BE TAUGHT BY APPEAL TO MANHOOD.

An Associated Press dispatch from Columbia, S. C., says: "The State of South Carolina is finally out of the liquor business. On the first of last February there was in the warehouse of this city about $700,000 worth of liquors belonging to the state. When at that time the legislature determined to abolish the system a commission was appointed to close up the business and the last has just been sold. So, after fourteen years, one month and fifteen days, the 'Palmetto' brand is no more.

"This was the first experiment of government ownership in South Carolina, and the fruits have been such that it is likely to be the last for many a year. Neither municipality nor state is likely to embark upon that sea while memory of the state dispensary lives as a 'terrible warning.'

"Advocates of the system promised that the dispensary profits would eliminate state taxes. That was an unrealized dream. The thing got into politics and stayed there; and the corruption was so appalling that the strenuous personal efforts of Senator Tillman could not stem the tide of revolt."

Thus has another illogical effort to solve the liquor problem come to a logical ending.

The St. Paul Trade Journal has consistently fought on the side of temperance and moderation, not alone on the liquor question, but on the other issues of national importance with which the people are contending. Nothing was ever gained by radicalism, and this is more true of the temperance question than of any other, because so many of our people contend that absolute prohibition is an unwarrantable interference with their constitutional given personal rights. While this same issue is not nearly so finally drawn in the attacks on capital that have marked the past two years in history, still thinking men are beginning to realize that, as a people, we are drifting dangerously close to the rocks of anarchistic socialism, and the more conservative and far-seeing of our reformers are beginning, wisely, to apply the brake to the rabid onslaughts of the unthinking and radically inclined of their followers.

But to return to the temperance question, which has been brought to our minds by the action of the South Carolina legislature in wholly doing away with the state dispensary plan. In spite of the advice of advanced thinkers in the ranks of prohibition workers, who asserted at the time that "state control of the liquor question would not control," there was great and widespread rejoicing when the radical prohibition wing in South Carolina secured the enactment, fourteen years ago, of the state dispensary plan. Advocates of the idea were enthusiastic and predicted that in a short time all the states of the Union would follow in the wake of South Carolina. What were the results? In an incredibly short space of time state control of liquor got into the hands of the politicians of the state and was made a means to the end of the election of cliques, and, finally, the system became so bad that even its most enthusiastic supporters were earnestly praying for its abolition and a return to the more orderly, privately conducted saloon.

Now, then, while on this subject of prohibition, it may be well to go into the matter still further. As we previously stated, the St. Paul Trade Journal has consistently advocated temperance, but we want to warn our friends with whom we are working on this great question to beware the danger of radicalism and its reactionary effects. We cannot achieve our object with a sledgehammer, neither can we legislate away a man's determination to get a drink. More flies are caught with sugar than with vinegar. In other words if we want to see a lessening of drunkenness amongst our people we must appeal more to the man himself and less to the laws.

In this connection Henry Watterson, the famous editor of the Courier-Journal of Louisville, Ky., in an address last month at Lexington, Ky., where the state fair was being held, said, in part: "I do not care to live in a world that is too good to be genial; too ascetic to be honest; too proscriptive to be happy. I do not believe that men can be legislated into angels. The blue laws of New England—dead letters for the most part—did more to harm the people, while they lasted, than all other agencies combined. I would leave them in the cold storage, to which the execration of some and the neglect of all consigned them long ago, not embalm and import them to Kentucky, to poison the meat and drink and character of the people."

Mr. Watterson, in this same speech, declared for a reform of the liquor traffic, but warned his hearers against the rabid prohibition tactics of Beckham of Kentucky, who would bring that commonwealth under state prohibition law.

The history of our nation stands as a constant protest against the prohibition of men's rights. Out of the original twenty-three states that have from time to time adopted state prohibition it is in force now in only four states, namely, Maine, Kansas, North Dakota and Georgia. In Georgia prohibition was adopted at the last session of the legislature of that state. And it was not adopted because there was a popular demand for prohibition, but because a quick and effective method was needed to prevent the negroes of that state from securing liquor, the constitution providing that the negro should have the same rights as the white man. Our national government wisely provided for its ward, the Indian, by making it a misdemeanor to sell intoxicating liquor to him, but the negro, fully as irresponsible, was not thus safeguarded, and some of the atrocious crimes that have so greatly inflamed the South against the negro were directly traced to his unfortunate fondness for whisky. So a majority of the people of Georgia willingly threw their own rights and inclinations into the balance to save the negro from himself.

As to Maine, Kansas and North Dakota, the other states still holding fast to state prohibition, a simple glance at government statistics as set forth by the United States census bulletins of 1903, shows that the ratio of arrests per thousand of inhabitants of those states for drunkenness is greater than in states where the licensed saloon is wisely controlled by municipal government. If further proof of these facts is needed look back only to last spring and ponder upon North Dakota's unsuccessful fight against the blind piggers of that state.

Facts like these are what cause us to stop and think. We know that state prohibition does not prohibit. That back rooms, veritable dog-holes, become the haunts of young men and boys, and that the influence of these dives is a hundred times worse than that of the clean, open, licensed saloon. County local option is only a shade removed from state prohibition, because it enables one part of the county to legislate away the rights of another part.

The Trade Journal, as an advocate of temperance and the friend of those who are earnestly working in its behalf, believes that the solution of this problem is best worked out through the man himself and that the best aid to the man and to his friends in the temperance cause, is the licensed saloon, controlled by local option of the people in each community in the United States, and conducted under the just and equitable restrictions of our laws.

It is a fact that men are more and more breaking away from the habit of drinking strong, intoxicating liquors, and are drinking more of lighter, less intoxicating beverages, such as beer and wines. It is a fact that the employers of labor, of skilled and professional talent, and that the people themselves, will not tolerate drunkenness. So, in this attitude of the people and in the spread of the reign of sobriety, beginning with the man himself, we believe lies the solution that confronts the friends and advocates of temperance.—From the St. Paul Trade Journal.

Shrewd.

Two duelists were taking the early train for Fontainebleau, their place of meeting.

"A return ticket, said the first duelist to the ticket agent.

"Single for me," said the other man quietly.

"Aha," blustered the other, "you are afraid you won't come back, are you? As for me I always take a return."

"I never do," said the second man, "I always take my return half from the dead man's pocket."

Tale of a Name.

Not long ago, says a member of the bar in Mobile, Ala., a man named Richard L. Delmandinger, a native of Germany, applied to a court in the state named for permission to change his name to Richard L. Delmand.

It so happened that not long thereafter a gentleman of the name of Smith—plain John J.—made like petition to the court. After reciting a catalogue of the ills to which he was subject, owing to his unfortunately common name, Mr. Smith said in conclusion:

"And, whereas, I have noted that the honorable court has curtailed the name of Richard L. Delmandinger, and has not disposed of the 'inger,' which seems to be lying around loose, I respectfully request that the same may be added to my name."

Mr. Smith got the "inger."

In Modern Days.

"Say, Hugo, don't you get punished at home, when you're naughty?"

"Nope. Papa and mamma are both lawyers, and they can't agree on the punishment!"

The Explanation.

"That fellow," said Tete de Veau, "is always getting off the old joke about the difficulty of finding a woman's pocket."

"But you know," L'Oignon explained, smiling, "he married a rich wife."

THE STATE DAY BY DAY

News of Interest.

IN THE PATH OF THE FIRE.

Gen. Andrews Visits Scene of Hinckley Conflagration.

Gen. C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner, in a recent trip into a part of the territory devastated by the great Hinckley forest fire, in the upper St. Croix valley, found a very small part of the land covered with a new growth of pine of any consequence, while the land is growing in demand for farming purposes. In speaking of the trip Gen. Andrews said:

"Last week I visited the upper St. Croix valley of Minnesota, about seventy miles above Taylors Falls, being that part about east from Hinckley, and was impressed by the large size of the river so far up. The country was originally pine forest, which was cut many years ago, and most of the land was burned over in the dry season of 1894. It is now grown up to what might be called a brush forest, of which the greater part is poplar; but there are occasional bunches of valuable hardwood trees, including ash, that escaped the fire. I was noticing particularly the regrowth of pine, and I would say that not more than one-twentieth part of the area that I saw in a drive of about twenty-five miles in Pine county is well stocked with pine. The pine that I saw was almost wholly jack pine. The country is generally level or moderately undulating, but with depressions in the rivers and valleys. Lakes are not common, but streams are frequent and are said to contain trout. The land is generally free from rocks and appears to be considerably in demand for farming purposes.

POTATOES PAY BEST.

Farmers Find Tubers Bring Four Times as Much as Grain.

Farmers of Southern Minnesota, especially in Rock and Nobles counties, have discovered that potato culture holds great possibilities for this portion of the state. Until the last few years little attention was given to the growing of the tubers. During the last two years an increasing acreage has been devoted to their culture, and with highly satisfactory results. This year a large number of the farmers are marketing their crops at 45 cents per bushel, and as the average is about 300 bushels to the acre, the returns average about $135 per acre. The biggest returns received this year from an acre of small grain was $37.57 from an acre of barley—the average yield of a large field—which places the odds greatly in favor of the growing of potatoes. Late inventions have disposed of the laborious hand planting and hand picking, and puts the growing of this crop on the level with the other easily cultivated crops.

WORMS FOUND IN EGGS.

Could Do No Harm, Even If Eaten Alive, "U" Histologist Says.

The citizens of Bridgie, a small town south of Northome, as well as the farmers residing in that vicinity, are considerably wrought up over the fact that some of the farmers in that neighborhood have discovered worms in eggs laid by their hens.

E. C. Carlton of Bridgie secured one of the worms and sent it to the histological department of the University of Minnesota for identification. In reply to Mr. Carlton's letter Winfield S. Nickerson, assistant professor of histology and embryology to the group of trematodes or flukes—a group somewhat related to the tapeworm, but is harmless so far as any injury to the egg or to any one eating the eggs is concerned, although it is possible that it may have some harmful effect upon the health of the hen.

"There would be no reason to fear any harm, even if the worms themselves were eaten, cooked or uncooked and alive," Prof. Nickerson says.

NO CRIMINAL CASE.

Outlook for Lightest Term Albert Lea Has Had In Years.

The September term of the district court for Freeborn county opened at Albert Lea, with Judge Kingsley of Austin presiding. The calendar is one of the lightest in several years. Not a criminal case is listed, and so far as known there are only three cases for the grand jury.

Luther academy opened its fall term last week under the supervision of Rev. J. E. Thoen, with every indication of a prosperous year. The attendance is large and will more than double as soon as farm work is finished for the fall.

H. H. Dunn of Albert Lea has been employed as chief counsel in the case of The State vs. Rudolph Munson, charged with the murder of the Julian woman at Waseca a few days ago. Munson is but nineteen and has lived here all his life except a few months he spent at Waseca.

BARBECUE AND FAIR.

Following close upon the Martin county annual fair in Fairmont is the farmers' fair and barbecue, to be held at Sherburn on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 3, 4 and 5. It will be in the nature of a street fair. The farmers of the western portion of the county will have on exhibition products of their farms, gardens and stock, and the women will display household exhibits. The Sherburn citizens offer a liberal amount of money to be distributed in premiums.

TOTAL VALUE OF ORE LANDS.

State Tax Commission Reports Valuation at $191,052,500.

The state tax commission has completed the revision and correction of the list of iron ore properties in Minnesota, with the valuation placed on each. The state board of equalization has requested the commission to furnish it with all the data upon which these valuations were based. The valuation on the properties by the tax commission aggregates $191,052,500.

The members of the board of equalization are inclined to the opinion that this valuation is none too high and that an increase over these figures might be warranted. At any rate they would like to have the data before them upon which the valuations were based in order that they may be able to pass upon the valuations intelligently. They particularly desire a transcript of the evidence taken recently before the commission at the hearing attended by the representatives of the mine owners.

The first statement issued by the tax commission of the valuations placed on the mining properties showed the total to be $185,000,000. In checking the printed lists over, however, some typographical errors were discovered. The corrections have now been made and the aggregate valuation amounts to $191,052,500. The acreage of the mining properties is 30,977 and the tonnage upon which the valuations are based is 1,182,364,117. The statement gives the name and description of each property, with the acreage, valuation, tonnage, class and rate. The statement includes about 530 descriptions.

The commission has been at work on this valuation for several months and rushed the work along as fast as possible in order to have the figures ready for the board of equalization.

The figures given for each property are figured on the basis of 40 per cent of the estimated true value of the properties, as these valuations are those upon which the taxes will be calculated.

The resolution adopted by the board of equalization follows:

"Resolved, That the secretary of this board be requested to secure from the honorable state tax commission their findings in the matter of the reassessment of the iron ore properties, especially a copy of the evidence taken at the recent hearing had before the said commission, said information to be supplied, if practicable, by Wednesday next."

The resolution was introduced by Andrew French. The reason given by the members of the board for asking for this information and their desire to go into the matter quite fully is the understanding that when the tonnage tax bill was killed in the legislature last winter there was an understanding that the mines would agree to a valuation of $200,000,000 to $225,000,000. If the mine owners felt then that this valuation would be fair, the members think any valuation under these figures made at this time is probably too low. In order to pass upon this question they went to look over the data secured by the tax commission and to see the testimony taken at the hearing when the mine owners were represented.

BUTTER JUDGES TO CONTEST.

Competition Is Open to Experts of the Country.

Buttermakers of Minnesota have issued a challenge to the butter judges of the country to prove their competency. They have done so by announcing that when the fourteenth annual convention of the Minnesota State Butter and Cheese Makers' association is held in St. Peter, on Oct. 30 and 31 and Nov. 1, they will offer prizes for a butter-scoring contest which will be open to every butter judge, buttermaker or dealer in the United States. This is a new feature for buttermakers' conventions, and the contest will be the first of its kind ever held.

Members of the Minnesota society and of other state associations long have sought to devise a way to test the efficiency of the men who test butter. Butter scorers and judges never have been entirely free from suspicion, but competitive matches have been frowned upon because there was no standard by which to judge the judges. This obstacle has been overcome by pitting them against standards established by themselves.

Under the rules of the contest each participant will be required to score twenty-five tubs of butter and then rescore the same samples. A careful record will be kept of the markings, and in rescoring any deviation from the first set of grades will be counted against the participant. Where there is no dissimilarity between the two sets of scores the judge will be awarded a perfect grade of 100 points.

Butter exchanges at Chicago, New York and the other leading markets will be asked to have their inspectors enter the contest, and it is expected that the judges of the country will be eager to compete.

St. Paul Gets Convention.

St. Paul, Sept. 29.—The annual convention in 1908 of the National Association of Fire Insurance Agents has been secured for St. Paul, a telegram to this effect reaching the Commercial club yesterday from Norfolk, Va., where the 1907 convention is being held.

NO UNIFORM REPORTS.

Attorney General Holds That Plan of Commissioner Is Unlawful.

The attorney general has notified Insurance Commissioner J. A. Hartigan that the commissioner has no authority to require insurance companies doing business in this state to report a classification of their business in this state as well as in the entire country.

The proposed classification was opposed by most of the insurance companies, and at a meeting held at the capitol a few weeks ago a large number of insurance men were present and objected to the plan. They insisted that to require the companies to make their reports on the classification proposed would entail a vast amount of labor and expense upon the companies and that if the plan was adopted in one state others would soon follow and the result would be that the expense of furnishing the reports to each of the states would be so great as practically to put the companies out of business. They also objected to making public the record of their experience in each class of business, insisting that this information is of peculiar value to the companies, and they should not be asked to disclose it to their competitors.

At the hearing it was disclosed that each company has its own classification and that the number of classes vary greatly. These classifications the company would keep up and if they were required to report the business upon another classification it would entail a great deal of labor and expense.

The attorney general's opinion which was submitted by C. Louis Weeks ends the matter, but Mr. Hartigan is hopeful that the agitation and discussion will do some good and lead to a more uniform system of classifications.

EXTENSION REACHES BORDER.

M. & I. Railroad's Silver Spike Is Driven by Gemmell.

After ten months of strenuous railroad building, the Minnesota & International Saturday completed its line to the border. General Manager Gemmell and a party of railroad men were present at International Falls, and as Mr. Gemmell drove the silver spike that completed another steel band to the northern boundary of the state, there was great rejoicing on the part of the residents of the town and country, who were assembled in large numbers. Vent was given to the pent-up feelings of the people by the ringing of bells, blowing of whistles and loud hurrahs.

It is expected that by Oct. 10 both passenger and freight service will be installed by the road, and that date then will mean the starting of activities in this city that will make it one of the busiest towns in the northern part of the state. A spur at once will be laid to the falls in order that material can be delivered for the building of the American part of the dam which is designed to develop the great waterpower at this point. Passenger and freight depots will be rushed to completion, terminal and sidetracks laid.

The party of railroad officials and E. W. Backus, the promoter of the water power and townsite, were given a banquet at the village hall last night.

BOOSTERS MEET AT BEMIDJI.

Steenerson and State Officials Make Speeches.

The members of the state drainage board, Congressman Steenerson, State Senator Stephens, Immigration Commissioner Welch and a number of other men in "high pieces" delivered addresses at the mass meeting of north country people, which was held in the Beltrami county court house in Bemidji. For two weeks past the management of the second annual fair of the Beltrami County Agricultural association has been arranging for this meeting.

In the party were Frank A. Day, private secretary to Gov. Johnson, who represented the governor; State Auditor Iverson, James A. Larson, deputy secretary of state, representing Secretary Julius Schmahl; George A. Ralph, state drainage engineer; George Welch, commissioner of the new state immigration bureau; G. G. Harley of Duluth, Congressman Halvor Steenerson and Frank Ives of Cass Lake.

The visitors were taken to the fair grounds, which were lighted with torches and lanterns. After an inspection of the wonderful results from tickling the soil the party was taken to the court house, where a large crowd had assembled to hear the speeches.

PLANS TO REACH POLE BY DRIFTING OVER IN PACK-ICE.

Capt. Roald Amundsen Proposes to Gain Laurels by Only Course He Believes Possible.

The "Gjoea," pronounced in Norwegian "Yona," is the vessel in which Capt. Roald Amundsen made his expedition through the Northwest passage, starting from the Atlantic side and after going along the north coast of North America emerged through Bering strait into the Pacific. The vessel is only forty-nine tons and measures seventy-two feet in length, yet she carried sufficient provisions to last her crew of seven men through three years and four months. When Amundsen came to Herschel island and found a fleet of whaling vessels frozen in, he gave them nearly 3,000 pounds of flour and some other provisions. With these articles he could have bought from the Esquimaux every fur and skin on the north coast of Alaska, but it is characteristic of the man that he preferred to help his fellow creatures.

The Gjoea was fitted with a motor propeller and carried thousands of gallons of kerosene oil. She was not specially built for this expedition, but is an old sealing vessel of the Norwegian type, thirty-five years old. Amundsen selected her because she corresponded with his limited means and with his plan of carrying a small expedition, the main object of which was to locate the north magnetic pole. He had made up his mind to spend a couple of years taking magnetic observations. He reached a small harbor excellently suited for the purpose situated on King William land some 100 miles due south of the real pole area. The following summer was warm, and open water stretched far away toward the west, making it an easy thing to gain and accomplish the sailing of the Northwest passage which for 400 years has been the dream of the explorer; yet Roald Amundsen never yielded to the temptation. The following summer when he had gained possession of the scientific facts he had been seeking he started westward; but conditions were not so favorable and it took him a whole year to make the passage, which the year previous he could undoubtedly have achieved in six weeks. The Gjoea is now resting at the Mare Island navy yard.

Amundsen's main object of the future is to reach the geographical north pole by an expedition framed upon the plan of drifting across the pole with the pack ice. Amundsen thinks this is the only way to get there, and he will start as soon as he has raised the sufficient capital.

Since his return from the Gjoea expedition Amundsen has received more distinctions and marks of honor than has ever before been bestowed upon a scientist. King Haakon of Norway gave him the Grand Cross of the St. Olaf Order. King Frederick of Denmark the gold medal for distinguished service, with the royal crown, a distinction given to few people. From Emperor William he received the Grand Cross of the German Imperial Crown Order. From the emperor of Austria the Grand Cross of the Francis Joseph Order. From the king of Italy the Grand Cross of the Italian Crown Order. From President Fallieres the Commander's Cross of the Legion of Honor, and from the King of Belgium the Cross of the Leopold Order.

By all these monarchs he has been received in private audiences, and Emperor William took particular pains to honor Amundsen by attending his lecture before the geographical society at Berlin, where the emperor appeared dressed in the uniform of a Norwegian admiral. Amundsen also was invited to audience by the Russian czar, who dispatched his own private railway car to take him from St. Petersburg to the palace of Tzarko Selo.

Amundsen has also received gold medals from the Royal Geological Society of England, the Royal Norwegian society, the Royal Danish Geographical society, the Gesellschaft für Erdkunde at Berlin, the Royal Belgian Geographical society, the Royal Geographical Society of Antwerp, the French Geological Society of Paris, the Royal Belgian Yacht club, and silver medals from the city of Paris, the city of Antwerp and from the navy of France. This last medal has not been given before to anybody but the greatest nautical investigators like Columbus, Magellan, Cabot and a few others. Several American scientific societies also have sent him medals of honor and elected him to honorary membership.

ROALD AMUNDSEN,
The famous Norwegian arctic explorer.

All these distinctions and honors with which he has been showered show that Roald Amundsen is looked upon as an explorer of the foremost type, and his exploit of circumnavigating North America from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean takes rank among the greatest geographical achievements in the world's history. But with all these marks of honor and with attention from people in the highest positions, Roald Amundsen has remained the plain and every-day citizen and democrat. He is now writing a popular book relating the adventurous voyage of the Gjoea, and after finishing this work, he will come to the United States upon the invitation of several scientific and geographical societies.

In many respects King William Land people are unlike any other known Eskimos. They are large of stature and practice polyandery, each married woman having several husbands. The cause of this rests in the fact that the big majority of children born are boys.

Amundsen tells many funny stories from his meetings with these Eskimos. They seemed surprised at nothing they saw amongst the white men, except the mystery of writing. That the captain could send a piece of paper on board of the vessel with an Eskimo messenger and receive, for instance, twenty cartridges if he so wished, puzzled them much. They made written signs on pieces of paper themselves and were equally surprised when none could make anything out of their scribblings.

The Eskimo's patience when pursuing a certain object is marvelous. He can stay for ten hours beside a hole in the ice waiting for a seal to show up.

Amundsen once gave an Eskimo hunter an iron bar ten inches long and half an inch thick. The native was going to make a harpoon head, but on second consideration he decided to split it lengthwise so as to get materials for two harpoons. All the tools he had to accomplish was an old table knife from the Gjoea, which he dented along the edge until it resembled a saw. With this outfit he started to saw the iron bar lengthwise in two pieces and after a month's incessant labor he had succeeded in so doing. From each piece he made a harpoon of a workmanship so fine that it is impossible to understand how it could have been done almost without tools. Amundsen bought one of them and paid well for it.

SUPPLIES FOR A DAY'S FISHING.

The Question as to the Proportions of Liquid and Solid Refreshment.

"Just what proportion the liquid should bear to the solid refreshment taken on a fishing trip," said an angler, "has always been and I suppose always will be a moot question.

"Men differ about this as they do about so many other things; some men want more solid and less liquid and some want less solid and more liquid.

"What makes me think about this just now is seeing two men that I met yesterday making for the waterfront to go out for a day's fishing. One of these men carried under his arm two small loaves of bread, while between them the two men carried a case containing two dozen bottles of beer.

"You see? These men evidently were among those who think that the proportion of liquid refreshment carried should be large, but then you may meet men who think just the other way, including men who go so far that way that all they would carry in the shape of liquids when they go fishing would be a jug of water.

"So men differ, and differ widely, as to this; but I would state as a matter of observation, in which I think all fishermen will agree, that the more liquids carried, the less fish caught, and the less liquids, the more fish.

Mirage on Lake Ontario.

Persons who happened to be in tall buildings this morning or on any elevation where the lake was visible, saw one of the most wonderful mirages that have been noted in this section in a long time. From the office of the chamber of commerce the mirage was plainly visible to the naked eye, the Canadian shore looming up as if it was no farther off than the northern limits of the city. By the use of field glasses the outlines of buildings along the coast could be seen, and those who witnessed the phenomena all agreed that it was the clearest mirage they had ever seen.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

Pleasure Ahead.

Miss Ascum—That's Miss Kadley. You surely don't want to meet her?

Miss Peppery—Yes, I should be delighted.

Miss Ascum—But nobody really cares for her——

Miss Peppery—I know; I just want to be introduced to her so I can snub her the next time I meet her.

Almost any pretty girl can bring out the silliness in a man's nature.

ACCORDING to the Willmar Journal "the tariff on lumber is not only a premium on the destruction of home forests, but a premium on the destruction of homes as well."

THE Duluth Herald is correct in saying that "drainage, good roads and a settlement campaign are all that is needed to make northern Minnesota the garden spot of the northwest.

IT is hard to tell who will be the Republican candidate for governor next year, but if the Minneapolis Journal and Joel Heatwole will make their selection it will be easy to tell who will be defeated for the nomination, observes the Lamberton Star.

WHEN the corporations say that so and so isn't a safe man for president or governor or congressman, it is a prediction that the common people would make no mistake by putting him in office, says the Dawson Sentinel. When the corporations say a man isn't safe, they mean he isn't safe for them. It wouldn't be a bad idea to try some of these "unsafe" men at the very next election.

ACCORDING to Washington crop statisticians there is a promise this year of a $2,500,000 bushel corn crop in this country. Although that would make the yield less than last year the increase in price will more than offset the shortage. The price on the farms last year was 39.9 cents but this year it is believed that the price will average over 50 cents. On that basis the farm value of the crop would be $1,250,000,000 as compared with $1,166,000,000 last year. It is claimed by crop experts that despite the difference in yield the money value of the crop will be the largest in the history of the country.

THE BABY.

WHERE did you come from, baby, dear?
  Out of the everywhere into the here.

Where did you get your eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.

What makes the light in them sparkle and spin?
Some of the starry spikes left in.

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.

What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
Something better than any one knows.

Whence that three cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get that pearly ear?
God spoke, and it came out to hear.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into hooks and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherubs' wings.

How did they all just come to be you?
God thought about me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought of you, and so I am here.
—George Macdonald.

THE POLAR QUEST.

UNCONQUERABLY men venture on the quest
  And seek an ocean amplitude unsailed,
    Cold, virgin, awful. Scorning ease and rest
  And, heedless of the heroes who have failed,
They face the ice floes with a dauntless zest.

The polar quest! Life's offer to the strong!
  To pass beyond the pale, to do and dare,
Leaving a name that stirs us like a song
  And making captive some strange Otherwhere
Though grim the conquest and the labor long.

Forever courage kindles, faith moves forth
To find the mystic floodway of the north.
—Richard Burton.

OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

WAY down upon de Swanee ribber,
  Far, far away,
Dere's wha my heart is turning eber,
  Dere's wha de old folks stay.
All up and down de whole creation
  Sadly I roam,
Still longing for de old plantation
  And for de old folks at home.

All de world am sad and dreary
  Eberywhere I roam.
Oh, darkies, how my heart grows weary,
  Far from de old folks at home!

All round de little farm I wandered
  When I was young;
Den many happy days I squandered,
  Many de songs I sung.
When I was playing wid my brudder
  Happy was I.
Oh, take me to my kind old mudder;
  Dere let me live and die!

One little hut among de bushes,
  One dat I love,
Still sadly to my memory rushes,
  No matter where I rove.
When will I see de bees a-humming
  All round de comb?
When will I hear de banjo tumming
  Down in my good old home?

All de world am sad and dreary
  Eberywhere I roam.
Oh, darkies, how my heart grows weary,
  Far from de old folks at home!
—Stephen Collins Foster.

OLD SORES FED AND KEPT OPEN BY IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

Whenever a sore refuses to heal it is because the blood is not pure and healthy, as it should be, but is infected with poisonous germs or some old blood taint which has corrupted and polluted the circulation. Those most usually afflicted with old sores are persons who have reached or passed middle life. The vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to decline, and the poisonous germs which have accumulated because of a sluggish and inactive condition of the system, or some hereditary taint which has hitherto been held in check, now force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body. The place grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding tissue until it becomes a chronic and stubborn ulcer, fed and kept open by the impurities with which the blood is saturated. Nothing is more trying and disagreeable than a stubborn, non-healing sore. The very fact that it resists ordinary remedies and treatments is good reason for suspicion; the same germ-producing cancerous ulcers is back of every old sore, and especially is this true if the trouble is an inherited one. Washes, salves, nor indeed anything else, applied directly to the sore, can do any permanent good; neither will removing the sore with caustic plasters or the surgeon's knife make a lasting cure. If every particle of the diseased flesh were taken away another sore would come, because the trouble is in the blood, and the BLOOD CANNOT BE CUT AWAY. The cure must come by a thorough cleansing of the blood. In S. S. S. will be found a remedy for sores and ulcers of every kind. It is an unequalled blood purifier—one that goes directly into the circulation and promptly cleanses it of all poisons and taints. It gets down to the very bottom of the trouble and forces out every trace of impurity and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. changes the quality of the blood so that instead of feeding the diseased parts with impurities, it nourishes the irritated, inflamed flesh with healthy blood. Then the sore begins to heal, new flesh is formed, all pain and inflammation leaves, the place scabs over, and when S. S. S. has purified the blood the sore is permanently cured. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Write for our special book on sores and ulcers and any other medical advice you desire. We make no charge for the book or advice.

I was afflicted with a sore on my face of four years' standing. It was a small pimple at first but it gradually grew larger and worse in every way until I became alarmed about it and consulted several physicians. They all treated me but the sore continued to grow worse. I saw S. S. S. advertised and commenced its use and after taking it a while I was completely cured. My blood is now pure and healthy from the effect of S. S. S., and there has not been any sign of the sore since S. S. S. cured it.

A SONG TO LYDIA.

I KNEW that you were coming back!
  Shall I tell you how?
  Today a wild bird swung and sung
  On a blossomed bough.
  Far and high his greeting rose
  'Gainst the sunrise flame,
And all the notes of all his song
  Tangled in your name.

I knew that you were coming back!
  Shall I tell you why?
Today a new rose broke in bloom
  'Neath the noon blue sky.
Rare and red it beckoned me,
  Bending as I came,
And all the sweet of all its bloom
  Only breathed your name.

I knew that you were coming back!
  This is how I knew:
Bird and rose and earth and air
  Gave me news of you.
Green leaves merry in the wood,
  Glad waves on the sea,
And all the winds of all the world
  Sang your name to me!
—Theodosia Garrison.

THE MAIDEN'S CHOICE.

GENTEEL in personage,
  Conduct and equipage;
Noble by heritage;
  Generous and free;

BRAVE, not romantic;
  Learn'd, not pedantic;
Frolic, not frantic—
  This must he be.

HONOR maintaining,
  Meanness disdaining,
Still entertaining,
  Engaging and new;

NEAT, but not finical;
  Sage, but not cynical;
Never tyrannical,
  But ever true.
—Henry Carey.

A WOMAN'S WISH.

WOULD I were lying in a field of clover,
  Of clover cool and soft, and soft and sweet,
  With dusky clouds on deep skies hanging over,
And scented silence at my head and feet.

Just for one hour to slip the leash of worry
  In eager haste from Thought's impatient neck
And watch it coursing, in its heedless hurry
  Disdaining wisdom's call or duty's beck!

Ah, it were sweet where clover clumps are meeting
  And daisies hiding, so to hide and rest;
No sound except my own heart's steady beating,
  Rocking itself to sleep within my breast.

Just to lie there, filled with the deeper breathing
  That comes of listening to a wild bird's song!
Our souls require at times this full unsheathing—
  All swords will rust if scabbard-kept too long.

And I am tired—so tired of rigid duty,
  So tired of all my tired hands find to do!
I yearn, I faint, for some of life's free beauty,
  Its loose bends with no straight string running through.

Aye, laugh, if you will, at my crude speech,
  But women sometimes die of such a greed—
Die for the small joys held beyond their reach
  And the assurance they have all they need!
—Mary Ashley Townsend.

MY BOOKS.

THEY dwell in an odor of camphor,
  They stand in a Sheraton shrine,
They are warranted "early editions,"
  These worshipful tomes of mine.

IN their creamy "Oxford vellum,"
  In their redolent "crushed levant,"
With their delicate watered linings,
  They are jewels of price, I grant.

BLIND tooled and morocco jointed,
  They have Zaehnsdorf's daintiest dress;
They are graceful, attenuate, polished,
  But they gather the dust no less.

FOR the row that I prize is yonder,
  Away on the unglazed shelves,
The bulged and bruised octavos,
  The dear and dumpy twelves—

MONTAIGNE with his sheepskin blistered,
  And Howell the worse for wear,
And the worm drilled Jesuit's Horace,
  And little old chopped Moliere,

AND the Burton I bought for a florin,
  And the Rabelais foxed and flea'd—
For the rest I have never opened,
  But these are the books I read.
—Austin Dobson.

THE IRISH PIPES.

I HEARD the piper playing,
  The piper old and blind,
  And knew its secret saying—
  The voice of the summer wind.

I heard clear waters falling,
  Lapping from stone to stone;
The wood dove crying and calling,
  Ever alone, alone!

I heard the bells of the heather
  Ring in the summer breeze,
Soft stir of fir and feather
  And quiet hum of bees.

The piper drew me yearning
  Into the dim gray lands
Where there is no returning,
  Although I wring my hands.

There to the piper's crooning
  I saw my dead again,
All in a happy nooning
  Of golden sun and rain.

You piper kind and hoary,
  Your pipes upon your knee,
If I could tell my story
  The things you piped for me,

The folk would leave their selling,
  And bid their buying go,
If I could but be telling
  The things you let me know.
—Katharine Tynan.

DOUBT.

IN love, if love be love, if love be ours,
  Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers.
Unfaith in aught is want of faith in all.
  It is the little rift within the lute
  That by and by will make the music mute
And ever widening slowly silence all.
—Alfred Tennyson.

CREED AND CROWN.

A CREED is a rod,
  And a crown is of night;
But this thing is God:
  To be man with thy might,
To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit;
  And live out thy life as the light.
—Swinburne.

Out of Sight.

"Out of sight, out of mind," is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 25c.

Hard Times in Kansas.

The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Codell, Earl Shamburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief till I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. It took less than one bottle to completely cure me." The safest and most reliable cough and cold remedy and lung and throat healer ever discovered. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter's drug store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Thief River Press: Deputy Sheriff Robt. Lee returned from Bemidji Tuesday bringing with him a man that had left his family here without adequate support and who had failed to send any funds to his wife and two children, who have been on the town of late. He promised to see that they are cared for and to take them to Bemidji as soon as he can get a house to keep them in.

P. B. Gaass, J. C. Wilkinson, E. G. Buse, A. L. Reichert. Harry Healy and Clem Brunelle returned home Monday evening from Thief lake, where they had been since last Thursday hunting geese and ducks. The boys spent most of their time after geese, but the hunkers were scarce and they only bagged two. As a side issue they killed a hundred ducks, just to show that they shot a few shells.

H. C. Clement, owner of Terrebonne cheese factory No. 70, was a caller here Monday, and made THE GAZETTE a call. Mr. Clement had just received his returns from the cheese he had exhibited at the Minnesota State Fair, and was highly pleased at the showing made. His score was 95 points, and a check for $8.90 accompanied it, being his premium money. Mr. Clement has some good records to show in his cheese-making.

Mrs. Fred L. Farley entertained a parting of ladies last Saturday afternoon, Mrs. S. S. Haislet being the guest of honor. The guests spent the afternoon in conversation and a unique contest, in which each lady was required to draw the head of some prominent person. Afterwards they were asked to guess who the different ones were, and great amusement was afforded. Mrs. A. Mikkelson won the prize for the best drawing, and Mrs. P. B. Gaass for guessing the greatest number of what the drawings represented. An elaborate four course dinner was served at six o'clock, and the ladies pronounced Mrs. Farley a charming hostess.

The prize winners in the "best dairy cow" contest which has been held in the Minnesota Red River valley this summer has ended with C. O. Carlson of Erskine the winner, his cow, Dora, making the best record for butter fat in seven months of which a record was kept and Mr. Carlson gets the $25 prize as a result. Dora is 15 years old and is probably the oldest cow in the contest. Her average was 1½ pounds of butter fat per day, which is a remarkable record. Geo. Henderson of Halstad took second prize with his 8 years old cow, Mollie, who gave 269 pounds of butter fat in seven months. Henderson's cow also made the high average for one month, making 47 pounds during one month of the seven.

PROPRIETARY REMEDIES VS. PHYSICIANS' PRESCRIPTIONS

Statistics Show, of the Deaths from Misuse of Drugs in Two Years, Only Three Per Cent. Were Due to Patent Medicines, According to Figures Based on Medical Certificates.

The press committee of the Proprietary Association of America will present at the next meeting of that body a report showing the number of accidental deaths caused by patent medicines in the two years ending June 30, 1907, as compared with deaths from other causes.

Almost immediately after the beginning of the latest crusade against proprietary medicines this committee was instructed to collect data. This work was done through the clipping bureaus, which furnished accounts of all deaths, exclusive of suicide, due to the misuse of medicines, drugs or poisons. The result showed that only three per cent. could be traced directly to the products made by the members of the association.

The greatest care is said to have been exercised in tabulating the figures received. Whenever the cause of death was doubtful, special investigation was made, no matter where the case might have occurred. The work of assorting and preparing the record was done in Chicago, and the original clippings and correspondence are in the possession of Ervin F. Kemp, 184 La Salle street, that city, the association's publicity agent. The report says, in part:

"A large number of accidents, resulting fatally or otherwise, were caused by the carelessness of persons who left drugs, medicines or poisons within the reach of children. A large number, also, were caused by persons going to medicine cabinets in the dark and taking down the wrong bottle. In no case reported was any medicine, 'patent' or otherwise, held responsible for injury or death except when left within the reach of children or taken or administered in gross overdose."

The committee says that it is unlikely that any cases of death from the use of patent medicine escaped the newspapers, but that it is probable that death from the causes tabulated did occur without receiving publicity. Physicians, of course, report the causes of death. The committee says that they would be the last to suppress the cause if due to the use of medicine not regularly prescribed.

A recapitulation of the committee's findings show 4,295 cases of poisoning, of which 1,753 were fatal. The greatest number of cases, 1,636, with 803 deaths, is attributed to medicines other than proprietary remedies. There are on the list 90 cases of sickness and 43 deaths due to patent medicines.

Analyzing its statistics, the committee finds 201 cases of sickness, with 143 deaths, due to strychnine tablets, which are among physicians' favorite remedies and are often left within the reach of children.

Under the head of miscellaneous prescriptions are grouped 44 cases where, the report says, it has been impossible after diligent inquiry to ascertain the name or the character of the drug or medicine which caused injury or death, beyond the fact that the medicine or drug was prescribed by a physician. Of these cases 18 were fatal. The committee says:

"Under the head of 'All Patent Medicines' are grouped all those remedies which are recognized as patent medicines and which are advertised direct to the public for internal use. Competent authorities say that at least one-half of the medicines taken in the United States are of the kind known as 'patent medicine,' and yet in two years among 80,000,000 people there have been but ninety cases (forty-three fatal) that have been reported in the newspapers from the use or misuse of these remedies."

Not in a single fully substantiated case is it ever charged that any patent medicine in recommended doses was injurious. In this connection it should be understood that in making death certificates and in reporting cases of injury to the newspapers from which these cases were secured, a physician had the final word, and in this connection is there any probability that the doctor will hide his own carelessness or neglect or that of a fellow practitioner whose support he may want at some time, and is there even a possibility that he might hide any responsibility that could be thrown at a patent medicine? Ask yourself these questions. Then when you have found the answer, consider that during all this most thorough and careful investigation covering a period of two years, in not a single established case was it shown that patent medicine in recommended doses was injurious.

The most remarkable case reported was that of an Italian laborer in New York who suffered from pains in the chest. A physician ordered a porous plaster which the patient ate, with fatal results.

Wouldn't Be Repressed.

A young advocate was engaged in his first case. He had evidently conned his argument till he knew it by heart. Before he had proceeded ten minutes with his oratorical effort the judge decided the case in his favor and had told him so. Despite this the young lawyer would not cease. It seemed that he had attained such a momentum that he could not stop. Finally the judge leaned forward, and in the politest of tones said: "Mr. Blank, notwithstanding your arguments, the court has concluded to decide this case in your favor."

THE HOLLOW TREE

By SUESSA BALDRIDGE BLAINE

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bnwies.)

We were lovers, Marie and I. We played together on the lawn, or in the gardens where my father was at work, and sometimes we strayed away in the wood close by, and searched for ferns and wild flowers to carry back and give to Marie's mother.

On warm, pleasant days Marie's mother, Mrs. Mason, would give us a picnic, and the cook would pack a basket of goodies and we would carry it over to the wood and have our feast together under the big maple tree. We were especially fond of that old hollow tree, and many a frolic we had under its friendly shade. Sometimes we played it was a safe and brought our "banks" with their store of pennies and hid them deep down in the hollow of the tree, and often it was called the post office, and we dropped our scrawled letters in the box.

One time I was up at the big stone house and the nurse told me that I could never marry Marie, for she was a rich little lady, and her father Col. Mason, while I was poor and only the gardener's son. I ran far in the wood alone that day and threw myself down on the mossy ground, and I fear I cried, though I was past eight and almost a man.

When I went to school in the town close by, I did not see so much of my little sweetheart, for a governess came to the big stone house to teach Marie. But I used to gather a bunch of flowers and then print a letter very plain so she could read it:

"DEER MARIE:

"I LOVE YOU.

"GOOD BY RAY."

These I would mail at the post office in the hollow tree, and Marie would find them when she went out for a walk.

One day, one sad, winter's day, Mrs. Mason died. The stone house was draped in mourning. Poor little Marie, how sad she was! Soon her father sent her away to stay with her auntie and go to school, and I saw no more of my child-love.

Years passed and I, too, went away to school. My parents pinched and saved at home that I might have an education, and with what I was able to earn in vacation time, I managed to go through college.

Two openings were before me when I left college. One position would take me far away, and, perhaps, bring wealth and fame; the other would keep me home with my parents and command a fair salary. I hesitated, I confess, but I chose the latter, and became the principal of the village school.

How strange it seemed to be in my old home again, to sleep in my cozy room and enjoy the simple yet excellent fare my mother prepared.

My father was still employed at the big stone house, for Col. Mason wished the place kept exactly as it was when his wife died. So the lawn was always clipped, the walks and drives were trim and neat, and flowers bloomed in the gardens and conservatories.

In all my years of study I had not forgotten my little sweetheart, Marie, though I saw her but once after she went away to school. I often thought of the slim, bright-eyed girl of 15, and wondered if womanhood had altered her much. She was ever so happy and kind then, as we walked in the gardens and talked of old times. But she would not let me write to her, for she assured me her aunt would not allow it. "But I'll remember you just the same," she said, "and we'll meet again, some day." Had she forgotten her promise?

It was during my second year at the academy that she came home. She had been traveling with her aunt since she finished school, but the colonel was not very well and had sent for her my mother told me. How I dreaded to meet her! I did not go near the stone house when I learned she had come. My childhood dream had been very pleasant and I feared a rude awakening. What was I, to hope for Col. Mason's daughter in marriage? My parents were proud of me and the position I held, but it would seem humble to her, an heiress. My only crime was poverty.

Then pride came to my aid and I said: "She shall never vent her scorn upon me; I will leave her alone."

How pretty she looked when I met her riding with her father. She flushed and bowed. I wondered why she flushed. Weeks passed, but I steadily avoided meeting her. I saw her at church, I watched her flitting about on the grounds when I passed her home. Occasionally she came to see my mother, but that was always when I was at school.

One day as I walked home from town I met her strolling, with only her large English mastiff for company. She was very near, I could not retreat. I was obliged to meet her and answer her pleasant "Good evening."

"I think you have forgotten your old playmate," she said.

"Oh, no," I answered, "I could not forget you."

"Thank you. I know so few people here that old friends are valued."

"I have been so very busy," I explained, "that I have not had opportunity to see you since you came. Were you going somewhere?"

"Not in particular. Prince and I e out for our constitutional."

"May I come with you, then?"

"Yes, if you can spare so much of your precious time," she answered, with a mocking laugh.

After that I met her often. Sometimes I called in the evening and sang with her and talked with her father. And often we went for a walk together. I steeled my heart against her. "She is beautiful and sweet and good," I would say to myself, "but she is not for me."

My father was growing old and needed help in his work now and then. So I often went up with him and worked among the plants. She will see me, I thought. She shall not think I am ashamed of my father and his humble vocation. But it seemed to make no difference with Miss Mason. She bowed as politely, she spoke as pleasantly as ever, when she chanced to see me there at work.

After a time a new caller began coming to the mansion, a handsome, wealthy man from the town. He took Marie riding, he asked her to the opera, he paid her constant attention.

How I despised that man! Once I told my mother I thought he had an ill-bred air in spite of his wealth, and she laughed, though she discreetly said nothing. I saw she thought I was jealous, and perhaps I was. It nearly drove me wild to think she was slipping away from me.

I gave up calling on the colonel, I no longer asked Marie to allow me to accompany her on her afternoon walks, and I took to prowling around in the wood alone. One time I came to the hollow tree and paused beneath its shade. A flood of memories came to my mind, of the happy days of childhood when Marie and I had played together here, when we were lovers and had no thought of rivals, of wealth and of station. I had gathered a bunch of violets, and some impulse impelled me to put them in the hollow that had so often served as our post office long ago, before I loitered home.

"I Was Jealous of Alton."

Next time I was in the wood I went to the gnarly old maple. The violets, brown and withered, were still there. I tossed them away and put fresh ones in their place. Again and again I went to the tree, and finding my flowers faded, I threw them aside and others took their place. One evening I carried some lovely red roses with me when I went for my walk. "It is useless," I thought, as I hid them in the hollow. "She never comes here now; she has forgotten our childhood."

The academy would soon close for the summer vacation, and I determined to go away. An old college friend had written inviting me to go camping on the lakes with him. I would accept the invitation. I would not remain here to witness that man's triumph, for she loves him, no doubt.

The next evening when I went by the tree, the roses were gone. I felt my pulses throbbing wildly. Had she found them? Did she remember, after all? I strolled up to the gardens to see my father, and together we walked home to tea. On the way we met Col. Mason and his daughter returning from a drive. Marie wore a white dress, and a bunch of red roses glowed at her belt; she blushed vividly as I touched my hat.

It seemed as if I walked home on air. Hope whispered sweet words. Marie, sweet Marie. She wore my roses and she blushed when she met my searching gaze.

That night before I slept I wrote a letter, printed exactly as were my boyhood epistles. I asked no questions, I made no plea; I simply declared my love, and I posted it in the maple tree. Next night I hastened to the wood, eager and expectant. I found a bunch of for-get-me-nots and a card that read: "From Marie."

A few moments later I rang the bell at the mansion and asked for Miss Mason.

One day Marie and I were strolling in the gardens discussing appropriate places for the wedding journey. I suggested a tour of the lakes, and told her of my intention earlier in the season, of camping there with my college friend.

"I was jealous of Alton," I said, laughing. "I feared he had won my child-love from me. By the way, you encouraged that youth, Marie. How could you be so coquettish?"

She looked up with her roguish eyes and laughed.

"You were so proud and so distant," she said, "and there was no other way."

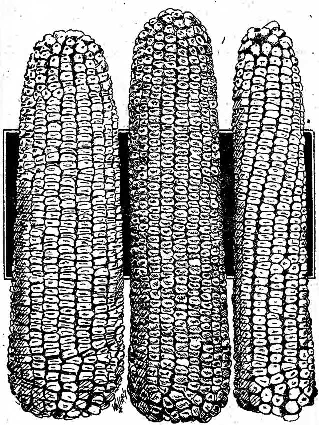
A TIMELY WORD ABOUT SEED CORN SELECTION

By C. G. Williams, Ohio Experiment Station.

One of the important things to be settled regarding the selection of seed corn is, when shall this work be done? It may seem a little out of season to call the attention of the corn growers to this matter at this time of year. Many growers do not worry much about seed corn until a week or two before planting. Some, however, are beginning to learn that there is a better way; that the rail-pen, or the middle of the corn crib is not the best place to look for seed of high quality. If seed corn be not gathered and so cared for that it is either thoroughly dried out before freezing weather arrives, or is kept where the temperature does not fall much below freezing, the vitality is likely to be greatly impaired.

For the sake of higher quality along other lines than germination, progressive growers are realizing the necessity for the fall selection of seed. Ears of corn are not always as valuable as their appearance would indicate. Excellence may be inherent or extraneous. An ear of corn which is good because of inheritance is much more to be desired than one which owes its superiority to especially favorable surroundings.

Plant Selection.—With this thought in view, this station conducted a test in 1906 in which ears selected from plants growing in the field under normal conditions of stand, and as nearly normal in other environment as it was possible to judge, were compared with other ears of the same variety and selected from the same field, but selected from the wagon, no attention being given to the stand in the latter instance. The ears selected from the wagon were superior in size and in general appearance, as might be expected.



Desirable and Undesirable Ears.

The first ear is too coarse, the second is the ideal type, while the last ear is too small.

Eight tenth-acre plots were planted from the two selections, four plots of the plant selected seed and four of the seed selected in the ordinary way. These plots yielded as follows:

PLANT VS. ORDINARY SELECTION.

Plot No.	Method of selection.	Yield per acre, Bushels.
49	Ordinary	68.64
50	Plant	76.57
51	Plant	70.56
52	Ordinary	68.53
55	Ordinary	69.07
56	Plant	71.43
57	Plant	71.43
58	Ordinary	70.82
Average of plant selection plots		72.49
Average of ordinary selection plots		69.26
Gain for plant selection		3.23

In recommending the selection of seed corn upon the plant as it is ripening in the field it should be stated that it is better not to remove the ear from the stalk until it is quite well dried out. When husking, it will be well to go through the field a few days in advance of cutting and mark in some way each plant, growing under normal conditions as regards stand and fertility, which has the appearance of being satisfactory. We have marked these plants by tying a string or strip of old cloth around the ear to attract the attention of the huskers, also by topping the plant. The latter is quicker but some confusion may result from the breaking of the dry stalks at husking. If the husking is to be done by machinery it will be necessary to gather the selected stalks together and shock separately.

When corn is left standing until ready for husking and cribbing or marketing, the seed ears may be gathered as selected some little time in advance of the main harvest.

Some characters of importance in plant and ear, which deserve careful consideration are as follows: The first of these is easily

Maturity.—The first of these is easily maturity. Many farmers are growing corn that is too late in maturing. A variety of corn, which has not acquired the habit of completing its growth before killing frosts are to be expected, is not a variety to be encouraged. A farmer who is growing such a variety should either discard it, or carefully and systematically select the earlier maturing ears for seed.

Vigor of Plant.—A second character which is well worthy of consideration is vigor. While it is freely admitted that a good ear of corn is a very good recommend for the plant which produced it, many plants produce good ears which they are unable to carry to harvest. Under vigor, leaf development and freedom from disease should be considered, also weight of ear.

Uniformity.—In order to give good results corn should be uniform as to height, habit of growth and maturity of plant; height of ear; size, shape and color of kernel.

It may not be amiss to emphasize the great desirability of uniformity as applied to color. Growers who sell the bulk of their crop, rather than feed it, will certainly find it to their advantage to avoid the mixing of varieties and colors. In districts where much of the corn is sold farmers should agree upon a variety and all grow it, thus avoiding mixing through cross-pollination.

Position of Ear.—In the selection of mother plants the position of the ear is worthy of notice. Extremes may well be avoided. Ears borne at too great a height tend to pull the plant over as maturity approaches. The high ear also makes husking in standing corn difficult. It is probable that the continuous selection of the higher ears tends to reduce the size of plant, shorten the growing season and decrease the yield. A medium height, to be determined by each grower for his own locality, is to be desired.

The seed and market condition of corn is greatly favored if the tip of the ear points downward, thus shedding water.

The Care of Seed Corn.—While it is beyond the purpose of this short circular to treat at length of the care of seed corn, a few words should be said.

Seed corn as brought in from the field has a high content of moisture. If, in the attempt to dry it out quickly artificial heat is used, with little or no attention given to ventilation, the chances are that the germ will start to grow. Artificial heat is dangerous at this stage. The important things are ventilation, a dry atmosphere and a moderate temperature. Corn suspended from a wire in a well ventilated shed, granary or dwelling house attic, in such a way that there is free circulation of air around each ear, is very favorably situated. Windows should be closed during nights and rainy days, but open the rest of the time.

If the fall be dry and hard freezing weather does not come until seed is well dried out, it will go through the winter nicely in such quarters. If the weather be damp and winter sets in early, it should have the benefit of artificial heat. A chamber or attic through which a stove pipe passes will answer; a furnace room in a dry cellar is very satisfactory. We have found long bushel boxes, about one foot wide, with one-fourth inch wire netting for sides and top, very desirable storage for corn which has first been handled as above until it is fairly dry. Such mouse-proof boxes afford much ventilation and may be stored in a dry furnace room or in a moderately warm attic with safety.

HOME-MADE REMEDY

INEXPENSIVE AND EASILY PREPARED BY ANYONE.

Is Said to Promptly Relieve Backache and Overcome Kidney Trouble and Bladder Weakness Though Harmless and Pleasant to Take.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription, as formulated by a noted authority, who claims that he has found a positive remedy to cure almost any case of backache or kidney or bladder derangement, in the following simple prescription, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well-known authority, when asked regarding this prescription, stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy, or the mixture would be put up if asked to do so. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic afflictions with splendid results, he could see no reason why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

War's Last Use Fled.

"War," said the truculent old general, "is a necessity. Science teaches us that we must have war in order to keep the population properly thinned down."

"Science once taught us so," the apostle of universal peace agreed, "but you must remember, general, that that was before the advent of the automobile."

Pure Food.

The pure food law does not prohibit the sale of Cream of Tartar Baking Powders because Cream of Tartar is as pure as Alum—but it is a well known fact that a baking powder in which Alum is used instead of Cream of Tartar is less injurious. Dr. Herman Reinhold, the expert German chemist, in a recent official report concerning Baking Powders, declares that a pure Alum baking powder is better and less injurious than the so-called Cream of Tartar powders. He says that if the quantity of alum contained in a sufficient quantity of baking powder for a batch of bread or cakes for an ordinary family, be concentrated to one mouthful of food, and taken into the stomach of any one person, no matter how delicate, it could do no harm.

The kidneys have a great work to do in keeping the blood pure. When they get out of order it causes backache, headaches, dizziness, languor and distressing urinary troubles. Keep the kidneys well and all these sufferings will be saved you. Mrs. S. A. Moore, proprietor of a restaurant at Waterville, Mo., says: "Before using Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered everything from kidney troubles for a year and a half. I had pain in the back and head, and almost continuous in the loins and felt weary all the time. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills brought great relief, and I kept on taking them until in a short time I was cured. I think Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful."

FURIOUS HUMOR ON CHILD.

Itching, Bleeding Sores Covered Body —Nothing Helped Her—Cuticura Cures Her in Five Days.

"After my granddaughter of about seven years had been cured of the measles, she was attacked about a fortnight later by a furious itching and painful eruption all over her body, especially the upper part of it, forming watery and bleeding sores, especially under the arms, of considerable size. She suffered a great deal and for three weeks we nursed her every night, using all the remedies we could think of. Nothing would help. We tried the Cuticura Remedies and after twenty-four hours we noted considerable improvement, and after using only one complete set of the Cuticura Remedies, in five consecutive days the little one, much to our joy, had been entirely cured, and has been well for a long time. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

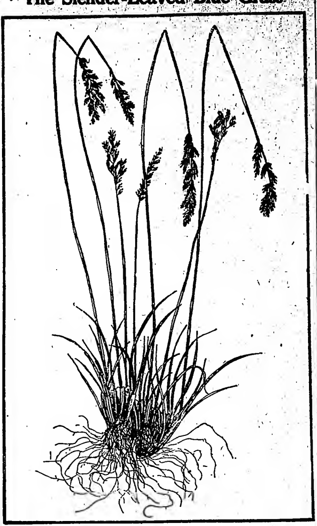
The Slender-Leaved Blue Grass



The blue grasses are quite plentiful throughout the west and furnish abundant pasturage both in the meadows and on the dry foothills and high mountains. There are many different kinds, some of which are called red tops by the different ranchers. The red-top of which we read in the seed catalogues, however, is an entirely different plant and has been in cultivation in the east for a long time. The western blue grasses are closely related to the Kentucky blue grass, for which that state is widely known and the grass that is used universally for lawns. The slender-leaved blue grass, Poa tenuifolia, is held by Prof. Kennedy, of the Nevada station, to be one of the chief grazing grasses of the region and extends from the foothills to the tops of the mountains. In form of growth it may be spoken of as a bunch grass. It grows from six inches to one and a half feet high and is considered by ranchmen the most valuable bunch grass on the range.

HANDLING OF FRUIT CROP

By S. H. Fulton, United States Department of Agriculture.

The importance of handling fruit quickly is coming to be better realized. When a fruit is taken from the tree, or plant, its life processes are accelerated, and if it is to be shipped a considerable distance or is designed for holding cold storage, it should be handled with the least delay possible. Here, again, in the matter of quick handling, cold storage has been an important educating feature. Apples, delayed in transit or at the orchard break down much more quickly in storage, and in the case of bad scalding varieties, scald much worse than when stored immediately after picking. Grimes Golden apples from West Virginia, picked Sept. 16, and delayed in shipment until Oct. 1, developed 37 per cent. scald and 10 per cent. decay by Feb. 2, while the same variety, stored without delay, kept in perfect condition.

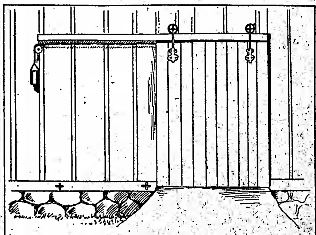
Delaware grown Kieffer pears, delayed ten days before being shipped to cold storage, continued to ripen and soften in storage and were injured at least 50 per cent. in commercial value by the delay. The effect of delay upon small fruits is very much greater. In the case of fruit designed for cold storage, a delay of 12 hours in hot weather will shorten the period of keeping by several days, while a delay of 24 hours may give time for the mold to appear, and the fruit be rendered entirely worthless for storage purposes. With small fruits particularly, the effect of decay is so disastrous that any agency which facilitates the quick and safe handling of the crop should be welcomed by the small fruit grower.

The package is a very important factor in the handling as well as in the marketing the crop. Types of packages have been evolved which conform to the nature of the fruit for which they are designed. Berries are packed in small boxes or baskets, in which the weight is so small that the delicate texture of the fruit is not injured, while large, firm fruits, like the apple and pear, adapt themselves to large packages, such as boxes and barrels designed for such usage. From the cold storage standpoint, it may be stated that fruits, which ripen quickly, like summer apples and pears, should be stored in small packages which permit a rapid lowering of the temperature.

For such fruits, the barrel is too large a package, retaining the heat and causing the fruit to ripen unduly before it can be cooled down. If the storage period is to be short an open package for such fruits may be of additional value, though not necessary if the package is small. For berries, a closed package is best, provided the fruit is dry and cool at picking time.

Give Milk a Rest.—Avoid pouring milk from one vessel to another, after it has been placed in the can or jar for the cream to "rise." Milk needs rest as well as anything else and will not yield the proper amount of cream if it does not receive that rest.

A Self-Opening Barn Door



The arrangement for opening this door consists of a half-inch rope attached to a staple driven into the upper edge of the door and passing parallel with the track beyond the boundary of the door when open. The rope passes over a small pulley and a weight is attached at the end. It is better if the weight and pulleys are fixed inside the building. By attaching the rope to the opposite side of the door a self-closing arrangement will be obtained, which will prove entirely satisfactory.

PROLIFIC GARDEN

ENGLISHMAN'S FIRST AND SUCCESSFUL ATTEMPTS IN MANITOBA—SOIL PRODUCES STRIKING RESULTS.

The Winnipeg (Canada) Free Press of a few days since contains account of the success that followed the efforts of William Knowles, an Englishman who located near Winnipeg, Manitoba. This is but one of many letters giving experiences of settlers, and should be encouraging to those who are looking about for a new home in which they may better their conditions. The following is a copy of the article referred to:

William Knowles, who cultivates some twelve acres of land just below Middlechurch ferry on east side of the Red River has probably as fine a display of horticultural products as any in Manitoba. The whole of his holding is in a high state of cultivation and literally crowded with splendid vegetable specimens, which have fortunately escaped damage by hail, although heavy storms have more than once occurred within a few miles. The potatoes are a wonderful crop, and he expects to raise 1,500 bushels from his patch of 4½ acres. A half dozen of tubers selected yesterday average more than a pound each. Adjoining the potatoes may be seen a marvelous collection of tomatoes. There are 600 plants, all growing under an enormous weight of fruit. One single stock picked yesterday contained eighteen tomatoes and weighed four pounds. This extraordinary example of marvelous growth, together with some of the potatoes were sent to the Free Press office.

The proprietor was the first in town with several specimens, including green corn. The season has been favorable for onions, and one square patch of nearly an acre is looking remarkably healthy. In addition there are good crops of cabbages, cauliflower, turnips, parsnips, carrots, pumpkins, marrows, cucumbers, celery, peas, lettuce, rhubarb, etc. The floral department has not been neglected and a charming display of all the well known blooms were shown, including a specially choice lot of asters.

Mr. Knowles, who gained most of his gardening experience in England, is loud in his praise of Manitoba soil for vegetable raising, and is gratified with the result of his first attempt at extensive horticulture.

Curiosity often hides behind the mask of sympathy.

Women Avoid Operations

MISS ROSE MOORE

When a woman suffering from female trouble is told that an operation is necessary, it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the hospital, the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart.

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation has been decided upon as the only cure. The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who by taking made from native roots and herbs, have escaped serious operations, as evidenced by Miss Rose Moore's case, of 307 W. 26th St., N. Y. She writes:–

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:–"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of the very worst form of female trouble and I wish to express to you my deepest gratitude. I suffered intensely for two years so that I was unable to attend to my duties and was a burden to my family. I doctored and doctored with only temporary relief and constantly objecting to an operation which I was advised to undergo. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it cured me of the terrible trouble and I am now in better health than I have been for many years."

This and other such cases should encourage every woman to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before she submits to an operation.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

"Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less."

The fee in each case will be $10.00. Churches, schools and markets convenient. Healthy climate, splendid crops and good laws. Grain-growing and cattle raising principal industries.

A HOME RECIPE

Mix This Simple, Helpful Remedy at Home and Try It Anyway.

Get from any prescription pharmacist the following:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargoo one ounce; Compound syrup Sarsaharilla, three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Uninary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the elimative tissue of the Kidneys enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the affliction may not feel inclined inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescripion of an eminent suthority, whose entire reputation, it is said was established by it.

A druggist here at home when asked statec that he could either supply the ingredienfs or mix the prescription for our readers, also recommends it as harmless.

Hourglasses In a London Church.

Nearly everybody is aware that at one time it was the custom in many churches to regulate the length of the sermon by an hourglass, which stood on the pulpit immediately fronting the preacher. Quite a number of these curious relics are preserved in various ecclesiastical edifices throughout the land, but the British and Foreign Sailors' church, situated in what was formerly Ratcliff highway, is the only one possessing four. They are in perfect preservation and are fixed all together in a framework of solid brass.—London Standard.

Egyptian Obelisks.

The obelisk in Central park, brought to this country in 1880, was set up at the entrance of the temple of the Sun at Heliopolis, Egypt, about 1831 B. C., by Thotmes III. Twenty-three years before Christ the Emperor Augustus moved the obelisk, together with its companion, now on the banks of the Thamee, London, to Alexandria, from which place it was brought to New York at the time designated above. Of Egyptian obelisks some forty-two are known, though many of these are broken or otherwise practically destroyed.—New York American.

Arabian Horses.

There is no animal history recorded that is so ancient as that connected with the Arabian horse, and there naturally has been a great deal of conjecture as to where he came from. While there is but one general breed of Arab horses, writes Homer Davenport in the Woman's Home Companion, there are many subfamilies, and of these there are five primary families called the Khamseh. As the legend runs, these have descended from five great mares which with other mares of King Solomon were drinking at a river after long hardships in war when the trumpet blew calling them back to battle. Only five responded to the call, and it was those five that founded the five great families.

HIGH CHEESE SCORES.

Terrebonne Factory Gets First Place in Contest.

Altho there were only sixteen entries in the fifth month's cheese scoring contest of the state dairy and food department, the quality of the products exceeded anything entered in any previous contest.

The result of the markings show that two men are tied for first place with the high mark of 98¼. They are L. L. Stromback of Battle Lake, and H. Clement, of Terrebonne. These marks were for full cream cheese.

Other scores in this division from this section were: H. Paranteau, Brooks, 96; J. Paranteau, Red Lake Falls, 96.

George Hoefler of Pine Island, carried off the prize in the brick cheese competition, with a score of 96. His was the only entry.

The judges in this contest were F. J. Munn, of St. Paul; R. Unger, of Minneapolis, and A. W. Parkin, of Cannon Falls.

The winners of the contest in the cheese scoring will be announced at the same time that the final winners in the butter scoring contest are announced, which will be at St. Peter next month at the annual meeting of buttermakers of the state.

Proved an Alibi.

The Sunday school superintendent was reviewing the lesson. "Who led the children of Israel out of Egypt?" he asked. There was no answer.

Pointing to a little boy at the end of the seat, he demanded a little crossly: "Little boy, who led the children of Israel out of Egypt?" The little boy was ready to cry as he piped out with a quavering voice: "Please sir, it wasn't me. We just moved here last week. We're from Missouri."

HARVEST IS GREAT

Crops in Red Lake County Are Good and Money Is Plentiful.

In the September 21st issue of the Commercial West, a trade and financial paper published at Minneapolis, J. A. Duffy, cashier of the Merchants State Bank, contributed the following regarding the outlook in Red Lake county:

"The conditions in our country are much improved over a year ago, both from a business and financial viewpoint. We have the best crop that has been raised in Red Lake county since 1901. All our cereals are much above the average crop. Wheat looks like twenty-five bushels per acre, with other grains corresponding.

"The deposits of our own bank being 30 percent better than this time last year. The total deposits of our institution now being $175,000. Our competitors being equally as good.

"Our country does not rely on grains to liquidate debts, as formerly, as we now have fifteen creameries and cheese factories within the limits of the county, paying to farmers $200,000 per annum. One creamery, namely; at St. Hilaire will pay $75,000 this year.

"Land movements have been slow, but begin to pick up. The future looks very bright for increased immigration. There is nothing in sight at present to warrant a recession of business in the near future, in fact, it is just the reverse. Collections so far have been fair, but will be good within the next sixty days. The demand for money, locally, is not urgent, except for farm loans. Merchants are finding trade much better than a year ago, and are ordering heavier, consider the prospects for future trade very bright."

Conditions show that Mr. Duffy's prediction are more than realized. Threshing is about two-thirds done, and shows a yield of wheat in many cases better than twenty-five bushels to the acre, and in almost every instance the quality is No 1.

Oats, barley and rye are turning out a big yield, while our timothy and clover crop is also heavy. Strangers are coming in every week looking for good farms for future homes and express themselves highly pleased with conditions in Red Lake county. They prove that they mean what they say by buying farms. With the advent of the numerous cheese factories and creameries there is every reason to believe that Red Lake county is entering upon an era of unprecedented prosperity.

CROP IS SMALLER

Yields of Cereals Decidedly Lower This Year Than In 1906.

According to the report of the crop division of the agricultural department just issued, the preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of spring wheat is 13.1 bushels, which compared with 13.7 bushels as finally estimated in 1906, 14.7 in 1906, and a ten year average of 14 bushels. The total indicated production of spring wheat is about 216,067,000 bushels, compared with 242,372,966 bushels as finally estimated in 1906. The production of spring and winter wheat combined is about 626,567,000 bushels, compared with 735,260,970 bushels as finally estimated a year ago. These and other preliminary estimates of yield are subject to revision when the final estimates are made in December.

The average quality of spring wheat is 88.8 as compared with 88.5 in 1906, 89 in 1905, and 75.7 in 1905.

An average yield of oats of about 23.5 bushels per acre is indicated, as compared with 31.2 bushels finally estimated in 1906, exactly 34 bushels in 1905 and a ten-year average of 30.1 bushels. A total yield of about 731,521,000 bushels is thus indicated as compared with 954,904,522 bushels finally estimated in 1906.

The condition of corn on Oct. 1 was 78.0 as compared with 80.2 last month, 90.1 on Oct. 1, 1906, 89.2 on Oct. 1, 1905, and a ten-year average of 79.6.

The preliminary estimate of yield per acre of barley is 23.9 bushels, against 28.3 bushels as finally estimated in 1906; 26.8 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 25.5 bushels. A total production of 147,192,000 is thus indicated, as compared with 178,016,484 bushels finally estimated in 1906. The average quality is 88.1, against 89.1 in 1906, 86.2 in 1905 and 88.7 in 1904.

The preliminary estimate of yield per acre of rye is 16.4 bushels, against 16.7 bushels as finally estimated in 1906; 16.5 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 15.7 bushels. B total production of 31,566,000 bushels is thus indicated as compared with 35,374,833 bushels finally estimated in 1906.

The average quality is 91.6 against 94.1 in 1906; 92.6 in 1905 and 91.6 in 1904.

The average condition of potatoes on Oct. 1 was 77, as compared with 80.2 last month, 82.2 Oct. 1, 1906, 74.3 Oct. 1, 1905, and a ten-year average of 74.7.

The average condition of flax for seed at the time of harvest was 78, as compared with 87.4 in 1906, 91.5 in 1905 and 87 in 1904.

WE DOFF OUR HAT.

In assuming editorial charge of THE GAZETTE we are aware of the task before us, but we ask your earnest indulgence, hearty support and helping hand that we may safely glide over all obstacles and pull forth in unbounded success. Taking up the work where our predecessor left off, we have the acquaintances of the citizens of Red Lake Falls and vicinity to make, so hesitate not in stopping us to tell about the company entertained by you, the social gathering at the home of your neighbor, or any item of news that would be read and appreciated by a friend at a distance.

NEWS OF WEEK SUMMARIZED

DIGEST OF THE NEWS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

Washington Notes.

The new national pure food law requiring accurate labeling of food products has gone into effect and the department of justice is preparing for a campaign in enforcement of the statute.

By direction of the president William F. Duvall has been appointed to be major general in the army, vice Maj. Gen. William McCaskey, the present commander of the Department of the Dakotas.

Attorney General Bonaparte had a long conference with Assistant Attorney General Purdy, at which the investigation of the Standard Oil company was discussed and a number of other pending matters reviewed.

President Roosevelt has been presented with a handsome jeweled Japanese sword. The presentation was arranged for by Ambassador Aoki and made by Tanlemoa Hitachiyama, the champion wrestler of Japan, who is on a sightseeing tour of the United States.

A new record has been made in wireless telegraphy by the navy. The wireless telegraph station near Savannah, Ga., has picked up a message from the cruiser Pennsylvania while approaching San Francisco from Honolulu. The best previous record was made by the Washington navy yard station several months ago, when it received a message from the naval wireless station at Los Angeles, Cal.

Crimes.

Frank J. Constantine, recently convicted of the murder of Louise Gentry in Chicago, has been denied a new trial by Judge Kavanaugh, and in accordance with the verdict of the jury was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Seven more graft indictments in the capitol prosecutions were returned by the Dauphin county grand jury at Harrisburg, Pa. Every man named in the prosecutions has now been indicted and there are still twelve cases to be considered.

Adelbert Schauer, a well-to-do manufacturer of New York, who had just returned from a hunting trip in Maine, committed suicide, apparently because of the death of his pet setter dog, which he had accidentally shot during his hunting trip.

With the gas turned on Mrs. Margaret F. Bukelow, Madison, Wis., who professed to be a cousin of Senator La Follette, was found dead in her room in Washington. As there was an ugly bruise under one eye and other evidences of a possible struggle, the police suspect foul play.

Personal.

Maj. Gen. Sir John Charles Ardagh, ex-director of military intelligence at the British war office, died at Carnarvon, Wales.

M. J. Brunchorst, the Norwegian minister at Havana, has been appointed minister of public works in succession to K. D. Lehmkuhl, who has resigned.

The Ohio friends of Lieut. Gen. Corbin, retired, are urging him to accept the Republican nomination for congressman from the Sixth congressional district in that state.

The report that Prince Francis of Teck will shortly be formally engaged to the beautiful Miss Margaretta Drexel of Philadelphia has spread over London during the past few days and is being generally discussed.

Miss Mary G. Burdette, sixty-six years old, sister of Robert J. Burdette and for many years corresponding secretary of the Baptist Home Missionary society, died in Chicago at the Baptist training school. She suffered from cancer.

Mme. Anna Gould's possible engagement to Prince Helie de Sagan is being discussed by those in the inner circles of French-American society in Paris. Despite denials that they will marry, Prince de Sagan continues his attentions to the American woman.

Capt. Marcus M. Drake, one of the best known men on the Great Lakes, died at Buffalo, N. Y. When Grover Cleveland was elected governor of New York, Capt. Drake was elected by the common council to fill out his unexpired term as mayor of Buffalo.

Foreign.

The storm center in the South of France has shifted eastward to Toulon. The grape crop there has been entirely destroyed.

The epidemic of cholera which broke out in Russia early in August is spreading rapidly, and already twelve provinces are affected.

The authorities at Marseilles admit that a death from the plague occurred on board the Italian steamer Armonia, which is now in quarantine at that port, and another case of the disease had been taken to the quarantine hospital, but the health officials declare that all danger of infection is over.

A girl of seventeen was one of the fiercest resisters in a gang of bandits recently overpowered near Jojarevats, Servia. She had fled from her home to join her sweetheart, who was one of the band, and declared she fought so stoutly in order to make sure of being sent to prison with him.

Herr Woelfling, formerly Archduke Leopold Salvatore of Austria, is engaged to marry Maria Ritter, the daughter of a humble Silesian.

The entire section through which the Chinese Eastern railroad runs has been officially declared to be threatened with cholera.

A conflagration destroyed four blocks in the business section of Port Limon, entailing a loss of $60.000 and resulting in the death of several persons.

A dispatch from Stockholm says that the Swedish Yacht club has forwarded a challenge to the New York Yacht club for a series of races for the America's cup.

The Russian government has decided to dismantle the naval fortresses at Libau, Sveaborg, Usdvinsk, Kertch and Batoum, as they are not required under the reduced navy.

There have been four deaths from the plague at Oran and twelve cases are in the hospital. All of those afflicted are said to be recovering. The contagion was brought there by ships from India.

Forty-two persons, including thirty Japanese soldiers were killed or injured by the derailment of a southbound train from Seoul, Korea. The responsibility for the wreck has not been located.

Torrential rains have flooded the valley of the Canaro, near Turin. Crops have been ruined, stock drowned, bridges swept away and railroad communication interrupted. The population is in great distress.

A signed document by high officials and the commanders of the army has been presented to the shah of Persia to the effect that unless the sovereign accepts without reserve and will act according to the demands of a constitutional government they will resign in a body from the service.

Accidental Happenings.

Three men were killed and two were fatally injured by the collapse of a new building in Spickard, Mo.

John Fry and John Neer were instantly killed by the falling of a boiler under which they were working in the Big Four shops.

With a roar like that of a cannon a big meteor fell in the mountains back of Elizabethville, Pa., setting fire to the forest and frightening hundreds of people.

Hugo Coltini, aged seven, was instantly killed at Houghton, Mich., by the accidental discharge of a single-barreled shotgun, which he was carrying from one room to another.

Mrs. John Gilbert, a member of a prominent family at Grinnell, Iowa, was run down and killed at the Rock Island crossing. Death was instantaneous, the body being badly mangled.

Fire destroyed the office and salt and coal sheds of the Nye-Schneidar company at Eagle grove, Iowa. The elevator and part of the lumber yard was saved. Loss is estimated at $8,000.

While cruising on Lake Independence, at Marquette, Mich., in a yacht carrying too big a sail John Paredis and William Givens were thrown into the water when a gust of wind upset the craft. Paridis was drowned.

News reached El Paso, Tex., of another slide in the Mexican Central quarries near Victoria, in which many laborers were buried alive. Sixteen dead and eleven fatally injured have been taken out. It is known that many others are buried under the tons of earth and rock, with no hope of being rescued alive.

General News Items.

The supreme court of Illinois has decided the new primary election law unconstitutional.

J. M. Barr, director general of the Jamestown Exposition company, who recently resigned that office, finally declines to withdraw his resignation.

The Eighteenth United States Infantry started from Fort Leavenworth last week for the Philippines, where it will be stationed three years.

Minneapolis men are interested in a $1,800,000 company which has applied for incorporation for the development of a gold mining proposition in the Cook City district in Montana.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Bryan recently celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of their arrival in Lincoln, Neb., by giving a dinner to neighbors and friends known as the Farmers' club.

The dairymen of Marquette, Mich., have raised the price of milk from 8 cents to 10 cents a quart. The increased price of grain and hay is given as the reason, but the formation of a trust is suspected.

An oil painting of J. Pierpont Morgan, which was recently seized by the customs authorities of New York because the financier refused to pay a $25 duty on it, has been sold at auction for $35, the purchaser being T. J. Wallece, a saloonkeeper, who will hang it in his saloon beside a stuffed monkey which he bought at a sale in the appraiser's stores.

Negro voters were excluded from participating in the Louisville Democratic primary election for governor in January. This action was taken by the Democratic state central committee, which declared the measure to be "the purpose and intent of the primary election law passed a year ago."

Rev. John Royer of Switzerland county, Ind., was tried by a committee of nineteen Methodists on charges of kissing a member of his congregation against her will and was suspended from the ministry for one year. The charges were preferred by the presiding elder of the circuit.

The map indicates the different routes which are possible for the proposed Duluth-St. Paul barge canal, which has been revived in connection with the proposal to deepen the channel of the Mississippi. A reconnaissance was made in 1895 by Maj. C. B. Sears of the United States corps of engineers, which covered three possible routes.

The most feasible route, the Allouez bay-Brule river-St. Croix river route, covering a distance of 210 miles with a summit level of thirty-five miles where the proposed canal would cross the land divide in the northern part of Wisconsin. The total lift, or the vertical distance through which a barge would have have to be lowered and raised, was estimated at 767 feet, which could be accomplished by twenty-four locks or hydraulic lifts. The estimated cost of construction at the time the exploration was made was $7,050,000.

The other two routes indicated in the map were hardly considered practicable. The second route proposed a canal along the line of the Nemadji river, the Kettle or Snake river and the St. Croix or Rum river. The third route was via the St. Louis river, the East Savannah river, Sandy lake to the upper Mississippi river.

In making the exploration the construction of a canal eighty feet wide at the water surface, fifty-nine feet wide at the bottom and seven feet deep was considered. These dimensions would be ample to allow a barge navigation. It was calculated that four years would be required to build the canal.

ONE END IN THIS STATE.

Green Bay & Western Files Its Annual Report.

The annual report of the Green Bay & Western Railroad company, filed with the state railroad and warehouse commission, shows that the road made a surplus of over $89,000 from operation last year. The road crosses the Mississippi river into Winona, the rest of the line being in Wisconsin.

The report shows that the gross earnings from the interstate passenger business accruing to Minnesota for the year was $1,538.97, to which is added $159.16 mail and express receipts, $1,898.96 freight receipts, making the total gross earnings from operation accruing to Minnesota $3,597.08.

The gross earnings from operation for the entire line were $643,103.64 and the operating expenses $403,094.56, making the income from operation $240,009.08. The company received $4,375 in interest on bonds owned and $21,614.70 miscellaneous income, making the total income $265,898.78.

The company paid a dividend of $30,000 on the funded debt accrued and $21,667.03 in taxes, a total of $61,667.03, leaving the net income $214,231.76. A dividend of 5 per cent on the common stock, amounting to $125,000, was paid, leaving the surplus for the year's business $89,231.76, which, added to the surplus at the beginning of the year, $177,539.88, makes a total of $266,771.63, but deductions of $76,000 were made from this amount for the year, leaving the surplus on June 30, 1907, $191,771.63.

The company has a capital of $2,500,000 and bonds of $7,600,000, a total investment of $10,100,000 for the entire line of 226 miles, or $44,889 per mile.

GOOD TALKS ON BUTTER.

Minnesota Association Will Meet at St. Peter Oct. 30, 31, and Nov. 1.

Active preparations have been begun for the fourteenth annual convention of the Minnesota State Butter and Cheese Makers' association in St. Peter on Oct. 30, 31 and Nov. 1. There is a large amount of preliminary work to be done and most of it will fall upon G. E. Lindall of Millace, vice president of the association. He has opened an office in St. Peter and will remain here until after the convention.

Mr. Lindall has secured a promise from Gov. John A. Johnson to address the buttermakers at the banquet on the evening of Oct. 31, and has received assurances from C. H. Webster of Washington, D. C., chief of the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture, that he will talk. Other speakers who have responded are E. K. Slater of St. Paul, state dairy and food commissioner; H. J. Credicott of Chicago, also connected with the department of agriculture, and Prof. T. L. Haecker of the state agricultural college.

LOOKING TO MAIN CHANCE.

Estimates furnished by state cruisers on tracts of state timber to be disposed of at the sale to be held this month were torn to shreds at the meeting of the state timber board at the capitol. Increases in values were made in nearly every instance. These increases ranged from $2 to $4. Even jack pine was included. The board thinks this will be the best lot of state timber ever sold, and in view of its growing scarcity good prices should be obtained.

POTATOES NOT ALL RIPE.

Good Proportion of Stock Received at Lindstrom Is Green.

An investigation of the potato business in Lindstrom shows that the quantity being marketed averages well up with former years for the last month, but a considerable percentage of the stock is green. While there was a slow movement last week, this was largely due to the bad roads, resulting from heavy rains. This week they are coming in steadily and the various buyers have each received many loads. Rose, Burbanks and Triumphs have been received in about equal proportions.

Shipments have been few in consequence of the shortage of cars. This condition so early in the season is causing the warehouse men some uneasiness, for they have the stock on hand, but are unable to transport to its destination.

Beginning with October warehousemen expect a heavy movement from all sections.

TAX PENALTY CLAIMS.

State Treasurer Turns Over Drafts to Attorney General for Collection.

State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart has turned over to Attorney General Young a number of drafts made against several railroads for collection. They cover penalties imposed for failure to pay within the lawful time gross earnings taxes. The amount originally was about $29,000, but because of errors discovered, several of the roads were released. This reduced the total figure to about $27,000. Many of the roads against whom penalties have been imposed make the point that they should not be compelled to suffer any penalty, because of the fact that they pay most of their taxes long before the lawful limit. This is done, they say, in order to enable the state to tide itself over the usual financial stringency which occurs generally about the first of the year.

ALL FAIRS PROFITABLE.

Southern Minnesota Exhibitions Prove Successful.

If the patronage given county fairs is any indication of a region's prosperity, Southern Minnesota is enjoying it to an unwonted degree this fall. All of the fairs in that section have been remarkably successful, and a few more seasons of the same kind will relieve the societies of the necessity of asking for the aid furnished by the state. When the Nicollet County Agricultural society gave its thirty-seventh annual fair a short time ago the attendance broke all records, and the associations at Le Sueur, Mankato, New Ulm, Windom and Madelia, which have memberships in the same circuit were equally fortunate. Weather conditions were not perfect at all of the fairs, but without a single exception the fair organizations have comfortable balances to their credit.

Third Market Day Is Held.

Spring Valley last week held its third market day street fair and free auction at which suitable prizes were awarded to the farmer bringing in the best variety of farm and garden products. Prizes were given also to the largest married woman as well as to the smallest woman; to the oldest married couple; to the woman having the largest family; to the fattest baby and to the prettiest baby. There was a large attendance.

WOMAN'S INTERESTS

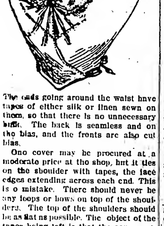
BEST CORSET COVER

STYLES MUST BE SELECTED TO SUIT FIGURE.

For the Stout Woman the Low-Busted Garment Is the Best—No Loops or Bows for the Shoulders.

For stout figures having small busts, as is often the case, the rather low-busted corset should be worn, and the bust should be thrown out as much as possible, to balance the rest of the figure.

To confine a too fleshy bust with the old style corset top there are various corset covers, to be drawn tightly over the chest, which give firmness to and confine too-rotund outlines. One of these is shown in one of the cuts accompanying this text. The tie ends may be drawn as tightly as one pleases, but instead of being pulled crosswise one end should be drawn up toward the chin and the other toward the tie, and when the cover is tight enough the final tie may be given.



The ends going around the waist have tapes of either silk or linen sewn on them, so that there is no unnecessary bulk. The back is seamless and on the bias, and the fronts are also cut bias.

One cover may be procured at a moderate price at the shop, but it ties on the shoulder with tapes, the lace edges extending across each end. This is a mistake. There should never be any loops or bows on top of the shoulders. The top of the shoulders should be as flat as possible. The object of the tapes being left is that the cover may be adjusted to fit both long and short waisted figures. One can, however, put these garments on and have these tied so that they are made to fit as one wishes, and then have the tapes and one or both lace edges removed, laying the front end over the back, and have a flat strap seam. This fits them smoothly.

This style of corset cover can be procured attached to a glove-fitting skirt, but these have to be ordered.

A ripe tomato cut and rubbed on the face tones and refreshens the skin and in some cases will remove yellow spots, including freckles.

Nothing makes a face so insipid as too scant eyebrows. The growth may be thickened by rubbing into them once a day some red vaseline. The white has been so refined that it has less strength.

Cucumber juice is the best of all bleaches for the skin. When cucumber cannot be obtained fresh ripe grape fruit will be found a good substitute. Cut open and rubbed on the face, it is a tonic as well as a bleach.

A rational diet, regular meals, plenty of exercise in the open air, copious draughts of pure water between meals, with frequent and regular breathing exercises, constitute a treatment for dyspepsia that will in time enable the dyspeptic to toss bottles and pills out of the window.

When cold cream is found to disagree with the skin, as sometimes happens, try rubbing a little almond oil perfumed with a few drops of bergamot. Wash the face well first and then rub in the oil, using the massage movements. Wipe off carefully all superfluous oil.

Lace Fichu Kimono.

The lace fichu draped in kimono fashion that came out late, will be seen more during the fall without doubt. It is of generous length, put on so that it falls well down over the shoulders and tops of the arms and is held at the waist line by the girdle under which it passes. The ends should reach nearly to the hem of the skirt. It is one of the new fancies to dye scarfs of this color the same shade as the skirt with which they are to be worn and wear them over a white lingerie or lace waist.

TO MARK THE 'KERCHIEF.

Use of Small Indelible Stamp Is the Best Method.

Marking handkerchiefs with a simple initial is extremely confusing, especially when the washing is sent to the laundress outside of the house. A good plan to avoid this is to mark with both or all three initials, or, better still, with the entire name. This, however, is unpleasantly conspicuous.

A better way is to secure a small indelible stamp of the name, and to stamp the center of each handkerchief so that the marking is never in sight except when it is needed.

Another plan, adopted in a family of three daughters is to use a system of eyelets in the corner—one eyelet for the eldest daughter, two for the second, three for the third. The plan works like a charm, for the family initial on the parents' handkerchiefs are, of course, easily recognizable from the difference between the size of men's and women's handkerchiefs.

Finally, one girl who hoards alone marks each of her handkerchiefs with large and plain X, confident that no one else will claim that initial.

The Newest Fabrics.

New and fashionable colors being displayed on the silk and velvet counters reflect hues of precious and semi-precious stones. Among the attractive mineral colors are malachite (deep blue), azurite (blue and green), rhodonite (pink or flesh red) and zoisite (deep rose); this last hue is sometimes described as thule, and is an exquisite shade of rose that looks particularly well in face cloth and soft velvets such as are being used for toilettes. Going over the list of unusual new shades one would think creators of new fabrics had made a tour of a museum of natural history and culled out all the beautiful colorings nature has given her gems. In other words, mineral colors have never entered so largely into fancy materials as at the present time. Some of the handsomest gowns shown are composed of several contrasting mineral colors so cleverly put together that one marvels at the designers' ability to produce such fascinating results in the realm of colors.

Colors of Autumn Street Gowns.

That very dark shades of blue, brown green and red are to be the smart colorings of late autumn and winter street costumes in cloths of various kinds, is no longer to be questioned, so assured is the fact. Velvets and silks follow suit and millinery assumes the same color character, in trimmings as well, whether of plumage or flowers, for both are to be the vogue. Those who are prepared to cast away their light cloth costumes have the dyer to resort to if economy is urgent. It is wise to wait for what fashion will decree later concerning visiting or afternoon dress before one gives herself any anxiety about the loss of costumes in light cloths or other fabrics.—Vogue.

Does Away with Much Work.

The New Idea gives practical hints that are of great service to mothers. It says a prevailing fashion that is a boon to college girls as a time-saving device is that of having all tub dresses made in one piece, or rather with the skirt and waist joined together, and the joining covered by a belt matching the trimming of the dress. It does away with the problem of hooks and eyes and safety pins, and assures neatness as well as comfort.

Vogue of False Braid.

The new fashion of crowning the head with a thick plait is very useful in forming a firm basis to the hat. In nine cases out of ten it is a plait of false hair and one may expect to see it shortly sold with the hat, as were the bunches of false curls.

LITTLE GIRL'S PLAID SUIT.

The jacket has a sailor collar effect in the back, the plain goods being cut off square just below the shoulders. Under the jacket the princess dress is buttoned in front and extends over the shoulders in narrow straps, which are ornamented with ecru lace en applique.

MIMICRY HAS MADE JAPAN GREAT NATION

Took Germany as Model and Faithful Imitation Has Made Japan a Power in the World.

Japan's extraordinary success of the last decade is the result of a faithful imitation of another wonderfully successful nation.

Germany is Japan's model.

Thirty-five years ago, when the mikado's land began to feel the first thrill of the new life, the counsellors of the ruler sought a model which could be followed in the effort for a new, progressive national existence.

Germany, at that time in full flush of the wonderful triumph over the French, a victory which gave the Fatherland an impetus that has carried it forward in leaps and bounds attracted Nippon.

The German empire had just been newly formed out of a heterogenous collection of states that hitherto had had little in common, and between whom only discord had reigned. Yet so perfect was the system evolved by the genius of Emperor William, Count von Moltke, and Bismarck, that the new nation had been able to overwhelm the French, the nation that produced Napoleon, greatest soldier of the country, and which a few years before the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war had emerged a victor in the struggle for the freedom of Italy.

Here was the country whose career Japan wished to emulate. The imitative Orientals made a study of the Fatherland, its government, its institutions, its military and governmental systems.

And so faithful has been the imitation that in a few years Japan has emerged from almost barbarity into one of the world's half dozen powers.

The story of how Japan elected to follow in the footsteps of Germany, was told recently by Gen. Baron Nishi, inspector general of military instruction in the Japanese army, who has spent many years in Germany studying the military system of the war lord's domain.

Just as Germany had a war of preparfation to get ready for the main aration to get ready for the main the nation, so had Japan.

Germany, or that part of it then known as Prussia, first tested the efficiency of its military system against Austria in 1866, and scored a speedy victory. In this conflict the best military minds of the nation were engaged in a close study of the art of warfare. The strength and weakness of the army was inspected with minutest care. This war meant nothing but preparation for the greater conflict soon to come. And when Germany met France, she was ready for that war because the equipment used against Austria four years before had been developed and prepared, imported and increased.

So with Japan. The quarrel with China afforded a convenient pretext for a struggle that would give data, would enable Oyama and other foremost military authorities to see just how formidable was the military and naval engine they had been building up.

Germany was ready. France was not. So anxious was Bismarck for war in 1870 that the famous forged telegram of Ems was made to afford a pretext for an instant declaration.

Taking a lesson from this subterfuge, the Japs similarly precipitated the struggle with Russia, by attacking the Russian ships at Port Arthur and Chemulpo before war had been formally declared.

The prize for which Germany fought was the [illegible] of Alsace and Lorraine, and Japan, not to miss an opportunity of living up to the model, appropriated Korea for its meed of success that resulted in Russia's defeat.

Japan has its Bismarck, too, in the person of the great leader, the Marquis Ito.

Bismarck is given the credit of creating modern Germany. He deserves it. He was both the soldier and the constructive statesman. When he was recalled from St. Petersburg in 1862 to deal with the crisis, he was appointed prime minister and minister of foreign affairs.

PRINCE BISMARCK,
The "Iron Chancellor" of the Fatherland.

MARQUIS ITO,
The "Bismarck of Japan."

The Japanese Bismarck, the Count Hirobumi Ito, born in 1840, made a visit to Germany in his youth, and discovered that the civilization of Japan so much vaunted at home was far inferior to what they knew in the Fatherland. He also made a tour of Europe, and even came to the United States, but his preference was ever for German ideas.

In 1886 he entered as premier the reorganized cabinet of the mikado, and thereupon inaugurated many of the modern movements whose fruit Nippon is reaping now.

He was the father of the constitution which was promulgated in 1889, and which it is frankly admitted follows closely on the lines of the principles of German government.

Like Bismarck, Ito was not content to remain statesman purely and simply. When the war in China came in 1894, the premier took command of a Japanese fleet, and conducted himself with bravery and skill.

In the West it is not possible to know all that Ito has done for Japan, and any intelligent Japanese will tell you that he has richly merited his comparison to Bismarck.

The vital part played by Von Moltke in the successful issue of the Franco-Prussian struggle was always admitted even by Bismarck himself. Bismarck was the man of action, Von Moltke the planner.

Similarly Japan has a planner in the famous Field Marshal Oyama, under whose ideas were fought the struggle with Russia. It is not denied that at every point of preparedness, provisioning its men and all the tactics that go to carry warfare to a successful struggle, Oyama had outfought Kuropatkin and all the other famous leaders of the czar's army.

SAID TO BE SIMPLE

EASILY MIXED RECIPE FOR KIDNEYS AND BLADDER.

Tells Readers How to Prepare This Home-Made Mixture to Cure the Kidneys and Bladder and Rheumatism.

Get from any prescription pharmacist the following:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority, who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose entire reputation, it is said, was established by it.

The Question.

"A New York woman lived to be 107 years of age, and she accounts for her longevity by saying she ate onions at every meal."

"How young did her husband die?"

WOMAN'S SENSE OF HONOR.

Her Special Code for Conduct Toward Her Husband.

A writer in Pall Mall Magazine says that a well known American warder said to him: "I have been in prisons for men and in prisons for women. Discipline in the former is child's play compared with the latter. As soon as a man realizes there is no use in resisting he gives in. But the women, even when we put them in straight-jackets, always manage to extricate at least one finger and to agitate that in a rebellious manner!"

In the matter of conduct toward husbands and consideration due to the "better half" there is an especial code of honor. It has the stability that sanction by women of all countries gives it, but it does not resemble any code that a man would observe toward another man, nor which a woman would employ toward any human except her husband. This code includes the right to search pockets, consult notebooks, open letters, read those already opened. It includes the right to confound household and personal accounts, to use on self the money intended by the master of the house for paying bills. This system is not frequently practiced, perhaps, and less frequently admitted, no doubt, yet we remember one newly married woman who announced as a little triumph: "When I buy myself something I don't like I just sell it to the house!"

The peculiar indulgence which the conjugal state seems to call for as regards the weaker sex in matters of honor more or less delicate was thus strikingly summarized by a philanthropist accustomed to all sorts and conditions of people. Among the poor whom she visited there was a woman who in a fit of rage or jealousy had killed a man. In relating to me the case the philanthropist concluded sadly: "Yes, she killed him, and he wasn't even her husband!"

TRANSFORMATIONS.

Curious Results When Coffee Drinking Is Abandoned.

It is almost as hard for an old coffee toper to quit the use of coffee as it is for a whisky or tobacco fiend to break off, except that the coffee user can quit coffee and take up Postum without any feeling of a loss of the morning beverage, for when Postum is well boiled and served with cream, it is really better in point of flavor than most of the coffee served nowadays, and to the taste of the connoisseur it is like the flavor of fine, mild Java.

A great transformation takes place in the body within ten days or two weeks after coffee is left off and Postum used, for the reason that the poison to the nerves—caffeine—has been discontinued, and in its place is taken a liquid food that contains the most powerful elements of nourishment.

It is easy to make this test and prove these statements by changing from coffee to Postum. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

The prize for which Germany fought was the rich one of Alsace and Lorraine, and Japan, not to miss an opportunity of living up to the model, appropriated Korea for its meed of success that resulted in Russia's defeat.

Japan has its Bismarck, too, in the person of the great leader, the Marquis Ito.

Bismarck is given the credit of creating modern Germany. He deserves it. He was both the soldier and the constructive statesman. When he was recalled from St. Petersburg in 1862 to deal with the crisis, he was appointed prime minister and minister of foreign affairs.

PRINCE BISMARCK,
The "Iron Chancellor" of the Fatherland.

The Japanese Bismarck, the Count Hirobumi Ito, born in 1840, made a visit to Germany in his youth, and discovered that the civilization of Japan so much vaunted at home was far inferior to what they knew in the Fatherland. He also made a tour of Europe, and even came to the United States, but his preference was ever for German ideas.

In 1886 he entered as premier the reorganized cabinet of the mikado, and thereupon inaugurated many of the modern movements whose fruit Nippon is reaping now.

He was the father of the constitution which was promulgated in 1889, and which it is frankly admitted follows closely on the lines of the principles of German government.

Like Bismarck, Ito was not content to remain statesman purely and simply. When the war in China came in 1894, the premier took command of a Japanese fleet, and conducted himself with bravery and skill.

In the West it is not possible to know all that Ito has done for Japan, and any intelligent Japanese will tell you that he has richly merited his comparison to Bismarck.

The vital part played by Von Moltke in the successful issue of the Franco-Prussian struggle was always admitted even by Bismarck himself. Bismarck was the man of action; Von Moltke the planner.

Similarly Japan has a planner in the famous Field Marshal Oyama, under whose ideas were fought the struggle with Russia. It is not denied that at every point of preparedness, provisioning its men and all the tactics that go to carry warfare to a successful struggle, Oyama had outfought Kuropatkin and all the other famous leaders of the czar's army.

MARQUIS ITO,
The "Bismarck of Japan."

FIELD MARSHAL COUNT HELMUTH VON MOLTKE,
Germany's great tactician.

SAID TO BE SIMPLE

EASILY MIXED RECIPE FOR KIDNEYS AND BLADDER.

Tells Readers How to Prepare This Home-Made Mixture to Cure the Kidneys and Bladder and Rheumatism.

Get from any prescription pharmacist the following:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority, who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose entire reputation, it is said, was established by it.

The Question.

"A New York woman lived to be 101 years of age, and she accounts for her longevity by saying she ate onions at every meal."

"How young did her husband die?"

WOMAN'S SENSE OF HONOR.

Her Special Code for Conduct Toward Her Husband.

A writer in Pall Mall Magazine says that a well known American warden said to him: "I have been in prisons for men and in prisons for women. Discipline in the former is child's play compared with the latter. As soon as a man realizes there is no use in resisting he gives in. But the women, even when we put them in straight-jackets, always manage to extricate at least one finger and to agitate that in a rebellious manner!"

In the matter of conduct toward husbands and consideration due to the "better half" there is an especial code of honor. It has the stability that sanction by women of all countries gives it, but it does not resemble any code that a man would observe toward another man, nor which a woman would employ toward any human—except her husband. This code includes the right to search pockets, consult notebooks, open letters, read those already opened. It includes the right to confound household and personal accounts, to use on self the money intended by the master of the house for paying bills. This system is not frequently practiced, perhaps, and less frequently admitted, no doubt, yet we remember one newly married woman who announced as a little triumph: "When I buy myself something I don't like I just sell it to the house!"

The peculiar indulgence which the conjugal state seems to call for as regards the weaker sex in matters of honor more or less delicate was thus strikingly summarized by a philanthropist accustomed to all sorts and conditions of people. Among the poor whom she visited there was a woman who in a fit of rage or jealousy had killed a man. In relating to me the case the philanthropist concluded sadly: "Yes, she killed him, and he wasn't even her husband!"

TRANSFORMATIONS.

Curious Results When Coffee Drinking Is Abandoned.

It is almost as hard for an old coffee toper to quit the use of coffee as it is for a whisky or tobacco fiend to break off, except that the coffee user can quit coffee and take up Postum without any feeling of a loss of the morning beverage, for when Postum is well boiled and served with cream, it is really better in point of flavor than most of the coffee served nowadays, and to the taste of the connoisseur it is like the flavor of fine, mild Java.

A great transformation takes place in the body within ten days or two weeks after coffee is left off and Postum used, for the reason that the poison to the nerves—caffeine—has been discontinued, and in its place is taken a liquid food that contains the most powerful elements of nourishment.

It is easy to make this test and prove these statements by changing from coffee to Postum. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

AN exchange suggests that the Standard Oil company might start a popular contest for the best new name.

ANYWAY Mr. Rockefeller will be saved the humiliation of going down the pages of history as "Honest John."

IT is pretty late to charge George Washington with being a tax dodger. It would seem that when a person has evaded detection until 110 years after his death the statute of limitations should apply against unnecessary and unavailing notoriety.

A LOT of people will agree with the Windom Citizen in saying: "One cannot read of the political career of LaFollette, of his wonderful one-handed battle for the people's rights and constructive statesmanship against a powerful ring and the railways, against offers of bribery and graft from the U. S. senate down, without arriving at the conclusion that he ought to be president."

SINCE the passage on April 5th last of the law prohibiting any person or firm doing a banking business, which refuses to allow the state bank examiner to inspect and superintend the business, from using the name of "bank" in connection with the business there has been forty-four new banks authorized by the public examiner, of which twenty-five were conversions of former private banks. There are now 703 state banks in Minnesota.

IT would seem that the Hearst Democrats have taken a big contract to dethrone Governor Johnson as the acknowledged leader of his party. Minnesota will probably be for Bryan, but the chances are a hundred to one that the vote of Minnesota in the next national convention will be cast by Governor Johnson's friends and not his enemies. The Governor has done a great deal to make his party respectable in this state, and the Democrats will not sanction the plot to take away any of the laurels that are his by right.

JOHN A. McDERMOTT, state oil inspector, has resigned to accept a splendid position offered by a large New York mercantile firm. Upon the receipt and acceptance of Mr. McDermott's resignation, Governor Johnson announced his successor to be Hon. W. E. McEwen of Duluth, who is so well known throughout the state and especially in labor circles. Mr. McEwen is editor of a labor paper in Duluth, is a member of the council of that city and chairman of the Democratic committee of St. Louis county. The appointment is a strong one and will be favorably received.

ADDRESSING a public gathering at Hamilton, Ohio, Judge Kenesaw M. Landis gave young men—and old men, too, for that matter—something worthy of serious thought when he said: "It is easy for a man to be a good civil officer today. This talk about the courage required is what Sherman called 'poppycock,' All a man has to do is to find out what is right and then do it. If every man in office would give ten per cent of the loyalty he has to finding out what is right and the rest to simply doing it, we should realize Lincoln's ideal of a government of the people, for the people and by the people."

THERE is no longer any doubt that the world is short of wheat and other grains this year. Beerbohn, Dornbusch and Brooneball, the world's leading grain statisticians, all agree. They make the shortage anywhere from 170,000,000 to 225,000,000 bushels. In addition, the corn, oats, barley, potato, buckwheat and apple crops of the United States are short of last year's production. Germany is short in wheat, rye and potatoes. Other European countries are short. Nevertheless it is not safe to bet that prices will be as high six months hence as now. When prices get high, consumers economize, and when the people of the world feel like economizing they can almost live the ensuing year on the amount wasted during the past year. In the United States, at least, we waste as much as we need to use.

Hard Times in Kansas.

The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Codell, Earl Shamburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief till I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. It took less than one bottle to completely cure me." The safest and most reliable cough and cold remedy and lung and throat healer ever discovered. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter's drug store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

SKIN DISEASES

HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

When the blood is pure, fresh and healthy, the skin will be soft, smooth and free from blemishes, but when some acid humor takes root in the circulation its presence is manifested by a skin eruption or disease. These humors get into the blood, generally because of an inactive or sluggish condition of the members of the body whose duty it is to collect and carry off the waste and refuse matter of the system. This unhealthy matter is left to sour and ferment and soon the circulation becomes charged with the acid poison. The blood begins to throw off the humors and acids through the pores and glands of the skin, producing Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum and skin eruptions of various kinds. Eczema appears, usually with a slight redness of the skin followed by pustules from which there flows a sticky fluid that dries and forms a crust, and the itching is intense. It is generally on the back, breast, face, arms and legs, though other parts of the body may be affected. In Tetter the skin dries, cracks and bleeds; the acid in the blood dries up the natural oils of the skin, which are intended to keep it soft and pliant, causing a dry, feverish condition and giving it a hard, leathery appearance. Acne makes its appearance on the face in the form of pimples and black heads, while Psoriasis comes in scaly patches on different parts of the body. One of the worst forms of skin trouble is Salt Rheum; its favorite point of attack is the scalp, sometimes causing baldness. Poison Oak and Ivy are also disagreeable types of skin disease. The humor producing the trouble lies dormant in the blood through the Winter to break out and torment the sufferer with the return of Spring. The best treatment for all skin diseases is S. S. S. It neutralizes the acids and removes the humors so that the skin instead of being irritated and diseased, is nourished by a supply of fresh, healthy blood. External applications of salves, washes, lotions, etc., while they soothe the itching caused by skin affections, can never cure the trouble because they do not reach the blood. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and forces out every particle of foreign matter and restores the blood to its normal, pure condition, thereby permanently curing every form of skin affection. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I suffered with Eczema for forty years and could find nothing to cure me until I tried S. S. S. I suffered intensely with the itching and burning; pustules would form from which there flowed a sticky fluid; crusts would come on the skin and when scratched off the skin was left as raw as a piece of beef. I suffered agony in the long years I was afflicted, but when I used S. S. S. I found a perfect cure. There has never been any return of the trouble.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy, a part of of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you will keep the filters right you will have no troubles with your kidneys.

Mrs. Jas. Rogers, living in Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can recommend them as a reliable kidney remedy. At the time I began their use I was suffering from headache and a soreness about the kidney regions. My kidneys were much disordered, and the secretions very unnatural in appearance. I felt languid most of the time, seemed to have but little strength, was very nervous and dizzy spells were of frequent occurence. My attention was drawn to Doan's kidney pills and I procured a box. From the satisfactory results I derived from their use I feel that I can recommend them very highly."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Warren Sheaf: Owing to the clash between the state and federal courts in this state over the commodity railway rate question, it may be necessary for congress to clearly define the powers of these courts. It is the old states' right question in a new form and which in previous contests has generally been decided in favor of the general government—even if it has been necessary to resort to arms.

St. Peter Free Press: Protection is all right enough in its place, but when it feeds the trust and grinds into the pockets of the public generally it is time to modify it and put it within proper limitations. The present rates were no doubt applicable to conditions prevailing when the last tariff bill was passed. They certainly do not meet them now.

Roseau Region: King Oscar of Sweden has been thirty-five years on the throne and during the whole of that time he has ruled wisely. He is a highly learned man, speaks fluently six languages, is philanthropic and beloved by his subjects. Sweden has made remarkable progress since he ascended the throne and the credit for its advancement is largely due to his personal efforts. King Oscar enjoys the distinction of being the only ruling monarch who is respected by all civilized nations.

Sauk Centre Herald: Partisan politics simmered right down to the hard facts means simply a strife for the spoils.

Redwood Reveille: We heard a prominent Republican say the other day that if his party wanted to elect the next governor of Minnesota it would have to declare in favor of local option. This may or may not be so, but certain it is that there never was so much local option talk as there is right now.

Out of Sight.

"Out of sight, out of mind," is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 25c.

A Very Common Disease.

Within the last few years, it is said a disease has been spreading over America. The ailment is the commercially known as "Substitution" or the "just as good" disease When you ask for a case of golden grain [illegible] beer to be brought to your home, insist upon having the genuine as there is no other just as good. This clear sparkling beverage is refreshing and appetising, an aid to digestion and a muscle builder. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

His Dear Old Mother.

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old, thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children too are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50 cents.

THE BUSY STORE

A few "after-market-day" specials at our store.

GARCEAU & ZAISER

The potato yield this year has been par excellent and the surplus stock of the surrounding country is now being marketed at this point. Garceau & Zaiser and Theo. LaBissoniere are busy these days receiving the "spud" surplus and their shipments to points in North Dakota so far has been five car loads with still more to follow. Not so bad for an off year.

G. Lizee, a rural resident of Terrebonne, expects soon to remove to North Yakima and before taking his departure will dispose of his personal effects. He will have a sale on next Wednesday, the 23d, commencing at twelve o'clock noon, at which time will be sold all his horses, cattle, hogs, chickens, farm utensils, household goods, etc.

Indicative of what's in a person is his expression; so with a business house; when a local merchant gives a good description of his goods in advertising, or displays them attractively in his windows, he has advanced thru the primitive stages of trade and barter. You can depend that he can and will serve you well. We have to regret that all do not recognize this truth.

Our local nimrods, Frank Grady, A. P. Toupin, James Blake, Dan Latendresse and J. P. Harren returned Monday evening from their outing at Elm lake with a large bunch of game. Amongst them they had 64 chickens and four geese, besides those devoured at lunch hours and still the nimrods report a scarcity of game this fall. However, they hold the record for the county this season.

The Red Lake Falls Milling Company have been shipping out from four to six cars of flour on every train the past week, and it is expected this will be the banner month for shipments in the history of the mill. Grain has just began to move and while the receipts have not been large the reports of yield are good. This is encouraging for the country in general and Red Lake Falls has just reasons to feel proud of this milling concern.

Last Saturday noon the Red Lake Falls band serenaded Sam Haislet at the home of Attorney Grady and rendered several selections which made the welkin ring with melody. In a few brief words Mr. Haislet thanked the band boys for the favor of the call, whereupon Lee Healy responded for the band and presented their departing comrade with a handsome smoking set as a token of the high esteem in which he was held by the members of the band. They all wished for the departing host unbounded success in his new location.

Dr. N. M. Watson and Hon. Marcus Johnson were guests of Dr. Henry Grundy, mayor of Thief River Falls, yesterday. They report a royal time, which included an automobile ride and the freedom of the city. Both were given the unusual privilege of their choice of the fair Thief River maidens, and it must have been only a remembrance of the beauty and attractiveness of the local product and an innate loyalty to home industry that enabled them to resist a temptation a a l d n m placed before eligible bachelors. But, speaking seriously, Messrs. Watson and Johnson speak very highly of the royal entertainment given by Mayor Grundy and other Thief River friends.

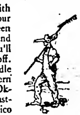
The Cattle Kings are Leaving the Texas Pan Handle

They couldn't afford to stay—the land was too good for grazing. They got their ranches when land was the cheapest thing going. Some of them had a quarter of a million acres, mighty few less than 50,000 acres. They made lots of money—but it couldn't last. Too many people wanted the land for farms. They offered the Cattle Kings good profit and the Cattle Kings took it. That ended the big cattle business. Now lots of these big ranches are for sale in small tracts, dirt cheap. Lots of them have already been sold.

It's amazing what crops the farmers get on this land—forty or fifty bushels of corn to the acre, right along; wheat 20 to 30 bushels; alfalfa 2 to 2½ tons to the acre, three cuttings a year; oats, kaffir corn, milo maize.

Size that up with what you and your neighbors have been getting on $75 and $100 land, and you'll see where you get off. The Pan Handle farmer of Northern Texas, Western Oklahoma and Eastern New Mexico has got you skinned a mile. There's only one way to get even with him—pull up stakes and go to the Pan Handle yourself. Buy a good big farm for $10 or $15 an acre and see how easy it is to get along.



The Farmer is Crowding Him Out.

You never saw better land for twice the money in your life. I know good land when I see it, and I know the Pan Handle land is tip top—good chocolate loam, 4 to 8 feet deep with clay subsoil; plenty of water anywhere, 25 to 50 feet down. Rainfall is abundant.

Why don't you go down to the Pan Handle and get a farm? It would pay you to take a trip down there just to look around. It doesn't cost much: only $20 from St. Louis or Kansas City and $25 from Chicago, round trip. The Rock Island-Frisco lines have four routes to the Pan Handle—each one goes through a different part of the country.

I have got a book about Texas that's mighty interesting reading! Another about Oklahoma! Still another about New Mexico! They will tell you a lot you want to know about the Pan Handle Country before you go down there. Do you want one?

The Rock Island-Frisco Lines have no land for sale, and are only interested in getting good, energetic settlers for the desirable, but unoccupied, lands along their lines.

I have chosen several specific sections where conditions are especially favorable for new settlers, and I am advertising these sections. If you would prefer some other section than the Pan Handle country look for my advertisements in other issues of this paper, or write me for specific literature about the section you are most interested in.

The Motorist's Joke.

"I think I'll try filling the tires of my automobile with illuminating gas," said the amateur chauffeur.

"Good joke," gurgled his fool friend. "Expect to make it light. Ha! ha!"

"Nothing of the kind," replied the amateur chauffeur: "I thought it might increase the speed of the machine. Just think how the stuff makes the wheels of a gas meter spin around."

SLEEP BROKEN BY ITCHING.

Eczema Covered Whole Body for a Year—No Relief Until Cuticura Remedies Prove a Success.

"For a year I have had what they call eczema. I had an itching all over my body, and when I would retire for the night it would keep me awake half the night, and the more I would scratch, the more it would itch. I tried all kinds of remedies, but could get no relief.

"I used one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura, and two vials of Cuticura Resolvent Pills, which cost me a dollar and twenty-five cents in all, and am very glad I tried them, for I was completely cured. Walter W. Paglusch, 207 N. Robey St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 8 and 16, 1906."

SYBIL'S CHOICE

By EBEN E. REXFORD

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Sybil Leith stopped on the old bridge, and leaned over the old railing, seemingly to watch the ripple of the waters. She saw, as one sees things in a dream, the minnows darting about in that restless fashion of theirs, and they made her think of the shuttles flying through the work in the weaving rooms at the factory, whose jar and rumble came like a discord to her, even now. How she wished she could forget the factory, and everything connected with it for awhile.

As she stood there thinking, in a spiritless kind of way, a step upon the creaking planks aroused her.

"Good morning, Dick," she said, putting out her hand.

Dick's face was aglow at sight of her. To him she was the one woman in the world.

"Good morning, Sybil," he said cheerily. "You're taking a breath of fresh air, are you. Wouldn't it be glorious to live out of doors all the time, these scorching days? It'll be like a furnace in the factory to-day, I'm thinking."

"I wonder if a person never gets out who once gets into the mills?" she asked. "I think not. It's for life or death, I don't know which. I wouldn't care much, if it wasn't for Lois."

"I don't like to hear you talk in that way," Dick said, in his grave, slow way. "There's no need of your killing yourself at the loom as you're doing. It's only for you to say yes, Sybil, and you're done with it forever. You know that there's nothing I would be gladder to hear."

She turned away from him almost angrily.

"Don't!" she said, with a little gesture of impatience. "What's the use of bringing that all up again?"

"But if you only knew how I'd set my heart on it, Sybil," Dick said gravely. "If you only knew how I'd hoped and planned—"

Leaned Over the Old Railing.

"I do know," she said, a little more tenderly, but with much bitterness in her voice yet. "I understand it all, Dick, but—there's Lois. It wouldn't be right for me to marry you, and put such a burden on you as that. No, Dick, I don't think I'd better say yes. It wouldn't be right."

They were at the factory door now, and went in together. The wheels were turning round and round in their tireless way. She hung up her hat and turned to her loom. She took up her shuttles mechanically, and set them in their grooves and started the machine. A step at her side and caused her to look up. She saw Mr. Leverson standing there, regarding her intently. He was her employer. The great factory, and the men and women in it, were his.

"You look tired out," he said in his low, even voice. "You ought to rest."

"What is that?" Sybil asked the question almost sharply.

"Pardon me," he said, understanding her. "I presume what I said sounded like an impertinence to you. Will you stop at my house on your way home to-night. I have something to say to you that cannot be said here."

"Yes, I'll stop," Sybil said. He had some instructions to give her, probably. She didn't see why he couldn't give them to her in the office, as well. But she would stop, of course. He was her employer, and it was her business to do as he said.

How cool and pleasant the path was from the street to the house that night when she stopped for her employer's "instructions."

"I have something to say to you," he said, coming nearer. "I suppose you will be surprised at it. It will be unexpected. You must not consider it as being said on the impulse of the moment, however. I am not the kind of man to do things in that way. I have pondered the matter well, and what I shall say to you is the result of deliberate thought. I suppose you have never thought of my caring for you, but I do. I have watched your face for a long time, and I have grown fond of it. Will you be my wife?"

Mr. Leverson was a gentleman, and she knew he meant what he said. It came to her in a swift flash, and she felt the truth in a dazed and muddled way. She looked about her, and saw the beautiful things which would be hers if she accepted Mr. Leverson's proposal. She felt as if she stood at the gate of Paradise, and some one asked her to come in. She had wished this beauty to be hers. It was to be had for the taking. A word, and the hateful factory life was ended forever. She could rest, rest! And Lois! The poor crippled limbs might even be made straight. Who knew? Then she thought of Dick, and her heart gave a little thrill, that was like a reaching out of hands to him. And yet he was so poor—so miserably poor! He had only his hands, she thought, swiftly. Then something seemed to cry out to her, reproachfully, that he had more—infinitely more, than she could make herself believe this man had—a great honest heart, brimful of love for her.

"I can't think now!" she cried, putting her hand to her throbbing temples. "Let me go—some other time, maybe—" and then she actually laughed. But was only conscious of a great longing to get away from the man who had offered her his hand.

Presently she found herself in the street alone. Was she dreaming? Had Ralph Leverson really asked her to be his wife, or had the fever smitten her with its mighty, merciless hand, and was this the delirium it generally brought?

She went back to her loom next day, with the wheels of thought still turning. Should she choose this one, or that one? On the one hand, rest and the beautiful things which wealth could buy. On the other a humble home and the wealth of a loving heart. Dear, patient, willing Dick! How mean and selfish she seemed to herself, for hesitating in making her decision between the man she loved, and who loved her, and the man who loved her, but whom she did not love.

"I'm going home," she said, at last, sick, dizzy, faint. "I shall go crazy if I stay here. I'm not sure but I shall, anyway."

She put on her bonnet and went out into the warm June day.

But which to choose? Which to choose? The words made themselves into a little verse, and set themselves to the monotonous hum of turning spindles.

Suddenly the clangor of the bell smote on her ears. She turned and looked down the road, wondering vaguely what the matter could be.

A wild, shrill cry of fire came to her, on the wind, and at that instant a great, black cloud of smoke broke from the upper windows of the factory. It was strange, but the first thought that came to Sybil was one of exultation. If the factory burned down, she need never go back to her hateful work again. She would be free.

Then she turned suddenly and ran back to the burning building. Perhaps there was something her tired hands could do.

She knew, before she reached it, that it could not be saved. The windows were loop-holes of fire. The eaves were wreathed with a fantastic cornice of writhing flames.

Suddenly a great cry rang out from the terror-stricken crowd. At the window of his private office upstairs she saw Leverson's frightened face. He must have been asleep, and had probably just awakened to the reality of his awful danger. She thought it was death. She could see no way of escape for him.

"I'll try to save him," some one said. It was Dick. There was something grand in the sound of his voice, it seemed to her. Then she saw him fighting his way through the flames, and the last glimpse of his face showed her how brave and determined it was in the wild tempest of fire.

She dropped on her knees and hid her face in her hands, saying over and over again, in a prayerful way: "Dear Dick, oh, God save him!" She knew then that the lover who was risking his life for another, was more to her than the lover he was risking it for could ever be. She had made her choice.

Another cry, like a gasp, from the crowd. She looked up and saw Dick at the window of Leverson's room. He had Leverson in his arms, and the man seemed to have fainted.

"Throw up a rope!" cried Dick, hoarsely. Some strong hands threw one to him. He fastened it around the unconscious man and lowered him to the ground just as the flames burst out of the windows below him, wrapping the whole factory in a mass of seething fire.

He saw the wire of one of the lightning rods, not a foot away from the window. He grasped the rod and dropped down, down into the lurid abyss. The rod blistered his hands, but he clung to it. The flames billowed about him, but he held his breath, and slipped down, down, down. A thought came to him, that he was going down forever, and then—a blank.

The first thing he remembered, after that, was a woman's face beaming over him, and a woman's tears dropping on his face, and a woman's kiss was on his scorched lips, and Sybil's voice was saying, in a broken way: "Oh, poor, dear brave Dick!" and then he thought he must have died, and this was heaven.

They told him afterwards that he was a hero. Leverson came and took his burned and bleeding hands in his, and said to him that he had saved his life, and that he would prove his gratitude in a more substantial way than spoken thanks. And he did. But Dick only thought of one thing. Sybil had chosen—and the woman he had loved, and hoped to win—was won.

FATTENING POULTRY—FOUR METHODS ARE EMPLOYED

By G. Arthur Bell, Asst. Animal Husbandman, Bureau of Animal Industry.

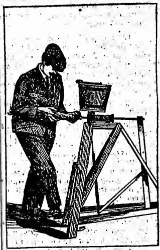
Four methods of fattening poultry are practiced in this country, viz: Pen fattening, crate fattening, machine cramming and hand cramming. The first two are probably the most common today, while the third is gaining rapidly as its results are becoming better known, and the fourth is used only where but few birds are fattened.

Pen fattening is practiced by a great many people who do not have the time and inclination to use other methods. The essentials of pen fattening are quiet, darkness, except at feeding time, and plenty of soft green feed given at regular intervals, usually three times a day. Birds may be kept in flocks of 15 or 20, but the sexes should be separated.

In crate fattening a few fowls are confined in crates and fed from a trough. A crate six feet long, and 18 or 20 inches wide is suitable and is large enough for a dozen birds. Sometimes such a crate is divided into two or three compartments, 4 to 6 birds being placed in each compartment. But little room for the birds to move about is desirable, for the less exercise the bird obtains the more readily does it fatten. The top, back, and ends of the crates should be solid if they are to be placed outdoors, but if they are to be in a building they may be built of lath or slats. These slats should be two inches apart in front, so as to permit the birds to eat from the troughs, which are hung just outside of the coop. The slats of the bottom of the coop should be about one inch apart to permit the droppings to fall through. In indoor feeding the crates should be placed in a dark room, and just before feeding enough light should be admitted to allow the birds to see to eat. They are usually fed three times a day, and are permitted to eat for half an hour at a time, when the room is again darkened and the uneaten food removed.

For the best results a machine is essential, especially for the last ten days, for otherwise the birds will not eat nearly so much as they can digest and assimilate.

Our illustration shows a cramming machine in operation at one of the large poultry establishments in New York state. A reservoir under which is placed a small force pump operated by means of a lever worked by the foot is placed on a tripod. A tube is fixed to one end of the pump, through which the feed passes when the lever rod is lowered. This tube is of rubber or metal. If rubber, it may have a metal point. Metal tubes are more easily kept clean. The feed is placed in the reservoir, and is made into the consistency of thick cream. There are several ways of holding the bird, but the following will be found simple: grip the bird firmly either between the right elbow and side of the body, as shown in the illustration or between the left elbow and the body, whichever is the more convenient. The head is grasped in the left hand, the first finger being placed in the mouth to keep it open. The tube is placed in the mouth and the bird is drawn on until the end of the tube reaches the crop, the neck being elongated as much as possible. The lever bar is gently lowered by the foot and the food is thus forced into the crop. One hand is kept on the crop and as soon as it is sufficiently full the foot is removed from the lever and the bird is gently removed. The operator soon learns to know when the crop is full. No stated amount that should be fed to an individual can be given, for the quantity varies with the size of the crop. Great care should be taken in preparing the feed to see that there are no lumps, for the tube is small and easily becomes blocked.



A Cramming Machine.

Hand cramming is a good system where but few fowls are being fattened, but would be found rather laborious where many are fattened. The feed is made into boluses, or balls, which should be about two inches long and one-half inch in diameter. A large number of these are prepared before commencing to feed. The operator sits on a stool or box, firmly grips the fowl between his knees, and elongates the neck, holding the head in a similar manner to that described in using the cramming machine. He then dips a bolus in skim milk or water and forces it into the [illegible] throat with his fingers. The neck above the bolus is then gripped with the thumb and first finger, which are run downward along the neck, forcing the bolus into the crop. It will probably take from 14 to 18 of these boluses to fill the crop, depending on its capacity. Some feeders practice this method in connection with crate fattening. The attendant, after feeding in the crates, feels the crop of each bird, and any not having a sufficiently filled crop are crammed in the manner described.

Fattening birds should always receive soft feed. As they have no exercise they require a feed that can be quickly and easily digested. The following mixture is fed at the New York establishment referred to under the description of cramming machine: 100 pounds finely ground barley, 100 pounds finely ground corn, 100 pounds finely ground oats (with hulls sifted out), to which mixture is added 10 per cent of beef scraps. Buttermilk or skim milk is used for mixing, the former being preferred. A little salt is sometimes added. The birds are fed twice a day at intervals of twelve hours, and are crammed for about three weeks. It is important that the intervals between the feedings should be as nearly equal as possible.

Another ration may be made as follows: 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds ground corn, 50 pounds flour, 4 pounds tallow.

BEST WAYS OF HANDLING MILK

By George P. Grout, North Dakota Agricultural College.

For many years past, dairy authorities have held that milk and cream would not absorb bad odors from surrounding atmosphere after milking until cooled to a temperature equal to or below that of the surrounding atmosphere and it was further believed that milk gave off animal odors when warmer than the air and absorbed others when colder. For this reason dairymen in general did not hasten to remove milk from the barn until convenient, and often left it there until cooled nearly to the temperature of the surrounding atmosphere. Late investigations on milk absorption have disproved these facts, and it is now held that warm milk will take on bad odors just as quickly as the cold milk. It is very obvious, therefore, that the milk should not remain long in the barn. The quicker it can be gotten out of the barn the better if good results and a high price for the butter is expected. Besides absorbing bad odors, many of the changes which take place in milk and its products are caused by the growth of tiny bacteria or plant life which multiply very rapidly under favorable conditions. If the best results are to be expected, the milk should be kept as free from all forms of filth and dirt as possible as filth and dirt contain millions of the tiny forms which may grow and spoil your milk and cream.

The farmer or producer should use all possible precaution to keep out all forms and trust to the butter maker to put in the proper kind to produce the desired flavor. It is just as necessary that the butter maker have full control of the cream as it is that the housewife have full charge of the bread making. The housewife uses yeast to sour her bread and the butter maker uses a starter to sour his cream. Either would sour without these, but the housewife knows very well that she would make a poor quality of bread without yeast. The butter maker knows he can make only a poor quality of butter without good culture, but I have often heard the question raised as to the importance of keeping cream sweet until delivered to the factory. The producer should strive to prevent unfavorable bacteria from gaining entrance into the cream, then keep it cold and deliver the product in a sweet condition for the butter maker to handle. The result will please the producer, as it will mean a high quality of butter and a good-sized monthly cream check.

Composition of Milk.—Milk varies widely in composition, depending upon the breed and individuality of the cow, stage of lactation and weather conditions. Food, as a rule, has little effect in permanently changing the proportions of the several ingredients. One hundred pounds of milk of good average quality should contain about the following amounts of the different constituents: Water, 87; fat, 4; albuminoids, casein, 3; albumin, .50; milk sugar, 4.80; ash, .70; total, 100. The total solids include all of the ingredients excepting the water.

Storage of Eggs.—Keep the eggs stored in a clean room till ready to take them to market. Egg shells are porous and it is known that they will absorb odors. The absorption may not be sufficient to make the eggs taste, but it will be enough to start the eggs to spoiling.

Care of Cow Before Calving.—Don't let the cow run out in the cold right up to the time of calving. She should be kept in a comfortable, well-bedded stall at least ten days before dropping her calf.

How a Veteran Was Saved the Amputation of a Limb.

B. Frank Doremus, veteran, of Roosevelt avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., says: "I had been showing symptoms of kidney trouble from the time I was mustered out of the army, but in all my life I never suffered as in 1897. Headaches, dizziness, and sleeplessness, first, and then dropsy. I was weak and helpless, having run down from 180 to 125 pounds. I was having terrible pain in the kidneys, and the secretions passed almost involuntarily. My left leg swelled until it was 34 inches around, and the doctor tapped it night and morning until I could no longer stand it, and then he advised amputation. I refused, and began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The swelling subsided gradually, the urine became natural, and all my pains and aches disappeared. I have been well now for nine years since using Doan's Kidney Pills."

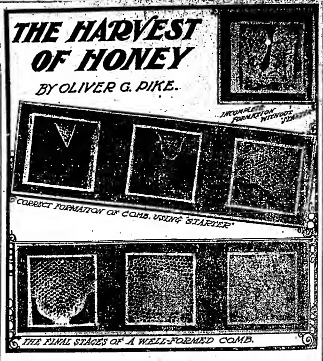
THE HARVEST OF HONEY

BY OLIVER G. PIKE.



CORRECT FORMATION OF COMB, USING "STARTER"

THE FINAL STAGES OF A WELL-FORMED COMB.

The pleasures of bee keeping are many and the profits are good. A well-known naturalist has stated that without bees 100,000 varieties of flowers would disappear from the face of the earth. This is a startling statement, but who will venture to contradict it! Few people realize what a vast amount of needful work the bee does in fertilizing the blossoms of nature. The nectar secreted at the base of the flower is a necessary bait for the worker bee. In trying to reach it, the bee has to push past that part of the flower containing the pollen grains; this dust adheres to the bee's body, and when the insect settles on the next flower, particles of the dust mixes with that in its blossom, and so the flowers are fertilized.

Let us go to the hive and watch the gathering of this great harvest. A vast population is here, all one turmoil of hurry and bustle, thousands dashing out into the bright summer air, thousands more returning, pushing past the hive sentries in one long unending stream. If we follow this ingoing army we shall see something of how the honey is stored. For many days past the worker bees have been busy constructing cells, and every available space in the hive has been occupied by the builders of the city to construct golden vats in which to store the harvest of liquid sunshine. The bee likes to store the honey on top of the brood chamber, and the bee-keeper, knowing this, places a crate containing twenty-one little boxes, or sections as they are called. A small piece of wax is placed on top of each as a guide or "starter" for the bees to work upon. This wax has the imprint of cells stamped on it, and the worker bees soon commence to draw these cells out and add to them. When first placed in the hive the box has the appearance shown in the illustration. As work proceeds the cells are enlarged and more wax is added. About twelve hours later the wax is increased to such an extent that the side walls are reached. The masons of the city do not rest day or night, and the result is that the cells quickly grow, and by the time they reach the base of the box honey has been stored in some of the completed cells. The whole is soon filled, and the illustration shows the cells completed and some of them filled with honey and sealed over. The illustration also shows the completed section, which is a familiar sight in grocers' shops. If no starter or wax guide had been placed in the section, the bees would have constructed a rough ungainly box of honey, as shown in the upper right hand corner of the illustration. The reason why the bee-keeper is able to get his bees to fill these boxes with just one pound of honey is because the bee will go on increasing the depth of its cell to several inches or until an obstruction is found, then, when it reaches this obstruction, it just leaves what is called a bee-space between the obstruction and the end of the cell, that is, it provides room for the bees to walk about between the sealed section and the obstruction. Therefore, by placing these sections in rows in the hive, and by having a thin metal sheet between the rows, the bees just fill the boxes and then seal the honey in.

Now let us watch the bees which are returning from the fields. They go straight to the upper part of the hive, and some will instantly give all the honey they have to the young bees which have not yet been outside the hive, and these take the honey to the cells. Others will go direct to the cells, and then, placing their head in, we see them slowly moving their long tongue round the base of the cell. As we watch we see a bright liquid slowly forming at the tip of the tongue, and when a tiny drop of honey has been deposited, this indefatigable worker turns and goes straight back to the open fields, where the flowers and the songs of countless birds, the buzz of the insects' wings and the sunshine make the music of the summer day. The nectar as found in the flower is a very different thing from the honey as we know it. When taken by the bee it is sucked up with its tongue, then it undergoes a chemical change inside the bee's body, and then it comes back through the tongue and is placed in the cells. A minute drop of formic acid from the bee's sting is sometimes added before sealing the cell over, which acts as a preservative. Honey is a wonderful gift of nature. It stands almost alone as a pure, natural sweet in itself. It has, also great medicinal qualities. By the constant use of honey the entire organism is benefited in a high degree. It stimulates the appetite, aids digestion and at the same time is far better than drugs for regulating the system. Honey should not be considered simply as a luxury; it should be used in every household as a necessary article of diet. There is no danger incurred in keeping bees in gardens. They do not sting unless molested or frightened; they do not fly about the garden and become a nuisance. No one need hesitate about keeping bees, however small the space at their disposal, while the great advantage of having a good supply of honey from your own bees will compensate for any small inconvenience which such benefactors may cause.

BUTTERMILK FROM SKIM-MILK

By Prof. O. F. Hunziker of Purdue (Ind.) University.

Allow the skimmilk to sour and curdle, either by adding good starter or by letting it sour naturally, at a temperature of about 70 degrees F. When the curdling has reached the stage where the milk begins to whey off, put it into a churn (any kind of a churn will do for this) and add about one-fourth to one-third of its bulk of buttermilk to it. Even smaller amounts of buttermilk will answer the purpose.

Now churn the mixture until the curd in the skimmilk is completely broken up. The churning should be continued until all the lumps have entirely disappeared and the mixture has become homogeneous. This is usually accomplished in from ten to 15 minutes. The contents of the churn are now ready for consumption. This preparation is by far superior to buttermilk made in the ordinary way. It has more body, is smooth and velvety, and has a mild, rich and agreeable buttermilk flavor, which is highly relished by the consumer. Upon standing, the curd does not separate out and whey off as rapidly as is the case with the ordinary buttermilk.

Keep Out the Dirt.—Cows may differ in the quality of milk they give, looking at it from a butter fat standpoint, but there is no reason why it should not be pure.

Uncommon Feeds.—The professional poultry raiser feeds many kinds of feeds to his poultry, but the ordinary farmer does not. What is a common feed in the poultry house of the fancier is an uncommon feed in the poultry house of the farmer. There is not the slightest reason to doubt that a large range of feeds will give better results than one or two kinds of feed. Among the feeds that are somewhat unusual on the farms are the following: Chopped clover or alfalfa. This feed may be steamed if desired, but will be eaten by the poultry without steaming. It gives bulk and is rich in nitrogen; oil meal is nutritious and is rich in nitrogen; sun flower seeds are rich in oil as well as some of the other desirable ingredients, and more of them should be grown.

Feed Raw Linseed.—Never give boiled linseed oil to any kind of farm animals. Some claim it is poisonous, at least, it is known that it is not attended with good results when given to an animal. Raw linseed oil is needed to loosen the bowels and the farmer should be sure that he has the raw product before it is given to an animal.

Dip Now.—Do not forget to dip the animals during the busy season if you are provided with a dipping tank. Insects, mites and parasites multiply more rapidly at this time of the year than any other and if they are to be held in check, the preventive measures should not be overlooked now.

A Nuisance.—A horse that is too smart is a nuisance.

BEAUTY OF MEXICAN INDIANS.

Their Fine Eyes and Features and Intelligent Expression.

The beauty of Indian women is one of the charms of Mexico.

In the capital, where the Indian has degenerated by contact with the whites, by extreme poverty and menial service, it is less to be remarked than in the smaller towns and in the country.

But the beautiful faces one takes in memory away from Mexico are those of Indian women. Fine eyes are universal and, what one hardly expects, fine features, according to Caucasian standards; broad brows, straight noses, well formed mouths and chins full but not gross or heavy. The expression is very generally intelligent and often one is struck, both in Indian men and women, with the nobility and refinement of the countenance.

One frequently sees types among the peons that seem to belong to some highly civilized ancient casts, an Egyptian priest of royal blood, a Roman centurion, an Aztec emperor. The women are gently lovely where they are beautiful, and the men at their best in carriage, in manners and in countenance are strikingly like the very advanced product of civilization.

In the North the "noble red man" has chiefly been found in our poetry and romance. At their highest they possessed only the savage virtues. Here in mid-Mexico, even after four centuries of subjection, the Indian is plainly of better make, of higher ethnic development, of infinitely greater possibilities. It is a far cry from the Apache to the Aztec.

Chinese Girls in American Colleges.

Chinese women who have been educated in America will receive a distinguished recruit when Miss May Liang Cheng, the only daughter of Sir Chentung Liang-Cheng, the Chinese minister to the United States, returns to her native land.

Miss Cheng is a particularly bright young woman and has attracted much attention in Washington. It is announced that the piquant little Celestial maiden will be educated in Barnard college, although it is said Wells college, Aurora, N. Y., is a possible candidate for the honor of instilling the ideas of Western civilization in the pretty Miss Liang's head. Wells college is the alma mater of Li Hung Cheng's granddaughter, Miss Li, now Mrs. Bien.

Miss Cheng is under sweet sixteen, and dresses in Oriental style, as becomes the daughter of the Chinese representative to this country. She She speaks English and has shown marked ability in music.

His Profession.

A passing stranger was attracted by frightful screams coming from a little house not far from the road. Hurriedly tying his horse, he ran to the house and found out that a little boy had swallowed a quarter, and his mother, not knowing what to do, had become frantic.

The stranger caught the little fellow by the heels, holding him up, gave him a few shakes, whereupon the quarter soon dropped to the floor.

"Well, mister," said the grateful mother, "you cert'n'ly knowed how to get it out. Air you a doctor?"

"No, madame," replied the stranger, "I'm a collector of internal revenue."

What Did She Mean?

Mrs. Armitage had a negro servant who continually prated of a certain Mrs. Reed for whom she formerly worked. Weary of hearing Mrs. Reed quoted so often, the mistress asked one day:

"Well, Samantha, what kind of work did you do at Mrs. Reed's anyway?"

"Well, honey, I cooked foh huh, I did, an' I cleened for huh, an' I swep' foh huh, en' I washed huh Pussonal appea'ence."

The Origin of Pall Mall.

Few, perhaps, know that Pall Mall derived its name from an old "Pall-maille" court which stood on the site three hundred years ago. This game was simply a slightly different form of croquet, and appears to have gone completely out of fashion in the eighteenth century. Who revived it and how it came by its modern name is not known.

Baby's Excuse for Laughing.

Friend—I am afraid your husband has a very bad cold; he's continually sneezing. It's quite painful to hear him. Why don't you ask a doctor to see him?

Matron—Well, I'm waiting just a few days because it amuses baby so to see his father sneeze.

Perfect Womanhood

The greatest menace to woman's permanent happiness in life is the suffering that comes from some derangement of the feminine organs.

Many thousands of women have realized this too late to save their health, barely in time to save their lives.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headache, bearing-down sensations, nervousness, irregularities or the "blues," she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as the great woman's remedy for woman's ills, made only of roots and herbs.

It cures Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and all Organic Diseases, and is invaluable in the Change of Life. It dissolves and Expels Tumors at an early stage. Subdues Faintness, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole female system. It is an excellent remedy for derangements of the Kidneys in either sex.

On the Last Day.

Gabriel—I've blown my trumpet three times and nobody pays any attention to it.

Israel—That's strange.

Gabriel—Isn't it? People just make a hasty jump for the curbstone and then look to see which way the motor car went.

Would Be Happy.

Old Mr. Bullion—And you are sure, my dear, that as my wife you will be happy?

Miss Youngthing—Oh, perfectly. I think it's simply heavenly to pay for things by check!

Long Winded.

"It takes you a pretty long while to shave yourself, doesn't it?"

"Not so very long; I can shave myself quicker than my old barber could."

HOW TO MIX THIS

Directions to Prepare Simple Yet Remarkable Home Mixture.

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable yet simple and harmless prescription which any one can easily prepare at home:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce: Compound Kargon, one ounce: Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost and being of vegetable extraction, are harmless.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days it is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism, The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose until permanent results are obtained and without injuring the stomach. While there are many so-called rhematism cures. patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results. and the above will no doubt be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquiry at the drug stores in this neighborhood elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately or the druggists here will mix the prescription for our readers if asked to.

Sheriff Lewis A. Nelson returned Monday evening from Thompson, N. D., whither he went after one Peter Mellen, charged with rape at Thief River Falls. On Tuesday the young man was taken to the up-river city for trial and the same will come up for hearing Saturday. In the meantime we may learn of a wedding wherein Miss Lena Lappegaard, of Norden township, and Peter Mellen, of New Solem, Marshall county, were the contracting parties—then the trial will be dismissed.

With flowers in bloom, the trees aglow with their bounteous shade, one would hardly think of the country as other than a paradise.

A little shooting affray took place at Thief River Falls Tuesday evening, and the attention of the county authorities was called hence. It seems that Attorney Michelet had a "paper" to serve upon one Henry Gorke, whereupon the latter drew a revolver and fired, but just as he pulled the trigger Deputy Sheriff Robert Lee happened upon the scene and struck the man's arm, which threw the ball wild. We have not learned the result of the case, but it would seem that Thief River Falls is desirous of sending a large delegation of "criminals" down to the county seat during the next term of court.

School Fund Is Short.

The state board of investment at a meeting at the capitol Monday approved loans aggregating $36,200, of which $25,000 is for a drainage ditch loan to Redwood county. The others are school loans.

While the loans to school districts aggregated $11,200, there is only about $6,000 at hand with which to make the loans. The school fund, from which the loans are made, will soon be considerably increased however, and the school loans will then be cared for first. State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart stated Monday that the board has approved loans to the extent of about $200,000, and while the funds are not immediately available for the loans, the money is continually coming in and the loans will be made in order in which they were approved, the school loans being taken of first.

The school loans approved Monday were as follows: Hubbard county, $400; Freeborn, $300; Red Lake, $400; Redwood, $2200; Marshall, $600; Becker, $1800: Stearns, $1000; Meeker, $1000; Crow Wing, $600.

Creamery Increases Values.

Middle River Pioneer: A patron of the Middle River creamery recently informed us that he was so well pleased with the returns from his cows that he would not sell his firm for less than $25 per acre, whereas before the creamery started he was offering it for about $18. This is a hopeful sign! When farmers get so generally awakened to the possibilities of the country that they all express this sentiment and ask for their land what it is really worth actual homesteaders will come in greater numbers than they have in the past, when every man was discouraged and offered his land at a ridiculously low price.

Gang Plows!!

I have for sale second-hand gang plows, Flying Dutchman, John Deere and Bradley XX-Ray. These plows are in first-class condition; will do as good work as new ones, and you can buy them for half their actual value. WM. FINDEISEN.

Pay Your Debts Now.

Here is some good advice from the Fergus Falls Journal. It is easier to pay debts this year than last, because commodities of all kinds are high, and a dollar is easier to get. Many people could profit by the Journal's admonition:

This is a great time for paying debts, if those who are in debt would but realize and improve it. Many debts in this county were contracted at a time when it took three bushels of barley, five bushels of oats or two bushels of wheat to pay a dollar. The same ratio holds true in almost every other commodity or service. It takes but half as much of everything raised on a ferm to pay a dollar as it did five years ego. This then is a time to take advantage of the high price of everything to get square with the world. It is the very time to run in debt for everything you buy costs very much more than usual and if you pay your debts later when prices have dropped it will make it doubly hard. This advice won't influence anyone to pay a debt or stop him from buying lightning rods and other good selling articles at boom prices. People always run in debt in good times for they think it will be easy to pay and then they have to pay off in hard times.

Notice to the Public.

I have started up the Healy flour mill and am now prepared to furnish the famous "Gold Seal" fancy patent flour, and feed of all kinds on the shortest notice. Orders phoned to No. 87 will be given prompt attention. Farmers who desire to exchange wheat for flour will find it to their advantage to call on me. Will also always pay the highest cash price for wheat. Am prepared to do feed grinding every hour in the day. Give me a call.

Yours sincerely,
1-3 Leo. Steinert.

COURT TO CONVENE

The October Term of the District Court to Convene October 28th

The October term of the district court for Red Lake county will convene next Monday with Judge Wm. Watts presiding. The court calendar contains ten cases held over from the last term and thirty-five new ones, besides four of a criminal nature. Only the court cases will be tried at this time, while the jury will not be summoned for duty until November 11th, thus giving the farmers ample time to complete their fall work ere being called upon to attend court. The criminal cases on the docket are: State vs R. B. Hamilton, indecent assault; State vs H. B. Blackey, accepting a bribe; State vs E. H. Ackerman, giving a bribe to an executive officer, and State vs E. H. Draper.

Reservation Crops Big.

Sunbeam: Peter Hedeen, of Kratka raised over eighteen hundred bushels of No. 1 wheat this year, besides several hundred bushels of oats and barley. Take this in connection with the Deer Park farmers cream checks and it would lead one to believe that this was a good farming country. There has been no threshing done in Highlanding township yet, but the large number of stacks will certainly yield a large amount of grain.

For Sale.

New Bucher & Gibbs riding geng plow, 12 inch; will sell for $45, worth $75. Plow guaranteed in every particular. WM. FINDEISEN.

Farmers, don't forget that I sell the John Deere plows—gang, sulky end walking plows.—William Findeisen.

MINNESOTA IS RICH

Passes Billion Dollar Mark in Valuation of Taxable Property.

According to the tax lists for 1907 Minnesota is a "billion doller state" for the first time in its history.

Last year the reel estate assessment of Minnesota was $753,585,000. The tax commission has added $121,000,000 in one lump, on the essessment of the iron mining properties. New essessments of real estate, for tracts added to the tax rolls and for improvements, add another three or four millions to the total, bringing the reel estate valuation up to $878,000,000 in round numbers. Personal property wes increased about $5,000,000 this year, and without deducting the exemptions will reach $199,000,000, bringing the totel for taxable property in the state to $1,068,000,000. Even deducting the exemptions the figure will be at least $50,000,000 in excess of a billion dollers.

To those who know the real wealth and resources of the state, a billion dollar veluation seems ridiculously small. In the first plece, it is a well known fact that property of all kinds even when disclosed is assessed at less than half its true cesh value. The ratio varies greatly, but on real estete 40 per cent is agreed to be liberal, and the average over the state is not much over a third of actual value. The figures also fail to reach many millions of intengible value, such as the cepitalized earning power of manufecturing and mercantile concerns, and the individual holdings of securities of every kind. As to this last item, it is no doubt true that outside holdings of Minnesota stocks and bonds are heavier than the amounts of outside securities owned in Minnesota, but the aggregate value of corporation holdings in Minnesota is certainly part of the wealth of the state.

It must not be forgotten, too, that the taxable valuation omits corporations that pay a gross earnings tax to the state treasury. The railroads of the state certified last year a cost of $341,000,000, to say nothing of the value to the stockholders. Other corporations to be figured in are the express, telephone and freight line companies. Unsold state lands of great potential value, are also to be accounted for.

A billion dollar valuation for Minnesota should be multiplied by three to give the true value of property listed. No doubt a full valuation of all property in the state would leave four billions behind. That would give our 2,000,000 people an average holding of $2,000 in property, per capita. Yet the economic possibilities of Minnesota have only begun to be realized.

Johnson's Friends on Guard.

Albert Lea Standard: Minnesota, in the next democratic national convention, will be for Bryan as long as he will permit the use of his name. Next, although he honestly and earnestly would not be president if he knew he could be, it ought to be and will be for John A. Johnson. It follows, that only trustworthy friends of Gov. Johnson, as well as of Bryan, should be on the delegation.

His Dear Old Mother

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old, thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children too, are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50 cents.

Hard Times in Kansas.

The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Codell, Earl Shamburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief till I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. It took less than one bottle to completely cure me." The safest and most reliable cough and cold remedy and lung and throat healer ever discovered. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter's drug store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Facing a Crisis.

Albert Lea Standard: Some of the best weekly papers of the state are seriously considering the advisability, if not actual necessity, of raising their subscription rates to $2 a year. The increased price of paper and other printers' supplies, wages and the many other expenses are absorbing the profits and even making it doubtful whether the larger papers can be published without a loss. In any event, the wise would better be forewarned. Now is the time to subscribe, to pay back dues and a year in advance and thus be well provided for an[illegible] happy accordingly.

Reflections of a Bache[illegible]

New York Press: The [illegible]ay not to understand women is [illegible]ry to.

The reason a man likes to go fishing is his family doesn't like to go with him.

Postmen can tell there's nothing in women's letters by their being so thick.

A woman thinks her husband is smart to be able to tell what makes the furnace smoke though he can't stop it.

If a man could play the piano and know how to make a living in spite of it this would be a much more cheerful world.

The Reason of Exports.

A generally accepted idea is that a nation imports a certain class of goods for the reason that the foreign countries make a better article; but in many cases the exports and imports are nearly equal. No importation of foreign manufacture can equal the home brews; especially is this true of golden grain belt beer. It is a pure, refreshing beverage, highly favored for table use. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

For Sale.

Second-hand Southwick hay press in first class working order; capacity fifteen tons per day; price $50, worth $150. Come quick. WM. FINDEISEN.

ALLIGATOR TEARS

Were Shed by the Up-River Enthusiasts on Our Streets last Saturday.

Last Saturday being the day set for the meeting of the county board to take action on the county seat removal petition, a large number of Thief River Falls citizens came down w[illegible] a few "ha has" up their coat [illegible]ves, thinking to use them in [illegible]ase the board did not meet as they had failed to do upon a couple other occasions—the same object the view. However, at the hour set for the meeting they were surprised to find every member of the board in his place and then these same "ha has" corkscrewed themselves around into sickly grins, for it was certain then the board would vote to have the county seat removed to Thief River Falls and they—the citizens from the up-river town—could take the court house and county officials back with them and then in the evening the populace join in a grand and glorious jollification. Stilled in quietude a rat was heard crossing the alley a block away, and then one by one the attendance in the commissioners' chambers filed out through the door and winded their way up town. You ask, "What happened?" 'Twas only a vision came over the meeting and three members of the board voted to show cause before Judge Watts at Crookston. This will throw the case into court and it is hard to say just when the same will come up for trial, while in the meantime the county officials will continue to do business at the same old stand and Red Lake Falls will go down into the history of 1908 as the "hub" of the shire of Red Lake.

Out of Sight.

"Out of sight, out of mind." is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 25c.

NEWS OF WEEK SUMMARIZED

DIGEST OF THE NEWS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

Washington Notes.

The president has directed the appointment of Col. Charles S. Smith, ordnance department, to be brigadier general on the retirement of Gen. Godfrey.

Ambassador Leishman has informed the state department that he has bought the first and only American embassy property in Europe. It is a magnificent place, overlooking the Bosporus and cost less than $150,000.

Personal.

Julius M. Reiser, aged sixty-seven, said to be the pioneer manufacturer of glass mirrors in the United States, is dead.

Alexander M. Fox, the oldest director of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, died at his home in Philadelphia, aged eighty-three years.

C. A. Wilson, sixty-eight years old, capitalist and influential citizen of Sussex, N. J., died suddenly in Sioux City, Iowa. He had banking interests in Iowa and South Dakota.

Rev. George Boardman Taylor, for thirty-five years president of the Baptist mission in Italy, is dead. Dr. Taylor, who was chaplain to Gen. Stonewall Jackson in the Civil war, was the first pastor of the Franklin Square church at Baltimore. He founded several churches and schools in Italy.

Crimes.

Austin Griffith shot and killed his wife at the breakfast table at Key West, and then committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

Policeman Anton Eschman was shot and killed at Cincinnati by Peter Garrity. Garrity, it is said, was intoxicated and shot the policeman apparently without provocation. Garrity was arrested.

With their eleven-year-old daughter as a witness, Albert Fiedler of Baltimore fired five bullets into the body of his wife, killing her instantly, and then killed himself. The couple had been living apart.

Thirty-three Italians were arrested at Brownsville, Pa., by members of the Pennsylvania State constabulary in an endeavor to break up an alleged blackmailing society. The arrests follow the receipt of threatening letters by a number of merchants.

Harry K. Thaw's second trial for the killing of Stanford White will begin Dec. 2. This agreement was reached between District Attorney Jerome, Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Thaw, and Justice Dowling of the supreme court. Mr. Littleton wanted the date fixed for Nov. 1, but Mr. Jerome opposed this and offered the date which was selected.

Beaten into insensibility and bound hand and foot across the railroad tracks in the Pennsylvania yards at Cleveland, Samuel Hamilton Shaw of Port Huron, Mich., a sailor, narrowly escaped being ground to death by a freight train. Shaw was robbed by three men. After knocking him senseless they bound him tight to the track. He was discovered by the engineer of the train, who barely managed to stop a few feet from the prostrate man.

Foreign.

Lord Brompton, who was Sir Francis Hawkins, is dead in London. He was born in 1817.

The appointment of Mgr. Del la Chisa, substitute papal secretary of state, as papal nuncio at Madrid, has been canceled.

The Russian authorities have ordered the confiscation of Count Tolstoi's book entitled, "A Comparative Study of the Gospels."

The cholera outbreak is getting alarming in proportions in Tokio. Nineteen new cases have been reported recently.

The Union of the True Russian People is organizing a deputation which will wait on the czar Oct. 30 and petition him to withdraw his manifesto of Oct. 30, 1905, granting a constitution to Russia.

The Spanish government has notified the government of France that Spain consents to the measures proposed to prevent the landing of contraband goods in Morocco, especially arms and ammunition.

Accidental Happenings.

Fire destroyed the Collins & Burgie stove works at Morengo, Ill. Loss, $100,000; insurance, $35,000.

By the accidental discharge of a target rifle in the hands of her son, three years old, Mrs. Milton Pond was killed at Trenton, Mo.

Three thousand persons, mostly women, some carrying babies, attempted to crowd into a 10-cent store that had just opened in Kansas City. A semi-panic resulted. A dozen women fainted; a baby was trampled upon, but not seriously hurt and three women were injured.

An explosion of gas occurred in Mine No. 7 of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Railway company at Pratt City, Ala., and a cave-in of the roof followed. Four miners, including the bank boss, were caught behind the cave-in and are believed to be dead.

Nine lives were lost at the Foggs colliery, near Bolton, Eng., when a rope slipped off a pulley and precipitated an elevator cage to the bottom of a deep shaft.

Thomas J. Dupress, a member of the firm of Broadnax & Co., jewelers of Memphis, while riding a motorcycle collided with a street car, sustaining injuries which resulted in his death.

Thomas Bertram, twenty years old, of Altoona, Pa., received injuries during a football game that caused his death. His death, it is said, will result in prosecutions against those who played Sunday football.

James Jackson, a coal miner, and his sixteen-year-old daughter, were killed at Bridgeport, Ohio, when a spark from the pipe smoked by Joseph Barbusi set off a keg of powder in his home and demolished the house.

Stanley Gerrity and J. F. Fortney, employes of a construction company at Gary, Ind., were killed and three workmen seriously injured when a passenger train ran into a group of men who were about to board a local train at Gary.

A passenger train on the Atlantic Coast line ran into an open switch and collided with an engine at South Rocky Mount, N. C. The engineer of the passenger train was instantly killed and a postal clerk was slightly injured.

General News Items.

Samuel Barb has been arrested at Fort William, Ont., by Sergt. Watkin on a charge of forgery. The alleged crime was committed in Duluth.

Three prisoners escaped from the county jail at Cincinnati. They dug their way through an inner wall with pieces of iron broken from their beds.

The carpenters employed in the construction of the Bell Telephone building at Great Falls, Mont., have gone on strike once more, and the work on the building is stopped.

Frederick Boehmann, a wealthy German, was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary for the murder last Decoration day of Henry Mathias, a saloonkeeper at Chicago.

Oct. 20 has been set by the management of the Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern as the date on which regular service will be started on the recently completed electric lines.

Levi Jones and William Carpenter are dying in a hospital at Pittsburg from injuries received in a duel with a knife and an ice pick as weapons. The fight was prompted, it is said, by jealousy.

The jury in the Rowland murder trial at Raleigh, N. C., returned a verdict of acquittal. Dr. and Mrs. David Rowland were charged with poisoning the woman's former husband, Charles R. Strange.

William Burns, a negro desperado who shot Policeman August Barter at Cumberland, Md., inflicting wounds from which the officer died, was taken from jail by a mob at an early hour and shot to death.

With the assistance of seven powerful tugs the battleship Kentucky, which stranded off Lambert's Point, Va., while endeavoring to avoid a possible collision with vessels lying at anchor in the stream, waiting to take coal, has been floated.

Freight tonnage passing through the Soo canals, according to the September report, was over 8,500,000, making the season's tonnage to date over 40,000,000. Less than 10,000,000 more is needed to exceed the record of last season. The year will break last year's record by several millions.

The output of automobiles for 1908 is expected to be 55,000 cars, as against 45,000 made this year. These figures, which are said to be a conservative estimate, have been announced by the management of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' association.

Judges Grosscup, Baker and Seaman, in the United States circuit court of appeals, in an opinion overruled the petition of the Chicago & Alton Railway company for a rehearing on its appeal from the $50,000 fine imposed by Judge K. M. Landis a little more than a year ago for rebating.

It is authoritatively stated at the state department that there is no foundation for the report that Robert Bacon, first assistant secretary of state, is to succeed Ambassador Tower at Berlin, and it is added that no word has yet been received from Mr. Tower indicating his intention to retire from the office.

But for the investigation of the child's father and the timely arrival of officers, Henry Johnson, a negro, who it is alleged assaulted the three-year-old daughter of Leonard Broadway, would probably have been lynched at Memphis by a posse of neighbors, who captured him after a two-mile chase.

Grand Master John J. Hanrahan of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers has issued a call for a meeting of the general chairmen of the joint protective boards of all the railroads east of Chicago to meet in Buffalo. The purpose of the meeting is to establish a standard rate of pay and uniform operating and working rules for the various railroads in the territory embracing all the lines east of Chicago.

Sir Thomas Lipton has decided to build the new Fife-designed cutter to compete in the British regattas in 1908. It is intended that the cutter shall eclipse the White Heather II., the present champion of the British yachts.

A gang of convicts who were being escorted to Tobolsk, Siberia, from Tyumen, Eastern Siberia, attacked their guards and wounded six of them. The guards fired on the convicts, twenty-two of whom were killed. Eleven of the prisoners escaped with rifles which they had wrested from the members of the escort.

RETIRED PASTOR AND WIFE CELEBRATE THEIR JUBILEE

REV. AND MRS. GEORGE HOERGER.

The fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Rev. and Mrs. George Hoerger was celebrated at the German M. E. church at Faribault. A large number of the members of the congregation and numerous friends were present.

Rev. and Mrs. Hoerger are both natives of Germany. Mr. Hoerger was born on March 22, 1835, at Sontheim, Wuertenberg, and came to this country in 1855. Mrs. Hoerger, whose maiden name was Agatha Soutter, was born on May 1, 1841, at Friedenstadt, Wuertenberg, and came to America in 1853.

After coming West they both located at Aurora, Ill., where they met and were married in October, 1857. Mr. Hoerger was then in the shoe business. In 1866 he entered the Northwestern conference of the German M. E. church.

During his ministerial work he supplied the following places: Winona, 1866-1867; St. Charles, 1867-1868; Blooming Grove, 1868-1870; Cannon River, 1870-1872; Red Wing, 1872-1875; Rochester, 1875-1877; Winona, 1877-1880; La Crosse, Wis., 1880-1882.

Mr. Hoerger's health failed while he was stationed at La Crosse, and he was obliged to give up his work and went to Faribault to make his home. In the fall of 1885 he again resumed his labors in the church and located at Mankato, where he remained until 1888, and Owatonna, 1888-1890, after which he again gave up his chosen work and removed to Faribault, where he and his wife have since resided.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoerger have four children living; Edward Hoerger, Faribault; William Hoerger, who at present is in New York; Miss Sarah Hoerger, Faribault; Benjamin Hoerger, who is an instructor at Oberlin college, Oberlin, Ohio. They also have five grandchildren.

STATE GETS MORE LAND.

The state auditor has received from the interior department at Washington its approval of indemnity land selections in the Duluth land district, amounting to 38,624.41 acres.

The tracts selected are in St. Louis, Lake, Cook, Itasca and Koochiching counties. They are to be patented to the state to make up for school sections on the Red Lake Indian Reservation, and also for school sections that fell short of the 640 acres because of lakes.

The land is largely timbered and in time the stumpage will be sold. Mr. Iverson hopes, however, that iron ore will be located on some of the places.

He has made as many selections as possible along the general direction of ore finds, picking out a number of stray forties that have been left from timber and stone selections.

Capt. John L. Wells, formerly American consul at Madagascar and associate editor of the Yonkers Standard, died at his home in Yonkers.

SEARCHING FOR THE FLAG.

F. A. Carlson, president of the Association of the Civil War Veterans of the Third Minnesota, is in search of a flag which has been lost for several years.

After the regiment was mustered out of service in 1855, the national emblem was presented to the City of Red Wing in appreciation of the reception accorded them upon the old soldiers' return from the battle field. The flag was first presented to W. W. Phelps in 1865, who at that time was mayor of the city, L. A. Hancock making the presentation speech. E. W. Hawkins made a tin box and in it the flag was placed, which was for some years kept in the Masonic hall. Five years later, when Decoration day exercises were held, Old Glory was last seen floating from the breeze over the door of Christ Episcopal church.

It is believed that the flag can be traced and shown at the annual reunion of the Third Minnesota, which will be held at Red Wing next summer.

The coming of Capt. Roald Amundsen, the famous arctic explorer, to make a lecturing tour of America, is being hailed with delight by the Norwegians of the United States. He will land in New York the latter part of October, and will appear in most of the leading cities of the country, as well as in smaller cities, where Scandinavian-Americans are numerous. That his tour will be a brilliant success, there can be no doubt. Like so many of his countrymen—Dr. Nansen, for instance—he is a master of the English language, so that he can appear to advantage before an American audience. He is not only an explorer, but also a scholar, who has carried on extensive research work along scientific lines.

His discovery of the Northwest passage is so far his greatest achievement, but there are those who believe that he will win still greater renown by reaching the North pole. Capt. Amundson is a great admirer of Dr. Nansen, and will adopt his method of reaching the pole, namely, by drifting across it on an ice floe.

The story of his finding of the Northwest passage Capt. Amundson has recently told in his new book, which is full of thrilling interest.

His expedition brought back remarkable collections of different kinds from the regions through which it passed. For the first time in history relics were found of the Sir John Franklin vessels, the Erebus and Terror. An old Eskimo had in his possession three metal bolts and two cooking vessels made from the copper plating off the bottom of two ships which he said had come when he was a small boy. The ships had been deserted by the crews and had finally been crushed by the ice and sunk to the bottom, but before this had happened the Eskimos had helped themselves to anything that they considered useful. The captain traded with him, giving in return an old saw and a hatchet, and these remarkable relics are now installed together with all the other things from the Gjoa expedition at the University of Kristiania. The old Eskimo disappeared during the night and nevermore showed up during Amundsen's long stay, evidently fearing that the captain might regret his bargain. The British museum has already offered $5,000 for the articles, but they will remain in Norway.

Hundreds of cows have not been milked for days at a time and have bellowed with pain, their udders bursting with milk.

The Royal Yacht Club of Stockholm, of which King Oscar is honorary admiral, is not going to let Sir Thomas Lipton get all the glory there is in trying to lift the America's cup, for it has decided to issue a challenge to the New York Yacht club for a speed trail. Two wealthy Swedish capitalists, William Olsson and Gosta Kyhlberger, have contributed the princely sum of $135,000 toward the construction and equipment of a yacht, and the best boat builders in Sweden have been engaged to do the work. A dispatch from New York says that there is no doubt but that the New York Yacht club will accept the challenge. The challengers at Stockholm prefer that the length of the competing yachts be limited to 70 feet.

The national society organized last spring for the purpose of checking the emigration to America has addressed a circular letter to the landsthing, that recently convened, asking that it be provided with the funds necessary to carry on a vigorous campaign. The plan of the society is to organize local societies for checking emigration in the various cities of Sweden, to keep a close watch on the labor market and find employment in Sweden for men out of employment or get advantageous change of employment for those already occupied, who show signs of discontent. It is also proposed to keep a sharp eye on the emigration agents and representatives of American land companies, that are trying by all sorts of means to lure the young Swedish men across the Atlantic to make their fortune in the New World. It is still further proposed by the society that the government exercise greater vigilance to prevent the young men from leaving before they have served the requisite term in the army. But it would seem that this is a mistake, as one reason why so many young men are leaving is to escape military service, and it would seem best for the government to ease up on this military business.

A few months since a German, named Niesigh, was arrested at Hvidoere, where he was employed, on the charge of being an anarchist, who had come to Hvidoere to assassinate the empress dowager of Russia and Queen Alexandra of England, who were sojourning at the summer palace there. He was sent to Germany and given to understand that he would fare ill should he dare to return to Denmark. On Oct. 4, however, the police of Copenhagen got word that Niesigh was on the way to the capital and arrested him as he arrived at the station. It is believed that he was on the way back to Hvidoere.

DEFIES THREE KINGS TO WED WOMAN OF CHOICE

Prince George of Greece Will Marry Marie Bonaparte, Richest Princess of Europe.

The storied romances of days of old when knighthood flowered, and love overcame all obstacles to win its desires, are paralleled in the happy termination of the loves of Princess Letitia Marie Bonaparte, descendant of the mighty Corsican, and Prince George of Greece.

The pair are to be wedded in the near future, and fifteen millions that are the dower of the young women, will put them far beyond the danger of any financial retaliation on the part of those who have been so obstinately opposing the match.

Seldom indeed has any couple been compelled to overcome opposition as determined as confronted this pair when first their romance led them into the dream of becoming husband and wife.

Three kings of Europe put themselves on record as bitterly opposing the match.

King Edward of England, because of family ties, entered his protest; King Victor Emmanuel of Italy impressed on his ministers to go to the very limit of their powers to thwart the couple, and finally King George of Greece, father of the Romeo in this twentieth century romance, expostulated vigorously with his son.

None of these kingly foes of Cupid could urge anything which in the United States would be thought a sufficient reason for excluding the young lady from marriage with royalty.

True, her mother, the Princess Eleanor, who died at the child's birth, twenty-five years ago, was of plebian origin, but to make up for that, on her father's side she comes direct from the stock of the men who a century ago was master of the continent, and made and unmade kings at will. Moreover, her father, Prince Roland, has more than blood to recommend him, for he is a noted savant, whose discoveries in the field of scientific research have won him many honors.

PRINCE GEORGE OF GREECE,
Who defied three kings in choosing a wife.

PRINCESS MARIE BONAPARTE,
Fiancee of Prince George of Greece.

Then, much ado was made about the fortune of the princess, who in her own right, has more wealth than any princess of Europe. This money, unfortunately for her piece of mind, comes to her from her grandfather, M. Blanc, who founded the gambling place of Monte Carlo, and there made such huge sums that he died immensely wealthy.

It was mainly because of the taint on the fortune that King Edward tried to dissuade King George of Greece from permitting the match, and perhaps there also lingered in the king of the Britons some vestige of the traditional hatred for the stock of the ruler, who finally at Waterloo ended his mighty career a British prisoner.

The Princess Marie and Prince George are said to have met in Rome. She is an ardent lover of the arts, and was studying paintings in the famous city of the seven hills when she met the son of the ruler of Greece.

Until she fell in love with Prince George the affections of Princess Marie had been centered on her father, whom she worships.

He is the son of Prince Pierre, and grandson of Lucien Bonaparte, Prince of Canino, and elder brother of Napoleon I.

When Prince Roland visited the United States in 1893, he was welcomed by the foremost men of science in the new world. He went to the territories for anthropological investigation.

Prior to her romance with Prince George there has only been one occasion when with any show of authenticity the princess was reported engaged.

Then it was said that she would wed the Count de Treden.

The Tredens were and are one of the oldest families of the Breton aristocracy, and the Faubourg St. Germain marvelled at the good luck of the princess in getting a husband of such blood.

The gossips were not content at attacking the Princess Marie because of her descent on the maternal side from the gambler, who, expelled from Germany, founded Monte Carlo. They also reviewed an old scandal that the wife of Prince Pierre, the father of Prince Roland, Marie's father, was Justine Rufin, wife of a journeyman plumber, whose marriage to Prince Pierre had always been disputed during her life.

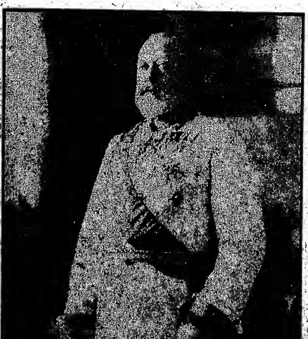
They pointed out that the name of the alleged wife of Prince Pierre was excluded from the Almanac de Gotha, while she lived, and that during the same period Prince Pierre was entered as a bachelor. Thus they tried to prove that Prince Roland and his daughter were only by courtesy entitled to the great name they bore.

Neither the prince nor his daughter made any reply, and one day the Faubourg was astonished to hear that Marie had thrown over her distinguished suitor, Prince Tredern. Then it developed that she had learned that in advance of the marriage he was spending her fortune, and had already pledged much of it.

This demonstration that she was being married alone for her wealth so angered the princess that she cast aside the darling of the Faubourg, and gave an exhibition of true woman's pride and spirit that silenced her critics.

All that could be adduced of this kind of gossip was used to dissuade Prince George from marrying Marie, but he had the courage of his convictions.

The world is indeed progressing when even kings and statesmen cannot make princes marry as they wish.



KING EDWARD OF ENGLAND,
Who opposed the prince's matrimonial plans.

Listen to any woman five minutes and you will hear her say that she is "too particular" to do this or that.

FLOWERS IN PLENTY

PROVIDED BY THE GOVERNMENT FOR THE PRESIDENT.

Extensive Greenhouses Attached to the White House Are Taxed to Their Capacity to Provide the Blooms Required.

Some extensive and very important improvements are planned for that unique government institution known as the president's hothouses, says Waldon Fawcett in the New Orleans Picayune. New buildings are to replace several of the old greenhouses that are now too small to accommodate their required quota of posies, and incidentally it is proposed to make this gardener's domain serve as a sort of floral setting for a private pier that has been designed as a special landing for the president's yachts.

This latter statement may for the moment mystify persons who have not been in Washington since Theodore Roosevelt assumed the presidency and who remember conditions at the White House as they were in the old days when the conservatories were located directly adjoining the executive mansion. However, the reconstruction of the presidential mansion as planned several years ago made it necessary to remove the conservatories from the old site, and now these flower palaces, vastly enlarged in order to meet the demands of more extensive entertaining at the White House, are located some distance south of the White House, almost on the banks of the Potomac river.

Present conditions, therefore, make something of a contrast to those of years gone by when mistresses of the White House could step direct from the drawing room to the floral bower, but for all that the greenhouses are now fully a quarter of a mile from the White House, the president and Mrs. Roosevelt make frequent visits, as do also their children, to the floral establishment maintained for their especial benefit. Often the first lady of the land will personally select the clusters of blooms that she sends to her personal friends. Just here it may be noted that, for all that the public has heard little on the subject, the floral prerogatives of the president have gradually grown in scope, until nowadays they constitute one of his most important perquisites. The total flower trade of many a small city might be supplied from the floral harvest of the White House conservatories. Foremost among the demands upon the flower shop which Uncle Sam maintains for his best-paid servant is that for cut flowers for the ornamentation of the various rooms at the White house and the presidential office building. This does not mean, as might be supposed, merely the supplying of the thousands of blooms required for decorative purposes on the occasion of every reception or dinner at the White House. That would be responsibility enough for the average florist, but the president's flower growers must in addition perform a similar service, on a smaller scale, every day in the year. Every morning huge clusters of beautiful flowers are placed in almost all the different rooms at the White House and on the desks of the president and his secretaries at the office building. Even when the family is absent the floral offerings are in place, just the same.

However, the greatest drain upon this floral fountain head is found in the tremendous quantities of flowers which are generously given away. President and Mrs. Roosevelt have used flowers as gifts to an extent not followed by any previous occupants of the White House. To many of their relatives and personal friends they send such sweet-scented tokens almost daily, and many a sickroom has been brightened and many a wedding decoration enhanced, thanks to the generosity of the occupants of the White House.

Perhaps the best idea of the productiveness of this special flower mart may be formed by a peep into the rosehouses, upon which heavy demands are made almost constantly. The most spectacular part of the display is to be seen in the great glass structure given over exclusively to the always preeminent American beauty roses. Here the visitor can look down a long, narrow aisle, lined on either side by close-grown rose bushes rising to a height of 10 or 12 feet. There are thousands upon thousands of plants in this one house, and 1,500 bushes are to be found in an adjoining building devoted to the popular bridesmaid and Golden Gate roses. Other roses, such as the Killarney and Kaiserin, are also extensively cultivated in these gardens under glass. Carnations rank next to roses in the output of the White House conservatories, and it is nothing unusual for the president's gardeners to have 3,000 or 4,000 carnations in full bloom at one time.

President's Clipping Bureau.

In the White House there is a clerk who has also quite a peculiar occupation for a government clerk. He is the official clipper and scrap book paster of the president. As is well known, the president, as well as his predecessors, has everything concerning himself or his policies clipped from the leading papers and pasted in a scrap book. These are sometimes left in the archives of the White House, and there are no end of these bulky volumes now filed away in the attic or cellar of the White House. It has been suggested that in view of the wide newspaper notoriety the president is receiving these days the official paster must be working over time.

THE SCHEME WILL FAIL.

The scheme of a few of Governor Johnson's enemies in the democratic party have been attempting to undermine him by planning control of the next state convention and selecting delegates from among the men who engineered the ill-fated Hearst boom three years ago. These gentlemen are attempting to make it appear that Governor Johnson and the state administration is antagonistic to Bryan—a conclusion wholly unwarranted. The governor has repeatedly said that he is not a candidate, and that he believes Minnesota democrats are and ought to be for Bryan.

However, the governor's friends do not approve of the suggestion that the delegation to the national convention should be made up of men antagonistic to or lukewarm in support of his administration, and insist that only the friends of Governor Johnson should be selected. Along this line the Albert Lea Standard, edited by H. G. Day, long a personal friend of Mr. Bryan, gives this advice:

"A few of our estimable and intense democratic compatriots, who with us have stood guard and fought on the picket lines for radical reform, for Bryan and the principles he fearlessly and best represents, seem recently to have been affrighted by a nightmare, or a self-imbued apprehension, that something is going wrong or that something sinister is going to happen if they do not rally to the rescue and adopt measures to prevent it. To this end they have held a meeting and assumed, it appears, to plan to control the situation, if not to acquire domination of the party or its action for either their laudable or personal purposes. We scarcely believe that any one will presume to impeach our fealty to our principles or to Mr. Bryan, but we distinctly disagree with the course which our friends are pursuing, and regret it. For we deem it altogether untimely, unnecessary and uncalled for. It tends to create factionism and antagonism where there is utterly no just reason for it, and it will be a fiasco because the democracy of the state is overwhelmingly, and even more, will be indignantly opposed to such a movement."

THE "busted" beef trust and the "busted" paper trust are still busy raising prices. Maybe we'd better not "bust" any more of the trusts. It seems to make them mad.

THE postmaster editors of the Second district seem to be unanimously in favor of Taft for president and McCleary for congress This is another evidence of the truth of the biblical story of the ox and his master's crib.

THE Blue Earth Post has reached the conclusion that "between the 'findings' of Judge Lochren and the 'rulings' of the state board of health, the people of Minnesota have the strenuous features of existence brought forcibly to the front.

J. M. HANNAFORD, second vice-president of the Northern Pacific railroad company is quoted by the Duluth Herald as saying that he has so far failed to observe any bad effects that have resulted to the railroads from the action of the state legislators and the laws passed by congress.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

North Branch Review: There is an old adage about keeping your nose out of other people's business, but people don't seem to be finding any fault with Mr. Kellogg for the impertinence he shows in prying into the Standard Oil's business.

Hibbing Tribune: The Big Fork Compass is for sale and we would be tempted to buy if we could buy with it the ability to write those Variations of the Needle,

St. Peter Herald: Great is irrigation. That fostered by Harriman and his kind produces four shares of stock where only one drew dividends before.

Paynesville Press: If Col. Bryan does not hurry up and get a half-Nelson on the food trust, it is likely that his next dollar dinner will consist of a glass of water and a few well chosen words.

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: Living is pretty high now—almost touches the ceiling—but fifty years ago the prices climbed on top of the roof. On Dec. 11, 1856, for instance, flour was selling at $10 a barrel: pork $80 a barrel, and butter 50 cents a pound right here in Minnesota. The comparison may make us feel a little better but those who buy can not help hoping that we have reached the limit.

Minnesota Mascot: Governor Johnson has given it out that he is not a candidate for the presidency. This may not prevent the democrats from nominating him, however, as they will no doubt have to press someone into service to make the customary "run." Bryan has made the sacrifice twice and it is really not the square thing to make him give up any more of his "best years" to this thankless and fruitless struggle. Pass it along.

St. Peter Free Press: A table of automobile fatalities has been recently published, which reveals a startling state of reckless driving and is deserving of serious consideration by the authorities. The number of persons killed in automobile accidents in 1906 is reported to be 209, injured 865. This is a frightful record. And still the number of accidents appears to be increasing. The question is, what is the public going to do about it?

Thief River Falls Press: Governor Johnson says he is not presidential timber. The democrats, or for that matter the republicans either, might go farther and fare worse.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy, a part of of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you will keep the filters right you will have no troubles with your kidneys.

Mrs. Jas. Rogers, living in Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and can recommend them as a reliable kidney remedy. At the time I began their use I was suffering from headache and a soreness about the kidney regions. My kidneys were much disordered, and the secretions very unnatural in appearance. I felt languid most of the time, seemed to have but little strength, was very nervous and dizzy spells were of frequent occurrence. My attention was drawn to Doan's kidney pills and I procured a box. From the satisfactory results I derived from their use I feel that I can recommend them very highly."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

BAD BLOOD
THE SOURCE OF ALL DISEASE

Every part of the body is dependent on the blood for nourishment and strength. When this life stream is flowing through the system in a state of purity and richness we are assured of perfect and uninterrupted health; because pure blood is nature's safe-guard against disease. When, however, the body is fed on weak, impure or polluted blood, the system is deprived of its strength, disease germs collect, and the trouble is manifested in various ways. Pustular eruptions, pimples, rashes and the different skin affections show that the blood is in a feverish and diseased condition as a result of too much acid or the presence of some irritating humor. Sores and Ulcers are the result of morbid, unhealthy matter in the blood, and Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders that will continue to grow worse as long as the poison remains. These impurities and poisons find their way into the blood in various ways. Often a sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, leaves the refuse and waste matters to sour and form uric and other acids, which are taken up by the blood and distributed throughout the circulation. Coming in contact with contagious diseases is another cause for the poisoning of the blood; we also breathe the germs and microbes of Malaria into our lungs, and when these get into the blood in sufficient quantity it becomes a carrier of disease instead of health. Some are so unfortunate as to inherit bad blood, perhaps the dregs of some old constitutional disease of ancestors is handed down to them and they are constantly annoyed and troubled with it. Bad blood is the source of all disease, and until this vital fluid is cleansed and purified the body is sure to suffer in some way. For blood troubles of any character S. S. S. is the best remedy ever discovered. It goes down into the circulation and removes any and all poisons, supplies the healthful properties it needs, and completely and permanently cures blood diseases of every kind. The action of S. S. S. is so thorough that hereditary taints are removed and weak, diseased blood made strong and healthy so that disease cannot remain. It cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., and does not leave the slightest trace of the trouble for future outbreaks. The whole volume of blood is renewed and cleansed after a course of S. S. S. It is also nature's greatest tonic, made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and is absolutely harmless to any part of the system. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Book on the blood and any medical advice free to all who write.

JACK'S TRAINING

By ROSE TERRY COOKE

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Mr. Brown was a very good man—"awfully good," little Polly Peabody said. Perhaps he was. He was reasonable as a treatise on logic, and calm as a Quaker; strictly honest, even-tempered and perfectly well. All he needed was better eyesight.

Not that his eyes were weak. Those clear, blue, serene eyes never flinched from any shine of sun or gas. It was moral eyesight that failed him. He never could see beyond his own shadow.

"Why does Jones get so excited over his business matters?" Mr. Brown would inquire, with mild surprise. "I never do. He really should be more tranquil." Or, "Why is Robinson disturbed by his political defeat? I do not allow the inevitable to disturb my sleep and wear on my system."

No. Good as Mr. Brown was, he lacked clarity. He never could see why all the rest of the world could not be as well-balanced as he was, and he blamed the world because it was not.

Why he should fall in love with little Polly Peabody was a problem nobody could solve; but then that kind of problem is always difficult. Polly was a gay, rosy school girl, with brown curly hair flying all about her head, dimples of the wickedest sort in either cheek, laughing brown eyes, and as much mischief as would have furnished two monkeys, a parrot and a kitten. But she had a clear head and plenty of penetration, and she was the pet of all the school.

Polly liked him very much, he sent her such lovely bouquets, so nicely arranged. He disapproved of candy, being a reader of "horrid chemical books," as Polly called them; but he brought her candied fruits, French chocolate and rare foreign sweetmeats, some of which, I regret to say, she ordered into the kitchen at once, because they lasted like spiced rhubarb!

The end of it all was, however, that they were married in early September and went off on the orthodox wedding tour.

Perhaps it was not all perfect bliss—wedding tours are not always. Jack would hump his shoulder uneasily when Polly wanted to rest her head there. He did not think it was proper at all. Then she curled down on his elbow, and he could not be quite brutal enough to withdraw it from the beautiful little head, the soft cheek, the sleepy eyes, that nestled under his wing so confidingly.

But though she would eat all kinds of things at hotels, and would not be sick, as he prophesied, and ran a race round the park before breakfast with two little cousins they met there, Mr. Brown bore it pretty well; better than Polly did when Aunt Schuyler, a fashionable female with a dash of strong-mindedness about her, that failed dreadfully for want of the aceful mind, said to her one fine morning:

"I quite like your Mr. Brown, Paulina. He appears to be a man of superior intellect, but he reserves himself too much. His cerebration is too occult."

Here Polly giggled and madame glared at her.

"It is evidently your mission, my dear, to develop this inner life; to exhibit the soul which now withdraws itself in solitude. Yes, even you have a mission."

"Stuff!" laughed the profane Polly. "I never want to have a mission. I don't believe in missions, Aunt Nancy." Mrs. Schuyler's name was Annetje, and she was Dutch from before the flood. "I shall darn his stockings if the holes aren't too big, and I shall brighten up this poky old house, you may be sure; but as for Jack, he'll do as he is."

Mrs. Schuyler sighed as Polly rushed down the piazza to meet Jack, glowing with affection and indignation, and sweeping the dusty floor with a vast besom of muslin ruffles like the tail of a white peacock.

Alas! how little Polly knew that Mr. Brown was at the moment thinking it was his mission to educate her into his own ways and manners. I think she would have boxed his ears then and there could she have read that orderly brain. But they went home as ignorant of each other as people usually are after a six months' acquaintance, and began their mutual life.

Polly was certainly bewitching. It was hard for John to find fault with her, and it was a long while before she saw flaws in her "dear old Jack." But at last he mustered courage. Polly was a sensitive creature and came down one rainy autumn morning all cuddled up in a big, soft shawl, with her nose quite blue.

"O Pussy, do get out of my way!" she snapped at the kitten as she stumbled over it. She did not like the coffee at all, and then the cream jug slipped out of her hand and flooded the sugar bowl, and she set it down with a bang on the waiter.

"What ails you, my dear?" calmly inquired Mr. Brown. "Are you ill today?"

"Oh, it's this nasty weather! An east wind always makes me as cross as two sticks, Jack. I can't help it—ugh!"

"It is not worth while to be a weather-cock, Paulina. Be reasonable, my dear. I never allow the weather to affect me."

It did not occur to him that he was not a tingling bundle of sensitive nerves and delicate organs like the little woman before him. John Brown's fair skin was thick, his muscles firm, his circulation vigorous. How could weather affect him?

But on this string he played to Polly week after week, and yet she would not dance; she was weary of the tune, and her quick brain came to her rescue. One snowy day when John returned to dinner, an odd bundle on the seat of the bay-window attracted his eye. There seemed to be flannel and fur together.

"Paulina, what in the world is this?" he asked of the demure little creature who sat by the fire warming her wee feet on the fender.

"That's only the thermometer, dear. It will keep going down and down this cold day. I'm trying to improve it. It is so absurd to be affected by the weather. I thought I would put things round it, but it don't seem to mind them much. It's so unreasonable!" And here she heaved a deep sigh, so evidently ordered for the occasion that Mr. Brown bit his lip as he turned away to the table.

If he said nothing, perhaps, like the famous speechless parrot, he kept up a terrible thinking, for Polly heard no more about her "unreasonable sensitiveness," but suddenly became the possessor of certain fur-lined slippers, the softest of white India shawls for home wear, and sealskin furs that swallowed up her fairy figure in their downy darkness, till winter vexed the days in vain as far as Polly was concerned.

But the education went on in other ways. If physical nature could no more be changed than the mercury in the thermometer, certainly that bright mind could shape itself to rules, that wayward, witching nature subdue itself to dignity and calmness. Foolish man! But was he the first of his kind? or will he be the last?

"Paulina, What Is That For?"

Polly was not plastic; no more is the rose tree when you try to make an oak of it. Some plants die in the training; others burst the straps and assert themselves. She was by no means one of the dying kind. She fully understood at length what her husband was about, and laughed in her sleeve.

One day a friend of Mr. Brown's brought him a flourishing young ivy from Kenilworth castle. It affords room for the statistical mind to inquire the area of that castle and the extent of its ivies, when we consider how many are transplanted from that one locality. But Mr. Brown had an unusual taste for plants, and was gratified by the remembrance.

The ivy grew well in the east bay window, and had already thrown its graceful length half way up the sash, when Mr. Brown found it one fine morning tied with full 20 strings to a straight, wooden rod, its shining leaves strapped to stiff paper spills at right angles with the stem, the whole thing looking ungainly and tortured enough.

Polly sat at the table, carefully pouring out the tea, as innocent in aspect as any lamb.

"Paulina, what is that for?" And Mr. Brown pointed a severe finger at the ivy.

"Oh, I thought I'd train it into a bush, it would be so much easier to take care of!"

"Train it into a bush! You can't do it. Whoever heard of making a vine into a shrub?"

"Why, Jack, I thought you liked to make things the way you want them if it isn't their nature."

A sort of lightning flash went through Jack's brain at this demure little speech. He seemed to see Polly prim, and proper, as he recalled his maiden aunts and his grandmother. He turned cold at the idea, and then he colored to his fair hair.

"Polly!" said he, with an inexpressible accent of conviction and contrition, holding out his arms.

"Jackey," cried Polly, half-laughing and half-sobbing, "can't you like me the way I grew?"

"Like you!" The exclamation was immediately smothered.

When Mrs. Cortlend Schuyler passed through Boston two years after, and saw John Brown lying on the parlor floor with a curly, crowing baby astride of his manly breast, and Paulina on a cushion beside him trying to show the aforesaid infant how to pull its father's whiskers, that estimable woman shook her head and sighed.

"Paulina," said she severely, "have you fulfilled your mission?"

"No, ma'am," replied Polly, "not that one."

WOLVES SAVED MAN'S LIFE

HOISTED INTENDED VICTIM INTO BRANCHES OF A TALL TREE.

Remarkable Experience of a Pennsylvania Man Who Was Surrounded by Wolves and How Escaped at the Sacrifice of His Dog.

Erasmus Hultwale of Dumber bought a dog last week at Claytown, ten miles from here, and on asking the owner for a rope with which to lead the animal home received the reply that there was no rope on the place.

On investigation this proved to be almost, but not quite, true, for, although there was no short rope, a long, new clothes line presented itself and was taken down and one end tied to the dog, Erasmus promising to see that the line was returned in time for the next Monday's wash.

Erasmus was much vexed at being compelled to walk off through the woods on his homeward way holding a large and inconvenient coil of rope in his hands, but there was no help for it, and he made the best of it.

The way was long, and ere half the journey was finished night overtook him, and it was quite dark beneath the trees, the only light coming from the moon, which, half full, filtered a dim gleam through the sheltering branches.

Soon, to the alarm of the traveler, he heard an ominous howl not far away, and this was answered from another direction, and in a few moments still other savage calls came down the wind, and before he had fully realized his danger he was nearly surrounded by wolves, which had gathered together to make a meal of him unless he could find some way of escaping them.

There were no trees that he could climb, and, as he had no weapon, he ran for his life, the dog, itself terribly frightened, doing him valiant service by running ahead and pulling vigorously at the rope. On sped the frightened man, straining every nerve to reach some place of safety, but the savage and treacherous animals, gaining courage as their numbers increased, pressed ever nearer and nearer, threatening soon to end the race and the runner's life.

At last he could run no more, and, stopping beneath the spreading branches of a huge elm, and, placing his back against the stem of the tree, he drew from his pocket his clasp-knife and resolved to sell his life as dearly as might be.

Round him raged the savage wolves, coming ever nearer and nearer, and, as they pressed about him, he cast his eyes up to the branches above, hoping that there might be one low enough so that he could reach it by leaping.

Vain hope! There was none nearer than twelve feet above the ground.

Suddenly he bethought him of the rope in his hands, and, dashing at the wolves with a loud yell, he frightened them back a few feet and then, whirling the coil around his head, he cast it successfully over the limb nearest to him and as the end fell to the ground again he seized both strands in his hands and tried to climb up. All in vain! He could not raise himself a foot.

In his excitement and despair he momentarily forgot the wolves, and as soon as his eye ceased to daunt them several of them sprang forward at the same time that he leaped into the air and, directing their attention to the shivering and whimpering dog, they seized upon it and drew it away from the tree, and then, aided by a dozen others that sprang forward to partake of the feast, they dragged their victim with them, fighting and snarling as they snapped and tore at its form.

Their combined strength was thus fastened upon the dog, and, as they drew him from the tree the end of of the rope, which was tied to him, was also drawn along, and as the other end began to mount into the air the delighted Erasmus seized hold of it and was thus drawn swiftly aloft by the wolves till he reached the branch, upon which he then perched and was safe, although the ravening wolves, their appetites merely sharpened by the tidbit of the dog, remained beneath the tree all the long hours of the night and till morning light drove them away.

A Scab Workman.

An Irishman was walking down Washington street, in Seattle, when he paused before a book store. The proprietor had put up some signs advertising his bargains, and one of them read like this:

"Dickin's Works Here for $4 all Week."

"The divvil he does," said Pat in deep disgust. "The dirty scab!"

In Vacation Time.

"I engaged the rooms for my vacation," he said, "because the landlady wrote me that they overlooked a superb garden of 200 acres, richly adorned with statuary, where I was at liberty to promenade."

"Well?" he inquired.

"It was a cemetery," he said, bitterly.

Reliable Grain Buyers.

We wish to call our readers' attention to the advertisement of the Geo. C. Harper Company of Minneapolis. They are the leading grain buyers of the Northwest and have been established at Minneapolis for the past 25 years; are members of the Minneapolis and Duluth exchanges; can say they are a reliable firm to deal with. Write them for quotations, etc.

SPAIN'S CANNY RAILROADS.

Visitors Have to Pay for a Ticket Merely to Go on the Platform.

In Spain the railroads do not lose a chance to make a little profit, even in the case of the non-travelers. When you see somebody off in that country you must pay for the privilege.

The railroads all sell billetes de anten, which are good for the platform only. These cost generally five centimos, equivalent to a cent in American money.

Just why this is done it is hard to see, because persons entering a train cannot very well avoid the conductor, who is always making trips to inspect the carriages. If a person attempted to steal a ride in a carriage he would have a small chance of getting away with it. If caught he would have to pay a penalty of just twice the fare between the point where he was discovered and the point where tickets last were inspected.

Origin of Cards.

The origin of cards lies far back in the hidden antiquity of Asia, no record so far having been found to unravel the source. It was from the distant Orient that cards, along with chess, were first introduced into Southern Europe, Spain and Italy, especially. The earliest of these cards have been lost, unfortunately, and no record of them preserved. But in no way were they even a suggestion of our present-day cards.

Not a Sure Thing.

Two "gemmen" ob "cullah" were coming up City Hall alley yesterday afternoon. They wore togs that for local color had anything the rainbow attempted beaten a dozen furlongs.

"Know wat Jim's gwine and done?" asked one.

"No, wat 'tis?" responded the other.

"He's g'wan bought a razzer."

"Dat hain't so worse" said his friend. "A razzer's handy sometimes."

"Yah," answered the other in tones of deep contempt, "but dis yere fool Jim g'wan bought a safety razzer."

His Word Not Good.

John and Jim agreed to settle a difference by fighting it out. It was understood that whoever wanted to quit should cry "'nough!" John had Jim down and was hammering him soundly when Jim cried "'nough!" But John paid no attention to his cry and kept on pounding him. Again and again Jim called out "'nough!" But John paid no heed and kept busy with his fists. A boy standing near asked:

"Why don't you let the feller up? He's yelled ''nough!'"

"But he's such a liar you can't believe him."

Metals and Metaphors.

"It is most amazing," said a metallurgist, "how the world relies on metals for its metaphors and similies. Thus an orator is silver tongued or golden-mouthed. An explorer is bronzed by African suns. A resolute chap has an iron will. A sluggard moves with leaden feet. An ostrich has a copper-lined stomach. A millionaire has tin. A swindler is as slippery as quicksilver. A borrower has brass."

New Answers to Questions.

Customer—Will that wear well?

Tailor—No; not particularly. It's a rather poorly made cloth and won't make up any too well, either. The fit is likely to be poor, too, and our prices are exorbitant. Draper & Co., at No. 117, are showing a splendid line of suitings and their prices are quite low.—Puck.

TEN YEARS OF PAIN.

Unable to Do Even Housework Because of Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Margaret Emmerich, of Clinton St., Napoleon, O., says: "For fifteen years I was a great sufferer from kidney troubles. My back pained me terribly. Every turn or move caused sharp, shooting pains. My eyesight was poor, dark spots appeared before me, and I had dizzy spells. For ten years I could not do housework, and for two years did not get out of the house. The Kidney secretions were irregular, and doctors were not helping me. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me quick relief, and finally cured me. They saved my life."

WATCHING THE AUTOMOBILE.

Owner and Chaffeur Have Anxious Moments While in a Restaurant.

The man who drove up to the restaurant in an automobile brought his chaffeur in with him to eat. They stood around for several minutes, while the waiters posed at tables all about.

"I want a seat from which I can watch my car," said the owner, when the head waiter approached to find out why the hesitation. "You know that there have been so many cases recently of cars being stolen from in front of restaurants and hotels that I do not want to take any chances."

They got their seats all right within easy range of the automobile, one of the American made machines of the $2,500 type. It is safe to say that the worry incidental to that meal caused a not inconsiderable amount of indigestion. Either master or man had an eye on the automobile throughout the entire meal.

Alcohol From Beets.

Kansas is to have a large share in the manufacture of denatured alcohol in wholesale quantities in a few years, the material for its manufacture being the waste products from the beet sugar refineries. The tops of the beets and the portion of the upper part usually cut off and discarded are to be used in the manufacture of alcohol, and capitalists are interested in the erection of refineries at Garden City.

"BOO-HOO"

Shouts a Spanked Baby.

A Doctor of Divinity, now Editor of a well-known Religious paper, has written regarding the controversy between Collier's Weekly and the Religious Press of the Country and others, including ourselves. Also regarding suits for libel brought by Collier's against us for commenting upon its methods.

These are his sentiments, with some very emphatic words left out.

"The religious Press owes you a debt of gratitude for your courage in showing up Collier's Weekly as the "Yell-Oh Man." Would you care to use the inclosed article on the "Boo Hoo Baby" as the "Yell-Oh Man's successor?"

"A contemporary remarks that Collier's has finally run against a solid hickory "Post" and been damaged in its own estimation to the tune of $750,000.00."

"Here is a publication which has, in utmost disregard of the facts, spread broadcast damaging statements about the Religious Press and others and has suffered those false statements to go uncontradicted until, not satisfied after finding the Religious Press too quiet, and peaceful, to resent the insults, it makes the mistake of wandering into fresh field and butts its rattled head against this Post and all the World laughs. Even Christians smile, as the Post suddenly turns and gives it back a dose of its own medicine."

"It is a mistake to say all the World laughs. No cheery laugh comes from Collier's, but it cries and boo hoos like a spanked baby and wants $750,000.00 to soothe its tender, lacerated feelings."

"Thank Heaven it has at last struck a man with "back bone" enough to call a spade a "spade" and who believes in telling the whole truth without fear or favor."

Perhaps Collier's with its "utmost disregard for the facts," may say no such letter exists. Nevertheless it is on file in our office and is only one of a mass of letters and other data, newspaper comments, etc., denouncing the "yellow" methods of Collier's. This volume is so large that a man could not well go thru it under half a day's steady work. The letters come from various parts of America.

Usually a private controversy is not interesting to the public, but this is a public controversy.

Collier's has been using the "yellow" methods to attract attention to itself, but, jumping in the air, cracking heels together and yelling "Look at me" wouldn't suffice, so it started out on a "Holier Than Thou" attack on the Religious Press and on medicine.

We leave it to the public now, as we did when we first resented Collier's attacks, to say whether, in a craving for sensation and circulation, its attacks do not amount to a systematic mercenary hounding. We likewise leave it to the public to say whether Collier's, by its own policy and methods, has not made itself more ridiculous than any comment of ours could make it.

Does Collier's expect to regain any self-inflicted loss of prestige by demonstrating thru suits for damages, that it can be more artful in evading liability for libels than the humble but resentful victims of its defamation, or does it hope for starting a campaign of libel suits to silence the popular indignation, reproach and resentment which it has aroused.

Collier's can not dodge this public controversy by private law suits. It can not postpone the public judgment against it. That great jury, the Public, will hardly blame us for not waiting until we get a petit jury in a court room, before denouncing this prodigal detractor of institutions founded and fostered either by individuals or by the public, itself.

No announcements during our entire business career were ever made claiming "medicinal effects" for either Postum or Grape-Nuts. Medicinal effects are results obtained from the use of medicines.

Thousands of visitors go thru our entire works each month and see for themselves that Grape-Nuts contains absolutely nothing but wheat, barley and a little salt; Postum absolutely nothing but wheat and about ten per cent of New Orleans Molasses. The art of preparing these simple elements in a scientific manner to obtain the best food value and flavor, required some work and experience to acquire.

Now, when any publication goes far enough out of its way to attack us because our advertising is "medical," it simply offers a remarkable exhibition of ignorance or worse.

We do claim physiological or bodily results of favorable character following the adoption of our suggestions regarding the discontinuance of coffee and foods which may not be keeping the individual in good health. We have no advice to offer the perfectly healthful person. His or her health is evidence in itself that the beverages and foods used exactly fit that person. Therefore, why change?

But to the man or woman who is ailing, we have something to say as a result of an unusually wide experience in food and the result of proper feeding.

In the palpably ignorant attack on us in Collier's, appeared this statement,—"One widely circulated paragraph labors to induce the impression that Grape-Nuts will obviate the necessity of an operation in appendicitis. This is lying, and potentially deadly lying."

In reply to this exhibition of—well let the reader name it, the Postum Co. says:

It be understood that appendicitis results from long continued disturbance in the intestines, caused primarily by undigested starchy food, such as white bread, potatoes, rice, partly cooked cereals and such.

Starchy food is not digested in the upper stomach but passes on into the duodenum, or lower stomach and intestines, where, in a healthy individual, the transformation of the starch into a form of sugar is completed and then the food absorbed by the blood.

But if the powers of digestion are weakened, a part of the starchy food will lie in the warmth and moisture of the body and decay, generating gases and irritating the mucous surfaces until under such conditions the whole lower part of the alimentary canal, including the colon and the appendix, becomes involved. Disease sets up and at times takes the form known as appendicitis.

When the symptoms of the trouble make their appearance, would it not be good, practical, common sense, to discontinue the starchy food which is causing the trouble and take a food in which the starch has been transformed into a form of sugar in the process of manufacture?

This is identically the same form of sugar found in the human body after starch has been perfectly digested.

Now, human food is made up very largely of starch and is required by the body for energy and warmth. Naturally, therefore, its use should be continued, if possible, and for the reasons given above it is made possible in the manufacture of Grape-Nuts.

In connection with this change of food to bring relief from physical disturbances, we have suggested washing out the intestines to get rid of the immediate cause of the disturbance.

Naturally, there are cases where the disease has lain dormant and the abuse continued too long, until apparently only the knife will avail. But it is a well-established fact among the best physicians who are acquainted with the details above recited, that preventative measures are far and away the best.

Are we to be condemned for suggesting a way to prevent disease by following natural methods and for perfecting a food that contains no "medicine" and produces no "medicinal effects" but which has guided literally thousands of persons from sickness to health? We have received during the years past upwards of 25,000 letters from people who have been either helped or made entirely well by following our suggestions, and they are simple.

If coffee disagrees and causes any of the ailments common to some coffee users quit it and take on Postum.

If white bread, potatoes, rice and other starch foods make trouble, quit and use Grape-Nuts food which is largely predigested, and will digest, nourish and strengthen, when other forms of food do not. It's just plain old common sense.

BABY WASTED TO SKELETON.

In Torments with Terrible Sores on Face and Body—Tore at Flesh —Cured by Cuticura.

"My little son, when about a year and a half old began to have sores come out on his face. They began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton and was hardly able to walk. I sent to the drug store and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since, and only for the Cuticura Remedies my precious child would have died from these terrible sores. I used only one cake of Soap and about three boxes of Ointment. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D. No. 1, Woodville, Conn., April 22, 1905."

A Terrible Possibility.

Little Lucy came home from school crying piteously. It was some time before the family could learn the cause of her trouble, but finally the sobbing grew less violent, and she wailed out:

"Teacher says—if I don't get my spelling lesson—she's going to make an example of me, and—she puts examples on the blackboard, and if she puts me there, I'm afraid the scholars will rub me ou—t!"

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MILLIONS OF OPIUM SMOKERS.

China Frightened at Her Own Demoralization as a Result.

The casual observer may think that the opium traffic—smuggling opium, smoking opium, and eating opium—is a minor trade, and indulged in by only a few reckless habitues who want to be wafted to other worlds. This is not so. The stamina and the character of the entire Chinese race have already been so sapped by this drug that the resulting demoralization has frightened even the degraded victims of the habit. To-day China, drugged, debauched, frightened at her own desperate condition, is grappling with the vice that has her by the throat. No such heroic effort at moral reform has ever before been made by a human government. And the Christians who debauched her are looking on, skeptically, questioning China's "sincerity." At Tien-tsin, where the Chinese officials had closed all the opium dens in the native city, Mr. Merwin found the dens in the foreign concessions licensed for revenue by the foreign consuls, running wide open. In vain the Chinese officials protested that this laxity completely nullified the effort of their own prohibition. The consuls could not see their way clear to give up the revenue. Truly, it is an extraordinary story.

The most conservative official estimate of the opium-smoking population in China is 100,000,000—only 16,000,000 more than the entire population of the United States. Many officials place the number at 150,000,000.—Success Magazine.

RHEUMATISM RECIPE

PREPARE SIMPLE HOME-MADE MIXTURE YOURSELF.

Buy the Ingredients from Any Druggist in Your Town and Shake Them in a Bottle to Mix This.

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable, yet simple and harmless prescription, which any one can easily prepare at home:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being a vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach. While there are many so-called Rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquiry at the drug stores of even the small towns elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately, or the druggists will mix the prescription if asked to.

CONTROLLING THE COLORADO.

How the Southern Pacific Company Repaired a Break.

Mr. Harriman promptly took command of the forces of man against nature. With feverish energy, the Southern Pacific company's laborers set to work to repair the Lower Mexican Heading break. Twenty-four hours at a stretch they worked. Every freight car for miles around was pressed into service, hurried to the scene, and pushed back and forth, dumping loads of rock and gravel into the stream. Passenger trains even were held up time and again, while engineers borrowed their locomotives for help in the struggle.

In fifteen days from the time that the work was begun, the break had been closed and the Colorado hurled back into its proper channel. Seventy-seven thousand cubic yards of rock, gravel and clay had man expended in the fight. With this he had patched up a break which the steady onslaught of the river had opened to a width of 1,100 feet in the soft earth banks. The fight was won.

Day by day swarms of workmen are making the great dam stronger and higher. One hundred and forty thousand cubic yards of material, 80,000 of which will be solid rock, will be used to withstand future onslaughts of the river. The great wall, when completed, will be sixty-five feet high, ten feet of which will be above the level of the water. And the Colorado, as it laps this unyielding barrier, must realize that its destructive wanderings are over for all time.

SACRIFICE BOY IN RUSSIA

AMAZING STORY OF FANATICISM WHICH IS BEING INVESTIGATED BY POLICE.

"Saint" Grows Jealous of Child's Popularity and Induces Peasants to Agree to the Sacrifice of the Boy—Revolting Ceremony.

An amazing story of fanaticism has come from the village of Susoyeff, in Southern Russia.

A peasant named Michelloff had an exceedingly clever little boy, who became famous in the village as a prodigy, and was admired, almost as a miraculous being.

In the same locality there lived a rich and "religious" peasant called the "Saint," who was believed to be a prophet.

This "Saint" grew jealous of the child's popularity and began to spread rumors that should he be allowed to grow up he would become the antichrist and bring untold woe upon the peasants.

On July 30 the "prophet" called a meeting of the thirty richest peasants in the district, to whom he explained that if the boy was killed they would be made happy and prosperous and the village would become the capital of the country.

It was agreed to sacrifice the child. Two days later the "Saint" gave orders to the men, took an ikon in his hand and distributed lighted candles among his followers.

He headed the procession to the child's home at 11 o'clock at night, and demanded that the parents should hand the boy over, as he wanted to pray with him.

The "prophet" washed the youngster, saying prayers meanwhile, and then choked him by placing his foot on his neck, in front of the parents.

Subsequently he ordered the awe-stricken father to help him tear the child to pieces, and as the men refused the body was mutilated with a hatchet.

The remains were put into a basket, which was fixed to the tail of a white mare.

The "Saint" mounted the horse and declared that it was the will of God that the body should be buried at a spot where the horse should voluntarily stop.

The horse was started, and the peasants, still burning their candles, followed.

At a certain point the animal halted and the remains were buried with the hatchet and the basket.

The police, hearing of the occurrence, arrested twenty-eight men, including the "Saint," and all are now awaiting trial.

HOT WEATHTR.

Africa Takes the Cake for Intense, Condensed Torridity.

They were sitting in the hotel office talking about the heat, three of them, and a citizen chanced to overhear the conversation. The first man said: "You'll admit that if there is one thing that gets hotter than another during a spell of this kind of weather it's the sand on a sea beach?"

"Yes," replied the others. "Well," said the speaker, "I was at a beach in the southern part of the country recently when the sand was so hot that when I walked across it with a pair of heavy shoes on, it blistered the soles of my feet."

"I can easily believe that," said the second man, "because I know of a beach in Lower California where they can give a clambake in ten minutes' notice. Instead of having to build a fire and let it burn for three or four hours to get the stones hot, they simply brush the sand off any of the rocks on the beach and they're ready for the bake!"

"That's not bad for this country," said the third man, "but if you fellows want to see or feel real heat you should travel. Now I was on the west coast of Africa last year, arriving there just as the hot season had commenced, and nobody could walk on the sand even then. But the white traders told me it was nothing to what it would be later on. I was going into the interior and didn't think much about it, but after I had been up-country for three months all through the hot season, I came back to the coast and what do you think I found? Why, gentlemen, the heat was so intense that for two miles that beach was glass, shining glass! The sand had been melted!"

BACKACHE AND DESPONDENCY

MISS LENA NAGEL

Are both symptoms of organic derangement, and nature's warning to women of a trouble which will sooner or later declare itself.

How often do we hear women say, "It seems as though my back would break." Yet they continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, dragging sensations, nervousness and no ambition.

They do not realize that the back is the main-spring of women's organism and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the feminine organs or kidneys, and that aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.

made from native roots and herbs has been for many years the most successful remedy in such cases. No other medicine has such a record of cures of feminine ills.

Miss Lena Nagel, of 117 Morgan St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:—"I was completely worn out and on the verge of nervous prostration. My back ached all the time. I had dreadful periods of pain, was subject to fits of crying and extreme nervousness, and was always weak and tired. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures Female Complaints, such as Backache, Falling and Displacements, and all Organic Diseases. Dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage. It strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache and Indigestion and invigorates the whole feminine system.

A Passing Thought.

A polite little girl was dining one day with her grandmother. Everything at the table was usually dainty and unexceptionable, but on this particular occasion the little girl found a hair in her fish.

"Grandmamma," she said, sweetly, "what kind of fish is this?"

"Halibut, my dear."

"Oh," replied the child, "I thought perhaps it was mermaid."

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

"Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less."

The fee in each case will be $10.00. Churches, schools and markets convenient. Healthy climate, splendid crops and good laws. Grain-growing and cattle raising principal industries.

Here is a simple homemade mixture as given by an eminent authority on Kidney diseases, who makes the statement in a New York daily paper that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the recipe try it:

Fluid extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces, Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here in town is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire kidney and Urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure Rheumatism by forcing the kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric and foul decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of forty-eight and 40-100 dollars with interest on said amount since the 20th day of February, A. D., 1907, at the rate of 5½ per cent per annum since that date.

And whereas, the terms and conditions of mortgage hereinafter described provides that if default shall be made in the payment of said sum of money, or the interest, or any part thereof at the time and in the manner in said mortgage specified, the said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns are authorized to declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable;

And whereas the assignees of said mortgagee have declared the whole amount secured by said mortgage due and payable prior to the time of giving this notice.

That there is due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice on said mortgage hereinafter described the sum of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, which said mortgage was duly executed and delivered by Andrew O. Letvig, as administrator of the estate of Mary Jane Letvig, deceased, mortgagor, to Andrew A. Olson, mortgagee, bearing date the 20th day of February, 1904 with the power of sale therein contained, was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota, on the 23rd day of February, 1904, at 4:00 o'clock p. m., in book 14 of mortgages, on pages 251-253.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Andrew A. Olson to Sabille Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings by a written assignment bearing date the 11th day of October, 1907, and recorded in the office of said Register of deeds on the 18th day of October 1907, at 2.30 o'clock P. M. in Book 15 of mortgages at Page 410; and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured mortgage, or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be forclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The Northeast Quarter of section numbered twenty five (25), in township numbered one hundred fifty two (152) North of Range forty five (45) West of the 5th P. M in the state of Minnesota less the Railway Right-away and other lands of said quarter sold during the life time of said Mary Jane Letvig, leaving a balance in said above described premises of 124 and 71-100 acres, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said County and State on the 7th day of December, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, with interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorneys' fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of forclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage containing a power of sale, dated December 26th, 1904, and duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Red Lake county, Minnesota, January 12th, 1905, at 3:10 o'clock p. m., in Book 33 of Mortgages, on Page 631-632 whereby Peder A. Lybeck and Thore Lybeck, his wife, mortgagors, mortgaged to Thos. C. Day & Co. (consisting of Thos. C. Day and George W. Wishard.) mortgagees, the west half of the southwest quarter of section twenty-four (24) and the north half of the northwest quarter of section twenty-five (25) all in township one hundred fifty-one (151) of range forty (40), in said Red Lake county, Minnesota, by which default the power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law having been instituted to recover the debt secured thereby, or any part thereof, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage and note at the date hereof, $15.90, to which should be added the taxes on said land, paid by the mortgagees, as provided in said mortgage, amounting, with interest, to $22.73, making the total amount due at the date of this notice, on said mortgage and note, thirty-eight dollars and sixty-three cents, ($38.63.)

Now, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of said power, said mortgage will be foreclosed and said premises sold at public auction, by the sheriff of said county, or his deputy, on Saturday, December 7th, 1907, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the front door of the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, to pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees, and disbursements allowed by law.

THE MONEY SCARE

Has Alarmed Many But the Situation in Red Lake Falls is Good.

The people in general throughout the northern states have become alarmed at the results of the fight between the bulls and bears of Wall street, and just cause have they for such alarm. When our thoughts return to the panic of 1893, when everybody was clucking out their deposits in the banks and hiding the same away under the edge of the carpet, in the stoves, and various other places, we are not to be blamed for protecting our own interests. Few banks are strong enough to withstand such a run as was experienced by many of the banks that year, and none are going to permit of a run. The country has been prosperous and there is plenty of money with which to do business, but the lambs have been fleeced by the bulls of Wall street for the last time, and matters in New York are unsteady and will doubtless remain so for a week or ten days. That the people of this locality might understand the situation Banker L. C. Simons went down to Minneapolis Sunday afternoon to consult with their correspondents and on Tuesday evening he met with a large number of our business men and stated the situation as it appeared to him. There is no panic—only a bull fight which will end in a few days—and if the depositors have faith in the bank officials there need be no worry, but in order to protect themselves from a draw the banks have refused to pay large checks as it is impossible for them to get money from their correspondents at present. Just how long the "strike" will continue is hard to say, but in the meantime we will continue to do business by checks and no one here will need to feel any alarm. In one way checks are the only system of doing business, for then the customer always has his receipt and in the end would profit by the change, as soon then there would be no book accounts and everybody would pay as they go.

ELECTION TUESDAY

The City Election to be Held next Tuesday a Tame Affair for Us.

Next Tuesday, November 5th, is the date for the election of our city officers, and for once the occasion will be a tame one. In the first ward there are two candidates for alderman, with only one to be elected, and yet it seems there will be no fight even there. The ticket as listed is as follows:

For Mayor—J. A. Duffy.
City Treasurer—Ovide Emard.
Aldermen at Large—T. A. Crompe, and H. Heooemuth.
Alderman, 1st Ward—Joseph Renick and J. J. Pndden.
Alderman, 2d Ward—Fred Borchers
Alderman, 3d Ward—Simon Paul.
Justices of the Peace—S. A. Swanson and A. P. Toupin.

Sugar as a Food

Some interesting experiments with reference to the nutritive value of foods containing sugar were recently made at the instance of the war office at Berlin. It is a fact well known to Alpine tourists that on difficult climbing excursions an increased desire is felt for sweets and sweetened foods. The well known food value of golden grain belt beer makes it a favorite in home circles and especially recommended as a tonic and aid to digestion. DOINGS IN COURT

A Few Cases Argued before Judge Wm. Watts and Trial Dates Set.

District court convened Monday with Judge Watts presiding. Several cases were considered and the calendar was made up with eighteen court cases and seventeen cases to be tried by jury. The court adjourned Tuesday to November 11th.

Among the cases passed upon was the famous "auto case." The Judge pronounced the papers served by Sheriff Nelson upon Liveryman Dan Guerin as being legal and ordered sheriff to get the auto forthwith. Replevin papers were issued by Attorney Grndy and the auto is still a boarder at Guerin's livery. Seems like the owner would "cough up" like a man instead playing the baby act, for no person should be allowed to jump a board bill, even though the price is steep for post hay.

In the case of O. A. Aubol vs. the St. Hilnire Lumber company, which was tried by jury last spring and a judgement found for plaintiff, motion for new trial was granted and the attorneys given to November 4th to file briefs.

Citizenship papers were granted to Frend Lafrenieee, of this place, and first papers to Andrew Anderson, of Thief River Falls.

A Man of the World
A Scholar and a Thinker Has Said:

It is idle to discount the part that dress plays in shaping a man's career. Arrayed in an ill fitting suit of poor material, a man may be at heart a gentleman of the highest type but the world will misjudge him. It is so easy to dress well now-a-days at a small cost that a man is duty bound to give himself all the advantage to be gained by being correctly dressed.

A Kuppenheimer Suit will give you the correct appearance for.................. $15.00 to $25.00
We have a big line of patterns.

Can't we demonstrate to you that you would look attractive in one of our suits.

THE DAIRY FARMER

Gets Immediate and Better Returns than Others, and has Many Advantages.

A great advantage in dairy farming is the fact that a sure and constant income can be relied upon. It is an important matter in farming, as in other business, to be able to rely with certainty on a regular income. Though in its business there may be variations from different causes of just what the income may be, yet with the cows it is sure to be something, every month. Milk, cream butter or cheese are cash products whenever or wherever sold. Consumers are always in want of these products and always will be so there is always a ready market that can never fail. The dairy farmer can rely on this with a certainty that will never fail him.

Another feature of great importance is that the returns from the products of the cow are not only certain but they come often. She furnished her milk today and whatever the form it is turned into, in a months time the cash is returned for it.

This is to a man of limited means a great advantage. In the production of crops for sale the returns come in but once a year for the reason that the land produces but a single crop each year. In the growing of stock no money is returned till the stock is sold In the production of fruit the trees must first be grown and then but a single crop a year can be realized. In comparison therefore with any of these farm products from which the income is received the receipts from the cow carry a great advantage.

The advantages of dairy farming are manifest in every neighborhood and on every farm where it is a leading business. The farmer always has some money ready. His buildings are kept in good condition the year around. His bills are kept paid up and his credit is good. All this is possible for the reason that he has always money coming in surely and regulary from his dairy.

There is no other line of farm business that is so sure and so reliable, year after year as a well managed herd of cows. This fact is stamped on every farm where the business is carried on.

In speaking of the favorable opening held out to the farmers through the dairy business in the New York Produce Review in a recent issue it gives the following endorsement:

"We do not know any industry that offers a well-trained young man or an older man, better immediate returns for his labors and a brighter future, than is offered today by the dairy industry. This is an endorsement which any farmer may accept with confidence. It is borne out in the success of dairymen in our own midst.—Maine Farmer.

Out of Sight.

"Out of sight, out of mind." is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 25c.

Short Weight Packages.

Short weight packages are the biggest fraud on the public in the food line today," says E. K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner. Mr. Slater is preparing a bulletin on short weights. He says, "the trouble is that in the keen competition as to prices, manufacturers are cutting down the contents of packages.. In this state the law does not require them to state the net weight on packages except in the case of spices, baking powder and extracts. The so-called five-pound jars of butter, are not labeled five pounds, but the purchaser pays for five pounds, and the jar usually contains not over 4 1-2 pounds. If the price is 36 cents, they are really paying 40 cent for butter. Packages supposed to contain a pound of staple household articles rarely weigh a net pound. Adulteration is pretty well controlled now, and labels show now whether you are buying a pure food or one adulterated. The person who buys knows what he is getting but he is deceived right along as to weights, and the shortweight evil is getting worse. In North Dakota the law requires the net weight to be stated on all packages and I believe that this is the only sensible way to protect the public. The Minnesota law ought to be amended to read that way."

SCHOOLS GET AID

The Apportionment Rate for the County is $2.50 Per Capita.

The state apportionment for the schools of Red Lake county has been received by County Auditor J. B. O'Brien and is $9,295, which at the ratio of $2.50 per pupil gives us a school census of 3,719. The Red Lake Falls schools will receive $1,057.50, Thief River Falls schools $2,405, and the St. Hileire graded school $590.

Lambert Farmers Prosperous.

The editor of the McIntosh Times recently spent several days in Lambert township, and gives his impressions of conditions in this part of Red Lake county as follows:

"Ye editor returned Sunday from Lambert, where he spent a couple of days looking after threshing operations and noting conditions. He was royally entertained on the trip and was agreeably surprised at the returns the fields there are yielding and the general prosperous condition of the farming community, the latter largely the result of their cheese factory checks, which have been yielding them a comfortable revenue for several years back. Aside from stock, oats and flax are the principal crops raised in that section and the yields this year have been good, oats running from 20 to 50 bushels per acre and flax averaging about 12 bushels, which, price considered, makes a very profitable yield. Timothy and clover are being very generally introduced and are thriving well, and with the latter firmly established a prosperous future for the community is assured and a rise in values imperative."

Notice to the Public.

I have started up the Heely flour mill and am now prepared to furnish the famous "Gold Seal" fancy patent flour, and feed of all kinds on the shortest notice. Orders phoned to No. 87 will be given prompt attention. Farmers who desire to exchange wheat for flour will find it to their advantage to call on me. Will also always pay the highest cash price for wheat. Am prepared to do feed grinding every hour in the day. Give me a call.

Yours sincerely,
1-3 Leo. Steinert.

His Dear Old Mother

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old, thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Bruoson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children too, are greatly strengthened by them. Guaranteed also for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50 cents,

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN EPITOME

IMPORTANT EVENTS AT HOME AND ON FOREIGN SHORES BRIEFLY TOLD.

Washington.

A new rural mail route out of Frankford, Spink county, S. D., is ordered to begin Dec. 16, to serve eighty-five families; out of Ross, Ward county, N. D., to serve 106 families; out of Wheelock, Williams county, to serve 107 families.

Confounded with a statement by Henry A. Castle, former auditor of the postoffice department, that the government for a long time had lost an average of $1,000 daily through error and fraud in the money order system, the congressional commission which is inquiring into postal methods, has gone far enough to decide that important reforms are necessary in the conduct of the service.

Application for a writ of mandamus was made to the supreme court of the United States directing the court to issue a writ of error in the case of Thomas B. Clement of Faribault, Minn., who has been convicted and sentenced to eight years' imprisonment at Stillwater for misappropriation of bank funds. Application for a writ of certiorari in this case had previously been denied.

People Talked About.

Campbell Slemp, member of congress from the Ninth district of Virginia, died at Big Stone Gap, Va., of engine doctoris.

Rev. Ephraim Hall Emery Jameson, for sixteen years district secretary of the American Baptist Missionary society for Michigan and Ohio, died at his home in Detroit, aged seventy-two years.

Henri Rochefort, the well known French journalist, at the age of seventy-seven, severed his connection with the Intransigeant, which he founded in 1880, and assumed the editorship of the Patrie.

Rev. Edward Everett Hale has retired as president of the American Antiquarian society, and Waldo Lincoln of Worcester, Mass., was elected to the office. Dr. Hale has completed sixty years membership in the society.

From Other Shores.

The slump in the price of copper has closed a large number of mines in the southern portion of the republic of Mexico.

Mail advices from Batavia report the ambuscade and the massacre of two companies of Dutch troops by natives in Celebes. Not one escaped.

The priests of the department of Finistere, France, having generally refused to quit their presbyteries, which reverted to the communes under the church and state separation law, are now being expelled by the aid of the gendarmes.

The imperial Chinese troops detached from the Yangtse Kiang valley cantonments since the anti-missionary outbreaks at Nan Kang Sian, have driven the so-called Boxers into the mountains on the borders of Kwang Tung. In an engagement at Chung Yi the troops killed seventy insurgents.

A correspondent of the Tageblatt at Emden telegraphs that, according to a dispatch received from Borkum, a spying yacht with English naval officers on board has been captured by two Wilhelmshaven torpedo boats. The officers are suspected of having taken soundings and made photographs in forbidden waters.

Although the general strike has been officially called off at Milan, the labor situation in other parts of Italy is disquieting. It is understood that the decision taken by the leaders at Milan was the result of a promise on the part of Signor Giolitti, the premier and minister of the interior, that the government would punish the carbineers who fired on the strikers, if the investigation being made proves that they were not justified in shooting into the mob.

Casualty.

Five men were drowned by the overturning of a scow in the Illinois and Michigan canal near Joliet, Ill.

Francis Hays, three years old, fell into a water tank on the farm of his grandmother near Waterloo, Iowa, and was drowned.

One man was killed and three others fatally injured in a boiler explosion at the sawmill of Jacob Markle, near Punxsutawney, Pa.

Matthew Glovoski, five years old, and his sister Lucy, eleven years old, were run over and killed by a Lake Shore train at Loraine, Ohio.

While trying to cross the Cumberland river a short distance below Nashville, Tenn., in a skiff T. J. Warmack and his two sons were drowned.

Assistant Secretary of State Robert L. Bacon figured in a heroic rescue on the Charles river, when he jumped from the Harvard launch Varitsa and swam to the rescue of two boys who had capsized in a canoe. He saved the life of one. The second boy was rescued by J. S. Reed, a student of Harvard, who followed Bacon into the water.

One man was killed and the steel steamer John W. Moore was sunk in a collision between the Moore and Queen City in the Detroit river, just above the Lime Kilns crossing.

John Klinehart, who lives north of Nashua, Iowa, was impaled on a pitchfork, one of the tines penetrating his intestines.

Six people were killed and fifteen injured in a collision between a northbound Southern railway passenger train and a freight train at Budd, N. C., near Greensboro.

Ernst Neidert, nineteen, son of Chris Neidert, a wealthy retired farmer of State Center, Iowa, was instantly killed by being struck by a North-Western fast passenger train.

Fifteen or more persons were injured, several of them seriously, when on a south side elevated train which crashed into the rear of a South side elevated train at State and Van Buren streets, Chicago.

Arthur Onweiler was killed in an automobile accident at Morenci, Mich. Mr. Onweiler had purchased a new automobile and was taking his first ride in it. His wife and two children were in the machine with him.

While saving a trunk from the second story of his burning dwelling H. Medd, a Watertown, Iowa, laborer, was badly burned about the hands, arms and face. Mr. Medd risked his life to save his valuables.

The magazine of the Petrolea Torpedo company, near Petrolea, Ont., exploded with terrific force. Residences within a radius of a mile of the magazine were more or less damaged. No one was in the building at the time.

One man was killed, six persons were dangerously and probably twenty-five others slightly hurt when an Elberon avenue car jumped the track and went over a twenty-five-foot embankment at Mount Hope, in the western end of Cincinnati.

Twenty-five persons, the majority of them seriously, but none, it is believed, fatally, were injured in a trolley collision on the Buffalo & Lake Erie Traction company line at Erie, Pa. All the passengers had miraculous escape from death.

Crimes and Criminals.

Mrs. Bertha Lund, who strangled her three children three weeks ago at Buffalo, N. Y., has been committed to the hospital for the insane.

Four men and three women, one of the former a government mail carrier, were ambushed and killed east of Hermosillo, in the lower Sonora country, by Yaqui Indians.

The Bank of Wharton, Ohio, was looted by cracksmen who, it is said, secured a large sum of money. Several stores were also robbed. Bloodhounds are on the trail of the robbers.

Matt Gandy, a young white farmer, is dead, and his brother, O. D. Grady, is seriously wounded as a result of a shooting affray which occurred in front of their home at Hoil's creek, Ala.

The trial of William Stout of Vinton, Iowa, on the charge of murder in the first degree had a sudden termination, when by mutual consent the charge was made manslaughter and the prisoner pleaded guilty.

During a pistol duel at Peoria, Ill., with a burglar who had robbed a residence of several thousand dollars' worth of diamonds, Ed Barrett, a policeman, was shot and killed. The man who fired the shot escaped.

A man giving the names of Ford and Wilson has been arrested at Miles City on suspicion of being the person wanted at Belle Fourche, S. D., for the forging of a $250 check.

Jacob Dittinger, aged fifty-nine years, of New York, committed suicide in an unusual manner. Placing a stick of dynamite in his mouth and holding it in his right hand, Dettinger exploded the dynamite, blowing his head off and shattering t hsband that held the explosive.

Dollar Bay, four miles north of Houghton, was the scene of a volume of housebreaking one night last week. The Donlan hotel, the leading one of the town, and four private residences were broken into, but so far as can be ascertained no plunder was secured in any case. At one house the burglar took off two storm windows before he could effect an entrance, to the house, only to be discovered by the inmates.

Domestic.

Equal suffragists of Iowa will soon ally themselves with the Labor party and do their best to further its cause. This was the sentiment prevalent at the state convention of suffragists held at Des Moines last week.

The installation of a regular trans-Atlantic wireless service was accomplished by William Marconi and his assistants at Glace Bay, N. F., last week. Mr. Marconi stated that more than 5,000 words had been transmitted between the station and Port Morien and the Irish station.

The first railroad ever built in Lower California will be in operation in a few days, and will come under the jurisdiction of E. E. Calvin, general manager of the Southern Pacific. This line was built by E. H. Harriman, and is known as the Inter-California railway, and runs southward from Calexico as far as Poradones, 37 1-2 miles.

Miss Helen Gould formally opened the new railroad branch of the Young Men's Christian association at Eugenie and Tom streets, St. Louis, in the name of her father, Jay Gould. The fact that she declared it opened in her dead father's name came as a great surprise to those present. Miss Gould was the guest of honor at a banquet.

Dispatches from the center and South of France confirm the worst reports of destruction caused by the floods. Great distress has resulted. Railroad traffic is disorganized. Fortunately the storm center is now going seaward.

STATE MEET AT FERGUS FALLS.

Charities and Corrections Program Is Announced.

The sixteenth Minnesota state conference of Charities and Corrections is to be held in Fergus Falls Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 9, 10, 11 and 12. The convention will begin Saturday evening. An outline program, prepared by Miss Eleanor Hanson, the state secretary, is as follows:

Saturday Evening—An address of welcome by a representative of Fergus Falls and a reply by Dr. C. A. Rogers, superintendent state school for feeble minded, Faribault; President's address, Mr. A. J. Eckstain, chairman board of county commissioners, Brown county. Gov. Johnson hopes to be present.

Sunday Morning — Conference speakers to talk in different churches on subjects relating to charitable and correctional work; the conference sermon by Rev. R. M. West of St. Paul.

Sunday Afternoon—A meeting of the county officials' section, presided over by Chairman A. O. Cowles, county commission, Olmstad county; Mr. W. S. McCormick, city controller, Duluth, will read a paper, "Opportunity," and Miss Charlotta Knudson, county superintendent of schools, Otter Tail county, one upon "The Relations of the County Board to County Schools."

The Sunday evening meeting will be somewhat in the nature of a joint meeting of all the churches. Miss Julia C. Lathrop of Chicago, member state board of charities of Illinois, will deliver an illustrated lecture upon "Family Care of the Insane."

Monday afternoon will be devoted to a consideration of "An Education Which Will Tend More to Lessen Pauperism and Crime."

Monday afternoon's program will be in charge of the county officials.

Monday evening an address will be delivered by Dr. Gray, professor of political economy, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis.

Tuesday afternoon will be given to a study of "The Duties of the Public to the Insane."

Tuesday afternoon a visit will be paid to the hospital for the insane, and either before or after, probably in the hospital assembly room, the subject of "Inebriety," will be considered by Dr. Haldor Snave, nerve specialist, St. Paul, and Dr. A. S. Adams of Rochester. "Volunteer Relief Societies in Smaller Cities," will be considered by Mrs. C. G. Higbee, St. Paul, president State Federation of Woman's Clubs, Miss Kate S. Linder, Mankato and others. Dr. W. J. Morelay, superintendent sanitarium for consumptives, Walker, Minn., is planning to attend and speak.

IMPROVE THE MINNESOTA.

Federal appropriations for the work of making the Minnesota river a navigable stream and state appropriations to be devoted to the prevention of periodical floods were projects earnestly urged by delegates attending the river improvement convention held in Mankato last week.

Harmony and unity of purpose were shown and the meeting formed a permanent organization, to be known as the Minnesota River Improvement association, whose officers and laid plans that are expected to result ultimately in the desired improvement of the river.

The number of persons in attendance was about fifty, nearly half of whom were Commercial club members from Mankato. The latter took no part in the discussions, except Senator S. D. Works.

Most of the counties in the Minnesota valley were represented by the others present, among whom were Congressmen W. S. Hammond of St. James, A. J. Volstead of Granite Falls and C. R. Davis of St. Peter and State Senators Frank Clague of Lamberton, V. B. Saward of Marshall, H. F. Weis of Le Sueur, A. A. Poehiar of Henderson, Charles A. Johnson of St. Peter and J. A. Coller of Shakopee.

The committee recommended as permanent officers the following:

President, H. F. Weis; vice president, A. J. Eckstain; secretary, J. Coller; treasurer, B. F. Pay, Mankato.

The officers and the following county representatives were constituted an executive committee:

Big Stone county, Ray Farrington; Chippewa, C. A. Foeness; Redwood, H. A. Baldwin; Renville, Fred Orth; Nicollet, Fred Fritchie; Sibley, A. A. Poebler; Le Sueur, M. W. Grimes; Scott, W. H. Weisbeler; Carver, George E. Dutoit; Yellow Medicine, E. H. Sorlean; Blue Earth, W. L. Hixon; Dakota, A. Shaller.

The report was adopted.

Senator Works said that the matter of financing the organization had been left to the executive committee. The convention then adjourned.

Teachers to Gather.

The North Capital Minnesota Teachers' association will meet at Cass Lake Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 and 2. An interesting program has been prepared and prominent educators from all sections of the state will be present to lecture and discuss subjects of interest.

Three Laborers Killed

Versailles, Ohio, Oct. 23. — A Big Four train struck a handcar on which were nineteen Greek laborers, killing three and injuring five of the others.

Willing to Oblige.

Pyker—I say, old man, lend me a half dollar, will you?

Hyker—Sorry, but I've only got 30 cents.

Pyker—Well, let me have that, you may owe me the balance.

BACK YARD STUDIES.

Even Prof. von Joggleby Beguiled by the Hazy Days of September.

"By nature," said Prof. von Joggleby, "I am industrious, a plodder; I would even say, if I might drop for once into homelier phrase, a plugger.

"I like to work. I long ago discovered that there is no real joy to be found in life except in work. All other pursuits, ambition, pleasure, fame, are vain and likely to be filled with disappointment; and idleness I abhor.

"In work only can we find freedom from care, in work alone do we find complete and abiding satisfaction and the deep and pervading joy that springs from accomplishment. But I find that even I have days when I can't work, when figures cease to charm, and even the most intricate problems have no attraction for me, days when I can't concentrate my mind upon the work before me, but must perforce sit back and look out upon and enjoy the trees and the grass in the back yard in view from my study window, and dream of the things beyond; and such a day is this, the ripe, mellow, hazy day in late September, when even nature, its summer's work done, seems to have taken a day off for idle luxury.

"On such a day, I confess, figures have no charm for me, nor can even the most intricate problems attract—all work is vanity; I want to get out where the yellow sunshine comes down on wood and hill and valley."

For Air Generation.

Fused sodium peroxide, electrically prepared, is the chemical agent in a process of air regeneration that has been recommended for such purposes as submarine boats, etc. In contact with water, pure oxygen is given off, caustic soda being formed.

The soda absorbs the carbonic acid, coating the peroxide with a crust of carbonate, which is removed by shaking the chemical in a wire ust or gauze cylinder.

It is found that 6 3-4 ounces of the peroxide give the seven gallons of oxygen required by one man per hour, and that twenty pounds should sustain nine men in a submarine of 2,700 cubic feet capacity for nine hours before the carbonic acid in the air breathed would increase to a troublesome quantity.

Women Manufacturers.

Manager Toyowaka of the Japanese Mitsui Bishi bank says that women make most of the goods exported from Japan. Male workmen versed in mathematical and mechanical knowledge are becoming experts in new branches of industry, such as shipbuilding and ironworking, in which they display the greatest patience. In the tea, silk weaving and light industries female labor is invariably required.

Statue to Sheridan.

A movement for the erection of a bronze statue of Gen. Philip Sheridan has been started by the Irish Fellowship Club of Chicago. The work will be by Charles J. Mulligan, a well known Chicago sculptor, and will be of heroic proportions. The statue will be erected at the head of Sheridan road, and will look out upon the famous drive named for the cavalry commander.

Electric Train in Alsace.

Consul J. I. Brittain of Kehl advises that a new electric railway has just been opened for traffic from the Alsatian town of Munster to the Schlacht, the summit of the mountains dividing Germany and France. This six and seven-tenths miles line was built at a cost of $235,000, and connects the Schlucht with a similar line extending to Gerardmer, France.

Rash Girl.

"Really," said Edith, "I don't care what sort of a husband I get."

"Why, Edith," exclaimed her mother, "I'm surprised at you."

"No," continued the dear girl, "so long as he's rich and handsome and kind to me I don't care, so there, now!"

Temperance Champion's Son.

William Livesay of Preston, the son of Joseph Livesay, the famous founder of teetotalism in England, has just celebrated his ninety-second birthday. Mr. Livesay is in good health and as stanch a temperance champion as was his celebrated father.

Story of St. Gaudens.

They are reviving the old stories of St. Gaudens. One tells of a party of Americans in Lucerne who were recalling the great works of the sculptor and had to be prompted by their waiter, who knew of the Farragut monument, which they had all forgotten.

For Shorter Skirts.

Princess Ludwig Ferdinand of Bavaria has formed a league to promote the wearing of shorter skirts. The kaisarin and other prominent women are said to be in entire sympathy with the movement.

Must Come to Him.

Jay Gould, the tennis champion, has determined that he will not go to England again, and that contestants must hereafter come here to play.

Commission for Westinghouse.

George Westinghouse has been commissioned by Western railroads to produce a motor car for passenger traffic on suburban and branch lines.

Two Immigrants Per Minute.

VIVIAN'S AWAKENING

By EDGAR FAWCETT

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

His family were what one could safely call very plain people. They lived in a little house, rather far to the westward, and in a street that cut through the heart of Harlem. His father had married rather late in life, and his mother likewise; so that now, when their youngest child, Vivian, was a full-fledged young man, they both had the air and look of elderly persons.

But to glance at their beloved Vivian always gave them a gladsome and youthful thrill. Mr. Firth was one of those many mortals who strive sturdily yet end by partial failure. Now past 50, he was still a clerk. But his employers, who were prosperous and prominent New York bankers, trusted him implicitly, and gave him a salary about half as large as his keen and shrewd services deserved. Still, they had blandly promised Firth that "some day" they would "make an opening" for his son, and this airy sort of agreement had filled their listener with hopeful cheer.

"Only," one of them had said, "it seems a little — er — extravagant, doesn't it, for you to send him to college like this for four years?"

Firth thought it "extravagant," too, but he rejoiced in his power to bestow on the dear boy collegiate training. Afterward there would be the "position" at Bainbridge Brothers.

Vivian had two elder sisters, Ann and Jane, very nearly of an age, who worshiped him.

And Vivian? He took their homage quite for granted, as he did that of his parents. He had, indeed, always taken for granted all the family affection showered upon him. He was amiable to his relatives, but passively so. The smoke of their incense kept constantly ascending to his nostrils, and he sniffed it with the sweetest of smiles. But he sniffed it quite as a matter of course.

At a convivial meeting of his fellow-classmates, during his sophomore year, Vivian sang a song—one of the pretty, current ballads of the day.

"By Jove," said Stuyvesant Harrowe, clapping him cordially on the shoulder, when the song was ended, "you can sing about as well as you can play football, and that's putting it rather strong, considering how you helped our side of the game out last Saturday."

Vivian blushed a little and his brown eyes sparkled. Stuyvesant Harrowe was one of the aristocrats of the college, petted and flattered for his parents' wealth and place—and perhaps for popular personal reasons as well.

Till then Vivian had been a nobody at college. But soon, as the chosen "chum" of Harrowe, he became a member of the most select secret fraternity and counted his friends by the dozens. Harrowe presented him to his family, who beamed on him with great politeness. Ethel Harrowe was Stuyvesant's only grown-up sister, a tall, blonde girl, with light azure eyes.

Ethel Harrowe was very gracious to him, and bade her parents, who lovingly obeyed her least caprice, regard him as a genius of song. He became, as it were, the girl's protege.

By dint of straining and pinching in certain household ways, and of an individual self-denial practiced with furtive gladness by each of his idolizing relatives, Vivian was enabled to begin lessons under the same teacher who had lured the silvery do-re-mi-fas from Ethel Harrowe's blooming lips.

Signor Boldini now taught him free of charge. He had made friends with the Italian, as he made friends with nearly everybody with whom he came in contact. Meanwhile the professor had grown privately yet sadly amused by his pupil's enormous self-reliance.

"I somehow suspect, Signor Boldini," said Ethel to him one day, "that you have now no real belief in Vivian Firth's voice."

"You must not even fancy it!" was the first shocked response.

But soon, by adroit questionings, Ethel drew from her teacher this confession:

"It has disappointed me. He sings with admirable style; he has acquired a delightful grace and finish. But, frankly, I can teach him nothing more. It would be like overloading with embroidery some flimsy fabric. His voice is all charm and sweetness and captivation. But it has no depth, no volume. I see now what I totally missed seeing before. He can sing for the drawing room only."

"And with such charm!" sighed Ethel. Then, in accents of reminding sarcasticness she pursued: "But he has made up his mind to sing in public."

"I know—I know. At Steinway hall. I shall be there; three or four of our best musical artists will lend him their aid. His legion of admirers will purchase seats. He will make two thousand dollars, very likely. But ah, Miss Ethel—afterward!"

"You prophesy failure, then?"

"Wait and see."

A few weeks later the concert occurred. Steinway hall was packed with all the patricians and plutocrats, all the grandees and potentates.

Never was failure more absolute. Even poor Ann and Jane felt it and clutched one another's hands. His mother turned white and gnawed her lips. To everybody the disillusion was terrible. The plaudits, when he retired, were worse than hisses, for they were the fictitious encouragements of disappointed and compassionating friends.

Next day the newspapers teemed with irony and contempt. On the afternoon of this day he entered the familiar apartments where Ethel Harrowe had so often welcomed him.

"I wanted to write you," she said, giving him her hand, "but I thought you might come;" then tears made tender those blue eyes that could be so haughty when they willed. "I—I'm very sorry! You have suffered terribly; I can see it in your face."

"I have been terribly shocked," he answered, and something in his tones gave her a start of surprise. "The awakening had to come, and better it should come swift and sharp, like this."

"The awakening?"

"Not so much to the knowledge that I am only a parlor tenor, only a spoiled young musical coxcomb—"

"No, no! You must not say that. It isn't true, and I can't bear to hear it."

"But there's been another awakening," he went on. "I mean to the realization of my horrid selfishness. There are my mother and my father and my two sisters—how have I behaved to them for five or six years past? Like an egotistic simpleton. Worse—like an ungrateful wretch! They would all four have died for me; I kept living on with an indifference to their devotion that was dastardly!"

"And so," Ethel said, after a little pause, "it has all affected you in this fashion?"

"Not wholly;" he paused, then added with precipitation: "For I wanted fame as a great singer. I wanted it chiefly because I love you, and knew that if I asked you to be my wife when I had grown renowned, there might be a far stronger chance of your saying 'yes'!"

In the silence that ensued Ethel first drooped her eyes, then raised them. Her cheeks burned with an unwonted rose as she said:

"There would have been no chance at all if you had won 'fame as a great singer'! Not that I would have refused from any silly reasons of caste, snobbery, prejudice against the stage as a profession and all that. There's enough of the independent 'new woman' in me to render such objections null. But your very celebrity would have been my bane—my jealous bane—I confess it. No, I prefer you as you are—as an artistic failure, if you please to admit yourself one, as a plain, uncrowned, undecorated, unmedaled individual like myself," and here she stopped dead short, crimsoning.

Certain of Just What She Had More Than "Hinted."

"Ethel!" he cried, hurrying up to her, "you don't—you can't even hint—"

But in another minute he was certain of just what she indeed had more than "hinted."

Their wedding was an entirely conventional one and very handsome and festal likewise. And though Ethel's parents grumbled and growled not a little at the engagement her brother Stuyvesant proved Vivian's loyal friend, and overruled every shadow of family opposition—which, by the way, Ethel herself would have coolly overruled like a true tyrannical American daughter, without her brother's generous and genial aid.

And the Firths—heaven bless them!—were in transports of happiness. For joys, like troubles, in battalions come, and soon after the announcement of Vivian's betrothal, Messrs. Bainbridge Brothers perceived that John Firth's long and valued services were worthy of more substantial reward, and actually offered him a partnership in their respected firm at a low yet appreciable profit.

"Still," said Firth to his wife and daughters, "Vivian's just told me that he soon intends to take that clerkship if they'll give it to him."

Ann tossed her head. "He must have been dreaming!"

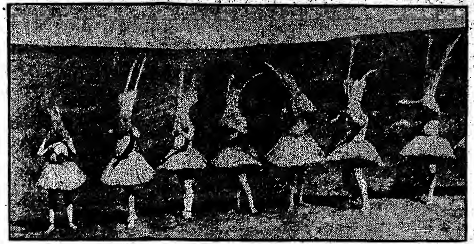
"He couldn't have meant it!" exclaimed Jane.

"Why, of course not!" bristled their mother.

But Vivian had meant it.

"Let us see if I'm not made of better stuff," he said, one day at home, "than to play idle pensioner on my future wife's income. In a sense not lyric or dramatic or romantic—in a sense prosaic and rather commonplace, perhaps—but always, I hope, in a sense high-minded and honorable and ungrasping, I should like to make my 'voice'—your Vivian's voice, that you have so foolishly, so fondly, so undeservedly belauded—heard hereafter!"

REALLY TU-TU! KAFFIR GENEES



IS THE BALLET SKIRT BARBARIC? NATIVES AT A COMING-OF-AGE DANCE IN ZULULAND.

The resemblance between the straw dress of the Kaffirs here shown and the tu-tu (that is, the short-skirted dress) of the premiere danseuse is obvious. The dancers whitewash themselves. On such occasions as the one illustrated much native beer is drunk.

THE OPPOSITION SULTAN IN MOROCCO: MULAI HAFID.

Mulai Hafid, the half-brother of the reigning sultan, was proclaimed in Morocco on Aug. 16. His cause is making progress in the south. He has removed obnoxious taxes, released prisoners, and has invited Abdel Aziz to abdicate. He was also proclaimed in Mazagan, and he instructed the people of that town to send him all their available arms and ammunition. This the French authorities have prevented.

MISS LILIAN SMITH, WHO SWAM FROM RICHMOND TO BLACKFRIARS IN 4 HOURS, 16 MINUTES, 39 SECONDS.

The great swim between Richmond and Blackfriars was won by Jarvis in 3 hours 24 minutes, 6 1-4 seconds. Dooms of Holland, was second in 3 hours 37 minutes 49 2-5 seconds; Maas of Belgium, third, in 3 hours, 39 minutes, 47 seconds. The greatest interest was, of course, centered in Jarvis; but Miss Lilian Smith, the only representative of the fair sex in the race, ran him very close in the popular estimation. To the disappointment, but scarcely to the surprise of many, Miss Smith was not in the first string, but her performance was exceedingly creditable; she finished fourteenth, with twenty of her male rivals behind her. She is eighteen, is captain of the Tottenham Swimming club, and swam 4 1-2 hours with Wolffe during his recent cross-channel attempt.—Photograph by the Tropical Press.

MOST CRUEL OF CUTS

"Sir 'Enery's" Wife Wanted Her Boys to "See a Real Hamlet."

A group of actors were comparing notes as to what, in their experience, had been the cruelest cut ever administered to an actor with regard to one of his own performances. Finally, after several stories had been told, an old English actor, who had been quietly listening to the other men's stories, said: "I know this story is true because I happen to have been one of the very few persons who saw the letter. When Edwin Booth played his famous engagement in London I was a member of his company. Mr. Booth and Henry Irving became fast friends. Quite apart from the professional suppers and banquets which were given in Booth's honor, he and Irving used to have long chats in their dressing rooms after the performances. One night Booth, who was playing a shorter bill, dropped in at Irving's theater and sat in the English actor's dressing room while he was dressing for the street, and shortly after Booth arrived Irving's valet came in with a note which he handed to his master, saying: "Mrs. Irving sent this up, sir.'

"Without glancing at the address Irving tore open the note and read it; then, with one of those grim saturnine smiles which often illumined his face when something had occurred which hurt and yet amused him, he turned to Booth and said: 'Huh! My dear Booth, a thousand pardons. I see that this note from my wife has miscarried. It's intended for you.' He passed the note to Booth without another word, and while he read it Irving, keeping the tail of his eye on the American, stood in front of the mirror arranging his tie.

"The note from Mrs. Irving ran as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Edwin Booth: Might a mere woman ask a very great favor of you? Might I ask you to send me three stalls for next Tuesday night? My two sons, Lawrence and Henry, are at home from school just now, and before you leave England I am most anxious that they should see a real Hamlet."

THE TASMANIAN ABORIGINE

Last of the Race—Discovery That Was Made Too Late.

The visitor to Tasmania can have an experience that is novel—he can call on the last of the native race of the land. She is Trucaninni, and she holds receptions in a glass case in the National museum. There is only the skeleton left, but judging from that she was a well organized little body of about four feet.

The Tasmanian aborigine was a clean sort of person, moving every day so as not to have the dirt or ashes of yesterday in his camp. The mode was uncut hair for men, shaven heads for women. Both wore at times a necklace, and also on occasions tied a strip of fur around the calves of their legs. They seemed to get along very well with this, even though the winters were cold.

Then came the white man with his gun and his modesty. Between the gun and the blank blanket and some other clothes and the permanent shelter there was only one left in the seventies, and she—Trucaninni—died at about the age of seventy years in 1876, and her bones, well articulated and polished, stand in state to-day.

When this race had disappeared the "paleozoic fellows" discovered that these Tasmanian aborigines were probably the world's only specimens of the people of the stockage. But the discovery came too late. The folk who had mixed up with them were not of the calibre to give the world a very good, to say nothing of reliable, record of the inner characteristics of this extra primitive people, or their traditional account of how black as the ace of spades, they got marooned on this isolated island. Their principal record left is that they did not worry—a fact from which it may be reasoned that bald heads and gray hairs were probably not known in the days when slabs of granite were legal tender.

When a man tries to unlock his front door with a fountain pen at 2 a. m. there's another brain storm brewing.

COLORED PEOPLE IN CAPITAL

Nearly 100,000 of the Race Are Living in the City.

More colored people live in Washington than in any other city, 95,000 of the total population of 330,000 being African. Many Washington colored people are among the most advanced of their race, and Washington is the only city where there is a distinct Afro-American society which applies the standards of American morals and manners to its own conduct. While the colored people are represented on the school board, have places of honor and profit under the District government and enjoy equality before the law, the presence of such large numbers of the race is partly responsible for Washington's peculiar government, for not all Washington colored people are of the better class. Many of them are ignorant and shiftless, and the criminal records of the district show this lower class in an unfavorable light. The last annual report showed that of the total number of births among the colored population of the city, more than 26 per cent. were illegitimate. It would be practically impossible to persuade congress, as at present constituted, to give the District of Columbia suffrage on the South Carolina plan and thus eliminate the colored vote. If universal manhood suffrage was granted, the national capital would be ruled by the colored people, and there is no party or faction in congress, however small, which is willing that such a condition of affairs should be brought about. This condition deters agitation for the suffrage.—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Didn't Want New Money.

Merchants of the far west are suspicious of brand-new paper money, according to a compositor employed at the government printing office at Washington. When he received his money for leave and back pay it was delivered to him just as it was received from the treasury by the paymaster.

"When I planned to spend my vacation 'with the folks' in my home state west of Old Big Muddy I thought to surprise them by having only brand-new money," he said in telling the story, "and consequently was careful not to fold it. After I had been about the little town for a few hours I felt of my chin and concluded to get a shave. The barber did not know me, and when I took a bright new dollar out of my bill book he took it gingerly and turned it over and over. 'This all you got?' he asked. I was amused at his greenness, and said there were more where that came from, and took the whole flat 'bundle' out of my pocket and told him to take his choice. 'Where did you come from, man?' he asked, and to save time I had to tell him I was from Washington and worked for Uncle Sam.

"For three days it was the same story wherever I went. Merchants were so used to ragged and dirty bills that resembled dish rags that they looked with suspicion on brand-new money that had never been folded. In the end I went to a bank and explained the situation and asked to have the new bills exchanged for the kind the natives were used to. And even the cashier did not like the proposition one bit. It was some time before I could convince him, with the aid of several letters I happened to have in my pocket, that I was not a green goods artist with nerve enough to try the game on a country bank. Never again will I try to act as if the government turned out money for my especial benefit."

"Hot and Then Some."

An employe of the agricultural department has received a letter from his home in Alabama, and which contains the information that the heat there is something tremendous and that hens are laying hard-boiled eggs. The writer states that no stoves have been used for cooking for several days, the people using the hot stones which are scattered throughout the town.

"Back in 1896," relates a former editor of a weekly paper in Georgia, but now employed in the pension office, "we had an awful hot spell in my state. Fact is, a great many of our people thought the last day was close to hand, and so strong was this belief that hundreds of my subscribers who never had paid a cent came to town and forked over every red they owed. If it had not been for that hot spell I do not suppose I ever would have collected for the best weekly in Georgia.

"When the scare was over and the weather moderated I quietly sold my paper and pulled out. I thought it a deuced good time to stay even. Hot weather that can make a delinquent subscriber square up with the printer is hot some and a little more."

Could Provide for Many.

Secretary Taft, the hugest statesman of his time, took a yellow car in Washington to go to the capitol. He nearly filled the seat, but at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue a small boy got on and timidly sat down beside the gigantic secretary.

The small boy wore what was obviously a suit of clothes made over for him from his father's clothes. He was rather proud of it, too, for after riding a block or two he said to the secretary: "My mamma made me this suit out of one of papa's."

"Indeed!" said the secretary; "I think it is a very pretty suit."

The small boy looked the big secretary over. "Say, mister," he said, after the survey was completed, "how many of your little boys had to wear your clothes?"—Saturday Evening Post.

THE Spirit Lake, Iowa, Beacon says: "Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, declares he would ra ther have Bryan in the field than be a candidate himself. Republicans readily join him in this preference.

THE pretty daughter of a Swift county farmer offered four kisses to the farm hand who could do the most work in two days, and, according to the Montevideo Leader, before night three men had been prostrated by the heat.

HERE's one of Sam Jone's trite sayings: "I've seen a man and a dog go into a saloon, and in an hour the man would get beastly drunk and stagger out like a hog, while the dog would come out and walk away like a gentleman."

GOVERNOR FOLK has contributed a new sentence sermon that will appeal to every man who has made a careful study of economic conditions. Here it is: "It is hardly practicable to suppress the trusts with one hand while the other is feeding them with the milk of protection."

THE many friends of Hon. L. A. Rosing, of the state board of control will be glad to learn of his rapid and permanent return to health and vigor. Some weeks ago genuine alarm was felt over his condition. Mr. Rosing is one of the big and brainy men of Minnesota, and we trust he may be spared many years of helpfullness to the state.

THE state university people are preparing for another raid on the treasury. Not content with getting several millions at the hand of the last legislation for new buildings and an enlarged campus, they are now talking of asking for another million to buy several more blocks of land. The taxpayer will soon enquire whether they are not paying too much for their whistle.

THE Detroit Record pays the state board of equalization this deserved compliment: "The assessment of the iron ore properties in Minnesota has finally been agreed upon and it will remain at the figures established by the tax commission, approximately $191,000,000. This is an increase of fully 150 per cent over the figures of last year and was only reached after a very heated discussion by the state board of equalization members. If the state officials keep on insisting upon an equalization of taxes the first thing we know everybody who owns property will be forced to pay an equitable amount of the sum total. This would be a dreadful misfortune—to some people."

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Deer River News: About as good an advertisement as the north part of the state could have for the development of its land happened last week when four of the high up state officials interested in immigration and development bought for themselves several hundred acres of hog land in the vicinity of the Hartley Island hog farm near Floodwood. The board can truly say it has faith in what it preaches henceforth.

Floodwood Broadaxe: There has been entirely too much talk about the "swamp lands of Northern Minnesota." and the impression has gone out that this part of the state was nothing but one great swamp—this is not true—with the lands cleared and good roads. there will not be 10 per cent of this land that could be called swamp in any sense. Help us get settlers, assist us in making roads, and we will show you that the investment will pay a dividend.

Fairmont Sentinel: The republicans of New York city have joined fortunes with their erstwhile hated enemy, William R. Hearst, to overthrow Tammany The purpose may be praiseworthy but speaking of politics making strange bed fellows! Isn't this the limit?

Hallock News: Citizens of Minnesota have cause to feel proud over the splendid showing of its school fund. It now has the largest of any state in the union and has reached the enormous sum of $22,075,185. There are still nearly a million acres of school land unsold and besides this, the income to this sum from the enormous holdings in the iron properties in the northern part of the state will swell the fund still more in the years to come.

Hallock Enterprise: The nearest any republican leader has come to proposing tariff reform is Secretary Taft, and he does not want to meddle with the tariff until all republicans are united for revision. When such unity prevails the present generation will lie where no tariff will bother them unless St. Peter has formed a trust in palms and angels wings.

Thief River Falls Press: To run for office and be abused, or stay out and let the other fellow get what is coming to him, is the question that is agitating the mind of the would-be official,

MAKE IT AT HOME

Says Many Persons Here Can Be Made Happy Again By Using This.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern Daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and tortorous disease who fail to find ready relief in this simple home made mixture and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and systems the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only rheumatism but also other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not active and healthy, should not hesitate to make up this mixture as it is certain to do much good, and may save you much misery and suffering after a while.

Our home druggist say they will either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them,

Minnesota Men Dredge for Gold

A New Crop of Millionaires

The Director of the United States Mint says: "The high tide in the output of gold is coming through the gold dredge."

(From St. Paul Pioneer Press).

It is no longer necessary to mine gold—at great expense to sink shafts and drive tunnels into mountains looking for gold ore, which, even if found, may not be of sufficient quantity or richness to pay for mining it.

For ages the rains and glaciers have been wearing away our mountains, including their rich gold-bearing rocks, and depositing the gold in the valleys below. This is still going on. Therefore the beds of all the old streams and present rivers in our rich Western mineral belt contain untold wealth; the accumulation of ages. These treasure houses of free gold are now being despoiled of their wealth by dredges. The taking of the gold out of them by a dredge is as simple as the recovery of wheat by a threshing machine. As a dredge will handle about 3,000 cubic yards a day at a cost of about 5 cents a yard, its advent opened up new, large and very profitable fields for investment. Ground averaging only 8 cents a yard yields handsome returns—far greater profits than are obtained from most of what are known as successful mines.

About 100 dredges are now at work in the West, principally in California, making a new crop of millionaires though dredging ground averaging only 15 cents a yard. Their employment is being extended as fast as they can be built and in the near future the rich bottoms of the Colorado and other rivers will be yielding up to man their golden treasures, as the Sacramento and Feather rivers in California are already doing.

Before beginning operations the character and richness of the ground are thoroughly acertained by sinking holes in it; hence it is known before beginning the dredging just what the ground averages Therefore, knowing the quantity of ground to be dredged, its average value per cubic yard and the average cost per cubic yard of taking out the gold, the profits can be accurately estimated in advance, as Uncle Sam buys the gold every day in the year and always pays the same price for it. This is not true of copper or any other metal.

It is for these reasons that dredging owing to its simplicity, cheapness of operation and certainty of profits, appeals to the conservative investor. It has none of the elements of speculation and uncertainty incident to mining. Dredging is so profitable that no one ever hears of the failure of a gold dredging company their stock is never quoted on the market, as its owners do not care to sell; it it is now well recognized as one of the safest and most profitable investments and will probably, in the next few years add more to the world's wealth and make more new multi-millionaires than any other honest, legitimate and conservative business.

As only a very small part of the available dredging ground has yet been dredged, is is no wonder that the director of the United States mint in his annual report says: "The high tide in the output of gold is coming through the gold dredge. If these dredges continue to work the world will not only be saturated with gold, but will be nauseated with it."

It is rumored that some Minnesota men intend soon to dredge some very rich ground which they have recently acquired on one [illegible] the Western rivers.

The report of the condition of the Merchants State Bank at the close of business Oct. 28th is one of which the bank officials may well feel proud. The business has increased wonderfully during the past year and it will interest you to look over the report in another column.

Each year the dairy business in the Red River valley is becoming more lucrative and now assumes proportions that will soon rival any branch of farm industry. Farmers are forced to acknowledge that the old bosse can lift her own weight in raising a mortgage from the farm.

On Monday, November 4th, at his home in Lake Pleasant township near Badger creek, Michel Quesnell will offer for sale at public auction all of his live stock, farm utensils, grain, wood and household goods. Mr. Quesnell expects to remove to North Yakima, and all his property will be sold.

A birthday party was given Medase Clement at his home in Terrebonne last Saturday evening, and a large number of friends participated in the joyous occasion. The host was the recipient of a handsome cutter and lap robe. and among the guests present was a Mr. Coyear, a cousin from Crookston.

Some much needed repairs have been made on the Clearwater bridge the past week, and we are informed the law prohibiting teams driving faster than a walk over the bridge will be rigidly inforced in the future. A ten-dollar example would be a lesson to several teamsters who frequently drive over the bridge on a trot.

The Houston brothers, who last week bought a farm over near Wylie thru the Sortedahl Land and Loan Company, have moved here from Herman and taken possession of their new home. They will milk twenty-seven cows this winter, so it will be seen that they are dairymen and we wish for their success in our midst.

H. G. Maxwell contemplates organizing a junior band, he having already secured fifteen volunteers. The boys will meet at the city hall next Monday evening between seven and eight o'clock for the purpose of perfecting the organization and it is hoped many new recruits will be present and join the junior band.

Bemidji Pioneer: James E. Ford ex-county auditor of Red Lake county and who is now on the staff of state examiner, is in the city today. Mr. Ford's particular work is to examine township, village, and school district officers' books and reports. He leaves this evening for Big Falls and expects to be in Koochiching county for several days.

Octave Lefeivre, of Plummer, was transacting business at the "hub" on Monday, and this office was favored with a pleasant call. Mr. Lefeivre had just finished threshing and his yield was over 2,000 bushels, which combined with a monthly creamery check of from $90 to $100 makes farming in the north country profitable.

Marriage licenses were issued by Clerk C. W. Johnson this week as follows: Carl O. Elg, of the Town of Star, to Eva Shosten, of Highlanding; Fred Seeger, of Gervais. to Selma Schaper; Jos. Lachance, of Grand Forks, to Lea Delorme, of Lake Pleasant township; James W. Brock, of Winnipeg, to Pearl Demaries, of this city.

A telephone from Bemidji, Minn., to the Minneapolis Journal says that State Senator S. D. Works of Mankato, has brought to this country two cars of sheep which he will let out to farmers on shares. Senator Works has noted the results of experimenting with sheep in clearing cut-over lands of small brush and timber. It is a well known fact that sheep clear the land better than any other animal.

Don't fail to attend the foot ball game at this place Saturday afternoon between the Fertile high school team and the lads of this place. The line-up of the locals is W. Garceau, le; Mickelson, lt; Marshall, lg; Gjerberg. c; Buse, rg; Zaiser, rt; Findisen, re; T. Garceau, qb; Richards, fh; Toupin, lh; Brunelle, rb. Our lads are practicing daily and expect to have the scalps of the Fertile fellows dangling from their belts after the game Saturday evening.

The band concert last evening was well attended and a pronounced success in every particular. The boys put forth their best efforts and their work is deserving of much praise as well as good financial support. The baritone solo, "Longing for Home," by Joseph P. Harren is worthy of especial praise from the way he rendered the difficult selection, and considering the comparatively brief time he has been playing that instrument.

At St. Joseph's church yesterday morning was solemnized the marriage of James W. Brock and Miss Pearl Demaries, Father Fayolle conducting the ceremony. The groom is a barber at Winnipeg, while the bride is one of our most charming young ladies. The happy young couple took the train last evening for Vancouver on their wedding trip ere going to housekeeping in Winnipeg. They have the best wishes of all friends in their voyage down life's rugged pathway, and may success crown their every effort.

On Tuesday at the Catholic church in Gentilly the ceremony which united together as man and wife Jos. Lachance and Miss Lea Delorme was performed by Father Thilien. A large number of friends were present to witness the solemn but happy event, and the congratulations and best wishes of all were showered upon the happy young couple. The contracting parties are both well and favorably known in this city, and in their departure for their new home in North Yakima, Wash., the Gazette joins with numerous friends in wishing for them unbounded success and much joy and happiness.

MIX THIS YOURSELF

RECIPE FOR SIMPLE HOME-MADE KIDNEY CURE.

Inexpensive Mixture of Harmless Vegetable Ingredients Said to Overcome Kidney and Bladder Trouble Promptly.

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on Kidney diseases, who makes the statement in a New York daily newspaper, that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the recipe; try it:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

A well-known physician is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire Kidney and Urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of Rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure the Rheumatism by forcing the Kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid and foul, decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

A Warm Bath.

A young man went into a restaurant and ordered roast beef, coffee and rolls. In a few minutes a trim little waitress tripped up with the order. As she turned to leave the young man discovered that the meat was about as cold as a refrigerator.

"I don't care for cold beef," he said. "I should like to have it hot."

The young woman took the plate, and, going to the dumb waiter shaft, shouted down: "Hortense, I want this meat hot; pour some warm gravy on it."

Giving Him a Pointer.

"Once upon a time, when I was selling lightning rods," began the man whom we all sized up as a returned missionary from China, "I came across a farmer who had quit the plow for a shady fence corner and was thoroughly out with agriculture. He didn't want anything in my line except advice.

"'Stranger,' says he, 'hard work and me don't agree. I want to strike something easy. I'm thinking of letting it be known that I have struck natural gas on the farm and selling out for a big price.'

"'But have you?' I asked.

"'No, but I could fool 'em.'

"I told him that he couldn't work no such racket—that he would have to show the gas before anyone would buy, and he then said:

"'Wouldn't it be the same with coal?'

"'I might pretend I had an iron mine in that hill.'

"'You'd have to show the ore.'

"He suggested two or three other impossible schemes on which I had to throw cold water, and finally, in desperation, he said:

"'Stranger, if you've got any brains in your head give me a pinter on how to git along without work.'

"'Have you any daughters?'

"'Four of 'em b'gosh!'

"'Has each one got a beau?'

"'Two or three apiece.'

"'Then let them bring suits for breach of promise and the money will come rolling in faster than you can count it. It's a sure thing with a jury, and any lawyer will take the case on shares. That's why I am in the lightning rod business—because I have no daughters.'

"'Shake!' says the man, holding out his paw. 'You are smarter'n chain lightning, and I'm a fool. That's the way—of course it is, and if you come back this way this week you'll hear that my gals have got four breach of promise suits on hand and are lookin' for more!'"

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated with Caffeine.

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not it has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years has had severe stomach trouble. "I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to give relief. Was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured on my stomach.

"I finally concluded that coffee was the cause of my trouble and stopped using it. I tried tea in its place and then milk, but neither agreed with me; then I commenced using Postum, had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste.

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia.

"I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it, I appreciate Postum." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

The Results of a Wager

By MABEL BALDWIN BEARDSLEY

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The lost boat had come in, the train was rapidly filling up, and Bess looked sadly out of the window at the hurrying passengers.

"You look serious," remarked some one, and Tom Stickney settled himself beside her.

"Have you any objections?" asked Bess, for she was decidedly cross.

"What is the matter?" persisted Tom.

"I want to go to Washington," answered Bess, rather dolefully.

"Why don't you go?" asked Tom, though he knew how little she could afford it.

Had Bess not been cross, her tone and look would have been reproachful as she answered:

"Don't be silly! You know I would if I could—"

"'But if I couldn't, how could I?'" finished Tom, provokingly. "Oh! you will get there some time, Bess. Take it in on your wedding tour."

"And proclaim myself to the world a bride? Never! All the silly couples think they must trot off to Washington or Niagara."

"I bet you will go to one or the other, yourself!"

"Not if I stay single forever and ever. Just now, wedding trips are far from my mind. My soul is harrowed with grief because I cannot join this jolly party. Just listen," and Bess opened the letter which all this time she had held in her hand:

"'Dear Bess: I write in haste to tell you that a party of us are going to take advantage of the Teachers' Holiday Excursion to Washington from this place. Remembering how often you have expressed a wish to visit your mother's old home, I have set my heart upon having you for my chum. Though the others in the party are strangers to you, they are jolly, easy to know, and as nice a set as you could find; and I assure you a pleasant time.

"'Your first impression, I know, will be that you cannot go, but I shall wait until the very last moment possible, hoping that some kind fate will smile upon me, by opening the way for you. The tickets for the round trip, including board for three days at a first-class hotel, are only twelve-fifty. Your name needs to be in by the twenty-second. That will give you over a month in which to decide, so do let it be "yes." Yours hastily,

"'JENNIE.'

"Now, isn't that tempting? And to think that there isn't the ghost of a chance for me."

Bess looked so very disconsolate that Tom wished with all his heart that he had the right to comfort her in his own way. But, though in spite of much sparring, they had been friends always, at any attempt on his part to assume the role of lover, this little "rose among thorns" made use of her natural defenses. As he expressed it, she "always kept a fellow at arm's length." Tom had loved her long, and without undue conceit felt assured that she cared for him more than she would own. This stormy little piece of contrariness would have to be taken by strategy. But he knew that Washington had long been her Mecca, and realized that this was indeed a great trial. So he was very sympathetic as he said:

"I wish I could help you out. I would willingly loan—"

"I beg to be excused!" exclaimed Bess quickly, feeling that she would rather be beholden to anyone in the world than to this old friend, and wondering why. "I don't ask help of anybody."

"I know you don't," replied Tom, a little nettled, the lover lost for the moment in the man. "I don't believe you want to go to Washington. You wouldn't go if you had the chance—the best chance in the world. You are just so contrary!"

A little red spot burned in each cheek as Bess looked at the young man astonished. Spar they did, but she never had known him to be so absolutely rude as this, so downright quarrelsome.

"Well—why, how rude you are! There is an empty seat. Perhaps you would better take it!"

"This seat is very comfortable," replied Tom coolly, seeing that for once he had the advantage. "But I believe you are playing a part. You do not want to go to Washington at all, and I will wager that if before the twenty-second, a good opportunity presents itself, you will back out. In fact, I know you will. I know you so well."

The decision, the provoking coolness with which he made this declaration, exasperated Bess, and she replied hotly:

"I accept your wager! If a way is opened for me to go without borrowing or accepting charity, I will go. Make your own terms, Mr. Stickney," and Bess grew very dignified.

A sudden rash idea, a sudden merry twinkle of his eyes, and Tom leaned down and whispered:

"If I win, you are to marry me!"

With all his attempts at love-making, Tom never before had gotten so far as this, and he was delighted to see the hot color sweep over her face and neck, as she hesitated a moment in great confusion, and then said quickly:

"That's not fair!"

"My only terms, though. If your word is good for anything you will accept."

Then she lifted her head proudly, said, "I accept," and took up the book in her lap. Not another word said she.

P—— was reached at last. Bess hurried from the train and tried to make her way out of Tom's sight. But he kept steadily by her side as she rushed up the street, only saying as they reached her home:

"If a good chance to go to Washington offers itself, please do not accept. I am anxious to win that wager. It may be selfish, but men are proverbially so, you know."

Not a word said she, but Tom smiled all the way up the street.

Bessie was receiving a fair salary as typewriter in a New York office. She had no parents, and her few relatives were in moderate circumstances only. The luxury of this trip was not to be considered, even if her employers would give her the three days. For out of her salary came board and other expenses, both for herself and a younger sister, who was preparing to teach for her own support. This left nothing for jolly trips to the capital and the like.

Tom went his way in quite a self-congratulatory mood. In one short and unexpected moment he had made a sudden spring toward the ambition of his life. He knew that Bess' word was as good as gold—that she would "play fair." His only fear was that no opportunity would come to her, and he began to rack his brains for some way in which he might catch my Lady Disdainful.

Then one evening Tom called on her.

"Do you still want to go to Washington?" were his first words.

"Certainly. Why?"

"Because I know of a chance for you. Miss this train and I will tell you while we walk. Will you?"

"Yes, it is still early."

"To be as brief as possible: At the office they are in a great flurry. Tracy, their main dependence, is laid up for some time to come, and an important piece of business which he was to see to will have to go to the wall unless some one can take his place. So they are going to send me."

"But There is Your Word for It!"

"What has that to do—"

"The business is at Washington, and I am to go next week."

"Well!" Bess' face began to flush, but she would not see. Tom continued rapidly:

"The business will take a day or two, if not three. They pay all expenses of course, which will not be small. Except that they will make a big bit of money by the transaction, the trip would be very expensive. So, when I suggested the excursion at reduced rates which goes from N—— next week as being a great saving and so forth, and so forth, they were so pleased at the interest your humble servant displayed in their affairs, that Rindell, Senior, said: 'Well, my boy, if you can make the trip at so low a figure as that, take your mother or sister along and get what enjoyment you can out of it. You have worked hard this year, and we know you will do this job to our advantage.' With that the fine fellow made out a liberal check, telling me not to be afraid of it."

Again Tom paused and looked at Bess, but not a word said she.

"Well?" This time Tom said it.

"I am neither mother nor sister."

"But you may be 'wife.'"

"Suppose I do not care to be?"

"But there is your word for it! Marry me—then your trip will be neither a gift nor a loan, but your right, for 'with all my worldly goods I thee endow,' you know. Come, Bess," and Tom's tone grew lower, "I have waited so long, and loved you so dearly. We are poor and have no one to say 'yea or nay.' We can be quietly married on Monday—you to go immediately to Jennie's and enjoy your trip in your own way. I will not intrude upon you at all. Maggie will soon be teaching—until then I will gladly do for her what you are now doing."

Of course Bess rebelled. She fought hard to overcome each one of Tom's arguments, but in vain. She had given her word, and finally she was convinced that this was a bona fide "chance," such as she had promised to accept or lose her wager.

"So now," said Tom, when he saw that she really was convinced that this offer came under the conditions of the wager, "if you will not marry me and go to Washington, I win the wager, and you will have to marry me anyhow. So you see I have you fast, my darling," and Tom looked as though he would like to hold her fast in another way, had he dared.

"I never go back on my word," said she, after a moment, "so I accept your offer. That means my trip for me, and the loss of the wager for you;" then an irresistible laugh broke from her. "I cannot help it—to think of how you have gotten the best of me," and with one of her sudden impulses, she reached up and kissed him.

And he was satisfied.

ANILINE AND ANATTO BUTTER COLORS IN BUTTER MAKING

Experiments to Determine Relative Merits Conducted by Wisconsin Agricultural College.

A uniform color is one of the desired qualities of commercial butter. The natural color of milk fat from which butter is made varies considerably during different seasons of the year. Some of the causes of these variations are the feed, the breed, and the period of lactation of the cows giving the milk. Butter made when cows are on full pasture feed is of a deeper yellow color than when the cows are given dry feed in the stable. The milk of fresh cows often makes a more highly colored butter than that of strippers and the characteristic yellow color of the butter of Guernsey cows is well known to most dairymen.

All these factors influence the natural color of butter fat to such an extent that a collection of samples of butter from different herds of cows may show as many shades of yellow as there are packages of butter. Some markets prefer a more highly-colored butter than others, but all demand that the particular standard preferred shall be a uniform color. These peculiarities of the markets and of the cows have led to a nearly universal custom of adding artificial coloring matter to butter in order to satisfy the demands of the trade.

The addition of coloring matter to butter is therefore, not a deception, but is the result of a desire to cater to the popular demand for a uniform yellow color in butter at all seasons of the year.

The following food inspection decision No. 51 illustrates the attitude of the government authorities towards the coloring of butter at this time.

"The coloring of butter is specifically permitted in the law of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat., 209), and the coloring of cheese in the law of June 6, 1896 (29 Stat., 253). It is held by the department that the food and drugs act does not repeal the provisions of the acts referred to above and the addition of harmless color to these substances may be practiced as therein provided and that the presence of coloring matter specifically recognized by acts of congress as a constituent is not required to be declared on the label."

JAMES WILSON,
Secretary of Agriculture.
Washington, D. C., January 18, 1907.

The pure food law, which went into effect January 1, 1907, does not forbid the coloring of butter, but it prohibits interstate commerce in any article of food, "if it contains any added poisonous ingredient which may render such article injurious to health." The regulations made for the enforcement of the law provide that the secretary of agriculture shall determine the names of such substances as shall be permitted or inhibited and until investigations have been made and reported by the secretary of agriculture regarding the brands of butter color now on the market, it is evident that their use as formerly may be continued.

The brands of butter color now on the market may be divided into two general classes.

1. Those made from anatto seed by the use of some oil as a solvent, commonly called vegetable colors.

2. The aniline or coal-tar color, sometimes called mineral colors.

Up to within a year or two, aniline butter colors have been more extensively used than vegetable colors. There seems to be some uncertainty in the popular mind whether or not aniline butter color is harmless as used in the manufacture of butter. On account of this doubt, which with some amounts to prejudice against the use of coal-tar coloring matter in any article of food, manufacturers of butter color have of late made an effort to meet this demand for vegetable or anatto butter color.

The dairy department of the Wisconsin Agricultural college has just completed experiments, under the direction of E. H. Farrington and Martin Meyers, to determine the relative merits of the two coloring materials, a summary of the observations being as follows:

First, some of the brands of vegetable butter color now on the market are weaker than the aniline butter colors. Nearly twice as much vegetable color was needed in some cases to produce the same shade of color in butter as was given by the aniline color.

Second, when the change was made from vegetable to aniline butter color, some 15 years ago, butter makers were so accustomed to the weaker anatto color that they added too much of the stronger aniline color. This had a tendency to gradually accustom the consumer to a more highly colored butter than formerly had been made.

The natural color of June butter is a sufficiently high color and when only enough vegetable color is added to produce this shade there will be no danger of using so much as to impart a butter color flavor to the butter.

Third, the vegetable colors now on the market impart a rather greenish-yellow shade to the butter. This is quite different from the bright or reddish-yellow given to the butter by the aniline colors.

Fourth, some brands of vegetable color contain a decided flavor imparted to them by the oil used in making the color. This flavor may be distinctly noticed in the butter when large quantities of such brands of color are used.

Fifth, a great improvement in the strength and flavor of certain brands of vegetable butter color was noticed during the year these experiments were conducted, which suggests that the vegetable butter colors may eventually be improved so as to compare favorably with the aniline butter colors.

Sixth, when butter was held in cold storage at five degrees below zero, no difference was noticed in the uniformity or the depth of color in the lots of butter to which aniline and vegetable coloring was added. Over 50 tubs of butter were held in storage for different lengths of time, some of them being taken out when the butter was nearly a year old. Neither the vegetable nor the aniline colored butter showed any indication of fading or changing color while in storage.

Seventh, butter can be satisfactorily colored with a vegetable color.

Breaking Down Sage Brush.—For preparing new land for the plow, some sort of implement is often needed to remove the sagebrush. For this purpose a common railroad rail is often used, with a team hitched to each end and the rail dragged sideways across the land, breaking down the brush. This may be followed by a heavy rake, which gathers up the loosened brush into piles or windrows for burning.—Carl S. Scofield.

Leg Weakness.—Leg weakness is generally noticed about the time the fall rains set in. For this reason it is charged to wet weather. The cause, however, is forcing and too much rich feed. The trouble can only be prevented by feeding more moderately from now until the bird is ready for market. Feeds rich in nitrogen, such as wheat, bran, clover, meal and meat should be given instead of a pure ration of corn.

FIVE MONTHS IN HOSPITAL

Discharged Because Doctors Could Not Cure.

Levi P. Brockway, S. Second Ave., Anoka, Minn., says: "After lying for five months in a hospital I was discharged as incurable, and given only six months to live. My heart was affected, I had smothering spells, and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

"Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less."

The fee in each case will be $10.00. Churches, schools and markets convenient. Healthy climate, splendid crops and good laws. Grain-growing and cattle raising principal industries.

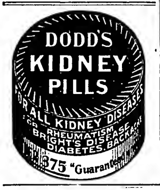
There is some definite creed to every character, but not the same creed for all characters.



WHAT IS PE-RU-NA?

Is it a Catarrh Remedy, or a Tonic, or is it Both?

Some people call Peruna a great tonic. Others refer to Peruna as a great catarrh remedy.

Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy than to call it a tonic?

Our reply is, that Peruna is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no effectual catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.

In order to thoroughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a specific action on the mucous membranes affected by the catarrh, but it must have a general tonic action on the nervous system.

Catarrh, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital forces.

Perhaps no vegetable remedy in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized many years, and is growing in its hold upon the medical profession. When joined with CUBEBS and COPAIBA a trio of medical agents is formed in Peruna which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical progress cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonics as COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FORMOSA and CEDRON SEED, ought to make this compound an ideal remedy for catarrh in all its stages and locations in the body.

From a theoretical standpoint, therefore, Peruna is beyond criticism. The use of Peruna, confirms this opinion. Numberless testimonials from every quarter of the earth furnish ample evidence that this judgment is not over enthusiastic. When practical experience confirms a well-grounded theory the result is a truth that cannot be shaken.

RULERS OF CAPITAL

HOW DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA IS GOVERNED.

City Under the Direct Control of Congress—Was Incorporated in 1802 with a Population of Only 3,000.

The city of Washington was not incorporated until 1802, at which time its population was only about 3,000. The government then was entirely different from the present form.

Its charter provided for a mayor to be appointed annually by the president, and for a city council of 12 members, to be selected by the white male inhabitants who had paid taxes the previous year.

The corporation had authority to levy taxes, provide police, health and building regulations, to maintain and repair streets and to do other things usually done by municipal corporations.

In 1812 a slight change was made, the mayor being selected by the qualified voters. This act also gave enlarged powers to the corporation. It is interesting to note that prior to 1812, neither the mayor nor the members of the council received any pay for their services.

Slight changes were again made in 1820, from which date until 1871, when the charter was revoked and a new form of municipal government was established, the mayor was elected by the vote of the qualified electors. The board of aldermen and common council elected by the taxpayers continued to legislate for the city.

Considerable diplomacy had to be used in securing the land necessary for the city. Nineteen of the proprietors, in consideration of the great benefit they expected to derive from having the federal city laid off upon their land, finally agreed to convey all their land to the president or the commissioners appointed by him under these conditions:

First—They were to receive no compensation for the land taken for streets, the title to which should be in the United States.

Second—The president was authorized to retain as many squares as he thought necessary for public improvement or other public uses, for which land they should receive $66 2-3 an acre.

Third—The balance was to be laid out in lots, one half to go to the United States, the other half to the owners of the land.

The money received from the sale of lots belonging to the United States was to be used in paying for the land taken for public use and in erecting public buildings. Other land was obtained by condemnation.

The changes made in 1871 provided a municipal government for the entire district. The executive officer was a governor, appointed by the president, for a term of four years. The legislative body was an assembly composed of a council and a house of delegates, the members of the former being appointed by the president, the members of the latter elected by the qualified voters.

The district was allowed a delegate in the house of representatives, who was also elected by the qualified voters, and who was a member of the committee on the District of Columbia of the house of representatives. There were several boards provided, the principal one being the board of public works, composed of the governor and four other persons, which had authority to make building regulations, build bridges and sewers and to perform other similar duties.

In the District of Columbia all real and personal property, except the property of the United States and the District, property of foreign governments used for legation purposes, church property, property used for educational property and farm land are taxed at the rate of one and one-half per cent. Land used for farming purposes is taxed at one per cent. The law provides that to the extent congress shall approve the estimates made by the commissioners it shall appropriate one-half thereof from the revenues of the District of Columbia and one-half from the treasury of the United States, so that the general government pays one-half, the other half being raised by taxation.

The district has no delegate in congress as the territories have. The commissioners appear before the committee of the house and the committee of the senate on the District of Columbia to urge the legislation they think necessary, and before the appropriation committee to explain the financial needs of the district.

The schools are under a board of education appointed by the judges of the supreme court of the district, and consisting of nine members, three of whom must be women. There are 12 medical inspectors for the schools, working under the health officer of the district.

The judiciary of the District of Columbia consists of a court of appeals, which is composed of a chief justice and two associate justices; a supreme court, composed of a chief justice and five associate justices; a police court of two judges; justices of the peace and several United States commissioners. All of these judges and justices of the peace are appointed by the president. The judges are confirmed by the senate, and hold office during good behavior. The justices of the peace are appointed for a term of four years.—Ohio Magazine.

PERIODS OF PAIN

MISS ADELAIDE NICHOLS

While no woman is entirely free from periodic suffering, it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely. Irregularities and pain are positive evidence that something is wrong which should be set right or it will lead to serious derangement of the feminine organism.

Thousands of women, have found relief from all periodic suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from native roots and herbs, as it is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It cures the condition which causes so much discomfort and robs that period of its terrors. Women who are troubled with painful or irregular functions should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health and strength by taking

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Miss Adelaide Nichols of 324 West 22nd Street, New York City, writes:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"If women who suffer would only rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound their troubles would be quickly alleviated. I feel greatly indebted for the relief and health which has been brought to me by your inestimable remedy."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures Female Complaints such as Falling and Displacements, and Organic Diseases. Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole feminine system. For the derangements of the Kidneys of either sex Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

Your Rent Money Will Buy a Farm in the Texas Pan Handle

Do you know that you can take the money you would pay for next years' rent and buy a farm in the Pan Handle country of northern Texas, Western Oklahoma and eastern New Mexico?

Those fellows down in the Pan Handle don't rent. You can bet your bottom dollar on that. They can take the money you'd pay for next year's rent and buy a farm—out there. The rent money'll cover the first payment. The crops will take care of the other payments and make you a good living besides.

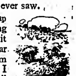
They don't have crop failures out there. It rains enough to grow most any crop. You can dig down 25 to 50 feet most anywhere in the Pan Handle and strike good water. You never saw better crops anywhere. A Pan Handle farmer thinks he's no good if he doesn't get 40 or 50 bushels of corn to the acre. 20 to 30 bushels of wheat is nothing unusual, and they figure right along on getting 60 to 80 bushels of oats. You ought to see the alfalfa—2 to 2½ tons to a cutting is what they get from an acre and they cut 3 and 4 times a year!

Don't Do It.

The land is a dark chocolate loam 5 to 8 feet deep, with a clay subsoil and it ought to raise good crops.

Think of land like this, ready for the plow, selling for $10 to $15 an acre. It beats anything I ever saw.

It won't be so cheap very long. It's selling for more now than it was this time last year and I know what I'm talking about when I tell you it will sell higher next year.



Own a Farm Like This in Pan Handle.

The Pan Handle is filling up with the best people you ever saw.

The climate is so fine they thrive on it. Lots of schools and churches.

How do you stand alongside of the Pan Handle farmer? At the end of the year what have you got, to show for the rent you paid? Nothing.

What's the Pan Handle farmer got? A fine big farm nearly paid for—and getting more valuable every year. Who's got the best of it?

Why don't you go down to the Pan Handle and do the same? It would pay you to take a trip down there just to look around.

It doesn't cost much—only $20 from St. Louis or Kansas City and $25 from Chicago—round trip. The Rock Island-Frisco lines have four routes to the Pan Handle—each one goes through a different part of the country.

I have got a book about Texas that's mighty interesting reading! Another about Oklahoma! Still another about New Mexico! They will tell you a lot you want to know about the Pan Handle Country before you go down there. Do you want one?

The Rock Island-Frisco Lines have no land for sale, and are only interested in getting good, energetic settlers for the desirable, but unoccupied, lands along their lines.

I have chosen several specific sections where conditions are especially favorable for new settlers, and I am advertising these sections. If you would prefer some other section than the Pan Handle country look for my advertisements in other issues of this paper, or write me for specific literature about the section you are most interested in.

THE BRUNELLES

PROCEEDINGS

Of the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, October 19, 1907.

In accordance with an alternative writ of mandamus issued on an order of Hon. William Watts, one of the judges of the District Court of the Fourteenth Judicial District, on October 1st, 1907, and pursuant to a call of the County Auditor of Red Lake county, Minnesota, the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met at the office of the County Auditor at the court house in the City of Red Lake Falls, at ten o'clock a. m.

Commissioners present—Lindquist, Pigeon, Demann, Shaw and Aubol.

Commissioners absent—None.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Demann, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Pigeon:

WHEREAS, Upon the application of one T. P. Hamre, the district court of this county has issued its alternative writ of mandamus commanding this board to meet at a time which has been specified by the County Auditor of Red Lake county, to-wit—October 19th, 1907, and consider the county seat removal petition filed in the said county auditor's office June 11th, 1907, and in default of such meeting and action, to show cause before the court why they should not act in the premises; and

WHEREAS, A prior petition to remove the county was duly filed in said county auditor's office April 11th, 1905, containing the requisite number of signatures of legal voters, and no legal action has yet been had by the board upon said last mentioned petition, and the voters of the county have demanded that this board act thereon, and this board is informed and believes that said petition should be disposed of before any action should be taken on any other, and

WHEREAS, This board is informed that the requisite steps for giving notice of the present meeting to the electors of the county have not been fully taken, and for these and other good and sufficient reasons the board believes it has no jurisdiction to act upon the petition filed June 11, 1907, as aforesaid; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That this board make its return and answer to the alternative writ at Crookston, and show cause to the court by way of defence to the action why they should not meet and consider the petition described in the writ, and set forth in the answer all proper and legitimate reasons therefore, and to that end.

BE IT RESOLVED, That Chas. E. Boughton, an attorney at law residing at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, be and he is hereby employed, appointed and named as the sole attorney to represent this board and its members in prosecuting the defence in said action relative to said writ, and to take such steps therein as shall be deemed necessary; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this board adjourn sine die, without further action in said matter.

Commissioners voting aye—Demann, Pigeon and Lindquist.

Commissioners voting nay:—Shaw and Aubol.

Motion carried.

CHAS. A. LINDQUIST, Chairman
Board of County Comm'r.

Attest: JOHN B. O'BRIEN,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of Board.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, October 19, 1907.

Pursuant to law the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met in the office of the county auditor in the court house in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, at eleven o'clock a. m.

All members present.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Shaw and duly seconded by Commissioner Demann:

RESOLVED, That the highway beginning on the east bank of Thief River between Sections 34 and 23 and running due east to the county line be and the same is hereby declared a state highway.

Motion carried unanimously.

On motion duly carried a day of hearing was set for the hearing of the petition of A. D. Brown and others for a new school district on the 18th day of November, A. D. 1907.

On motion carried the board adjourned sine die.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by L. L. Zenor, a single man, mortgagor, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Ulfthuizen, The Netherlands mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of February, A. D., 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 3rd day of March, A. D., 1905, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 35 of mortgages on page 332 and

Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable, and

Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of the said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice; and

Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred Forty-three and 95-100 ($1343.95) dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The east half of the east half of section twenty-seven (27) in township one hundred fifty (150) north of range forty-three (43) west of 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey one hundred sixty (160) acres, be the same more or less in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 14th day of December, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock a. m., on that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of one thousand three hundred forty three and 95-100 ($1343.95) dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy five ($75.00) dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated October 27th, A. D., 1907.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of forty-eight and 40-100 dollars with interest on said amount since the 20th day of February, A. D., 1907, at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum since that date.

And whereas, the terms and conditions of mortgage hereinafter describes provides that if default shall be made in the payment of said sum of money, or the interest, or any part thereof at the time and in the manner in said mortgage specified, the said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns are authorized to declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable;

And whereas the assignees of said mortgagee have declared the whole amount secured by said mortgage due and payable prior to the time of giving this notice.

That there is due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice on said mortgage hereinafter described the sum of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, which said mortgage was duly executed and delivered by Andrew O. Letvig, as administrator of the estate of Mary Jane Letvig, deceased, mortgagor, to Andrew A. Olson, mortgagee, bearing date the 20th day of February, 1904 with the power of sale therein contained, was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota, on the 23rd day of February, 1904, at 4:00 o'clock p. m., in book 14 of mortgages, on pages 251-253.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Andrew A. Olson to Sabille Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings by a written assignment bearing date the 11th day of October, 1907, and recorded in the office of said Register of deeds on the 18th day of October 1907, at 2.30 o'clock P. M. in Book 15 of mortgages at Page 410; and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be forclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The Northeast Quarter of section numbered twenty five (25), in township numbered one hundred fifty two, (152) North of Range forty five (45) West of the 5th P. M., in the state of Minnesota less the Railway Right-away and other lands of said quarter sold during the life time of said Mary Jane Letvig, leaving a balance in said above described premises of 124 and 71-100 acres, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said County and State on the 7th day of December, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, with interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorneys' fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of forclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated October 23d, 1907,

MARKET DAY SOON

Our Merchants have Decided to Hold Another Market Day this Fall.

There is a prevailing feeling among our merchants that ere the chilly blasts of winter are upon us for a long siege of four or five months another market day should be held, and it is more than probable that the same will be "pulled off" during Catholic fair week. The fair is to be held the 18th, 19th and 20th of this month and any of these days would be favorable as a market day. Differing from previous occasions it is hoped to make this the crowning event of them all. Besides giving prizes for the various products raised on the farm, the largest load of grain marketed during the day, and other like events, it is hoped an action sale of stock, implements, etc., may be of interest to many, and any farmer having a horse or cow, a wagon or plow, to dispose of and not enough stuff to pay to hold a sale of his own will be welcome to bring in his "wares" and list them with the large array of other material. Next week we will give the date as designated as Market day and also a list of the prizes and more information regarding the auction sale.

Deer Season Opens the 10th.

Altho the opening of the moose and deer season is still a week off many of the local hunters who have been giving their attention to ducks, prairie chickens and partridges are now preparing to go out after moose and deer. The season opens on Nov. 10, and moose may be killed only during the following five days. Each hunter is entitled to kill only one antlered moose, which cannot under any circumstances, be shipped out of the state. Residents of the state may kill two deer and nonresidents may kill only one.

THE CATHOLIC FAIR

November 18th, 19th and 20th, the Bazaar Dates for St. Joseph's Church.

Father Fayolle was interviewed the other day regarding the fair to be given at St. Joseph's church on the 18th, 19th and 20th inst., and he informed us that from the preparations being made the affair would be one of the largest and most successful in the history of the organization, and it would be an occasion when everybody would be cheerfully welcomed. The church will be artistically decorated for the occasion, thus adding pleasantry to the affair and giving inspiration to those attending to join in the festivities and contests. Supper will be served at the church each evening during the fair and the community at large are most cordially invited to attend and join in the various contests.

Tuesday's Returns.

The election Tuesday was not very exciting, there being but one ticket in the field. It was just the sanction of the citizens for the return of our present able officials. However, a little excitement prevailed in the first ward where two candidates opposed each other. They were J. J. Padden and Joseph Remick, and the latter won by two votes. This will give the council one new member, with the following as the officials:

Mayor—J. A. Duffy.
Treasurer—Ovide Emard.
Alderman-at-Large—T. A. Crompe.
Alderman-at-Large—H. Hennemuth.
Alderman, 1st Ward—Jos. Remick.
Alderman, 2d Ward—Fred Borchers
Alderman, 3d Ward—Simon Paul.
Justice of the Peace—S. A. Swanson
Justice of the Peace—A. P. Toupin.

THE PARCELS POST

We Welcome the Rural Free Delivery of Malls, but Parcels Post Nay.

We heartily endorse the establishment of rural free deliveries thruout the country, and are highly pleased to know that by the middle of next month the first mail route out from Red Lake Falls will be a realized incident. But as to the parcels post we cannot see where it will benefit either the farmer or country merchant, but instead will place the mail order houses in closer touch with the rural citizens than heretofore. Under the pretense that it will benefit the farmers Postmaster General Von Meyer will recommend to Congress next spring the establishment of a parcels post regulating the service now in use and favoring a uniform rate. For instance, a person can now send a package weighing four pounds from Red Lake Falls to New York City for sixty-four cents, whereas, if the package was addressed to some foreign country in the international parcel convention it would be carried for forty-eight cents.

In his address before the New England Postmasters convention at Boston last month Postmaster General Meyer said:

"I propose to recommend to Congress the establishment of a parcel post on rural routes which will meet the objections of the small store keepers and retailers. This will be a boon to our rural population, and to the storekeeper, as the latter can receive his orders by mail or telephone and dispatch the desired merchandise by the rural carrier. The farmer will be saved from hitching up his horse and losing the time he needs for planting or harvesting his crops, and it will enable the storekeeper to increase his sales and meet the requirements of modern trade. If my recommendations are adopted, it will cost twelve cents a pound for the mail order house to send parcels to the rural delivery patron from any city post office, while for delivery from the distributing office of the rural route, or if mailed by a patron of any rural route for delivery to a patron on the same route, or at the distributing post office of said route, the charge will be but five cents for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound up to eleven pounds, or twenty-five cents for a package weighing eleven pounds."

This may sound fair and just to a person high up in a tree top, but why recommend the passage of such a law (to benefit only the poor farmer) when the carriers on the rural routes now are allowed to do such errands for a mere pittance as "pin money." On the face of it the parcels post is solely for the benefit of the large mail order houses and we favor reform along other lines in our postal service, at least until the deficiency now existing has been overcome. The parcels post is an open door to the army of control. Thru this door will pour the hordes of orders, city bound, bringing back another horde of purchases—by mail. In commenting on the parcels post recommendation Byron Williams, editor of the Western Publisher of Chicago, says:

"The parcels post is poison to the rural merchant and the rural publisher! If the law is passed these two business men might as well close out and quit while the bridges are still unburned. The passage of the parcels post law will be the crowning victory in the mail order war against the country merchant and the country town! It will centralize millions of purchases and put up thousands of 'To Let' signs all over this verdant and productive United States."

Further light on the subject may be had by reading the following from the Chicago Journal:

"Friends of Postmaster General Von Meyer's parcels post idea have encountered the argument that such a scheme would ruin country shopkeepers, depopulate the country and over-crowd the already congested cities, and they do not know what to do about it.

After long consideration, they have concluded that the only thing left to them is to take the bull by the horns and assert that, of all persons in this country who will be benefitted by the parcels post, 'the country shopkeeper is the one who will profit most.

How can that be? Well, it will enable him to get small quantities of supplies to meet the emergencies at a much less rate than he formerly was charged by express companies. 'In the nature of things,' these persons go on to say, 'the country shopkeeper cannot carry a large stock because he has such a variety in his store. A parcels post system which would enable him within a day or two to renew his stock of needles, thread, soap and candy at a nominal rate, for transportation charges, would add immensely to the value of his store.'

This is an argument that may appeal to Mr. Von Meyer; but we do not think it will have much force with country shopkeepers. When big mail order houses in the large cities have been doing business for a short time with the aid of a government parcels post, the average country shopkeeper will not have occasion to renew his order for needles or candy. He will be out of business, and such things as thread and soap will not interest him.

Postmaster General Von Meyer should devote his talents to more important matters than establishing a parcels post, that would be a great injury to the country and which no thoughtful citizen really wants. One of these things is the annual deficit of the post office department, which is run at a tremendous loss every year. Let him first put the postal service on a paying basis. It will be time enough then to talk of adding new branches to postal work."

Notice to the Public.

I have started up the Healy flour mill and am now prepared to furnish the famous "Gold Seal" fancy patent flour, and feed of all kinds on the shortest notice. Orders phoned to No. 87 will be given prompt attention. Farmers who desire to exchange wheat for flour will find it to their advantage to call on me. Will also always pay the highest cash price for wheat. Am prepared to do feed grinding every hour in the day. Give me a call.

Yours sincerely,

Live Stock Show.

The first annual live stock show of the Northwestern Live Stock association will be held at the stock yards, South St. Paul, November 19th to 22nd inclusive. This show promises to make a splendid start in the development of a great annual exhibition worthy to stand as an exponent of the vast industry of producing and fattening live stock.

Foot Ball. Nit!

The foot ball game last Saturday afternoon between the Fertile high school team and our lads failed to materialize. Word was received to the effect the team was crippled and the boys couldn't come. 'Twas well, for had the contest been pulled off there wouldn't have been enough left of the Fertile aggregation to pay to box up and express home.

RURAL FREE ROUTE

Some Interesting Pointers from Postmaster General Von Meyer.

The history of the rural delivery is an interesting one, and should be understood by our people, for the reason that there is a feeling prevalent in many parts of the country that this service is an extravagance and an unnecessary drain upon the Department. However, let us look at the results accomplished in the last ten years: The first rural route was established in the fall of 1896. Fifteen thousand dollars were expended during that fiscal year, the postal deficit being eleven and one-half million dollars. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1907, the expenditures for rural delivery were twenty-seven million dollars, and the estimated postal deficit showed a decrease, as compared with 1897, of about four and one-half million dollars, the total being about seven million dollars. This is an undoubted evidence, to my mind, that while the expense incurred in connection with rural delivery is enormous, yet it has increased the receipts, and the benefits to our people can not be measured in dollars and cents. The isolation which existed in many parts of the country has been overcome; the people are in daily communication with their friends in the rest of the world, the daily papers and magazines come to the door of every farmhouse on the rural routes, and enlightment and information are being spread broadcast throughout the land. Medical men have said that already the establishment of the rural service is having its effect upon the mentality of our country patrons, and that because of it insanity is on the decrease.

NEWS OF WEEK SUMMARIZED

DIGEST OF THE NEWS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

Washington Notes.

President Roosevelt has issued orders to suspend action in the matter of cutting down the historic trees in the botanic grounds in Washington to make a site for the Grant statue until he has time to investigate.

Porto Rico is endeavoring to secure representation in the national guard of the United States, and to that end the commissioner of the interior of that island has asked the war department what aid will be given in organizing a regiment in Porto Rico.

The report of the inland waterways commission will follow closely the outlines of President Roosevelt's speech at Memphis, it is said. The members of the commission will assemble again about Nov. 25 in Washington to go over the draft of the report to the president.

President Roosevelt has returned to the White House from his Southern trip. The president took no pains to conceal his delight at getting home and was markedly cordial in his greeting to those who had gathered in the train shed to meet him. The president expressed himself as thoroughly pleased with his trip.

Telegraphic advices received at the public health and marine hospital service from Dr. White, the medical officer of that service at Seattle, Wash., indicate that a fully developed case of the bubonic plague, and which proved fatal, has made its appearance in the Chinese quarters of that city.

Personal.

James W. Westcott, brother of Mrs. Katherine Tingley and a widely known and wealthy gambler, died of diabetes at his home in New York.

Albert A. Wilson, formerly United States marshal for the District of Columbia and a close friend of Former President Cleveland, is dead of diabetes.

John Temple Graves, editor of the Atlanta Georgian and News, has accepted the chief editorship of the New York American. Col. Graves will assume his new position about Nov. 15.

A courtship dating from an amateur theatrical performance last winter culminated in Washington in the wedding of Miss Catherine Ridgley, daughter of the controller of the currency, to Phelps Brown, son of the late Sevellon A. Brown, who was chief clerk of the department of state.

Crimes.

William C. Cummings, a laborer aged seventy years, was held up and robbed of 17 cents at Waterloo, Iowa, it is alleged, by two Italian tramps.

Angered by the frequency of his wife's visits to a dentist prompted C. E. Burch of Chicago to kill his wife and then turn his revolver upon himself. Both are dead.

Mrs. Bertha Niederpruden committed suicide by throwing herself in front of a trolley car at Detroit. Her body was wound up in the gear of the car and dismembered.

Following a quarrel over a transfer slip on a Polk street car at San Francisco, Charles Moss was shot and instantly killed and two other passengers wounded by the conductor.

Crazed with drink and jealousy, William Rainey, a young grocer of Brunswick, Ga., shot and mortally wounded his wife. He then placed the revolver to his head and fired, dying instantly.

Engaged in a fistic encounter at Marquette, Mich., with a playmate aged fourteen, Edmund Leroux, seventeen years old, suddenly fell to the ground and expired. The quarrel originated in a dispute at a football game. An inquest will be held.

Amasaa Campbell, the millionaire lumberman from Antigo, Wis., slayer of Dr. Harris, is in the hospital at the county jail in Chicago with a broken leg. Campbell received his injuries in a fight with his cellmate in murderers' row. According to a story told by his attorney, Campbell, who is a most exemplary prisoner, was attacked by his cellmate because of some slight affront.

Accidental Happenings.

PIONEER LEGISLATOR AND WIFE CELEBRATE SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Moir of Eldora, Iowa, pioneer residents of Hardin county, will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary to-day.

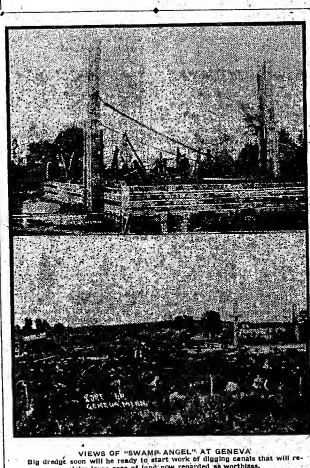
Mr. Moir, who is eighty-three years old, was born in Bamptshire, Scotland, and came to this country with his parents when he was six years old. Mrs. Moir, whose maiden name was Olive Jane Ball, was born at Stanstead, Can., May 28, 1831, and resided there until after her marriage, when she and her husband went to Ohio and later to Indiana, where Mr. Moir was naturalized in 1854 at Plymouth. He took up the study of law and in 1856 was admitted to the bar in Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Moir taught the first graded school in Plymouth in 1855-6. In 1856 Mr. Moir purchased land in Hardin county, Iowa, and the spring of that year the couple journeyed overland to Iowa, it requiring more than three weeks to make the trip. Mr. Moir is the dean of the Hardin county bar, having been in the practice of law in that county in the fall of 1856. Mr. Moir is a charter member of the Odd Fellows' lodge at Eldora.

In 1861 and 1863 Mr. Moir represented his county in the state legislature. When the state industrial school for boys was located at Eldora Mr. Moir was made a member of the board of trustees of the institution, and served in that capacity until the trustees were succeeded by the present board of control. Mr. Moir has served several terms as mayor of his home town and has been a member of the county insane commission since its organization. He was one of the pioneer opera house managers, and for years managed the old Porter & Moir hall, presenting many of the stars of the eighties.

Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Moir—Marcus W. Moir, former county treasurer, and George J. Moir. They have five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

MAMMOTH DREDGE IS LAUNCHED FOR WORK ON DRAINAGE DITCH



VIEWS OF "SWAMP ANGEL" AT GENEVA

Big dredge soon will be ready to start work of digging canals that will reclaim large area of land now regarded as worthless.

Geneva, Minn., Special.—The mammoth dredge that will do the main part of the work in digging the Geneva-Riceland ditch has been launched and is having the heavy machinery placed in position, so that it will be ready for work in less than a month. This huge engine, weighing nine tons, was drawn from Ellendale by a large threshing engine. The dredge is 100 by 40 feet. It has a displacement of 375 tons. When finished it will weigh 100 tons. The sides are six inches thick. Eighteen cars were required to bring the machinery and material used on its construction from Ohio. They were shipped to Ellendale and drawn from there across the country, a distance of twelve miles. The boom, seventy-one feet in length and weighing five tons, required two cars. The big dipper has a capacity of two and a half cubic yards of dirt. The dipper and dipper handle weigh nearly twelve tons.

It is expected that work can be carried on the greater part of the winter, providing the ground is not frozen more than a foot in depth. The greatest difficulty to be encountered is the ice, which will prevent the dredge from moving forward. One small dredge already is at work near the head of the ditch at Geneva lake. According to the contract, the ditch must be completed by Dec. 1, 1909. The main ditch will be seventeen miles in length and the lateral ditches, eleven in number, will be sixteen miles in length. The last four miles of the ditch will follow Turtle creek, which empties into the Cedar river near Austin. About 70,000 acres of very fertile land will be drained, the cost of which work will be about $200,000. The farmers whose lands will be benefited have been assessed not to exceed $10 an acre, and that for land that at the present time is entirely worthless. The good land is taxed as low as $1 an acre. The land, when drained, will be worth $50 an acre.

The large dredge, which has been christened the Swamp Angel, is at present 1,200 feet from Mud lake, where it will begin work. A force of twenty men will be required to run the dredge, with day and night shifts, working twenty-two out of twenty-four hours. The dredge is equipped with electric lights and telephone connections. To the dredge will be attached a stern-wheel barge to carry coal, which has to be hauled from Clark's Grove and Ellendale. Houseboats, one for eating and the other for lodging, are moored near the shore.

STATE CONTRACT LET.

Bid on Cottage at Hastings Is Approved by Board.

C. Ash & Co. of Hastings has been awarded the contract by the state board of control for building the men's cottage at the Hastings asylum for the insane. Their bid was $42,800. The appropriation, which must cover all extras, is $50,000.

Two other contracts were to have been let, but all bids were rejected as too high. They were on a new wing at the Rochester hospital and a farm cottage dining room for the school for the feeble minded at Faribault.

State News of Interest

Mr. and Mrs. Christian Maas of Le Sueur recently celebrated their golden wedding.

Fifty years ago Christian Maas, then a stalwart young emigrant from Hanover, twenty-four years old, was married at Traverse des Sioux to Miss Henrietta Eggers, also an emigrant from Hanover. Through the sunshine and storms of half a century this couple have lived together in happiness and prosperity, sharing the joys and trials of life, and are to-day hale and hearty. There have been born to them sixteen children, nine daughters and seven sons, but of these only eight, two daughters and six sons, now are living.

Mr. and Mrs. Maas have just moved into a commodious residence in Le Sueur and look forward to many happy years, blessed with the love of their children and grandchildren, and enjoying the comforts of their well-directed industry in the past.

EDUCATORS TO CONFER.

State Superintendent Olsen and Prof. James Will Address Convention.

The Northwestern Minnesota Educational association will convene in Crookston on Nov. 14 and 15 for their annual meeting, and it is expected that there will be more than a thousand visitors in the city at that time to attend its sessions. In conjunction with this annual meeting County Superintendent Thomas Casey also has called a convention of the school officers in Polk county. As there are 612 school officers in the county and most of them are expected to attend, they alone will make a good sized convention.

The annual conference of school officers was an innovation for Northern Minnesota inaugurated last year by Supt. Casey, and already it has been productive of a great deal of good. It brings the officers of the little country schools of the interior into direct touch with the best educational thought of the day, and Polk county's rural schools soon will be on a much higher plane than the average.

Among those who will be in Crookston and who will address the assembled school officers, as well as the educators of the Northwest Minnesota Educational association, will be Supt. J. H. Hayes of Thief River Falls, president of the association; Supt. E. E. McIntire of Crookston, President Northrop of the state university, State Superintendent Olsen, Assistant State Superintendent Schulz, George B. Aiton, inspector of state high schools; S. A. Challman, inspector of state graded schools; Supt. Denfeld of Duluth, President Weld of the Moorhead normal, Dr. James of the state university, Congressman Halvor Steenerson and State Senator A. D. Stevens.

The school officers' meeting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 14. The topics discussed will include consolidation of rural schools, competency of teachers to teach elementary agriculture, value of seed contests, state aid for schools and teachers' salaries.

MOOSE WAS HOSTILE.

Peculiar Case of Animal Rashness Is Reported.

S. F. Fullerton has gone up to Carlton county to hold an inquest over a fine cow moose, which was shot last Saturday by D. Magnus and has been the cause of some complications. Mr. Magnus wired Saturday to the state game and fish commission that he had killed the moose, and that he was coming down to consult with the authorities, as the open season for moose does not begin until Nov. 10. He met Mr. Fullerton in St. Paul and explained that he did not want to kill the brute and tried to scare her away, but finally had to shoot her in self-defense.

This explanation was accepted, as Mr. Magnus was evidently in good faith. He was directed to ship the moose to St. Paul, but sent word that the express company had refused to take it, claiming that decomposition was too far advanced. So Mr. Fullerton went up to see what could be done about it. Mr. Magnus says the moose was a very large one, standing about six and a half high at the withers.

START SOUTH ON WINTER'S OUTING

GEORGE BREED AND FAMILY ON LAUNCH LOIS

Minnesotans who go down the Mississippi on cruise in boat built to provide solid comfort.

Winona, Minn., Special.—George Breed and family passed through here, bound south for St. Louis and down-river points, on a winter's outing. The launch Lois was built by Mr. Breed eighteen miles from the Chippewa river and was hauled by wagon to water. It is one of the best launches on the river, and has a ten horse-power engine, with a speed of twelve miles an hour. In the cabin are two comfortable rooms, a small dark room for developing plates, a bath room and dozens of small lockers. The gasoline tank in the bow will hold enough fuel for a ten days' run.

STREET CARS COLLIDE.

Every Person in Wreck Is Slightly Hurt, but No One Seriously.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 31.—On account of a dense fog and rails that were slippery with frost, two street cars bumped into each other yesterday morning and both were badly smashed. One was loaded with workmen going to the factory district and the other with people coming down town to their offices and stores. Every person on both cars was bruised, but strangely not one was seriously hurt.

JUDGE GROSSCUP IS INDICTED.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Seven bench warrants were issued from the Coles county circuit court at Charleston yesterday for the arrest of officials and employes of the Mattoon City Railway company, operating the Charleston & Mattoon Interurban line, as a result of a wreck near Charleston last August, in which eighteen passengers were killed.

Federal Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago, who is a director of the road, is among those indicted.

AS MUCH A HERO IN PEACE AS IN WAR

American Jackie Proves His Bravery in Warship Accidents.

The American jackie does not wait for times of war to show his bravery.

In peace he is equally courageous, and again and again incidents arise to show the stuff of which Uncle Sam's naval fighting man is made.

Only a few days ago the country thrilled at the daring of the men who saved the Indiana by carrying out the dynamite when an explosion threatened that would have ruined the ship and blown hundreds of men to atoms. This accident came only a matter of a couple of months after the catastrophe on the Georgia, when eight men were killed in a turret explosion, their comrades giving the same matchless exhibition of courage in a most critical situation. Then harking back a few years is the never-to-be forgotten incident of the Maine and Bill Anthony, when, after the Spaniards had blown up the ill-fated vessel in the harbor of Havana, Anthony preserved discipline by quietly walking into Capt. Sigsbee's cabin and announcing, while the vessel was about sinking, that an explosion had sealed her doom.

Fire started in the bunkers of the ship, near which were stored some fifty tons of powder. Had it not been for the bravery of these eight men not a plate of the vessel would have remained whole.

It was no easy task to remove fifty tons of powder. The boxes were full of cartridge-shaped packages, each of which held about fifty pounds, and when the men took hold of them it was like grasping an ember that was ready to burst into flame.

The shells weigh between 1,100 and 1,200 pounds apiece, and are not easily handled at any time. With their cases so heated that they had already begun to smoke, the task was doubly difficult. The men kept bravely at work until the sixty or seventy projectiles stored in the magazine all had been removed. By pouring water on them the temperature gradually dropped to normal.

The men worked swiftly, and not one flinched. And when it was all over and a grateful government expressed its admiration for their devotion to duty, every one of these heroes seemed surprised that so much was made of the act.

The disaster on the Georgia two months ago resulted from the explosion of one hundred and four pounds of smokeless powder in target practice off Barnstable.

Of those in the turret only one escaped serious injury. This was Midshipman Lucene Frank Kimball who received a slight burn on the left hand.

Within the death turret were deeds of marked heroism. Cheerfully offering his life for that of his superior officers, Chief Yeoman Orly Taglend sprang at Lieut. Casper Goodrich, dashing that officer to the deck and shielding him from the terrific heat of the explosion.

Another sailor sacrificed his life but saved the ship by springing to the hatchway leading to the magazine.

Midshipman Kimball also contributed conspicuous valor. He held his breath, and, placing his cap over his face, went to the rescue of his comrades.

Apart from the disasters mentioned, there have been many other serious accidents on board American warships, particularly in the last quarter of a century, and many lives have been sacrificed, but the horror of each tragedy has been relieved by heroism displayed by the men of the service.

In every one of these instances, and there are many others, there is shown a spirit of matchless devotion to duty, proving that no matter how terrible the situation, the training of the American sailor will not permit him to forget what is expected of him.

Men who have closely studied the naval history of the United States say this stoical indifference to danger comes through generations of fighting men who get their sea nerve, so to speak, from the dangers they were constantly called on to undergo before the days of the breech loading and rapid-fire guns.

This was the day of the muzzle-loader, and it developed many a hero whose name never got into the records, but who, nevertheless, played his glorious part in the victories that make American naval annals so brilliant.

The old-time crews were just as keen for making records as are their successors of to-day, and it was in these tests for rapid firing that the matchless courage of the men developed.

When a shot was fired one member of the gun crew leaped forward with his swab to clean the muzzle while another stood at the side ready to ram home a fresh charge of powder as soon as the cleaner had finished his work. While these men worked at the front of the gun another stood at the rear with his thumb pressed tightly over the priming hole, the small aperture through which passed the fuse that fired the gun.

This third man was the one who had to be a hero.

Every shot left the gun hot, and the muzzle was filled with gas. With the powder thrust into the heated chamber all that lacked to create an explosion was a little air behind the charge.

Should the men at the priming hole remove his thumb for even the fraction of a second, there was a flash and a roar, and the man loading the gun was either minus an arm or a leg, or was blown to pieces, the extent of the damage depending upon his position or the size of the charge.

Rather than expose a fellow sailor to danger of his life, many a man went through the awful experience of having his thumb burned to the bone, and there are old men to-day who can show stumps they lost while standing to their job, and protecting the comrade who was at their mercy.

Through a recommendation of the secretary of the navy eight heroes of the battleship Indiana fire recently received their just meed of credit for an act of finest nerve.

The Indiana lay at the League Island navy yard, one of the finest vessels in Uncle Sam's navy, representing an outlay of several million dollars.

Always Exposed.

"What an indefatigable talker that woman is!"

"Rather. Every time she goes to the shore her tongue gets sunburnt."

Tactful.

"You want a new hat, madam?" said the milliner to the lady of uncertain age and distinctly faded attractions. "But why"—and she turned in apparent wrath upon the shopgirl—"why, you stupid creature, did you show the lady into this room? You know quite well that this is the elderly ladies' department. Take her down stairs to the young ladies' room at once!" Result—$40 hat sold and permanent customer gained.

Sorry It Came.

Howell—Did you find that umbrella you lost?

Powell—Yes.

Howell—I'll bet you were glad to get it back.

Powell—You lose. I left it at my mother-in-law's, and when it came back she came with it.

Indifferent.

"He took me to the opera."

"Wasn't that grand?"

"No, comic."

HIGHEST CHIMNEY STACK.

One at Kodak Park Earns That Title With Its 366 Feet of Height.

The highest chimney stack in America is the new one at Kodak Park. It is 366 feet high and rests on an octagon foundation which is twenty-three feet deep to bedrock; it is 40 feet across the flat sides of octagon at base and 30 feet at top.

The base contains approximately 23,000 cubic feet of concrete and weighs 1,600 tons. The chimney proper, says Camera Craft, is a round shaft built of hollow radial brick.

The outside diameter at the bottom is 28 feet and at the top is 11 feet. The inside diameter at the bottom is 19 feet and at the top 9 feet. It is lined on the inside with acidproof brick and cement four inches thick, leaving a two-inch air space.

The smoke opening is 6x12 feet, providing for 2,400-horsepower boilers, and the acid flume inlet, 4x4 feet, is for sucking away the acid fumes from the chemical manufacturing departments.

The stack is provided with a lightning rod having four carbon points and is equipped with an iron ladder on the inside and one on the outside. The total weight of the stack is about 3,200 tons.

Sand Dunes Move.

The crescent-shaped sand dunes which move in thousands across the desert of Islay, near La Joya, Peru, have been investigated by Astronomer S. I. Bailey, who found the points of a crescent to be 160 feet apart, while the convex side measures 477 feet and the greatest width was more than 100 feet. The estimated weight was 8,000 tons, yet it was carried 126 feet a year by the prevailing south winds.

A Rich Diet.

Medicine Man—What's the matter with your majesty?

Cannibal King—Oh! I've an awful indigestion.

"What have you been eating?"

"I've just polished off an American millionaire."

"Good heavens! No wonder you're ill. I've told you repeatedly to beware of anything too rich."

Such a Nice Girl.

"Bridget," said Mrs. Woodby, who was entertaining at dinner a few guests on whom she desired to make an impression, "the coffee looks weaker than usual."

"That ain't the coffee's fault, ma'am," replied Bridget. "Ye've got too much crame in it; ye're not used to crame, ma'am."

Grewsome Occupations.

There are two women undertakers in Oakland, Cal., while another is an articulator of skeletons. Three hundred girls are employed in the harness trade in New York, and a Kentucky girl is a jockey. A Louisiana woman supports herself by raising mint and a Jersey City woman makes a living by painting signs.

Women Health Officers.

Dr. Esther Pohl has been elected city health officer of Portland, Or. She was the first woman to enter the Oregon Medical college, and since being graduated has taken post-graduate courses in Baltimore and New York. She has also taken a degree in the Vienna university.

Lost Her Job.

"Poor fellow!" said a benevolent lady, kindly, "what has brought you to this destitute condition?"

"My wife, mum."

"Your wife! How is that?"

"Well, you see, mum, I've found her three good jobs, and blessed if she ain't lost every one of 'em."

Back to the Jungle.

Small John had arranged to go to a Sunday school picnic. Jumping out of bed early he ran to the window to see what the weather was like, and found the rain coming down in torrents. Stamping his foot angrily he exclaimed: "I'm going to be a heathen after this."

Angry, Indeed.

"When my wife gets angry," remarked Hyker, "she reminds me of a vessel just leaving port."

"What's the answer?" queried Pyker.

"She gets her anchor up," replied the party of the prelude.

Not a Novelty.

"What instrument do you suppose Tesla talks through in addressing Mars?"

"Same old thing."

"What d'ye mean?"

"His hat."

Rather Broad.

"You are lucky, kid," said the big boy, enviously, "I wish I had a dad who was a baseball catcher."

"Do you?" replied the little boy with a lugubrious sigh. "Well, you wouldn't do it long after he had spanked you with his catcher's mitt."

Jolly Proof.

Crawford—Why don't you treat your wife just as you did before you were married?

Crabshaw—Phaw! You can't fool an experienced woman that way.

No Shade.

"My gracious!" exclaimed the first flea, "what makes you so red?"

"Sunburned," replied the second flea disgustedly. "Some idiot clipped the dog I was summering on."

JULIUS SCHMAHL'S gubernatorial stock is going up, and is apt to reach par. It's hard to beat a combination of ability and aggressiveness.

THE financial skies are clearing. There is not the slightest excuse for a panic in the northwest, and there will be none if the people keep their heads.

THE Mankato Free Press thinks if the republican party is going into the business of "vindicating" anybody poor Mr. Cole is as much entitled to a "square deal" as Bob Dunn.

THE Duluth Herald thinks "the country is merely suffering from an overdose of prosperity, from which it will quickly recover by the use of common sense, coolness and conservatism."

IT is announced that L. E. George has sold the Fertile Journal to S. E. Thompson of Hallock. Mr. Thompson has had long experience in country journalism and will give the Fertile people a good newspaper.

The Sixteenth Minnesota State Conference of Charities and Corrections, to be held at Fergus Falls, Saturday to Tuesday, November 9, 10, 11 and 12, is attracting unusual attention. This is due partly to the fact that the State Association of County Commissioners is to hold its annual meeting at the same time and place.

THE Windom Reporter has been sold to the McCleary syndicate, according to the press dispatches, and this seems to indicate that the former congressman is to again get into the political game. The Reporter has been owned and edited by Eb. Huntington for thirty years, and is one of the best country newspaper properties in the state. The change removes from active newspaper work one of the Nestors of the profession, and the fraternity will wish for him every success in whatever field of work he may choose to enter.

GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH, who forty-two years ago founded the Salvation army, in addressing an audience of three thousand at Minneapolis last week, spoke in part as follows:

"Public sentiment generally has spoken in favor of the Salvation army, but this public opinion is a fickle personality; one day it will pin the sweetest flower to your coat, the next throw mud and cover you with calumny. What has been done to gain public opinion and confidence? We have invaded the field of sin, not merely made a dashing raid, but have taken many strong holds and the war has been waged in every quarter of the globe. Today the flag flies over fifty-three countries and colonies with 7,500 separate branches, commanded by 15,000 officers, constantly on watch and 50,000 who devote a portion of their time to the work. We publish seventy periodicals in seventeen languages and have an active membership of nearly a million soldiers. This wonderful organization is open for investigation, with nothing to conceal or be ashamed of."

CATARRH BLOOD DISEASED AND SYSTEM DISORDERED

Catarrh is not merely an inflammation of the tissues of the head and throat, as the symptoms of ringing noises in the ears, mucous dropping back into the throat, continual hawking and spitting, etc., would seem to indicate; it is a blood disease in which the entire circulation and the greater part of the system are involved. Catarrh is due to the presence of an excess of uric acid in the blood. The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels frequently become torpid and dull in their action and instead of carrying off the refuse and waste of the body, leave it to sour and form uric acid in the system. This is taken up by the blood and through its circulation distributed to all parts of the system. These impurities in the blood irritate and inflame the different membranes and tissues of the body, and the contracting of a cold will start the secretions and other disgusting and disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh. As the blood goes to all parts of the body the catarrhal poison affects all parts of the system. The head has a tight, full feeling, nose continually stopped up, pains above the eyes, slight fever comes and goes, the stomach is upset and the entire system disordered and affected by this disease. It is a waste of time to try to cure Catarrh with sprays, washes, inhalations, etc. Such treatment does not reach the blood, and can, therefore, do nothing more than temporarily relieve the discomfort of the trouble. To cure Catarrh permanently the blood must be thoroughly purified and the system cleansed of all poisons, and at the same time strengthened and built up. Nothing equals S. S. S. for this purpose. It attacks the disease at its head, goes down to the very bottom of the trouble and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. removes every particle of the catarrhal poison from the blood, making this vital stream pure, fresh and healthy. Then the inflamed membranes begin to heal, the head is loosened and cleared, the hawking and spitting cease, every symptom disappears, the constitution is built up and vigorous health restored. S. S. S. also tones up the stomach and digestion and acts as a fine tonic to the entire system. If you are suffering with Catarrh begin the use of S. S. S. and write us a statement of your case and our physicians will send you literature about Catarrh, and give you special medical advice without charge. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, but no good resulted. I then began S. S. S., and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a short while was cured. This was six years ago, and I am as well today as any man. I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know there is nothing on earth better for the blood than S. S. S. Nobody thinks more of S. S. S. than I do. M. MATSON,

Rev. Phillip A. Schwarz, the new minister who has taken charge of the Presbyterian pastorate at this place, arrived in the city last Saturday morning and on Sunday the usual services were held in the church. A large and appreciative audience attended both the morning and evening services and were highly pleased with the discourses from this able and fluent speaker. We wish for him much success in his new field of labor, for surely he will have the universal support of his congregation.

SEASONBLE BARGAINS

We have opened a bargain counter in our store and from day to day will offer the public

Bargains in Dress Goods

Notions, boots, shoes, hats, caps, etc. Watch our bargain counter from day to day and reap a benefit thereby.

Garceau & Zaiser

The Busy Store Red Lake Falls

Theo. LaBissoniere, of the Big Store, has some "cloak talk" in his ad today that will be of interest to every lady in the land. He sells the famous Palmer goods, and his new line for this season's wear is a nice one to behold, and the prices are very reasonable.

Ernest Trombley departed yesterday afternoon for an extended visit at the home of his boyhood days in Ottawa, Canada. He will meet a brother whom he has not seen in forty-five years, and we can imagine his vitit will be one of great pleasure and desirable.

Buttermaker P. L. Malvin is enjoying a visit this week from his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. John Schultz, of Verona, N. D. We understand Mr. Schultz has disposed of his landed interests in Dakota and will either rent or buy here and make Red Lake Falls their future home.

The program for the meeting of the Northwestern Minnesota Educational Association, to be held at Crookston the 14th and 15th inst., is at hand and among those to take part are some of the most prominent educators in the state. All who can should attend and reap a benefit from the lectures and papers listed.

Hugo Ittner, who for some time has been working for Contractor P. K. Olson on a new strip of road down near Pierce, returned home the latter part of last week and will remain for several days as a guest of his mother and numerous young friends. Upon his return to work he expects their labors will be on a new line of road down near Duluth.

Services will be held in the Presbyterian church next Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Rev. Philip A. Schwarz, pastor, will preach both morning and evening. Morning subject, "The Love of God." Sunday school at 10 a. m., and Young People's Christian Endeavor meeting at 6:30 p. m. All are very cordially invited to attend all of these services.

The play "Vendetta" as staged at the opera house Monday evening was well received by the large number present. Manager Wander says he hopes to secure only first-class attractions this season and the support of the people is desired to thus warrant good attractions coming our way. They'll be few and far enough between so that all can afford to attend.

On the 17th of October, at the age of forty-five years, died at Terrebonne, Joseph Bedand, who had been but five days at the service of Stephen Quesnell. The family, tho strangers to the deceased, gave him all the proper attentions. The priest as well as the physician was summoned at his bedside. The body was interred in St. Anthony's cemetery.

Remember the date—Novemb'r 27, grand ball at the opera house.

William Vague, a prosperous rural farmer of Poplar River township, accompanied by his good wife, was in town Monday and ordered auction bills printed for a sale of live stock, farm machinery, etc., to be held at his home two miles north of Brooks on next Wednesday, the 13th, commencing at eleven o'clock, with a free lunch at noon. Mr. Vague has rented his farm for next season and should he decide to remove from that locality we trust he may take up residence with his estimable family among us.

THE END OF THE STORY

By MARY WAKEMAN BOTSFORD

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"It is a pleasant path, even in winter."

He—Do you remember the first day we met there? It had been snowing. You were snowballing the youngsters. You aimed at little Jock and hit me. So like a woman! It was warm snow. At least, I felt a curious glow where the missile struck.

She—Full in the forehead, poor dear!"

He—Forehead? Not much! Cupid wastes no ammunition there.

She—Foolish! Whoever heard of a Cupid in sealskin? But let us go on. We shall never finish the story, if we make such halts as these.

He—It is your turn.

She (biting the end of her pencil and gazing at her collaborator pathetically)—How much easier it is to begin a story than to go on with it. Dear, (coaxingly) let us play that the first line is mine and you take my sentence.

He—What do I get?

She (promptly)—A kiss.

He—Now?

She—No, indeed. At the end of the chapter.

He—And the chapter may be long?

She—Oh, about 800 words.

He—Eight hundred grandmothers!

She (frowningly)—Harry!

He—Very well, here goes: "The oaks are bare. The sunlight sifts through their branches, dropping shadows on the snow."

She (doubtfully)—Sunlight drop shadows? How could it?

He—Blest if I know. Haven't you seen it? A shadow crept into your eyes, and a sunbeam kissed your lips at the same instant, the day we met. I loved the shadow—"

She—I was afraid I had hurt you.

He—And envied the sunbeam.

She (with a sigh)—What a pity we can't put that in! Go on, dear, you are so clever!

He—I am constrained to think so since—

She—Since?

He—You accepted me.

She—Go on, stupid.

He—"It warms the gold in Ethel's dark hair, and finds the gleam in her brown eyes—"

She—Brown? Do you know a brown-eyed girl?

He—Shall we give her blue eyes, then?

She (coldly)—Certainly not. Have eyes of so inspiring color, by all means.

He—Darling, green-eyed, or gooseberry-eyed, blind, or a patch over one eye. Anything, so it softens yours.

She (still with distance)—Brown eyes are as good as any, I suppose. Your eyes are brown.

He (startled)—Eh?

She (impatiently)—Pray go on.

He—"Finds the gleam in Ethel's blue eyes and warms the pale gold of her hair."

She (interrupting)—Not at all. Why sacrifice your ideal to—

He—Sacrifice nothing! What the dickens does it matter to me whether a straw girl, dressed in ink and paper is blonde or brunette?. It's as easy to describe one as the other.

She (icily)—So I supposed.

He—I have offended again, Dolly?

She (moving across the room and rearranging some trifles upon the mantel)—Well?

He—Come here.

She (with head averted)—Strange how forgetful Jane is. I told her to place the bronze on the other side of the clock. (Lifts the heavy figure with difficulty. It falls with a crash upon the hearth.)

He (reaching her side at a bound and gathering her in his arms)—Dolly, Dolly, would you allow such a trifle to come between us?

She (looking down at the bronze Atlas supporting a globe upon his shoulders)—Do you call the world a trifle? (There are tears in her voice which belie her smiling lips.)

Interlude.

She (once more seated on the arm of his chair, her hand in his)—I will go on with the story; (reads) "The oaks are bare. The sunlight—her brown eyes—"

He—Blue.

She—Brown.

He—Generous, forgiving, Dolly.

She (knitting her brows)—Ought he not to appear by this?

He—A fool to tarry, I should say. I would not.

She (softly)—You did not. You traveled like the queen in chess, covering the board at a leap.

He—Not a good figure, sweet one. I was in pursuit of the queen.

She—Well, find something else, but first for the story: "Jack came swinging through the woods—"

He—Swinging: doesn't that sound, er—rather as if he—might, eh?

She—They always come that way. How should he come? Dancing, skipping, hopping, meandering, musing?

He—Why not plain "Jack came through the woods?"

She—But he is not plain. He is big and broad-shouldered and blonde, smooth-faced with hair crisply curling—

He (toying with a paper-weight on the desk, his eyes absent, his smile constrained)—Ah—very good. Go on.

She—"His gray eyes kindle—"

He—Gray eyes; yes, of course. (He withdraws his hand from hers. She does not heed it, so intent is she upon her picture.)

She—"As they fall upon the girl, his quick step—"

He (rising and planting himself before the fire, his hands under his coat tails)—Quickstep! Say rather dead march (bitterly).

She (looking up in surprise)—Harry, what do you mean?

He—Oh, nothing, nothing at all. I had begun to flatter myself that my dull image had effaced Charlton's from your memory. I am aware I should not have dared to predicate so much, had you not assured me—

She (indignantly)—Harry!

He—But I should have known that an insignificant duffer of my description, with sloping shoulders, a trifle stooped—inclining to baldness, eyes the color of a cold baked potato skin, moustache ditto and straggling—stood as much chance against the matchless Adonis-like Charlton as a stovepipe against a cathedral spire. I congratulate him upon the faithfulness of your pen and ink sketch.

She (rising and drawing herself up to her full height)—Mr. Sinclair, may I beg you to—

He—Ring the bell? Thanks. I can find my way out. (In his blind exit from the room he stumbles over the bronze Atlas. His sharp exclamation is echoed by her low cry. Turning at the door, he looks back. She supports herself against the desk, one hand pressed to her eyes.) Dolly, Dolly, I am a miserable fool. Tell me that you despise me. (Dropping on his knees before her, he covers her unresisting hand with kisses.) Oh, Dolly, what would the world be without you?

'Mr. Sinclair, May I Beg You To—"

She—The world? As much, I hope, as life would be to me with Jack Charlton.

He—Jealous ass that I am. Dolly, let me end the story.

She—Thus and thus (tearing the manuscript into strips and dropping them into the fire). Better so (lifting her lips to his) than that it should end ours.

TIME WAS TOO PRECIOUS.

Why Visitors Could Not Be Admitted to Workroom.

Perhaps there never was given a more striking instance of the value of minutes than the following: A party of ladies and gentlemen were shown through a very large carpet establishment a few days ago. They were permitted to look into every nook and corner of the building except one. At the bottom of a stairway they came upon a closed door, upon which were the words, "Positively no admittance." The curiosity of the ladies was now awakened and one inquired eagerly:

"What is up there?"

"That is our workshop," explained the representative of the firm. "We have 150 women on that floor sewing carpets."

"Oh, I should like to see them at work," said the fair questioner, with a playfully beseeching look.

"I am very sorry that I cannot take you up there," replied the firm's representative, "but the rules are very strict. Really, there is nothing worth looking at, and there are no trade secrets. The reason why the firm interdicts visitors is because the presence of strangers in the room causes every sewing woman to look up, and takes her attention off her work from one to five minutes. Suppose each women loses an average of two minutes. With 150 women that means a loss to the firm of 300 minutes, or five hours of time. That is too much to lose when we are working under a great pressure as we are now."—Tit-Bits.

Supplies for the Shipwrecked.

The catboat ran gayly before the wind. The sea was alive with sunshine. Shoreward, on the boardwalk, the people walking looked no bigger than dominoes.

"No, sir," said the skipper, "there is not a desert island on the sea that the governments of the world haven't stocked up with grub and clothes and tools for the use of shipwrecked mariners.

"There's tinned soups, dried meats, sealed cans of rice and flour and sugar, dried peas, beans and tobacco, knives, nails, matches, shovels, buckets, hatchets, and so on—all a shipwrecked mariner could need.

"The governments have done this for a number of years. The provender is hid in caves or under rocks. There's a book published giving the exact location of these caches and most ships carry a copy of the work."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE WOMAN'S CORNER

LACKING IN GRACE

FEW WOMEN SEEM TO STAND OR WALK CORRECTLY.

Here Are a Few Hints on the Subject of the Proper Carriage of the Body—Illustrations of Ungraceful Attitudes.

Anyone who will take the trouble to watch a crowd of girls or women walk together will gain some valuable experience on the possible varieties of ungraceful carriage.

Not two women out of every hundred seem to be able to achieve grace.

CORRECT STANDING POSITION

There is the girl, for instance, with the "turkey-toed" stride. Her feet emulate in position those of the awkward bird who graces our autumn tables, and inevitably she cannot lift her feet properly, but lets them slide and shuffle in an extremely ugly manner.

Just as bad is the equally ungraceful pigeon-toed habit. Here the feet turn in so much that it is sometimes a wonder that their owner does not fall headlong over them!

The old dancing master, whose invariable rule was, "Turn your toes out," had sound sense back of the adjuration. The only cure for turning the toes in is to turn them out again, and keep them that way.

Straddling is as harmful as it is unpleasing. A good rule is to walk with the feet just the distance of one foot apart. Thus straddling and knock-kneedness are alike avoided.

When one walks correctly there is a straight line from the ears, through the shoulders and hips, to the feet, just as when one sits correctly there is a straight line from the ears to the center of the sides of the chair.

The most important of all rules is to walk always on the balls of the feet. To locate the ball, put a box or large book on the floor, and place your foot on it, with the heel free. Then raise the toes and the remaining portion is the ball.

Walking on the heels jars the entire body; walking on the toes gives a mincing and affected appearance. The ball is the cushioned part of the foot, and is the part intended for locomotion.

For correct and graceful walking the chin should be in, the abdomen straight and erect and the chest well out.

To acquire correct carriage of the chest practice walking with a book on the head, or place a broomstick or cane across the back under the arms.

Correct position in standing and sitting is a corollary of correct position in walking.

Paisley Ribbons In.

Paisley ribbons and velvets have crept into vogue and are charming on a hat of white and dull pink shading up to plum. The latter, in moire, forms the doublure to the brim, and meets the bind of Paisley, great bows of which fall either side quite softly, without stiffening of any description.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Advice and Suggestions Sent In by Mme. Merri.

Ideas for a Trip Around the World

We are going to give "A Trip Around the World" very soon. Would you please give us some suggestions about amusements and costumes for Scotland? Also suggestions for decorations, entertainment, costumes for men and women and methods for dressing women's hair for China?

PUZZLED.

For Scotland use plaids of Scottish origin, have Scotch airs played and the "Highland Fling" danced. Get a bag pipe if possible. For China, the men wear queues, loose trousers and shirts and the women short skirts with shirt-like waists; the hair is wound in a coil at the back, fastened with many ornaments, the front a slick, smooth pompadour.

A Majority Party.

Dear Madam Merri: As I have a birthday party on my hands of a 21-year-old brother, I come to you for advice. I do want it to be a success and so many get such good advice, I come to trouble you too. His birthday comes on the 13th of December and Friday. I would like to know some attractive way to fix up an invitation and also some games, and decorations of the house. It has a fire-place. It is to be a surprise

A PUZZLED SISTER.

It is no trouble, my dear, to assist you, and I am glad the brother is to have a party. For the invitations, I should write little notes with the date of birth and present date at the top of the sheet so all the guests will know the occasion of the affair. Then I'd have a glorious big cake with 21 candles and have little canes and silk hat candy boxes for souvenirs. You could ask each one to come wearing something to represent their favorite superstitions and decorate with black cats, owls, etc., to carry out the Friday and 13th idea.

A Party for Young People.

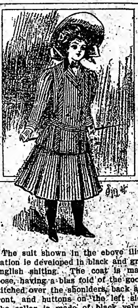
I am anticipating having a party for about fourteen of my friends between the ages of fourteen and seventeen. Can you give me some suggestions for games and some good words to be used for charades?

Also I am going to serve ice cream and cake. If I have them seated at a table how can I decorate it? I can have what flowers I want, but I cannot afford any more elaborate favors than pretty place cards. MYRTLE.

Good charade words are ingratiate, turkey, sinecure, dramatic, and telescope. A good amusement is a soap bubble contest, a nail pounding and button sewing contest or a superstition party where each guest wears his or her favorite aversion. Of course I mean something to represent it. Decorate the table with flowers and candies. Plain cards with the name written are perfectly suitable for name cards, without any decoration.

MADAME MERRI.

GIRL'S SUIT.



The suit shown in the above illustration is developed in black and gray English suiting. The coat is made loose, having a bias fold of the goods stitched over the shoulders, back and front, and buttons on the left side. The collar is made of black velvet. Two rows of buttons are placed down the front. The sleeves are the regulation coat sleeve. The skirt is laid in inverted box plaits all the way round.

Waistline for Coats.

The long coats for autumn wear have a fitted back and defined waist line. The correct length is from 44 to 55 inches. These coats are made of silk, velvet, broadcloth or rough-surfaced worsteds. Thin, clinging fabrics, such as chiffon cloths, marquisette, crepe de chine, the various silks, muslins even, will be found prevalent this winter when supplemented by the long coat.

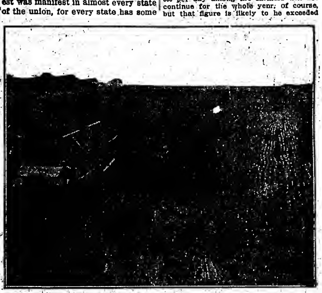
THE CANADIAN CROPS

THREE-QUARTERS OF THE AVERAGE YIELD IS REPORTED.

THE FARMERS DO NOT LOSE

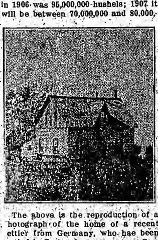
Increased Prices for Grain More Than Compensates Them for the Decrease in Quantity—Reports from Crop Experts.

Most of the states of the union felt the unusually severe winter of 1906-7, and the effects of the succeeding late spring were everywhere apparent. Corn was planted two and sometimes three times, the winter wheat suffered and generally there was a nervous feeling as the retarded growth was in evidence. From the Dakotas to Texas the feeling of dread existed, and the fears were entertained that the crop of corn, wheat, oats and barley would be a distinct failure. How far this was the case is best left to those who passed through the experience. Naturally the same conditions were prevalent throughout the province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, in western Canada, and with from 250,000 to 300,000 farmers there from the United States a large degree of interest was manifest in almost every state of the union, for every state has some



The proceeds of this field of wheat, grown in western Canada, were sufficient to pay out of the one crop the price of every acre of land upon which it was grown.

representative there. This interest was a nervous one and caused considerable indecision on the part of friends and others intending to follow. Those interested in injuring the country circulated stories of ruin and disaster, but the effect was lost, as it had been long enough in the limelight to prove its high standing amongst the agricultural sections of the continent. The heavy strain placed upon it was not too great; it has shown that the faith placed in it has been warranted, and it is this year producing undoubted evidence that in agricultural possibilities and resources it stands among the first of food producers. A late spring delayed seeding from the usual early April period until late in May, and in many cases well on into June. And with what result? It is a little early to tell the result, but that there will be a three-quarter crop is almost absolutely certain. The yield of wheat in 1906 was 95,000,000 bushels; 1907 it will be between 70,000,000 and 80,000,000. It could not be expected that June-sown grain would mature and ripen in any country. The May sown ripened, and this is the feature that has proved western Canada's superiority as a grain-growing country. It demonstrates that the length of sunshine is so great that the growing and ripening season, although shorter in number of days than in parts farther south, in hours is as great or greater. A correspondent of the Toronto Globe, a most careful purveyor of news, writing from Winnipeg, Manitoba, says:



The above is the reproduction of a photograph of the home of a recent settler from Germany, who has been settled in Saskatchewan, western Canada for two years.

"Excellent progress in the process of converting the crop into marketable commodity has been made. The days have been fairly warm considering the season of the year and while the amount of sunshine per day is less than in an ordinary harvest the grain has matured well. The reports from far and near show that the aggregate yield for the whole grain-growing country is likely to be large, and there are those who assert that the quantity will be equal to about 75 per cent of that secured last season. The quality will be the important consideration especially in view of the steadily rising markets. Cash wheat in Winnipeg closed yesterday at [illegible] per bushel Fort William delivery. The cost of freight and handling for wheat strikes an average of 11c per bushel for the whole west. This means that the average price to the farmer for contract wheat all over the prairie country is exactly $1 per bushel. The farmers have been looking for the day when dollar wheat would rule and they have it now. Some old wheat is still coming forward from the elevators and a little of last year's crop remains in the hands of the farmers. This nearly all grades up to the contract, and it means a great gain for those who held it. The new wheat is still grading very high, when one considers the conditions under which it was produced. Out of 459 cars, 328 in two days contained wheat which would answer for delivery on contracts. In other words over 300,000 bushels of wheat which would bring the farmers an average of about $1 per bushel, reached Winnipeg in two days. The significance of $300,000 worth of wheat being passed by the inspectors in two days at the close of an admittedly unfavorable season should not be allowed to sink out of sight at a time when returns from agricultural activity in the west are being anxiously awaited. These figures do not take account of the lower grades, of which there were 131 cars. More than one-third of these contained milling wheat, which would remunerate the farmer at the rate of 93c per bushel on the basis of to-day's closing figures. The balance consisted of low grade stuff which would vary greatly in quality and would show great "spreads" in prices.

"The approximate value of the two days' receipts of wheat, however, would be more than $400,000 calculating the capacity of a car at 1,000 bushels and eliminating the cost of freight and handling. As many of the modern cars contain more than 1,000 bushels and as the freight rate to Fort William is less than 15c per cwt. on most of the wheat which is now coming forward, the estimate of $400,000 is low. The circulation of $200,000 per day among the farmers will not continue for the whole year, of course, but that figure is likely to be exceeded before the present rush of wheat to the market abates. The conversion of the crop into money may be said to be proceeding in a most satisfactory way and there is no doubt that millions of dollars will have gone into the pockets of the farmers by the time navigation on the lakes closes. Even then only a small proportion of the wheat will have come out. Experience has shown that the railways do not carry very much of the wheat to the Lake Superior ports before the freeze-up comes, and the proportion will probably be smaller than usual this year on account of the lateness of the thrashing season.

"On the whole the prospect is a most cheerful one, the likelihood being that the satisfactory returns for the past few days will be greatly exceeded in the coming six or seven weeks. The fact that wheat of any kind is bound to bring a remunerative price this season is the comforting feature of the situation and there is no occasion for concern over the possibility of the general quality of the grain being below that of previous years. The high standard of the wheat raised in the west in 1905-1906 was undoubtedly a great advertisement for the country and it would have been well if that excellent record could have been continued, but it is not reasonable to expect that 90 per cent. of the wheat will be of contract grade every year as it was in the years mentioned. If 75 per cent. or even 50 per cent. of this season's yield be up to the contract standard there will be room for congratulation. The west will reap a large return of its investment of money, time and labor this year as it did in any preceding season, and by so doing it will have done its whole duty to those who have placed faith in its fertility and resourcefulness. The breathing spell if it comes will enable the transportation companies and other elements in the trade of the country to catch up with some of their obligations and the improvements effected by that means will more than offset any inconvenience which will result from a relatively smaller production. The general commercial outlook is bright enough and only depressing factors are due to the position of a few communities widely separated in which there is a small return from the crop.

"It is true the season has not been so favorable as other seasons but this condition is widespread. The corn crop in the states of the union, where it is the premier crop of the farmers is subject to frost. Frost has undoubtedly materially reduced the total yield in places this year, but after every allowance has been made for this and other causes the fact remains that the total grain in Alberta will be the largest in history, while in the other provinces the yield will not fall far short of other years.

"The following extract from the Edmonton Bulletin fairly describes the situation in Northern Alberta and Saskatchewan:

"'Cutting is practically completed, stacking is in progress in some places, threshing will commence at once. A few late fields which were sown for green feed are being out this week. The grain is all in stock and everywhere the glow of autumn mingles with the glow of harvest. A great number of the oat fields show the typical yellow of well ripened grain. The majority, however, are too pale a yellow to indicate full development and perfect ripening. Some late oats will be fed in the straw which is held by good cattle feeders to be the best way to feed oats. In no year in the history of the spring wheat industry has there been a better growth and production of plant and if the crop of 1907 had been favored with more propitious condition during September all previous records of wheat production in this country would have been eclipsed. On the farm known as the Macleod farm 4½ miles northeast of the city on the Fort Saskatchewan trail, samples of Red Fyfe were taken that were uniformly plump and hard and of excellent color. This field should run [illegible] bushels to the acre.

ADVICE TO VICTIMS

TELLS READERS HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM AT HOME.

Directions to Mix a Simple Preparation and the Dose to Take—Overcomes Kidney and Bladder Trouble Promptly.

There is so much Rheumatism everywhere that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after while.

1907 A RED LETTER YEAR.

Right to Vote Won by Women in Four Countries of Europe.

Women all over the world are beginning to look upon 1907 as a red letter year for their sex. Their first notable step ahead this year was the granting of parliamentary suffrage to the women of Norway. Then Swedish women were made eligible for municipal office; next came the granting to the women of Denmark of the right to vote for and serve as members of boards of public charities, and now the British parliament has just passed the bill making women eligible as town and county councillors and aldermen.

In 1888 when the county councils were instituted in England it was thought that women were eligible, and three—Lady Margaret Sandhurst, Miss Jane Cobden and Miss Cons—were elected by the voters of London. Beresford Hope, who had been defeated by Lady Sandhurst, contested the election on the ground that women were not eligible. The litigation was prolonged and meanwhile the women were allowed to serve. One of the duties assigned to Lady Sandhurst was the supervision of twenty-three infant asylums. When Mr. Hope finally succeeded in ousting her one of the leading London dailies sarcastically remarked:

"It is to be hoped that the gentleman will find himself equal to mothering all those babies."

TAKE THEM OUT

Or Feed Them Food They Can Study On.

When a student begins to break down from lack of the right kind of food, there are only two things to do; either take him out of school or feed him properly on food that will rebuild the brain and nerve cells. That food is Grape-Nuts.

A boy writes from Jamestown, N. Y., saying: "A short time ago I got into a bad condition from overstudy, but Mother having heard about Grape-Nuts food began to feed me on it. It satisfied my hunger better than any other food, and the results were marvelous. I got fleshy like a good fellow. My usual morning headaches disappeared, and I found I could study for a long period without feeling the effects of it.

"My face was pale and thin, but is now round and has considerable color. After I had been using Grape-Nuts for about two months I felt like a new boy altogether. I have gained greatly in strength as well as flesh, and it is a pleasure to study now that I am not bothered with my head. I passed all of my examinations with a reasonably good percentage, extra good in some of them, and it is Grape-Nuts that has saved me from a year's delay in entering college.

"Father and mother have both been improved by the use of Grape-Nuts. Mother was troubled with sleepless nights and got very thin, and looked care worn. She has gained her normal strength and looks, and sleeps well nights." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs.

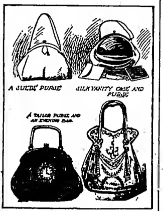
FEMININITY

BAGS AND PURSES

SOME NOVELTIES INTRODUCED THIS SEASON.

Distinct Styles Mark Those Intended for Young Girls—Pigskin Still Holds Its Own in Popular Favor.

Bags and purses for young girls differ in several features from those intended to be carried by women. They must suggest youth in line as well as in material, so the limitations in choice are more rigid than one would think. Girls who are not too young, that is, after they have reached the age of 16, are permitted to carry small silver coin purses and vanity boxes. These are rather plain or else of an engraved pattern in which there is no striking design. Gold purses are not suitable for girls who are not yet out in society.



A SUEDE PURSE
SILK VANITY CASE AND PURSE
A TAILOR PURSE AND AN EVENING BAG

Among the leather novelties which have just reached us from Paris is a bag the shape of which is decidedly youthful, while the coloring is wonderfully fresh and attractive. It is of reseda suede, and though the bag itself is not very deep it holds all that a young girl need carry. The trimmings are plain silver gilt and the handle is a narrow stitched strap of the suede. When the bag is opened the mouth forms a perfect circle. The inside is divided permanently by the coin purse, which has an outside covering of reseda moire and a lining of white suede. This is roomy, without suggesting bulk.

The bag proper is lined throughout with watered silk, and on one side is a shirred pocket, which holds a tiny oblong mirror faced with silk and a green suede powder puff envelope, in which reposes an infinitesimal bit of elderdown, while between these two cases is a tiny glass salt bottle, with a silver gilt top. These purses come in other shades, too, in the fashionable purple and lavenders, in gray, brown ranging from tan to seal, and in blue. It is the fad to have the purse match or at least shade into the color of the costume. Even young girls adhere strictly to this one tone effect or to the one of harmony in coloring.

Another smart bag of soft suede in a lovely shade of brown was oblong in shape and had the outside smocked near the top. There were two or three rows of smocking below the narrow silver gilt rim, which provided considerable fulness at the bottom. This purse held the usual coin compartment and the three essential beauty accessories—the puff case, the mirror and the powder box.

Pigskin, while neither new nor especially smart, is always in good taste for morning use. It is a particularly suitable leather for young girls and is made up in most attractive purses. If the strap kind is liked then a long, narrow purse is chosen, with the usual compartments and a well attached strap running lengthwise of the back. There are shorter purses of pigskin with a rounding down flap, trimmed with a narrow silver rim. This has no visible fastening, but there is a snap on the under side. The square purse, while very roomy and easy to carry, is not in as good taste as the long, narrow one.

BASKETS FOR THE TABLE.

Decorative Effect as Well as Use—Baskets for Special Occasions.

Baskets of one sort and another, of simple or more or less ornamental character, have long been used for holding fruit on tables, but within the last few years there have come to be offered for such use baskets specially designed with a view to their decorative effect.

Here, for instance, is a lifelike basketwork turkey perched on a basketwork pumpkin of proportionate dimensions, both turkey and pumpkin finished in their natural colors, this turkey table basket being designed to stand on a Thanksgiving dinner table.

And here is a table basket in the form of a swan, life size and natural in appearance, and graceful, and here is a gorgeous table basket of fine work in the form and colorings of a peacock. There is a table basket in the shape of a chicken, and here is one designed to adorn a patriotic table in the form of an eagle.

Sometimes table baskets are made to order in special forms, as for banquets. One such basket was made in the form of a billiard table. Where such baskets are made specially it is necessary to give the order well in advance, for it must go to Europe to be filled, table baskets, like almost all other fancy baskets, being made in Germany.

Besides being used for fruits table baskets are sometimes used for flowers. They cost from five to twenty-five dollars.

Blouse Novelty.

One of the most charming novelties in the way of blouses has been launched by a well known designer of unusual styles. This delightful little waist is made of soft silk in the most delicate of shell pink tones. The entire bodice and drooping sleeves are formed of two-inch folds, one overlapping the other. These run from the high girdle over the shoulders and tuck in at the back. The sleeves are formed of a continuation of plaits or folds extending to the wrist, where they narrow down to proportionate dimensions. The neck is finished with a high lace and batiste collar and chemisette. Two rather more elaborate blouses of this character have their folds an inch wide, and each one edged with the narrowest lace to be found. Besides giving the desired broad shouldered effect the lace softens the regular lines of the folds so carefully placed.

Waistcoat Trimming.

The universal use of waistcoats brings forward a great variety of trimmings. These waistcoats are made of cloth, silk, or velvet trimmed in braid; also of brocaded silks and tapestry vestings. Buttons also play an important part in the trimming of the present day.

Let Style Suit You.

Every woman who wishes to appear to the best advantage must, more or less, disregard prevailing style, and adopt a style best suited to herself.

BODICE FOR A MATRON.

Pretty Made Up in Either Fine Woolens or Silk.

This is a pretty bodice for making up in fine woolens and silk. It has a fitting lining fastening down the front, to this is fixed at the back a V of lace, and a vest in front; the latter is sewn to the right side of lining and made to hook over to the left; the collar-band is also of lace bound with silk. The fronts are tucked three times from the shoulders to the bust, and the edges are bound with silk, the back is treated in the same way; the epaulettes also are of lace bound with silk.

Materials required: 2½ yards 44 inches wide, one yard lace, 1½ yards silk, and two yards lining.

Damaged Lace Hint.

A handsome flounce of embroidered muslin with heavy motifs of grape bunches and vine leaves, which had been badly torn, had the best of the design cut out and applied, after being tinted biscuit color, to a groundwork of biscuit net. Much the same treatment was accorded to a length of lace which had also suffered; in this case a groundwork of ninon was supplied. (It is a pity that striped nets are not more used, and it is a wonder they are not in this season of stripes.) When these applied designs are used they can be much enhanced in effect by backing just the pattern itself with satin or velvet of some bright color.

One Kind of Flower in a Room.

One should not use more than one kind of flower in a room, although it is safe to combine several kinds of green foliage; for instance, ferns and smilax as well as the natural foliage of the flower used.

When rooms open together with broad arches it is better to keep the same flower throughout. Even when the opening is not large, one should not be compelled to look from a pink room into a yellow room, or from a red room into a yellow room.—Harper's Bazar.

A Typical Case of Kidney Trouble and a Typical Cure.

Mrs. Chloe Page of 510 S. Pitt Street, Alexandria, Va., says: "My back hurt me terribly, I had sharp, shooting pains, changing to a dull, dragging ache. I could not stand for any length of time and my back hurt me when I sat down. My feet and ankles were badly swollen every evening, and my stomach was out of order. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of these troubles in 1902, and for five years I have had no return."

Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away. Her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of Ointment the sores had all healed, and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe's. GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

ELLEN M. OLSON

CLARA E. DARMSTADTER

The responsibility for a daughter's future largely rests with the mother. The right influence and the information which is of vital interest to the daughter imparted at the proper time has not only saved the life but insured the success of many a beautiful girl.

When a girl's thoughts become sluggish, with headache, dizziness or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude; when she is a mystery to herself and friends, her mother should come to her aid, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, will at this time prepare the system for the coming change, and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities. It has been thus depended upon for two generations.

Hundreds of letters from young girls and their mothers, expressing gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for them, are constantly being received.

Miss Ellen M. Olson, of 417 N. East St., Kewanee, Ill. writes:—

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have had the best doctors in our town for my sickness and they all thought that an operation was necessary. I had headache, sideache, and my feet were so sore I could hardly stand. I took two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when my periods were established and now I am perfectly well. Mama says she wont be without your medicine in the house. I have told one girl what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me and she is taking it now."

Miss Clara E. Darmstadter, of 453 Breckenridge St., Buffalo, N.Y., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For about a year, except during the past few months, I suffered with severe pains every month, with backaches and headaches. I had the blues so bad that I was in despair. It is a pleasure to tell you that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me. The change in my appearance is wonderful and I desire that this good may come to every sufferer. Any one desiring to know further details may write to me and I shall be glad to give them."

If you know of any young girl who is sick and needs motherly advice, ask her to address Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and tell her every detail of her symptoms, and to keep nothing back. She will receive advice absolutely free, from a source that has no rival in the experience of woman's ills, and it will, if followed, put her on the right road to a strong, healthy and happy womanhood.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs cures where others fail.

No other remedy has such a record of actual cures of female ills. Thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it has done for them.

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

100 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

"Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or males over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less."

The fee in each case will be $10.00. Churches, schools and markets convenient. Healthy climate, splendid crops and good laws. Grain-growing and cattle raising principal industries.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by L. L. Zenor, a single man, mortgagor, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of February, A. D., 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 3rd day of March, A. D., 1905, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 35 of mortgages on page 332, and

Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable, and

Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of the said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, and

Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred Forty-three and 95-100 ($1343.95) dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The east half of the east half of section twenty-seven (27) in township one hundred fifty (150) north of range forty-three (43) west of 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey one hundred sixty (160) acres, be the same more or less in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 14th day of December, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock a. m., on that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of one thousand three hundred forty three and 95-100 ($1343.95) dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy five ($75.00) dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law:

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of forty-eight and 40-100 dollars with interest on said amount since the 20th day of February, A. D., 1907, at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum since that date.

And whereas, the terms and conditions of mortgage hereinafter described provides that if default shall be made in the payment of said sum of money, or the interest, or any part thereof at the time and in the manner in said mortgage specified, the said mortgagee his heirs, executors and assigns are authorized to declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable;

And whereas the assignees of said mortgagee have declared the whole amount secured by said mortgage due and payable prior to the time of giving this notice.

That there is due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice on said mortgage hereinafter described the sum of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, which said mortgage was duly executed and delivered by Andrew O. Letvig, as administrator of the estate of Mary Jane Letvig, deceased, mortgagor, to Andrew A. Olson, mortgagee, bearing date the 20th day of February, 1904 with the power of sale therein contained, was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota, on the 23rd day of February, 1904, at 4:00 o'clock p. m., in book 14 of mortgages, on pages 251-253.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Andrew A. Olson to Sabille Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings by a written assignment bearing date the 11th day of October, 1907, and recorded in the office of said Register of deeds on the 18th day of October 1907, at 2:30 o'clock P. M. in Book 15 of mortgages at page 410; and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured mortgage, or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be forclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The Northeast Quarter of section numbered twenty five (25), in township numbered one hundred fifty two (152) North of Range forty five (45) West of the 5th P. M in the state of Minnesota less the Railway Right-away and other lands of said quarter sold during the life-time of said Mary Jane Letvig, leaving a balance in said above described premises of 124 and 71-100 acres, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said County and State on the 7th day of December, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, with interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorneys' fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of forclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

TO GIVE THANKS

Governor Johnson Issues Annual Thanksgiving Proclamation.

The governor has proclaimed November 28, as Thanksgiving day, as follows:

"Upon a day set apart for that purpose io the closing of each yeer, it is tho custom of the people of the nation and stato to engago in a special fostival of praise nnd thanks to tho Giver of all Good.

"Therefore, I, John A. Johnson, governor of tho stnto of Minnesctn, do horeby designato Thursday, the 28th day of November, as a day of thanksgiving.

"The year now drawing to a close is repleto with evidences of divine goodness. The peoplo of Minnesota have enjoyed material prosperity; farm, forest and mino have yielded abundantly; thero have heen ao visitations of firo, famine and pestilence and the countless beoefits showered upon us during the past twelvemonth call for our fervent gratitudo. Tho provalence of health, tho fullness of harvests, tho stability of peaco and ordor, tho growth of fratornal feeling, the spread of education, nnd all the countless blessings thnt brighten the pathway of life's wayfarer—all these are cause for rejoicing and praise.

"Abovo and beyond the material wealth that has come to our state, wo should reflect with grateful hearts upon the moral uplift that is everywhore apparent. In the greet civic awakening—in the regeneration of tho public conscience, we havo reason for holief thnt a better dny is dawning; that there will he less worship of self, less love of powor, loss lust of gold, less weakening of faith, and thnt the return to honesty nnd honor will lead easily and inevitably to the walk of virtue, the way of happiness, the path of glory. Out of financial storms resultant from the stress of aa era of fraud aad frenzy will come the sun, risiag from the darkness serene and smiling, marking the muddied pools along the wey. With the approech of thnt newer and better order, let us hope and believe will come a more abiding feith in free institutions, liberty less tinged with license, prowess more glorious. And unto Him who holds in the hollow of His hand the fate of natioos, and yet marks the sparrow's fall, let us lift our heerts, commending ourselvos, our children, our country to His infinite mercy and care."

THE DAIRYMEN MET

The Red River Valley Dairymen Met at Crookston Last Week.

The fifth annuel convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's Association was held at Crookston lest Wednesdey and Thuredey and there was a record breaking attendence present. Prominent dairymen and buttermakers from all perts of the state were preseat aad the meeting was one filled with interest and enthusiasm. Papers were read by various members, and the one by Buttermaker P. L. Melvin, of this place, proved of uausual iaterest as the "Use of starter direct in butter" is a new idea and it brought forth much discussion. In the election of officers for the eneuing yeer Prof. Grout of Crookston was mede president and Geo. L. Austio of St. Hilaire secretary. The winner of first prize in the hutter score was Louis H. Flagel of Erskine, while Geo. L. Austin won second prize. The scores were Flagel, 94½; Austin, 94; while P. L Malvin of this place scored 92. The convention adjourned Thursday afternoon a pronounced success in every particular.

ST. JOSEPH'S FAIR

The Object is to Raise Funds for the Support of St. Joseph's School.

Ageio we would remiad you not to forget the dates for the feir to be given by St. Joseph's school in the church next Monday, Tuesdey and Wednesday, the 18th, 19th and 20th inst. All ere cordially invited to attend and aid in the noble work of the Sisters in their endeevor to meintain a school here and furnish free tuition to the meny scholars attending. There is now an average ettendance of over 125 pupils, and when we as taxpayers take into consideration the fact that were these same scholars attending our public schools the increesod cost per year would amount to ahout sixteen dollers for each pupil, we cannot help but feel the burden lesseaed by the continuance of this parochial school emoag us. Theo why should we not attend the fair and thus show to the Sisters our appreciation of their efforts by patronizing liberally their hazaar. Supper will he served each evening during the fair and various amusements and attractions will be had to entertein those who ettend. The contests promise a lively attraction and all are invited.

THE DAY IN COURT

A Report of the Court Proceedings as Noted from Day to Day.

The district court convened Moodey with Judge Watts at the bar, and both the grand and petit juries in their respective boxes. The panel wes complete and the grand jury was assigned their task of finding indictments against all criminal offenders. They completed their work Tuesday morning and adjourned, and while we were unable to learn results we have it on good authority that but two indictments were found. The jury cases as called are:

C. W. Latta vs Julius Pleth et al. Plaintiff denied motioo for chenge of venue, and the case settled out of court by defendants paying damages in the sum of one dollar and costs.

Stephen Singer vs E. A. Snider: dismissed temporarily.

Mishaweka Woolen Manufacturing Co. vs J. F. Mathews; verdict for plaintiff in the sum of $70.

M. F. Shafer & Co. vs E. M. Hoff; verdict for defendant.

Julia Myrum vs Salve T. Myrum, plaintiff got judgment for $1,914.19 and costs, the full amount of suit. Congressman Steenerson was attorney for plaintiff.

The court cases will probably continue for a week yet before the criminal calendar is reached.

Dieble & Lang vs Harriet Fant et al: judgment for plaintiff in the sum of $364.

THE CONCERT BAND

H. B. Healy Elected Manager to Succeed the Stalwart Jos. L. Tracy.

After practice Tuesday evening the bend boys held their annual business meeting and proceeded to pass the "management honors" along to Harry B. Heely, while the board of directors were re-elected as follows: Lee Healy, H. W. Aoderson and A. L. Brunelle. During the pest year the bend has weathered the sea of hardship admirably, and when a disastrous storm seemed certain to wreck their ship of success, J. L. Tracy, the stelwart maneger, would steer the ship around all difficulties and make the port of success. Under Mr. Trecy's management the hend has hed a very successful year and for their enterteinments, concerts, dances, and out of town engegements over $1,300 has been received, and theo in return expended for new music, director's salary, and other incidentals necessary toward making this the best band in northern Minnesota. In the neer future another concert is to be given and none should fail to attend, as a special program will to be given. It will include several solos, duets, etc., besides two choruses by the high school and upper grade grammar school pupils, with the accompeniment of the full bend. This is a feeture that will undoubtedly prove a treat for all who attend, as the chorus is now drilling regularly and will provide some musio of which every resident of our city will be proud. Besides the chorus there will be a vocel solo or two. Ao orchestra of sixteen pieces has been organized by members of the band and will contribute several selectioas. The juaior band will appear and the number furoished by them will prove decidedly ioteresting. The junior band is making rapid progress and, as it is from the juniors the players for the large band are recruited, this organization of young men and boys is deserving of the greatest encouragement, and everybody will be glad to note the improvement they make duriog the winter. Io addition to the many special numbers the Red Laks Falls Concert band will give two or three selections.

The last concert was a success musically and in point of attendance, but it is expected the coming concert will see a packed house as no effort is being spared to present a program of unusual merit and variety. The full program, together with the date of the concert, will be announced later.

NEWS OF WEEK SUMMARIZED

DIGEST OF THE NEWS WORTH TELLING CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

Washington Notes.

It is announced at the navy department that Capt. J. M. Bowyer has been selected to command the battleship Illinois. Capt. B. A. Fiske, originally selected for the command, has asked to be relieved, owing to illness in his family.

One hundred and ten feet is the width which the navy department has finally fixed upon as desirable for the locks for the Panama canal. This is an increase of ten feet in width over the plans on which the commission is now working.

The president has issued an executive order creating four new bird and animal reserves on the Pacific coast, one in Oregon and the other three in Washington. Wardens will be appointed by the department of agriculture to supervise these reserves.

The state department has been advised of the arrest and imprisonment at San Pedro, Honduras, of an American citizen, Dr. O. B. Hunter, on charges of a trivial nature connected with the transfer of a piece of property. Instructions will be given to the American minister to intervene in the case.

The government is about to begin a campaign against bad eggs. Several merchants in Washington recently have been selling "country fresh eggs" for less money than they can be bought for in the country. The secret service men discovered that the "fresh country eggs" palmed off on the public were second-class cold storage eggs.

State News of Interest

TO ASK STATE FOR MORE MONEY.

Buttermakers Want County Testing Inaugurated—Successful Meeting.

Officers were elected and important resolutions adopted at the closing session of the fourteenth annual convention of the Minnesota State Butter and Cheese Makers' association at St. Peter. M. P. Mortenson of Cokato was elected president, and the other officers chosen were: H. J. Dosenau, Meriden, vice president; Edwin Hed, Nicollet, secretary; W. T. Parkin, Northfield, treasurer; M. Sondegaard, Hutchinson, member of the directors of the Dairy Record for three years.

Edwin Hed of Nicollet, the new state champion, outlined his methods in a paper on how to produce high-grade butter, and Joel Winkjer of Crookston spoke on county testing associations to the end of increasing milk production. Mr. Winkjer would organize county and district associations and employ inspectors to teach progressive methods of feeding and breeding cattle. His proposition was well received and the incoming officers were instructed to appeal to the next legislature for an appropriation of sufficient size to inaugurate and carry on the work.

Before the convention adjourned resolutions were adopted indorsing Congressman C. R. Davis' bill for the establishment of industrial high schools and promising support to the Wisconsin Protective association in the fight it is making against discrimination in express rates.

To M. Johnson of Hutchinson belongs the honor of winning the first butter judges' scoring contest ever held in the United States. It was conceived by the members of the Minnesota State Butter and Cheese Makers' association to determine the ability of the butter experts to judge samples of butter entered in competition and was held at the opening of their annual convention Wednesday morning.

Under the rules governing it each participant was required to score sixteen tubs of butter and then rescore the product. If all were graded alike he was to receive a perfect score, but any deviations were to be counted against him. There were sixteen entries, and, in a way, the laugh is on the judges, for the records show that different contestants gave the same butter as many as five or six different grades.

The two sets of scores prepared by the Hutchinson men differed to the extent of five points and he was awarded first. The showing made was as follows: Samuel Haugdahl, St. Peter, 7 1-2; M. Sondegaard, Hutchinson, 8; H. P. Olson, St. Paul, 8 1-2; H. J. Credicott, Chicago, 8 1-2; J. C. Joslin, Mankato, 9; James Sorenson, Maple Plain, 14; H. A. Goetsch, St. Paul, 16; M. C. Cromer, Aurora, Ill., 16 1-2; J. W. Koensell, Lewiston, 18; J. O. Dybewick, St. Paul, 18 1-2; F. O'Donnell, Round Prairie, 21; L. J. Levenick, Darwin, 22; J. G. Moore, Madison, Wis., 22; C. F. Wendt, Welcome, 24; W. C. Thompson, Laselle, 26.

Making good butter seems to come natural to the Schandell family of Blue Earth county. In the annual butter scoring contest conducted by the Minnesota State Butter and Cheese Makers' association, A. G. Schandell of St. Clair and O. H. Schandell of Rapidan, brothers, finished first and second, their feat being the more remarkable from the fact that 251 tubs of butter were entered in competition. They get silver valued at $60 and $40 as special prizes, and in addition will receive their pro rata share of a fund of $1,400.

When the members of the association held their annual banquet the scores were announced. The top figures went to the Schandells, but a Nicollet county buttermaker, Edwin Hed of Nicollet, won the buttermaking championship of Minnesota on the basis of comparative scores. He was the leader in the educational contest started last May by the state dairy and food commission, and his mark of 95 enabled him to maintain his advantage.

CORPSE IN BUGGY.

Women Discover Driver of Team Has Met Death.

F. A. Mutchler of Fergus Falls took a party of hunters to Dead Lake one day last week, and died in his buggy while returning home. Two women driving in the opposite direction noticed that the reins had fallen from his hands. One of them calld to him, and upon receiving no answer they stopped his team. A brief investigation showed that he was dead. Mr. Mutchler was sixty years old and had been a resident of the county for thirty-six years.

Ernest Stenzel, another resident of the same locality, was found dead in his barn at about the same hour, his body being found in the haymow.

Both deaths are supposed to have been due to heart failure.

The creamery at Campbell, some distance southwest of Fergus Falls, was destroyed by fire. A prairie fire was set by a passing engine on the Great Northern, and flames spread to the building before they could be checked. The creamery was insured for $1,600.

Mayor John O'Leary of East Grand Forks has issued a proclamation declaring that he will personally see that every saloon in the city is closed on Sunday. He announces that violations of the law will be prosecuted vigorously.

SMALL PRICES FOR TIMBER.

State Sale Resulted in Spiritless Bidding and Disappointing Prices.

The state disposed of approximately 26,000,000 feet of timber at the annual sale held last week at the state capitol.

The average price paid was $7.50 per thousand feet. The highest price realized was $9.10, paid by Martin Bros. of Duluth for a tract containing 710,000 feet of mixed timber.

The sale realized the state about $200,000. Of this amount about $49,000 was paid down. In all 41,000,000 feet of timber was offered for sale.

A year ago out of 40,000,000 feet offered over 35,000,000 was sold and nearly $500,000 realized. The average price received was $9.35 per thousand feet, and the highest figure, $13.55 for one tract. The bidding, too, was spirited. Last week it was listless. The state auditor, who conducted the sale, said it was a good one considering the class of timber offered, and the many small tracts, but the lumbermen present refused to accept it as such. They declared the appraisals in the face of a dropping market were entirely too high.

Thomas Shevlin and the Weyerhaeusers, always big bidders, bought but little of the timber offered. What was sold went largely to the small firms.

Asked to bid on a number of tracts near which he has crews, Mr. Shevlin gave a decided "no."

"Not on those appraisals," replied Mr. Shevlin. "Timber has taken a tumble of nearly $4 a thousand now and it is going lower," added Mr. Shevlin. Other buyers agreed with him.

The biggest piece offered was 5,850,000 feet and it went to the McDonald Land and Timber company at the appraised figure of $8. There were no competing bids. A small piece of mixed stuff containing 460,000 feet was run up 20 cents, selling for $8.20. Two others, one of 1,000,000 feet and another of 1,580,000 feet, were run up from $6, the appraised figure, to $7.25 and $7.50, respectively. It was the Crookston Lumber company, a Shevlin enterprise, that caused the competition here.

The Alger Lumber company, the St. Croix Lumber company and the Itasca Lumber company were the principal buyers.

The Johnson-Wentworth company bid the appraised figure of $9 for a piece carrying 2,400,000 feet and got it. Very few pieces carrying under 1,000,000 feet were sold.

The timber board passed on the question of abandoning the sale and decided that it would be unwise. Attorney General Young, however, contended that it would be better to call the sale off, because of the present financial troubles.

PLAN MISSION MEETING.

Lutherans of North Minnesota Valley to Convene on Nov. 29.

Ministers and lay delegates to the annual mission meeting of the North Minnesota Valley mission district will convene in St. Peter on Nov. 29 and 30. Between twelve and fourteen ministers, pastors of Swedish Lutheran and English Lutheran churches in that part of the state will be present at the gathering and delegates will be elected by twenty-three congregations. The officers of the district organization are: Rev. L. P. Bergstrom of Winthrop, president; Rev. S. G. Swanson of East Union, vice president; Rev. J. E. Hedberg of Vesta, secretary; Rev. J. V. Soderman of Scandia Grove, treasurer, and Rev. E. J. Nystrom of St. Peter, statistician. The convention will be held at the time the Swedish Lutheran church of St. Peter celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of its founding, and among the more prominent ministers who will be present will be Dr. E. Norelius of Vasa, president of the Augustana synod, and Rev. J. E. Krantz of West Duluth, president of the Minnesota conference.

CONTROL BOARD IS SPLIT.

Two Said to Favor Creation of New Official to Look After Charities.

Report at the state capitol is that a new official to the staff of the state board of control is to be added. Heretofore there has been no one specially in charge of charities, but the work formerly done by the state board of charities and corrections has been done as far as possible by members of the board. They have not been able to get around and inspect county jails, hospitals, lockups, poor farms and such institutions, and it is proposed to add a department for this purpose, to be in charge of an employe of the board.

The legality of this proceeding was questioned, it is said, by S. W. Leavitt, but it has been sanctioned by an opinion from the attorney general's department and is favored by Messrs. Roeing and Ringdal.

The annual timber sale will be conducted on Thursday at the capitol by the state auditor, when about 45,000,000 feet of state timber will be offered for sale. It is expected that the cash payments on the timber sold will amount at least to $75,000, which will be a welcome addition to the treasury in its present condition. While the present unsettled condition of the money market may have some slight effect on the sale it is not thought that the effect will amount to much and that a good price will be received for the timber.

In Minnesota

State News of the Week Briefly Told.

Timothy Sullivan was killed near Biwabik by a Missabe road train.

Mrs. Mary Gittens, a pioneer of Pine Creek, died, aged eighty-one years. She was one of the oldest settlers in the valley.

The warehouse of the Hinckley Implement company at Hinckley burned to the ground. The loss is $2,400; insurance, $1,500.

Jackson Kidder of Fergus Falls, clerk of court of Ottertail county, shot his left hand off while hunting at Little Pine lake, near Perham.

All of the elevators at Benson and at the small towns near by have been closed until the present unsteadiness in the markets has ceased.

H. H. Luders, who owns the largest farm in Otter Tail county, met with a serious accident. His right hand was cut off in a corn shredder.

Louie Rehfeldt suicided at his room in the Milwaukee house at Winona by shooting himself in the right temple. He had been on a prolonged spree.

The Midway horse barn at Breckenridge, owned by G. E. Moody of Wahpeton, N. D., was totally destroyed by fire. The building was valued at $2,000; partially insured.

Fred Shellgren, a pioneer citizen of the east end of Swift county, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. He was found in his room shortly before he died. No cause has been given for his deed.

Freight Train No. 69, west-bound, was wrecked two miles west of Grand Meadow, and six cars and the caboose were derailed. The track was badly torn up for several hundred feet. No one was seriously hurt.

Residents of Janesville are greatly aroused over the desecration of a cemetery near the village. Vandals entered the graveyard in the dark, overturned a dozen tombstones and committed other lawless acts.

Jacob Hyoonen, a miner employed at the Canister mines at Bovey, was killed while descending the shaft on a ladder. A piece of board fell when he was within fifty feet of the bottom and knocked him off the ladder.

The jury in the case of the state against John Meagher, charged with the murder of Morris Frawley on the Big Fork river, brought in a verdict of not guilty at Duluth. Mr. Meagher is of Northfield, where he bears a good reputation.

A stranger forged the payee's name to a check he found given by Frank Sabothka, a thresher, on the Windom National bank for $40. The forgery was discovered immediately, but the forger escaped on a train. The sheriff captured him later.

Rev. T. H. M. Villiers Appleby, Episcopal archdeacon of Duluth, had an interview with President Roosevelt last week, at which he took occasion to complain of his unsuccessful efforts in retaining certain Minnesota land for church purposes.

According to the figures of the Duluth Directory company, just given out, Duluth now has a population of 86,188, a gain of 4,885 during the year ending Oct. 1. The total number of names is 36,404, and to this is applied the multiple of 2 1-4.

A prairie fire in Lac qui Parle county, which had its origin across the line in South Dakota, has been reported to Gen. C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner. The fire burned over several hundred acres, destroying some corn and thousands of tons of hay and straw.

Fire that originated in room 31 of the Tremont hotel at Duluth at 9 o'clock last night did damage to the amount of $15,000. It is supposed the fire originated from a carelessly thrown match or cigar stub. People in their rooms had not retired, and all escaped without injury.

A prairie fire was started by sparks from a passing train near Little Falls. The grass was as dry as powder, and the firemen struggled five hours before the conflagration could be put out. Several acres were burned black and bare. Section men were called in to assist the firemen, and the fire was finally put out.

Trading in grain was suspended on the Duluth board of trade Monday morning, owing to the money conditions. No sales were made in either cash grain or the options although the trading room was open and the members were on the floor. Business will not be resumed until conditions improve, and the country elevators are being advised not to buy grain.

On account of a dense fog and rails that were slippery with frost, two street cars bumped into each other at Winona, and both were badly smashed. One was loaded with workmen going to the factory district and the other with people coming down town to their offices and stores. Every person on both cars was bruised, but strangely not one was seriously hurt.

August Ratzal, forty-four years old, fell into the elevator of the Laird-Norton planing mill at Winona, and, although it appeared that he was not seriously hurt, he died the next morning. Examination showed that a small blood vessel in the brain was ruptured, which caused his death.

The worst swamp fires for thirteen years are raging in Woodside and Eastern, near Parkers Prairie. They have been burning for several days, and are taking a northerly direction, following the Wing river. Hundreds [illegible]

IRON ORE MAKES GOOD ROADS.

They Are Solid and Cost Little to Maintain.

Iron ore makes good roads, is the conclusion drawn by George W. Cooley, engineer of the state highway commission, who has just made a trip through the iron range, looking over the road work in the district. The roads in that district are built of iron ore, but it is a grade so low that it cannot be converted into iron.

The kind used in roadmaking runs as high as 25 per cent of iron, and is what is known as lean ore. It is found generally on top of the main ore body after the stripping has been completed. This ore is hauled to the dumps. The local authorities are welcome to it and are only put to the expense of hauling it. The cost of building roads out of this material runs from $1,000 to $1,400 a mile, the roads being from sixteen to twenty feet wide and eight or nine inches deep.

This ore is used quite generally throughout the iron ranges and is found to be an excellent road-making material. Although road rollers are now used in that part of the state for making country roads, it has been found that this material will pack hard and form a good solid road which does not cost much to maintain. The cost of such roads is about the same as the cost of gravel roads in this part of the country, where the material costs about 10 cents a yard. The material in the ranges is free, but it is very heavy and the cost of hauling it is greater.

Mr. Cooley made a trip of nearly twenty miles over such roads between Biwabik and Virginia, going by way of McKinley, Sparta and Eveleth. He found the roads on that trip well packed and in good condition, although they were rather dusty. There are between 200 and 300 miles of this kind of road on the ranges and they are giving general satisfaction.

SENTENCE CUT DOWN.

Carlos A. Young of Lyon County Gets Reduction of Two Years.

The pardon board has granted the petition of Charles A. Young for a commutation of his sentence from seven to five years. Young was sentenced from Lyon county June 9, 1905, to the state prison for seven years, and at the session of the pardon board of Oct. 14 a petition for the commutation was presented and a hearing given. It was urged in support of the petition that Young had been induced to plead guilty to the charge of embezzling $600 by reason of an agreement that he was to receive a sentence of five years. It was on this ground that the commutation was granted.

A protest against the granting of a pardon was presented by E. B. Corens of Tracy at the time of the hearing. He was not, however, informed prior to the hearing that the petition was simply for a commutation, but he entered a protest against any reduction in the sentence. The matter was adjourned in order to permit of a further investigation into the case, with the result that the communication was granted.

Young was charged with embezzlement on several charges. The other cases were dropped when he entered a plea of guilty to the one charge upon which he was sentenced.

TO MAKE VACCINE.

State Board of Health Makes Decision.

On and after Jan. 1 the state board of health will manufacture and distribute vaccine virus for vaccination purposes free. The local boards of health will be provided with the virus, and its further distribution placed under their care.

The matter was taken up by the state board of health at its meeting recently, and the manufacture and distribution of the virus, as above stated, agreed upon. It will involve considerable expense, but the board believes the step will be of incalculable benefit to the state.

A resolution was adopted by the board, that rummage sales are detrimental to health. At the next meeting a set of rules looking to the regulation of such sales and the handling of the old clothing involved, will probably be adopted.

A stringent set of rules protecting the purity of the water at Lake Minnetonka was adopted by the board. The depositing of all impure matter in the lake is forbidden. Stables or buildings housing animals or fowl are prohibited within seventy-five feet of the shore line.

HATE SIGNING MAIL

TASK TAKES UP MUCH TIME OF CABINET OFFICERS.

Some of the Secretaries Spend Two Hours Daily at Job—Matter May Be Taken Up by Next Congress.

One of these ever old but ever new propositions that probably will receive some attention at the coming session of congress is the signing of mail by cabinet officers.

Some of the new men who have come in with the Roosevelt administration, especially some of the younger men who were shuffled in on the last round of cabinet changes, have been seriously discussing the subject.

They say that the hardest manual labor of a cabinet job is the signing of mail according to law.

Some of the secretaries spend two hours a day in the busy season simply signing their names. A messenger stands at their elbows and removes and blots the sheets as fast as they are signed, and the secretary does not any more know what nine-tenths of the things are that he is signing than if they were written in cuneiform characters.

It is the law and has to be complied with, but it is only a daily grind, for all the cabinet officers hate it, and it wastes about two hours of the secretary's time that he might very profitably devote to something else. It used to be that treasury notes and bonds and the like had to be signed by hand, but the job got so big that the treasurer and the comptroller could not possibly have managed it and the antiquated law was changed.

In the same way it was only within a few years that typewriters were introduced into the state department. All the correspondence up to that time was done in manuscript. Now, if the cabinet officer's signature is done away with another of the antique customs of the government will have been sacrificed to modern utilitarianism.

Engravers Well Paid.

George F. C. Smillie, an engraver in the bureau of engraving and printing, draws $5,000 a year. He is considered one of three men in the United States who rank at the top of the profession. He is an adept at portrait engraving, most of the portraits on government notes, bonds, etc., being his work. It is possible that he has no equal in the United States in his line. He is descended from a family of engravers and artists. His grandfather and his father were expert engravers, and members of his family are noted as artists in whatever line they undertake.

The salary paid Mr. Smillie calls attention to the fact that there are comparatively few expert engravers in the United States, so far as the making of plates for currency and other government obligations are concerned. In the bureau of engraving and printing there are 20 engravers. Their salaries range from $1,000 to $6,000 a year.

England Has "White Farm."

As the result of a process by which every portion of the exterior surface of the White House was "burned" free of the many coats of white lead it has received since building, the outside of the White House is whiter than it has been for years and more than ever justifies Mr. Roosevelt's decision to make White House its official name instead of the erstwhile, executive mansion. Every state has one of the latter, but Washington city, alone has a White House. England apparently "goes us one better" with its white farm, where not only the residence, but all farm buildings and even the animals are white. The free and independent Britishers who till the soil and churn the butter on this particular farm, are compelled, according to a recently returned globetrotter, to don white smocks and white frocks to bear out the general impression of whiteness, desired by the owners, Lord and Lady Allogton.

WHY THEY DIDN'T STOP OFF.

Scarcity of Congressmen Due to Passage of Rate Bill.

A prominent railroad man stationed in Washington explained the absence of senators and representatives to congress from Washington during the present summer. Hitherto during their vacation members of congress had the habit of dropping into Washington for a day or two to pay personal attention to matters of interest to their districts pending before the departments. Members from the far west on their way to the seashore or a week's whirl in New York always made it a point to stop at Washington on "routine business."

During these visits the congressmen always found it convenient, not to say necessary, to go along Newspaper Row and visit the Washington bureau of their home papers and explain that even during the warm weather they were in Washington looking after the interest of their constituents.

This summer the congressmen have been conspicuous for their absence. The reason for this, as given by the railroad man, is that congressmen, like all the rest of mankind these days, have to buy their railroad tickets and do not travel on passes.

Before the passage of the railroad rate bill all the congressmen had to do was to drop a line to their favorite railroad passenger agent and ask for passes to New York via Washington. Now when they travel they pay so much per mile, and find it cheaper and more convenient to go direct to New York than to make the loop into Washington.

Washington Rang This Bell.

Among the rare mementoes of the old days in Washington, preserved by a Washington family, is a small bell shaped like an old-fashioned cow bell. It once hung in the office of the old City hotel in Alexandria, and was connected by wire with the bell pull in the room on the first floor, opposite the parlor of that hotel, which was used by Washington as his headquarters in Alexandria from the time the building was erected in 1790 to the time of his death, in 1799. This hotel fell into the hands of Frederick Schwab exactly as it stood when Washington entered it the last time. In 1892 Mr. Schwab concluded to modernize the hotel, and took down the old bells and bell wires, carefully preserving those of authenticated historical interest. The bell which had been so often janged by the strong pull of Gen. Washington was presented by Mr. Schwab to Capt. Richard M. Goundie in 1893. Capt. Goundie commanded the Second Pennsylvania heavy artillery at the close of the civil war. Capt. Goundie presented the bell to his wife as a birthday present, and it has called her guests to supper every birthnight anniversary since that time.

Considerate Bridegroom.

A Belleville girl and a young man, both of whom had steady jobs, were married the other day. The day after they were married the girl said to her fond husband:

"Oh, George! now that we are married, there is only one thing I regret, and that is that I have to give up my fine position."

The fond young husband stroked the silken tresses of the young wifey's hair and soothingly replied:

"Now, darling, don't worry. You needn't give up your position. I'll give up mine."—Judge.

Virtues of Buttermilk.

Ordinary sour buttermilk is a better tonic, is a better food than was ever bottled or boxed up by the chemist or doctor. Buttermilk is a very hearty food. Two glasses a day is enough for any one. This should be drunk with meals, or else should not be taken within two hours of a meal. Time should be given for it to thoroughly digest, and to drink another glass before the first one is digested is only to stir up difficulty with the digestive organs. Really, the best way to drink buttermilk is with the meals, though it may be drunk between meals as a sort of easily digested lunch.

NEW RAILWAY STATION READY

Washington's new Union station, which has cost, with other terminal facilities provided, nearly $15,000,000, has been opened to the public. The work was started about four years ago and it has been done under the supervision of the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio railroads, with architects employed by the government acting in an advisory capacity. It is said to be the finest railroad station in the world. It is of white marble and is constructed in accordance with what is known as the "Burnham plan," for the beautification of Washington.

One-third of the cost has been borne by the United States government and the other two-thirds by the railroads. With the exception of the trains of the Baltimore & Ohio, every train entering Washington now uses the tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad, which occupy a great trough extending through the park system called the "Mall," past the agricultural department, the Smithsonian institution, the National museum and the government printing office. It was to reclaim this right of way for park purposes that the new Union station plan was adopted. Trains now enter the city from the southwest; under the new plan they will enter from the northeast, and the tracks will not touch any government reservation. The new station has many novel features in the way of equipment.

It has a "president's waiting room," which is so arranged that the president and distinguished visitors can enter the station by a reserved entrance without being compelled to pass through crowds of people. The station's capacity is such that the largest inauguration crowds can be easily handled. Its trackage equipment is said to be the most complete in the country.

CRAFTY EMPRESS OF CHINA TO DROP REINS OF POWER

For Fifty Years She Has Been Most Despotic Ruler in Modern History.

Half a century of rule by a woman, whose career has no parallel in history, has about run its course. The empress of China is to abdicate in favor of her nephew, who now is nominally the emperor.

This slave girl, who by sheer force of beauty and craft ascended to the throne of a nation, whose subjects comprise more than one-third of the world's population, can only be compared with Queen Elizabeth or Catherine of Russia in the despotic power she has wielded. But the domination of these queens never even approached hers. Napoleon in the zenith of his glory never controlled as many people as she.

Her life is one long record of mystery and intrigue. The tiny Tzu-hsi, she being only five feet tall, during all her long period of control, has faced rebellions, and has had to outwit the designs of foreign nations who sought to confiscate her fecund realm. No minister of state stood at her elbow to guide her strokes of diplomacy. All that she has done has proceeded from her own cleverness. No human being in our generation, if in the world's history, has ever been more absolutely invested with supreme power of dictation.

Truly a great event will it be when Tzu-hsi lays down the scepter.

The long life of this monarch, she is now seventy-three, has been shrouded in almost impenetrable mystery. Many of her own ministers have never seen her, for most of her conferences of state are held while she sits behind a screen, where she can see without being seen. It is said that only once has a camera ever caught her features, and only once has her portrait been painted. Both of these concessions to modern customs have come within the last few years when even the palace of the empress felt the wave of modern thought that has been sweeping over the world.

It was the greed for power that first drove the young girl to seek the favor of the emperor.

She was then but a slave girl, though the daughter of a good family, her father a Manchu nobleman having at one time held an important post at Pekin. But misfortunes assailed him and sent him almost in utter destitution with his son and daughter into Canton.

At the lowest ebb of his fortunes he did what seems incomprehensible to our Occidental standards, but which in the Orient is the most natural expedient for a man in financial trouble, he sold his beautiful daughter into slavery.

Tzu-hsi was fortunate that her purchasers were not only people of quality but liberally endowed also with the milk of human kindness. They took a great fancy to the girl, and had her taught to read and write, a rare thing at that time.

She was ambitious and advanced so in her knowledge that her proud owner also had her taught ethics, astronomy and mathematics, so that eventually she became the most learned young woman in Canton.

The turn in her fortunes came in 1850, when the emperor issued an invitation for all comely young women of Manchu descent to present themselves at the palace to be examined for admission to the lists of the ruler's secondary wives.

Tzu-hsi persuaded her foster parents to let her enter the competition, and when they gave consent it was accompanied by the presentation of a liberal outfit of the most beautiful clothes, so that she might bear comparison with any who came.

Six hundred made application and only ten succeeded, Tzu-hsi being among the number.

The domination of this ordinary woman dates from this period. From the time she gained a footing in the household of the emperor she distanced all rivals for his regard. Members of the imperial family, nobles of the court and great men of the empire all fell under her sway. She moved them about as the pawns in a game. None could resist her will.

When in 1860 Pekin was captured by the French and English allies the young woman was the only person in power who kept her head. Her hatred for the "foreign devils" was surpassed by none, especially as they promised purposeful Tzu-hsi was the real ruler, and the prince of I soon had it made clear to him that unless he wished to lose his valued head, he had better cease opposing the autocrat of the country.

She then had her way with the foreign invaders. She used a pretense of deference in dealing with them, but when finally they were clear of the country, she vented her rage on what Christians still remained.

In 1875 the baby emperor died, and again there rose suspicions that poison had aided his way into the realms of bliss. Far from being surprised over the sudden death, the dowager was apparently prepared, for she grabbed her nephew, Tsai-tien, then three years old, took him to the throne room, and pronounced him emperor, and none dared dispute her will.

Under the title of Kwang-hsu, this weakling has since remained nominal ruler of China, but he has only been permitted to have what authority she deemed safe.

And yet despite her adherence to

TSZE AE, EMPRESS OF CHINA, AS SHE APPEARS TO-DAY.

to interfere with her cherished dream of being China's ruler. But she did not show her true attitude. Against her desire for pacific measures was ranged the prince of I., a powerful but fanatical statesman, who declined to temper his hatred of Europeans by the least pretense of cunning. The prince and Tzu-hsi waged a bitter warfare for control of the emperor, and just when it looked as though the prince would get the better of the woman the emperor conveniently died, though it has always been suspected that human agencies contributed materially to his mysterious and still unexplained finish.

I-tchou was succeeded by his son, Tsai-tchanon, whose mother, Aei An, should have been the regent, but the archaic ideas of power the venerable empress has shown herself able to keep in touch with modern ideas.

She greatly admires Americans—in fact, they are the only foreign people who do not come in for violent hatred. The part Secretary Hay played in preventing the partition of China by the allies perhaps has much to do with this.

Kwang-hsu will be lucky if he can hold China together as his unscrupulous but clever aunt has.

Harpooned.

"She asked me to sing."

"That shows her tact and self-sacrificing desire to please a guest."

"How so?"

"Why, she just loves music."

BEST EVER WRITTEN

PRESCRIPTION WHICH ANYONE CAN EASILY MIX.

Said to Promptly Overcome Kidney and Bladder Afflictions—Shake Simple Ingredients Well in Bottle.

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. A prominent physician is the authority that these simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from any druggist even in the smaller towns.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive Kidneys, overcoming Backache, Bladder weakness and Urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man or woman here who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

The Scranton (Pa.) Times was first to print this remarkable prescription, in October, of 1906, since when all the leading newspapers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other cities have made many announcements of it to their readers.

The Old-fashioned Way.

"Now, Mandy, I like cheerful service. Do you wash with alacrity?"

"No's; I jest uses plain soap."

GERMANY HELPS BOYS.

Looks Up Positions for Them Before They Leave School.

When an American boy leaves school he does not always know what sort of work he wants or is fit for. Or even when he knows exactly what kind of a job he desires, he often does not know at all how to find it. Such a job as he aims for may not exist within his opportunities of place and time. So the boy leaving school may drift into an unsuitable occupation, or, worse, into no occupation at all, in spite of an honest wish originally to work. In Germany they order these things better.

Every year printed schedules of comprehensive questions are sent to every head teachr of the Munich schools to be distributed among the pupils who are going to leave the schools that year.

The pupils are asked to put themselves in communication with the municipal labor bureau, which will advise them as to the choice of a vocation, and give them the best chance possible to secure work.

Yearly circulars are also sent to all the trade guilds and other labor societies to enlist their co-operation.

The children respond readily to the aid given them. Boys come by dozens to the offices of the bureau in search of positions as apprentice or beginner. Each brings a form of application filled up by himself, but signed by his teacher.

When the bureau finds a place for him he is notified by post card and presents himself for examination by the employer, wherever and whenever the latter may appoint.

Whther the boy takes the job or not, he must report to the bureau the result of the interview, and this goes on until work is procured, which suits him and which he is able to do.

For the direction of the boys the labor bureau has prepared, with the aid of expert employers and medical men, a handbook of the industries open to a boy. This handbook describes the different kinds of work, the qualifications necessary to each, the prospects of promotion or steady employment, the health conditions, the dangers and difficulties, the cost and time of training and everything else which the boy and his parents ought to know before choosing his career.

A ladies' committee has lately been appointed to look after the girls, also, from the schools. So the young people of Munich have a first-rate chance for a good start in life.

Pantaloons Fooled Her.

Two titled Chinese maids, on their way to enter Wellesley college, were barred from the women's waiting room at the railroad station to-day.

The trouble with the little Celestial maids was their flowered silken pantaloons made them look like boys.

Miss Faung Yui Tsao, their guardian, held a whispered talk with Mrs. Chase, the station matron, who blushed, smiled and let the maids pass in. They were Miss Chi Che Wang and Miss Ming Hsiahn.

The Right of Selection.

The strong-minded lady glared at the little man.

"Women will soon claim the right of matrimonial selection," she said.

"With the consent of the selected, of course?" quoth the little man.

"That will be determined later," said the strong-minded lady. "But you may rest assured of one thing. There will be no shilly-shallying."

With this mysterious warning the strong-minded lady turned and went her way, leaving the little man in a cold perspiration.

MR. COLE apparently admits being defeated for governor last year, and gives this explanation: "No man in the state, handicapped as I was, could have won the lest election." We don't know to whom Mr. Cole is alludin' but it strikes us his chief handicap was in having John A. Johnson for an opponent.

OWING to the increase in the eost of printing materials three more newspapers in this state have suspended publication, tho cost of production being greater and the increase in cost faster than the income. Tho papers are the Odessa Tribune, the Beardsloy News and the Welcome Times.

THE Littlo Falls Herald remarks that "the course of the democratic press and leaders during the financial flurry is worthy of remembrance Instead of trying to make political capital which would be a very easy thing to do under circumstances, they have done all in their power to induce calmness. Mr. Bryan has everywhere talked confidence and hope. The contrast betwzen these conditions and the acts of some other parties in some other years is very noticcablo.

THE proclamation of the President admitting Oklahoma into the Union as the 46th stato will be issued to take effect Nov. 16th when the new state governor will be installed. A new star in the field of blue, to represent upon our national flag the state of Oklahoma, will not be added until July 4, 1908. Without regard to the day upon which a state may bo admitted, the star cannot be added to the flag, under an act of congress approved April 4, 1818, until upon the following Independence day. The present arrangement of forty-five stars is strikingly symmetrical. Like corn in a well planted field, the stars appear in line from any point of view.

THE Duluth Herald has collected some interesting figures bearing on the presidential elections of the past forty years, which shows that the biggest "landslides" in the countries history were not so very big after all. In these forty years only eight presidents have received a majority of the popular vote, that is moro than half of all the votes cast. The presidents elected by a majority votes are as follows: 1840, Harrison over Vun Buren with 53 percent of thu vote; 1851, Pierce over Scott with 51 percent of the vote; 1584 Lincoln over McClellan with 55 percent of the voto; 1868 Grant over Seymour, with 53 percent of the vote; Grant over Greely with 55 percent of the vote: 1896, McKinley over Bryan with 51 percent of the vote; 1900 McKinley over Bryan with 52 perceat of the vote; 1904 Roosevelt over Parker with 56 percent of the vote.

CONGRESSMAN HAMMOND, the lone democrat on the Mianesota delegatioa is in favor of tariff revision—now. He says: "The seatiment in this district is strongly in fevor of e revision of the tariff schedules, and with that sentiment I em in full accord. Assuming that there should be such revision, there is ia my opinion no good reason for postponing the work. Those who urge delay or fear that tariff legislation may not effect the results of the presideutial election, must consider the success of a political party of more importance than the aeed of the country for right legislation. Those who assert that the duties upon specific articles cannot be lowered or removed without a comploto overhauling of the tariff are unmiadful of the fact that such chaages have beea made time and again. I will gladly support legislation looking to the removal of the tariff on lumber, coal. pulpwood for paper makers, and articles so controlled by trusts that there is no competiticn in their sele in our merkets.

Morris Star: The various kiads of weather prophets are out with their signs ead most of them predict a long, cold winter with plenty of snow. They cannot be fer off, for the average winter is long enough and most of them are even loager.

Stillwater Gezette: Too much prosperity. too much expense and not knowing when to cut off steem, have brought on the present little attack that isn't a quarter as severe as the pessimists would have yoa believe. The country is ell bere, the crops were aever better aad the people are in good health. All that is needed is a little common sense, coolness and conservatism, and extinguish that yellow streak. Then the financial ship will glide along as smooth as ever and in a few months we wonder how we could have been so badly rattled when there was so little cause.

St. Peter Free Press: Whatever objections one may have ageinst William Jennings Bryan's politics, there is no question as to his intentions and honesty of purpose. When his attention was called to the cherge made by the Wall street stock gamblers, that President Roosevelt was to blame for the present financial difficulties, he at once strongly defended the president's position and held that "we shouldn't blame the sheriff but blame the horse thief." In his opinion the president is acting the honest executive, who enforces existing laws against a lot of criminals who should be behind the bars.

Zumbrota News: Medical men cen tell us there is nothing like sleeping out doors. If everything keeps advancing most of us poor devils will have to.

Ortonville Herald-Star: Very rightly President Roosevelt believes that puncturiug the fictions will not bring on a panic. People don't go crazy when watered stocks show a slump.

Madison Independent Press: The tilting of the sulary of the public examiner from $4,100, the figure intended by the legislature, to $4,500, by some copying clerk might better be set down as a clerical error than iateational fraud. Why not? Isn't it better to regard it as an bonest mlstake rather than a piece of roguery, espeeially as there seems no way of discovering who did it? Evidently that is what it was, as the amount involved was not large enough to suggest anything else.

Long Prairie Leader: There is ene thing that tho Johnson republicans of the stato can be given credit for. By putting Minnesota into the doubtful column they at least mado her sons presidential possibilities. Senator Clapp is now being mentioned as the proper men for vice preeidential timber to keep the state in the republican column in case Bryan decides to make Johnson his running mate next summer.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Telegraphic Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and other business offices last year. Over 400 will do so this year. All the Fargo banks employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers and stenographers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement by business men.

Our Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk, or bookkeeper. The new course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by the Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high-grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

A Telegraphic and Railroad Course (under the direction of an old train dispatcher) furnishes operators and station agents for the G. N., N. P., Milwaukee and Soo roads. The train wires run into the school, all their blanks are furnished and R. R. auditors lecture and give instruction on R. R. accounting. The roads guarantee positions to all D. B. C. graduates.

Rev. Philip A. Schwarz was summoned to Windom the latter part of last week to attend the funeral of a member of his former congregation. Rev. W. Waller P. H. D., of Crookston, very ably occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian church during the pastor's absence. Rev. Schwarz announces the usual services for next Sunday.

Miss Viola Brady was the victim of a pleasant surprise last Friday evening, perpetuated upon her by a number of her north side friends. Numerous games were indulged in until a late hour, when a dainty lunch was served after which all returned to their respective homes feeling that it was good to have been present upon this happy occasion.

Mrs. J. C. Wander received the sad news last Thursday noon that her father, Christ Ramacher, had died very suddenly of pneumonia at his home in St. Anthony, and in the afternoon she departed for that place to be in attendance at the funeral, which was held Saturday morning. The heartfelt sympathy of Red Lake Falls friends goes out to the bereaved daughter and family in their sad loss.

Miss Eva Bagan, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Bagan, living about one mile south of town, passed from this life last Saturday evening, the cause of the demise being pneumonia. The funeral was held from St. Joseph's church Monday, and the remains interred in the cemetery west of town, Father Fayolle conducting the services. Miss Eva was a pupil of St. Joseph's school and also a member of the school choir, and the attendance at the funeral was large. The sermon was touching and appropriate, there being a number of hymns sung by the school choir. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in their sad loss.

The Gazette's itemizer received a couple very severe shocks Tuesday while making the rounds. At the Merchants State Bank they had "on display" several hundred dollars in silver just from the mint in Philadelphia, of the denominations of dollars, halves, quarters and dimes, while, at the First State Bank we were shown several bundles of new bills in fives, tens and twenties, and they still had the United States treasurer's binding seal upon them. It was quite a sight to see so much of the "panic destroyer" in one day, and we were informed by the bank officials that so far as they are concerned there is no need of a panic scare in this neck o' woods.

The local postoffice has now on sale the much talked of international response coupons which are good in any country in the international postal union. The coupons are sold at six cents each, and when sending one of these to the party in the foreign country from whom a response is wanted it should be explained to him (or her) that with the coupon postage of that country to the value of 25 centimes, equal to five cents in this country, can be secured with them to answer your letter. The instructions governing the use of the return coupons are printed on them in four different languages, English, French, German and Italian. The coupons sold in this country are not redeemable in the United States, or in other words a return coupon cannot be redeemed in the same country in which it was purchased.

Michel Quesnel, who last week disposed of all his stock, implements and household goods at auction, in company with his wife and young son, departed last evening for Duluth on a visit to a daughter. They expect to return to Red Lake Falls and visit among friends for a number of days before departing for their new home in North Yakima, Wash. Mr. Quesnel says it is with a feeling of regret he leaves the place where his children have been reared and he and his estimable wife have made their home since the spring of 1879, but with two daughters in the west and that his health might be improved by a change of climate and with a much needed rest from hard labor, they will bid adieu to numerous friends here and seek a home in the far west. During his residence in Red Lake county Mr. Quesnel has labored hard to gain a livelihood for himself and family and his efforts have not been in vain for he has as nice an eighty as there is in the north country, with a large and spacious house with a hot air furnace furnishing heat for the same during the severest of winter weather. That he has prospered goes without saying, and he has only words of praise for the country and the people with whom he has had dealings, but his health demands a change of climate, and in their departure all friends wish them much joy, health and happiness in their new western home.

A Cure That Has Held Good for Four Years.

Mrs. Mary Cramlish of 1130 West Third Street, Wilmington, Del., says: "Some years ago I began to feel weak and miserable and one day awoke from a nap with a piercing pain in my back that made me scream. For two days I could not move and after that I had backache and dizzy spells all the time. My ankles swelled and I ran down dreadfully. I was nervous and had awful headaches. I wonder that any medicine could do what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. They cured me four years ago and I have been well ever since."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Done Her Part.

"What have you done for the betterment of mankind?" asked the scornful female person.

"Me?" answered the plump and widowly looking one; "I have been a better half to no fewer than three of them."

She Did Not Fear Death.

An old lady on her seventy-third birthday once said, "I do not mind getting old, and I do not fear death, but I live in constant fear of paralysis."

"For some time I have been wanting to tell you of the great good your wonderful Sloan's Liniment is doing here," writes Mr. James F. Abernethy, of Rutherford College, N. C. "In fact, all your remedies are doing noble work, but your Liniment beats all. In my eight years' experience with medicine I find none to go ahead of it, having tried it in very many cases. I know of one young man, a brick-mason, who suffered from a partial, yes, almost complete, paralysis of one arm. I got him to use your Liniment, and now he can do as much work as ever, and he sings your praise every day. I get all to use it I possibly can and know there is great virtue in it. I have helped the sale of your noble remedies about here greatly, and expect to cause many more to buy them, as I know they can't be beat."

CAMELS DWELT IN OREGON.

In Days of Old When the State Was a Tropical Wilderness.

That the whole of interior Oregon was once the bed of the Pacific ocean has been proved beyond question, says Sunset, by the investigations of Prof. Thomas Condon, Dr. Diller and other noted geologists. That the region was later a tropical country has been equally well established.

Numerous discoveries of the bones of these animals, and rocks containing the perfect imprint of the plants of the tropics, have been made, and it is no longer an occasion for surprise when well diggers or irrigation excavators unearth the fossil remains of a camel or a broad-faced ox. Within recent years many fossil beds of beautiful palm leaves have been found in Eastern Oregon.

The Cascade Hills, Blue Mountains and Owyhees, once islands surrounded by tropical lakes, were covered with luxuriant growth, forests and flowering shrubs, for Knowlton tells us the magnolia and cinnamon and fig trees were there.

To-day the soil presents a finely ground mixture of basalt and volcanic ash, containing the elements of most fertile soil, and when properly watered producing enormous crops of vegetables, fruits and grains common to temperate zones. The climate has been changed, says Prof. Condon, by the upfolding of the Cascade range, shutting off from the interior the softening influence of the Japan current and the drift of ocean fogs and clouds.

HER "BEST FRIEND."

A Woman Thus Speaks of Postum.

We usually consider our best friends those who treat us best.

Some persons think coffee a real friend, but watch it carefully awhile and observe that it is one of the meanest of all enemies for it stabs one while professing friendship.

Coffee contains a poisonous drug—caffeine—which injures the delicate nervous system and frequently sets up disease in one or more organs of the body, if its use is persisted in.

"I had heart palpitation and nervousness for four years and the doctor told me the trouble was caused by coffee. He advised me to leave it off, but I thought I could not," writes a Wis. lady.

"On the advice of a friend I tried Postum Food Coffee and it so satisfied me that I did not care for coffee after a few days' trial of Postum.

"As weeks went by and I continued to use Postum my weight increased from 98 to 118 pounds, and the heart trouble left me. I have used it a year now, and am stronger than I ever was. I can hustle up stairs without any heart palpitation, and I am cured of nervousness.

"My children are very fond of Postum and it agrees with them. My sister liked it when she drank it at my house, but not when she made it at her own home. Now she has learned to make it right, boil it according to directions, and has become very fond of it. You may use my name if you wish, as I am not ashamed of praising my best friend—Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

MATTERS FEMININE.

KEEPS AWAY CHILL

SWEATER FOR YOUNGSTER OF TENDER YEARS.

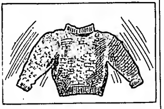
Garment Easily Made at Home Will Be Found Very Useful During the Severe Weather of the Winter.

For child form 3 to 6 years old, this sweater needs:

One-half pound white German knitting yarn, one skein pink German knitting yarn, one pair bone needles, No. 4, and one pair steel needles.

The basket pattern in which this sweater is made is formed of eight rows, worked as follows:

First row—*, p 7, k1, *.
Second row—*, k 7, p 1, *.
Third row—Same as first row.
Fourth row—Purl.



Fifth row—P 3, k 1, *, p 7, k 1, *.
Sixth row—K 3, p 1, *, k 7, p 1, *.
Seventh row—Same as fifth row.
Eighth row—Purl.

With pink wool cast on 72 stitches on bone needles and knit a ribbed belt, k, 1, p 1 three inches deep. Change to white wool and begin pattern; work until the back is 11 inches long (including belt). Then decrease at each end of the needle on every other row until eight stitches have been taken off, and then knit the pattern until the back is 15 inches long (including belt).

Knit 16 stitches for each shoulder, binding off the intervening ones. Make each shoulder two inches long and then add 24 stitches to replace the ones bound off at the back. Knit the pattern until the front is four and one-half inches long, and then add eight stitches at each side for underarm. Knit the front the same length as the back, and then change to pink wool and knit belt.

Sleeve: Begin with 15 stitches; add three each end of needle until there are 72 stitches. Knit for one inch and then narrow every four rows until there are 45 stitches.

Make sleeve nine and one-half inches long, measuring on the inside edge, then change to steel needles and pink wool and knit cuff, k 1, p 1, three inches deep.

Collar: Pick up 48 stitches on each half of the neck and knit a collar, k 1, p 1, with pink wool, three inches deep; bind off loosely.

Sew up sweater and make two buttonholes on front shoulders, sewing buttons on the back portions. Face the shoulders with ribbon and fasten collar with hooks and eyes. The directions for the sweater just described may be changed to any desired size by decreasing or adding to the number of stitches given. Six stitches should be allowed for every inch, or more if one is a tight knitter. The best plan is to measure just how many stitches run to the inch.

FAD IS FOR JAPANESE.

Oriental Effects Especially Popular Just Now in Paris.

There is still much to be said on the subject of Japanese fashions, for Parisiennes are still faithful to the oriental craze. The mode is used with good effect in a costume of dark gray cloth intended for automobiling. The skirt and bodice are cut in one piece and set with a simple yoke of embroidered batiste, while the Japanese sleeves fall over undersleeves of batiste with detachable cuffs of lace and line. Over the dress is worn a very handsome coat of invisible stripe fancy worsted, simply designed, but extremely smart in effect.

The sleeves of the new coats, especially for automobiling, are growing larger, which is necessitated by the increased size of many of the new tailored sleeves. While outer wraps for tourist and general day wear boast but little trimmings, they can be made very fetching by the addition of a stitching of velvet on the cuffs of the sleeves or on the front of the collar. Gray and taupe are favorite colors for this purpose and the medallions are stitched under very narrow bands of silk soutache braid, or bias folds of the coat material. Among the modifications of the Japanese sleeves is one proceeding from an exaggerated armhole that reaches almost to the waist line, and instead of the loose open effect, the material is shaped to the waist.

LAVISH USE OF BUTTONS.

Are Seen on All Costumes in Infinite Variety.

Buttons are used most lavishly on bodices, sleeves, vests and skirts, and naturally there is infinite variety. Velvet covered ones are in every shape—oval, round, even square—and some are mere ornaments, while others are intended to button. A clashing, trimmed on one side with a row of buttons and on the other with cord ornaments or decorated buttonholes, is a feature of both skirts and mantles. This idea is used on a handsome but perfectly simple evening wrap of violet velvet, lined with pale mauve satin. The garment is circular and cut without sleeves, but there is an opening from the top of the shoulder to the bottom, through which the arm may pass. On each side of this are loops of purple and silver cord and large velvet embroidered buttons. The garment is closed here except for a sufficient space to allow the arm and hand to come out. Running from the shoulders a trimming of cords decorate the neck of the wrap, but there is no other trimming. The beauty of the garment lies in its form and the material used.

Red for Evening Wear.

Red has not appeared among the strong favorites for street wear, but some delicious tones of currant red are shown in the new evening gauzes; port wine is another tint that has countless admirers, especially among dark women with splendid complexions. The brilliant evequia and hortensia are more daring in their coloring and usually need toning down with some neutral tint. Sometimes they are marked off in squares of black chenille and the decorations contrived of black, cream and white lace, with probably a few touches of embroidery added, in which event they are extremely handsome and highly becoming to certain dark types of beauty.

VEILS OF MANY SORTS.

Season's Styles Are Unusually Beautiful and Interesting.

A whole chapter might be written about veils, which are beautiful and interesting to a degree. It may be said that the sort of veil which had a bold design running all over the face is no longer favored.

One dream of beauty is of Lierre, the net delicately spotted to the edge, where it is scalloped in a lovely straying design. Below this a plaited frill of the same delicate lace about two inches wide.

In strong contrast to this veil is the veil of heavy gun metal gray chiffon with a border of wavy design embroidered in heavy gray rope silk. A charming white veil in a material called chiffon but resembling silk muslin more is cross barred with a white thread and has a pleated frill around the edge of plain chiffon. This same plaited frill is found on plain chiffon veils of all colors.

Then there are the pale colored chiffon veils with hemstitched borders which have a rather large spot here and there in the veil and a design of spots or embroidery on the borders. In the way of a novelty is the veil of filet net dotted with small hollow squares made of tiny chenille spots which has as border a Green key pattern of the chenille spots.

A very pretty white chiffon veil has a woven border of graduated bands of pale blue and is spotted with black dots surrounded by a band of blue. Very fascinating are the veils with fringed borders.

The favorite automobile veil is of plain white chiffon, but one of the best shops shows a most conspicuous veil for this purpose of white chiffon with a deep border of green or dark blue and spots as big as a dollar to match.

Morning Glory Trimming Is Fashionable.

Lace and Chiffon.

The effect of this blouse is that of a jumper of lace worn over a guimpe of tucked plain lingerie material, but the waist is in reality made in one piece. The tucked body of chiffon forms a foundation for the jumper of filet allover and the suspender effect of the tucked chiffon set between bands of antique lace. The back of the waist is very much the same as the front with the exception that the jumper is higher at this point. The sleeve is very novel, indeed, being a skeleton of the filet over a puff of the chiffon, with a high pointed cuff and two finishing frills of plisse chiffon. A band of the antique lace is posed at the top of the high featherboned collar and edged with narrow Val.

MEADOW MICE ONE OF THE MENACES TO AGRICULTURE

Their Destructive Habits and Their Natural Enemies.—By D. E. Lantz, Asst. Biologist, Biological Survey.

In recent years the department of agriculture has frequently received complaints of damages to meadows and pastures by field mice. The common meadow mouse (M. pennsylvanicus and its various subspecies) is usually the offender in these cases, although the prairie meadow mouse (M. austerus) also causes considerable loss in the west. Both these mice work under the snow in winter, burrowing along the tops of the succulent roots of clover and other plants, and sometimes destroy entire meadows, which have to be plowed up and resowed. Such damage usually occurs where a thick growth of grass is left in the field in fall. Closely mowed or closely pastured fields are not usually badly injured by mice.

The meadow mice are destructive to market gardens. Strawberry fields are especially liable to attack, because of the mulch used to protect the plants and because of the animal's fondness for the succulent crowns of the plants themselves. These mice destroy seeds in the garden, hotbed, or cold-frames, potatoes in the ground, and many other growing vegetables. In the fall they destroy beets, turnips, carrots, parsnips, celery, apples and potatoes, when piled on the ground or stored in pits. The depredations may to a great extent be prevented by the careful burning of weeds and other trash which harbor the pests.

The destruction of corn and wheat in the shock by meadow mice is common, and growing crops—wheat, oats, barley, rye, and buckwheat—are often cut down and eaten. The damage to standing grain is most noticeable when it is nearly ripe, but fully matured grain also is eaten. Short pieces of the stems of grains and grasses scattered along the runways of the animals are conclusive evidences of the nature of their diet. In alfalfa and clover fields considerable loss is frequently caused by meadow mice. The ground is often littered with leaves cut from the plants. Stomach examinations of a dozen specimens of Microtus austerus captured in alfalfa fields during the summer of 1905 showed that their diet was almost exclusively leaves of alfalfa. When field mice occur in normal numbers, the losses are not serious; but when local conditions have favored an abnormal increase of the animals, the loss of crops is enormous.

Meadow mice have been known to almost wholly destroy large nurseries of young apple trees. It was estimated that the losses sustained by nurserymen near Rochester, N. Y., during the winter of 1902 amounted to $100,000. The animals usually inflict the damage by burrowing under the snow and girdling the tree just at the surface of the ground. Some species burrow below ground, and, like the pocket gopher, eat the roots of trees, thus completing their destruction.

In some cases older trees are attacked and ruined. The writer has seen many apple trees, eight to ten years transplanted, and 4 to 5 inches in diameter, completely girdled by the prairie meadow mouse (M. austerus), sometimes to the height of a foot or more above the ground.

The list of cultivated trees and shrubs that are injured by these mice includes nearly all of those grown by the horticulturist. The biological survey has received complaints of the destruction of apple, pear, peach, plum, quince, cherry, and crab-apple trees; of blackberry bushes, and of grape vines; also of the injury of sugar maple, black locust, Osage orange, sassafras, pine, alder, white ash, mountain ash, oak, cottonwood, willow, wild cherry, and other forest trees.

One of the chief causes of the recent great increase of the smaller rodent pests is the persistent destruction of the birds, mammals and reptiles that habitually prey upon them. This is true not only in America, but also in Great Britain and on the continent, where for years gamekeepers and even farmers have destroyed foxes, weasels, stoats, hawks and owls whenever possible on the plea that they prey upon and diminish the supply of game in the parks and preserves. In America the same opinion is widespread, and has led to some unfortunate legislation against species that are wholly beneficial to agriculture. In the investigation before the British board of agriculture relative to the vole plague in Scotland in 1892, the testimony as to a previous scarcity of carnivorous mammals and birds, in the districts affected, was almost unanimous. While the committee in its report regarded climatic conditions, not the scarcity of carnivorous birds and mammals, as the primary cause of the outbreak, they considered the latter as the most important contributory factor.

Among the wild mammals of the United States that are known to prey upon meadow mice are wolves, lynxes, foxes, badgers, raccoons, opossums, skunks, minks, weasels and shrews. The majority of these animals destroy mice habitually; and this service, together with their well-known habit of destroying noxious insects, goes far to compensate for the damage they do in other directions.

Among birds that feed on meadow mice are hawks, owls, crows, shrikes, cranes, herons and bitterns. Of hawks, the kites and the marsh, red-tailed, red-shouldered, broad-winged, rough-legged, pigeon and sparrow hawks feed upon them, some destroying large numbers of the two most destructive species, M. pennsylvanicus and M. austerus. Pine mice live mostly below the ground and are less frequently caught by birds of prey.

The habit of shrikes of catching meadow mice is well known, and most farmers have seen these birds in the corn fields at husking time, as they hover in the air or sit poised upon a fence or hedge ready to pounce upon every mouse that escapes from the shocks.

Crows destroy many young mice in the nests and sometimes kill the adults, and, no doubt, investigations will show that meadow mice form a considerable part of the diet of bitterns and herons.

Owls are especially efficient as destroyers of field mice, and all the species whose food habits have been investigated by the biological survey were found to feed upon these animals. In bulletin No. 3 of the survey it is recorded that of 39 barn-owl stomachs examined, 7 contained meadow mice; of 107 long-eared owl stomachs, 59 contained them; of 101 stomachs of the short-eared owl, 52 had meadow mice; 31 out of 109 stomachs of the barred owl, 6 out of 9 of the great grey owl, 4 out of 22 of the saw-whet owl, 18 out of 254 of the screech owl, 12 out of 127 of the great-horned owl, 10 out of 38 of the snowy owl, and the stomach of the single hawk owl, contained meadow mice. They were mostly the common meadow mouse (Microtus pennsylvanicus), as the birds were collected for the most part where this species is common.

The examination of owls' nests and of the curious pellets cast up by owls reveals much as to the nature of their food. Dr. Fisher has recorded the results of the examination of many pellets of the barn owl, and a few of those of the long-eared owl, with the following result: Six hundred and seventy-five barn-owl pellets contained 1,123 skulls of the meadow mouse; 50 pellets of the long-eared owl contained 114 meadow mouse skulls. This is an average of almost two to each pellet.

Next to insects, mice form the most important item in the food of snakes. Meadow mice are most easily obtained, but other mice, and, indeed, most of the small rodents, including ground squirrels, wood rats, prairie dogs and young pocket gophers and rabbits, are eaten. This important service of snakes in the interest of the farmer is not generally understood or appreciated, but an inherent and deeply rooted prejudice induces thoughtless people to destroy them whenever possible and for no other reason than because they are snakes.

The value of domestic cats and of dogs in destroying mice is well known, and many of these animals learn from experience to prefer the large meadow mice to the species found in houses and barns.

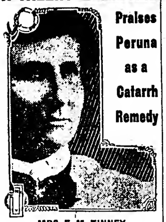
A TALENTED WRITER



Praises Peruna as a Catarrh Remedy

MRS. E. M. TINNEY

Mrs. E. M. Tinney, story writer, 325 E. Nueva St., San Antonio, Tex., writes:

"During 1901 I suffered form nasal catarrh, which various other remedies failed to relieve.

"Six bottles of Peruna, which I took, entirely cured me, the catarrh disappearing and never returning.

"I therefore cheerfully recommend Peruna to all similarly afflicted."

Mrs. Ellen Nagle, 414 4th street, Green Bay, Wis., writes:

"I have often heard Peruna praised and it is more widely known here than any other medicine, but I never knew what a splendid medicine it really was until a few weeks ago when I caught a bad cold which settled all over me.

"The doctor wanted to prescribe, but I told him I was going to try Peruna and sent for a bottle and tried it.

"I felt much better the next morning and within five days I had not a trace of any lameness or any cough.

"I consider it the finest cough remedy."

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

"Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less."

The fee in each case will be $10.00. Churches, schools and markets convenient. Healthy climate, splendid crops and good laws. Grain-growing and cattle raising principal industries.

NEEDS MUCH CARE

DRESSMAKING AT HOME BY NO MEANS A "SNAP."

Only Thorough Practice Will Give Proper Results—One Fault Particularly Common with the Beginner.

The proper cutting, fitting and finishing of a dress can be done only after thorough practice. Accuracy in the small details will do much to make the garment perfect; another matter which is often neglected is the careful handling of the parts, so that they are not stretched out of shape. Carelessness about this latter will cause the dress to fall into unsightly wrinkles at the seams.

The last-mentioned fault is particularly common among beginners, and when committed is very difficult, and in some cases nearly impossible, to remedy. Every piece of figured material must be cut out separately, and not on the double, even though the pieces be identical in shape, for this material seldom folds quite evenly. Velvet and all such pile materials should appear dark when held against the wearer, and checks and plaids match both lengthwise and widthwise in every piece. Stripes may either be cut on the straight and treated the same as plaids, or cut on the cross and the lines made to fit with each other.

It always pays to shrink cloth before making it up, for by this, later damage by shrinkage is prevented. Wring out an old sheet in water, leaving the sheet quite wet, however, and spread it out on a table; then lay the cloth, unfolded, on the wet sheet and roll up the cloth and the sheet at the same time. Let the sheet remain this way over night, then spread it out and press it smooth.

Cut out the pattern after it has been laid on the cloth, and mark the perforations out with chalk. With the help of correct patterns, some of the difficulties incidental to fitting may be avoided. However, very few figures follow the normal line exactly, and a certain amount of overfitting is by no means uncommon. Sometimes this is caused by the alteration of one part, thereby throwin another out of line. When this occurs the whole garment has to be refitted.

MODEL OF MANY USES.

Costume That May Be Made Available for Numerous Occasions.

The costume shown is a generally useful model that could be made up in soft broadcloth with handsome trimmings for calling or church, in soft challis or cashmere for house wear or in handsome silks for evening, with a vest of handsome lace. The surplice effect of the blouse is always becoming and this season almost all blouses are made with a vest effect. Some of the extra blouses are almost garish in their many materials and fancy vests, trimmings of buttons, etc., but these waists should be bought only by the woman with a large wardrobe and a fat purse. To wear a waist of these bright plaids every day would be deadly, but if you can have many and wear the gay one once in a while all well and good.

Seamless Sleeves.

A feature of some of the newest coats is the seamless sleeves, which made its first appearance upon separate blouses. While the fashion is very becoming to some figures it is decidedly unbecoming to others, and cannot be recommended where one has only one small outer wrap for general wear. The long sleeve is the invariable rule for motor coats, although it has a rival in the nine-tenths length, which stops just short of the wrist bone and is variously shaped according to the material and the general style of the garment of which it is so important a feature.

RACK FOR THE LETTERS.

Useful Article That Can Be Easily Made in Thin Wood.

A useful little rack for letters is shown in the accompanying sketch, and it is one that may be easily cut out and made in thin wood. It should be about 12 inches in length and 5½ inches wide. Its chief feature is that the slanting pieces of wood that hold the letters are decorated in front with picture post cards glued lightly on to them, so that they can easily be removed and changed if they should fade or become soiled. The little diagram at the right hand side shows how the slanting pieces of wood should be screwed on to the back. There is a triangular slip of wood at the base of each (A), and screws run through from the front and hold them at the proper angle. A glance at the sketch will make this clear. The woodwork should be stained green or oak color, and be left to get thoroughly dry before the post-cards are affixed.

CAN HAVE WIDE CHOICE.

Material for Dressy Costumes Are Many and Varied.

There is such a range of fashionable materials for the gown which is to do duty as a semi-dressy dinner frock, a calling and church costume, that one cannot go wrong in selecting any one of the beautiful weaves offered in the shops to-day. All the soft silks, crepes, lansdownes and the chiffon broadcloths come in a bewildering range of colors and shades and there are easily matched at the trimming counter in braids and handsome ornaments. The crepes de china and lansdownes are also attractively employed in dainty house gowns made up on simple empire and princess lines and trimmed in the simplest way with fine lace, ribbon and hand embroideries. Hand embroideries, by the way, are highly prized in this season's fashions, and the girl who can elaborate her frocks with her own handwork is indeed fortunate, for the dressmaker made embroidered frock is quite out of the question with the average girl, so excessive are the prices asked for such creations. On the other hand, one can have the dress made by some reputable establishment and supply one's own handwork as the design of the costume demands or add such finishing touches after the gown has left the costumer's hands.

Velvet Will Have Vogue.

Importers and modistes are of the unanimous opinion that velvet is to have a great vogue, and several tailored models have already arrived from abroad. The colorings are exquisite and reveal many new and lovely tones, says the Delineator for September.

Checked and striped velvets are shown made up into gowns intended for use at morning lectures and at luncheons. They are light of weight, supple in quality and show both close and open designs. The hair-line velvets have all the attractiveness of a corded weave but none of its severity. While it is quite true that velvets showing stripes and checks are no novelty, having been used last season, the beautiful color tones which the new ones possess promise to make them desirable. Where the hair lines are of contrasting color, such as black on sandstone, or white on the sapphire blue, they produce a shaded effect which is particularly pleasing.

To Make Fancy Guimpes.

In making the fancy guimpes so much worn by both adults and children, the material should first be tucked, or spaces left for the lace insertion, if any be desired, before cutting out.

The lace can then be basted on either edge—flat on the tucked material—and the fabric cut away from underneath.

Leave about a quarter of an inch on each side of the lace. Turn this back on the material and stitch on the edge of the lace.

Finish with feather stitching done with crochet or mercerized cotton, as preferred.

This makes a very pretty finish, and enables the garment to bear repeated launderings without the material fraying away from the lace, as it is apt to do in the case of most ready-made garments.

WHERE GRAMPUS IS PLENTY.

Mammal Abundant on Alaskan Shore and River Mouths.

This mammal, commonly known as the beluga in Alaska, is quite abundant in the summer along the Alaskan coast north of the Aleutian chain, being particularly numerous about the mouths of the rivers and frequently ascending the larger streams far above tidewater. It is migratory and its movements are regulated by the ice.

The numerous tidal creeks along the low flat coast from St. Michael to the Kuskoquim river, in which tomcod are abundant, are the chief resorts of the beluga, which comes in to feed on the fish. The Eskimos catch them with strong, large nets, heavily weighted, set off outlying points.

In rough weather, when the animals can not see the nets, many are taken, but in clear weather the catch is small. Some are speared, some shot, but unless the shot goes through the spinal column these generally escape. The flesh of a young beluga is tender and not unpalatable, but is rather coarse and dry. The fat, or blubber, is clear and white and is highly valued by the natives, who extract oil from it and use it in barter with the interior tribes.

The intestines are made into waterproof garments or floats and the sinews are very much prized. The small ivory teeth are carved into toys or ornamented pendants, while the skin is made into strong lines or very durable boot soles. The epidermis, which is nearly half an inch thick, when well cooked is considered choice eating, having a flavor somewhat resembling chestnuts.

IT WAS ALL RIGHT.

They Had Finally Made Up Their Quarrel.

They had evidently been quarreling before entering the Sutter street car at the ferry.

"I would thank you, Mr. Johnson, not to sit by me!" she said, icily.

"O, Lucy, I'll never go with her again—never, never, dearie!"

Gradually the harsh tones melted to soft, endearing phrases. The car had become very crowded. It stopped at Van Ness.

The conductor, wedging among passengers, midway of the aisles could not see the rear steps. With his hand on the bell cord he suddenly yelled:

"How is it back there now?"

"It's all right; we've made up again," impulsively responded the young man. "O, Willard, he didn't mean us!"—From the San Francisco Chronicle.

A River Wedding.

A very pretty river wedding took place at Bray, near Maidenhead, yesterday. The wedding party proceeded to and from Bray church by electric and steam launches gayly decked in green and white.

The bride's launch—an electric boat—was lavishly decorated with cherry blossoms, lilies and spirea, and when occupied by the bride, wearing a lace dress of honiton applique trimmed with silver embroidery, and the bridesmaids, in pale mauve eolienne, and bouquets of pink roses, presented a very picturesque sight. Five other launches followed. The wedding party started by water from West Court, in Bray Reach, and disembarked and re-embarked at the vicarage lawn. The contracting parties were Miss Mary Gosset Meyall and Lional Forbes Bridges. The church was crowded, and hundreds of people watched the bridal procession pass up and down the river.

Fire Burning One Hundred Years.

The Chequers Inn, Osmotherley, is a relic of the old coaching days, but it is now famed for its fire, which has never been out for more than 100 years and over which girdle cakes are baked.

This huge fire is kept continuously burning by peat or turf from the Yorkshire moors. An excellent tea is provided for visitors, the chief dainty being the girdle cakes. The peat glows like embers on a red tiled floor, the girdle being suspended from a bar above, the whole looking most quaint and picturesque. The exterior of the inn is most unpretentious and old world looking, as it nestles alone on the Yorkshire woods.

The Steady Job.

A certain man, who was recently reelected to a position that he held for many years, met a friend who congratulated him on his continued good fortune. To this the other replied "Yes, but it can't always last; I'll have to give it up some day. I feel a great deal like a man I knew who worked in one place for forty years and when discharged at last on account of old age, remarked: 'Well, when I came here I knew I wouldn't have a steady job.'"—Judge.

Man in Great Britain.

The editor of the Museum Gazette of London has made an attempt to estimate the length of time man has inhabited Great Britain. He allows 250,000 years. The period seems long, but the tendency of late has been to extend it, so that the historic period of some 2,000 years in Britain is a small fraction of man's existence here, as the whole human epoch is a small fraction of the world's history.

Too Late.

"I hear," said Mrs. Nagget, "that young Poorman, who married May Strong last October, has unexpectedly fallen heir to a million."

"Well, well!" exclaimed Nagget. "Talk about luck!"

"Yes, it is tough. If he had only gotten it before October."

KIDNEY TROUBLES

The kidneys are essential organs for keeping the body free from impurities. If they should fail to work death would ensue in very short time.

Inflammation or irritation caused by some feminine derangement may spread to some extent to the Kidneys and affect them. The cause can be so far removed by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that the trouble will disappear.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, swelling of the limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with

FAMILY'S SKIN TROUBLES.

Eczema, Heat Rash, and Scalp Affections Afflict Different Members, But Cuticura Cures Them.

"My wife had eczema for five or six years. It was on her face and would come and go. We thought we would give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. We did so and she has never had a sign of eczema for four years. I myself used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment some time ago for falling hair. I now have a very heavy head of hair. We used Cuticura Remedies for our baby, who was nearly bald when young. She has very nice hair now. She is very fleshy, and we had so much trouble with heat that we would bathe her with Cuticura Soap and then apply Cuticura Ointment, it would dry the heat up so much quicker than anything else. FORMER RESIDENT DEAD.

J. A. Grover Died at Missoula, Mont., Last Week.

The following from the Daily Missoulian, of Missoula, Mont., relates to a brother-in-law of Mrs. Chas. E. Boughton, and a relative of others in our city:

"The funeral of J. A. Grover will be held this afternoon at the residence of Fred Zeh, on the south side. The services will be largely attended, as the personal friends of the family are many and the Knights of Pythias and the Pythian Sisterhood will attend as lodges. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock.

The immediate relatives who are present in the city are the widow and George S. Grover, the son. Mrs. George Grover is with her husband.

George Grover did not know that his father was sick. It was late Thursday afternoon that he received news of the death of his father, and that was the first intimation he had received that there was anything wrong. He and his wife at once started for Stark from this city.

There were many expressions of sympathy yesterday for the family, and many friends sent personal expressions of their sorrow."

Mr. and Mrs. Grover recently celebrated their silver anniversary having been married twenty-five years in August.

One on Bill.

Crookston Times: A few days ago Sheriff Richmond of Roseau county passed thru Crookston with a man from Roseau who had gone crazy on the subject of hypnotism, taking him to the insane hospital at Fergus Falls. Mr. Richmond and his patient boarded the train here in the evening and Conductor Bill Clark was pulling it. When the conductor came around to take up the tickets the man began telling of his hypnotic powers and Mr. Richmond, who is known to Conductor Clark, tipped the latter the wink:

"I'll hypnotize you," said the insane man.

"Fire away," replied the conductor.

The man made several passes before Bill's face.

"Now you are hypnotized," he said.

The conductor looked the part as best he could.

"You're a conductor," the hypnotist said.

"That's right," replied his victim.

"You're a good conductor," went on the hypnotist.

"Right again," said the conductor.

"You don't smoke, drink, or swear at passengers. You are honest. You turn in all tickets and money you collect from passengers. In fact, you do not steal a cent."

"That's right," assented the conductor.

The hypnotist eyed him a moment then said:

"What an awful fix you'd be in if I left you in this condition."

Notice to the Public.

I have started up the Healy flour mill and am now prepared to furnish the famous "Gold Seal" fancy patent flour, and feed of all kinds on the shortest notice. Orders phoned to No. 87 will be given prompt attention. Farmers who desire to exchange wheat for flour will find it to their advantage to call on me. Will also always pay the highest cash price for wheat. Am prepared to do feed grinding every hour in the day. Give me a call.

Yours sincerely,

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by L. L. Zenor, a single man, mortgagor, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheekbank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of February, A. D., 1905, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 3rd day of March, A. D., 1905, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 35 of mortgages on page 332 and

Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable, and

Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of the said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, and

Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice, the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred Forty-three and 95-100 ($1343 95) dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The east half of the east half of section twenty-seven (27) in township one hundred fifty (150) north of range forty-three (43) west of 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey one hundred sixty (160) acres, be the same more or less in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 14th day of December, A. Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of forty-eight and 10-100 dollars with interest on said amount since the 20th day of February, A. D., 1907, at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum since that date.

And whereas, the terms and conditions of mortgage hereinafter describes provides that if default shall be made in the payment of said sum of money, or the interest, or any part thereof at the time and in the manner in said mortgage specified, the said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns are authorized to declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable;

And whereas the assignees of said mortgagee have declared the whole amount secured by said mortgage due and payable prior to the time of giving this notice.

That there is due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice on said mortgage hereinafter described the sum of nine hundred sixty two and 86-100 dollars, which said mortgage was duly executed and delivered by Andrew O. Letvig, as administrator of the estate of Mary Jane Letvig, deceased, mortgagor, to Andrew A. Olson, mortgagee, bearing date the 20th day of February, 1904, with the power of sale therein contained, was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota, on the 23rd day of February, 1904, at 4:00 o'clock p. m., in book 14 of mortgages, on pages 251-253.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Andrew A. Olson to Sabille Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings by a written assignment bearing date the 11th day of October, 1907, and recorded in the office of said Register of deeds on the 18th day of October 1907, at 2.30 o'clock P. M. in Book 15 of mortgages at Page 410; and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured mortgage, or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be forclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The Northeast Quarter of section numbered twenty five (25), in township numbered one hundred fifty two (152) North of Range forty five (45) West of the 5th P. M in the state of Minnesota less the Railway Right-away and other lands of said quarter sold during the life time of said Mary Jane Letvig, leaving a balance in said above described premises of 124 and 71-100 acres, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said County and State on the 7th day of December, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of nine hundred sixty two and 86-100 dollars, with interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorneys' fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of forclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

FAIR BIG SUCCESS

Large Crowd in Attendance at Saint Joseph's Catholic Fair this Week.

Tho Catholic fair which has been in progress the past three days has drawn forth large crowds and been a pronounced success in every particular, tho receipts notting the schools upwards of $1,000. The church was most beautifully decorated and tho booths contained many articles of valuo, all of which woro sold at pricos which added handsomely to tho funds of the society. Tho meals served daily by tho ladies of the church wero such as mother used to sot beforo us when we were but a hungry littlo urchin, and they were patronized liberally by our townspeople and rural shoppers. The heart of many a littlo miss was gladdened by the prizo bostowed upon her by kind and loving friends, while others who had labored equally as hard in compotition rejoice insomuch as "Wo helped reise the price and get lots of moeoy for the Sisters' school." Everything passed off pleasantly and tho people of tho community at large havo tho thenks of the Sisters and school for their liberal patronege and support upon this occasion.

Slumbered and Slept

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN EPITOME

IMPORTANT EVENTS AT HOME AND ON FOREIGN SHORES BRIEFLY TOLD.

Washington.

Secretary Metcalf has issued a statement estimating that $125,041,399 will be required for the naval service for the year commencing July 1, 1908.

Complete rural service in Carver county, Minnesota, has been ordered, effective on Dec. 1. The total number of routes in the county will be eighteen.

Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the army, has resumed his duties at the war department after a month's stay at a health resort in New York state. He is in excellent health.

The comparative statement of the government's receipts and expenditures show that for the month of October, 1907, the receipts were $59,028,215 and the expeditures were $53,554,357, leaving a surplus for the month of about $434,000. For October, 1906, the surplus was about $2,600,000.

People Talked About.

The duke of Abruzzi denies the report that he is engaged to Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Stephen B. Elkins.

Albert Trostel, one of the best known tanners of Milwaukee and the United States, died at his home in Milwaukee after an illness of several months.

C. W. Sanders, superintendent of construction and bridges and chief engineer for the Copper Range railroad, is dead of pneumonia at Calumet, Mich.

Rev. Daniel R. Lucas, a national figure in religious and G. A. R. circles, died suddenly at his home at Indianapolis. Dr. Lucas was one of the founders of Drake university.

Jefferson Polk, president of the Des Moines Pioneer Street railway and interurban magnate and multimillionaire, died at his home in Des Moines after a two weeks' illness.

James E. Maher has been appointed deputy clerk of the United States supreme court. Mr. Maher has been connected with the court for the last forty years and for much of that time has occupied the position of journal clerk.

Daniel Carrigg, widely known to the sporting fraternity throughout the West, died at Council Bluffs, Iowa, of Bright's disease. Twenty years ago Carrigg was proprietor of a big gambling house and was wealthy, but lost most of his fortune.

Crimes and Criminals.

Guy Condit, cashier of the First National bank at Kingfisher, Okla., attempted to kill himself by slashing his throat. He will recover. His accounts are correct.

Rev. D. W. Thompson, until recently pastor of the Le Grand Christian church at Marshalltown, Iowa, was arrested at Truro, charged with using the mails to defraud.

Six men were arraigned in the police court at New York charged with robberies from the Adams Express company, which it is alleged will aggregate between $30,000 and $50,000.

J. B. Cartwright, a liveryman of Culbertson, Mont., committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid. He was despondent. His uncle and father had set the example several years ago.

Following an indictment on a charge of attempted criminal assault, Alex Johnson, a negro, was taken from the jail at Cameron, Tex., by a mob of 500 men and hanged to a tree in the court house yard.

PLANT BREEDING WORK AT THE MINNESOTA EXPERIMENT STATION

The improvement of field crops by systematic methods of breeding was started at the Minnesota experiment station in 1892 by Prof. W. M. Hays, now assistant secretary of agriculture at Washington, D. C. The entirety of the problem was at that time hardly realized. The methods and the far-reaching results were simple and but little known. But as each year's work progressed new methods were achieved. They rendered the efficiency of the work more secure and greatly facilitated the detailed manipulation of seeds and machinery necessary to success. At first it was hardly supposed that varieties bred at the university farm would maintain their superior qualities when introduced into localities, north, south, east and west of the one in which they originated and were acclimated. The results, however, as hereinafter briefly stated, have very largely dispelled all fear in this direction.

The first "nursery breeding plot" plantings were made in rows, one or more feet apart, with seeds one foot apart in the row. When the plants were well up each hill was thinned to one plant. Thus each plant had an equal chance and comparisons between plants was made easy. This method was finally abandoned in 1898, for what seemed at that time and has since proved to be a far more satisfactory method. In this method the seeds in all breeding plots are planted in little plots (centgeners), one per hill, and the hills four inches apart each way. This makes a miniature field with conditions approaching very closely those of actual field conditions. A comparison of individual plants is here an easy matter and results more reliable.

The matter of breeding (in modern sense) is the selection of individuals possessed with characters of high quality and with the power of transmitting these characters in full value to the progeny.

In the row system first used the selection was based entirely upon the record of the individual itself. In the method now used the selection is based upon the performance of the progeny of the selected individuals. It is, therefore, apparent that in the former no account was made or could be made of the prepotency of the individuals, but in the latter case, by harvesting all the plants in the centgeners and ascertaining the average yield per plant a comparable measure is secured, by which the propetency of the selected plant can be ascertained. In short, to state the principles of breeding followed at university farm, it may be said that two laws are closely studied and used. These are the "law of variation" and the law "like begets like." To assist judgment in making use of these laws many data are recorded. With these data the first law enables the breeder to select the desired plants, while the second law is used after it has been proven whether or not the selected plants transmit those qualities or characters for which they were selected. If certain plants do transmit a high-breeding power, for instance, the seed from these plants is increased. Thus there has been obtained a pedigree stock or variety. The plant breeder and the farmer can rely upon its being superior to its parent variety or other common varieties.

In this connection it must be remembered that a highly bred variety of any plant must have more than "scrub" care if these improved characters are to be maintained. This means selection of seed, culture and soil fertility.

What Farmer Can Do.

It may seem that the average farmer could hardly afford to select or breed his own field crops, but such is not the case. There are many avenues open to him who will exert the energy and the thought necessary to the work; e. g., the fanning mill stands ready to separate the heavy, plump and sound seed from the poor seed and chaff, and the former is by far the best to use. Again a farmer can pick a few of his best heads from his field and by planting separately the seed from these, and increasing the quantity from year to year, obtain a strain superior to the common field. Once again, a farmer can by planting several hundred seeds in hills a few inches apart, and with one seed per hill, secure a selection of superior plants. With these as a foundation, improvement is rendered certain. It is needless to here point out the advantages a farmer may have by producing an improved variety. Such a work would require from three to five years perhaps, but would repay manyfold for the effort. Centgener breeding is not to be recommended for the average farmer.

One other class of breeding should be mentioned, but had best not indulge the average farmer. This is the crossing and hybridizing method of obtaining new stocks from which to select. Experiments conducted here show plainly that selected crosses (a progeny of two plants within a given variety) have greater power to yield than do the original stocks, also that hybrids (the progeny of two plants of different species or type) have greater power to yield than do the crosses. Since it takes from twelve to twenty years to get a hybrid secured, selected and typified, it is hardly wise to recommend such breeding practices to the farmer.

HYBRIDIZING.

To those who have spent years in plant breeding work marvelous results are not surprising. Time will bring about results that seem practically superhuman, but results already obtained warrant this statement.

A few of the results obtained at university farm will serve to illustrate the possibilities to be achieved and the immense value of such a work to the state.

h Estimated.

In 1899 the agricultural division at university farm distributed to farmers in various parts of Minnesota a new fife wheat, Minnesota No. 163. Two years later a new blue stem was distributed in a similar manner. In 1906 a new bearded wheat, a hybrid, Minnesota No. 188, was also distributed. Since that time there have been distributed two new varieties of oats, Minnesota No. 6 and Minnesota No. 26; a variety of yellow dent corn, Minnesota No. 13; a variety of barley, Minnesota No. 105; a variety of "seed" flax, Minnesota No. 25; and a variety of rye, Minnesota No. 2. These varieties are all improved by breeding and have met with favor in nearly every locality in which they have been grown. In the case of Minnesota No. 169 wheat, No. 25 flax and No. 13 corn the results have been exceptional. They have been successful and are highly prized in Minnesota's border states.

These varieties, if grown exclusively in all parts of the state, would add millions of dollars to the farm value of our field crops. Data gathered by the agricultural division show that the percentage increase in production of the improved varieties over their parents and the varieties commonly grown has been from 5 per cent to 25 per cent, the latter being that of No. 25 flax.

A Practical Demonstration.

It is ofttimes a very difficult matter to explain in a satisfactory way the fact that crop rotation and intelligent systems of cropping are immensely more profitable than continuous cropping to one class of crops. It is an indisputable fact that wheat grown continuously upon the same farm has proved a profitable practice. How long such a system of cropping may continue profitable is a question which years of experience only can solve. How much more or how much less wheat growing will net per acre when compared with a mixed farming practice depends upon a number of factors, but these cannot be here discussed.

At the Minnesota experiment station there are upward of sixty plots set apart for rotation experiments. There are very few duplicates, so for the most part each plot or small field has a new story to tell. On some of these plots the same crops have been planted each year for the past thirteen years. Thus one plot is designated for wheat, another for corn, another for potatoes, etc. In still other plots these crops are included in rotations which are applied. Thus on these plots there is corn the first year, wheat the second year, meadow the third year, pasture the fourth year and oats the fifth year, or some such arrangement of crops, then wheat again the sixth year and so on through the rotation. The best evidence of the comparative value of wheat or corn in rotation and grown continuously on the same land is offered when the crops are growing. The next best evidence appears in the figures which represent the results of the crops in yield.

The following table gives the yield of wheat and corn grown under conditions just described:

Wheat continuously	18.56
Wheat continuously and 4 pounds clover seed annually	21.8
Wheat in rotation with corn and meadow	28.8
Corn continuously	21.38
Corn in rotation with grain and meadow	59.9
Difference in favor of wheat in rotation	10.24
Difference in favor of corn in rotation	29.52

While these are only a few of the results, it may be reasonably asserted that similar results attend the growing of any crop in rotation and continuously. Aside from these there remains another profit-bearing enterprise in connection with the rotation which is practically excluded by the practice of one crop system of farming. This is stock raising.

Other demonstration work of this sort is constantly carried on at the experiment station. The best time of plowing, of planting, of manuring have been thus worked out and likewise many methods of farm practices, all of which add an untold profit and pleasure to farming.

TOO MANY SCHOOL BOARDS.

Town of Cove, Mille Lacs County, Is Having Trouble.

The town of Cove, School District No. 17, Mille Lacs county, is suffering from too much school board, and as a result the schools are closed and the district is in danger of losing its state aid next year. The attorney general has been asked to solve the problem for the district, as the conflict of authority between the two boards has resulted in completely tying up the schools.

The trouble grew out of a difference between two school officials, in which one of them sought to oust the other from office. The district took sides with their friends in the fight, and as a result the members of the old board of trustees resigned and new appointments were made. In the meantime, however, the old members withdrew their resignations and attempted to continue to act as the legal board.

This raised the question as to which of the two boards was authorized to appoint teachers, and with a prospect of having to appeal to the courts to get their salaries the teachers were not anxious to secure appointments from either board. The situation was further complicated when the county treasurer gave notice that he would refuse to pay any warrants drawn by either board until the question of the legality of the organization was determined.

C. S. Jelley, special counsel in the attorney general's office, is trying to find the answer to the problem and will probably suggest that the best way out of it is to have the two boards act together and agree on the appointments of the teachers and to have all warrants and all proceedings approved by the members of both boards. This would give them a temporary working basis for the operation of the schools and then quo warranto proceedings might be brought in the courts to have the questions judicially determined.

ACCUSED BY GIRL WIFE.

Bigamy Charged to Hubbard — Complainant Has Gone Back Home.

The deputy sheriff of Morrison county arrested Charles Hubbard in Brainerd on a warrant charging him with bigamy. Hubbard came to Brainerd about three months ago with a girl wife, aged fifteen, whom he married in Little Falls last spring. They quarreled continually, the police having been called in several times to restore order. About a week ago they had another quarrel and the girl left, threatening to throw herself into the river. She was found about two miles from the city by her mother, who came up from Little Falls. She took her things and went to the home of her mother in Little Falls, where she now is.

The deputy sheriff came up yesterday afternoon and arrested Hubbard on a statutory charge. According to the story told he had married a girl in Wisconsin several years ago and was so cruel to her that she left and returned to her parents. No divorce was ever secured and he married the girl in Little Falls. It was on the complaint of the latter that he was arrested.

When taken he was "hatching it" with the brother of the girl making the complaint. The brother went with Hubbard and the officer to Little Falls.

35 TAINTED COWS KILLED.

Since the enforcement of the recently enacted milk and dairy inspection ordinance at Mankato was begun 120 dairy cows have been given the tuberculosis test, and thirty-seven of these have been condemned. Thirty-five of the condemned cows were slaughtered in the presence of four members of the state sanitary board, several local physicians, dairymen, farmers and others, and the government inspectors at the packing house. A post-mortem examination revealed the fact that every one of the cows killed was afflicted with tuberculosis. Some were incipient cases and some were in the last stages, and might have been picked out as victims of the white plague by external signs. The slaughtered cattle were from six herds that have been supplying milk in the city. The persons present were convinced of the efficiency of the tubercular test, and several farmers expressed a desire to have their cattle tested. The local health authorities will continue to make tests as rapidly as possible, and condemnation will be enforced whenever sufficient numbers of condemned cows are got together. It is estimated that the milk of 700 cows is consumed in Mankato and all are to be tested.

WIFE ILL; HOME BURNS.

Farmers' Helpmeet Is Able Only to Drag Herself to Safety.

Ivanhoe, Minn., Nov. 12.—The residence of Ben Olsen, a prominent farmer of Royal township, burned to the ground during his absence. His wife, who was confined to her bed by illness, was practically alone in the house when she discovered that fire had started in the upper story. She dragged herself to the shelter of some trees, where she was found and cared for by some neighbors.

The commissioners of Freeborn county have just held a meeting and accepted ditch No. 9, as the work was all closed up by the contractor. This ditch cost those benefitted $11,943.44, and lies mostly in the township of Bancroft. It redeems a large tract of land and will permit many other tracts to be tilled.

Notwithstanding the currency situation and the depression in the prices of grain, the real estate movement in Lyon county has been unusually large the last two weeks. Seven farms, aggregating 1,280 acres, have been sold. The highest price paid was for 120 acres of land in Lynd township, and was sold for $60 an acre.

It was recommended that the next meeting be held in St. Paul in March at the time of the national meeting of dairymen.

Clyde Duffield, nineteen years old, of Redwood Falls, received a charge of heavy duckshot at point blank range while hunting near Wabasso. He was using his gunstock to push his boat and had his hand over the muzzle of the gun. In some manner the gun was discharged, badly shattering his hand and scattering shot in his arm and shoulder. It is thought that his injuries will not be fatal, but his hand will be more or less maimed.

Three Italians were killed and two injured in a mysterious explosion of dynamite which occurred near Coleraine. Several Italians were keeping bachelors' quarters in a log cabin near the mine. The cabin was dynamited at 4 a. m. Three were killed, two others injured and the remaining two escaped unhurt. The men recently withdrew from the Western Federation of Miners, and it is suspected that some of the more violent have had something to do with the affair.

The building and ditching of roads is a big item of expense in Northern Minnesota. The village of Spooner has built a road to old Spooner, a distance of a mile. Every rod that was laid cost not less than $6 and some rods cost $10. The village spent more than $2,000 for the job.

How a United States Captain Tried to Steal a Confederate General—An Interesting Event of 1864 When Lieut. Cushing was Commanding the Monticello, a Plucky Little Craft with a Plucky Young Captain—The Wife of a Rear Admiral Tells the Story.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

(Mrs. Schuyler Crowninshield, wife of Rear Admiral Crowninshield, by reason of her talents, is quite as well known to the public as is the distinguished naval officer whose name she bears. Following the success of her earlier books Mrs. Crowninshield has won still wider recognition in the literary field by her "The Archbishop and the Lady," and its attractive sequel, "Valencia's Garden.")

"The man I speak of was Lieut. William Cushing. God forgive me for calling him just a man. A gentleman; every inch of him! An officer, every inch of him! And a daredevil, flesh, blood, mind, heart and soul! Now, I happened to be shipmates with Lieut. Cushing when he commanded the Monticello in 1864.

"Well, sir, to get down to my story, Lieut. Cushing was commanding the Monticello in February, '64, and, of course, he was her cap'n. I won't go into the hackneyed talk of 'how we all loved him.' Do you know how old he was? Just 24, as I'm a livin' sinner.

"For some time we hadn't found anything to do, and the days had hung rather heavy on our hands. We was always lookin' out for somethin' to turn up, but though we were under way and at anchor, going in close and drawing off again, dodging around Frying Pan shoals and steaming up and down off Fort Fisher and New inlet, those wretched blockade runners would douse the glim and slip by us in the night, over and over.

The Monticello was not a very big boat, but she was plucky, and her commander was a match for her. One day I noticed there seemed to be something going on. Preparations seemed to be making for a landing party.

First we saw the old man get in the gig and pull over to the flagship, askin' permission, maybe, and then, along about night, I saw that there seemed to be some sort of consultation and talk among the officers. I asked the signal quartermaster what was up, and he answered me politely that I could go and ask the cap'n. Then I asked the orderly who was round the cabin door to run errands and messages. He told me to go right in the cabin and ask the cap'n, and probably he'd tell me all about it. Then I asked an afterguard-sweeper what all the rumpus was, and he said he was darned if he knew, but he thought they was gettin' ready to go a-fishin'. Well, I felt pretty well snubbed, and by an afterguard-sweeper, too!

"So I watched and waited and pretended I had work to do around the cabin. I went aft and hung around the port. I heard Cap'n Cushing talking with some of his officers, and I found that they were goin' somewhere, but from their talk I judged that if they were goin' a-fishin' it must be for something as big as a whale or a sea serpent. One of the officers said:

"'Cap'n, I wish you'd let me take charge of the expedition.'

"'Who would look out for the ship?' asked the old man.

"'Why, pardon me, cap'n, I could go in your place.'

"Then I heard Cap'n Cushing laugh—the sort of laugh that says: 'I guess you don't know me.'

"'No, no,' said the cap'n. 'You have your work to do here. It's a great deal harder to stay behind, and that's why I choose you to do it. I know I'm selfish, but I always was in a case like this, and you'll just have to put up with it. Orderly!'

"I heard the orderly come running aft.

"'Tell Acting Ensign Jones that I wish to speak with him, and ask Acting Master's Mate Howorth to come into the cabin.'

"Then I knew that he was in for something desperate, for those were two as plucky officers as we had on board the old Monticello. I couldn't really say with justice that they were the most plucky, for there wasn't a pin's point, it seemed to me, to choose between any of 'em.

"Well, I stood and listened. Of course I knew it wasn't right, but I was bound to find out what they were up to. I heard the officer who had been urgin' that he might go along rise and sigh and go out of the door. Later, when I crept back to my station, I saw him walkin' up and down, up and down and lookin' on the deck and shakin' his head, and I heard him say: 'Just my luck! Just my luck!' From this you can see how many skeery ones there was in the ship.

"In a moment Acting Ensign Jones was in the cabin, and shortly after Mr. Howorth followed him. The ensign was out of breath.

"'O, cap'n,' he said, 'I hope you're going to take me.'

"'Take you where?' asked the old man. I could hear the smile in his voice.

"'Wherever you're going, cap'n. I know something's up, sir. I can't say what—I'll—do, but, I'll—I'll—'

"There was silence. I peeked in through the port. There was Mr. Howorth standin', his mouth working sideways like a dingey in the trough of the sea, and actually, if you'll believe me, his eyes were full of tears. He might have known he was goin', and cryin'. Dang me, if I didn't believe I should boo-hoo over the rail, too, if somehow or other I didn't get onto that boat.

"'Of course, you're going,' said the cap'n, 'and now whom shall we take along?'

"The men's names were discussed. There's so and so, and there's so and so. Finally they mentioned me. My heart actually stopped beating.

"'Well, they're all good fellows,' said the old man.

"'Suppose we call for volunteers,' said one of the officers.

"'They'd all volunteer, every man Jack of 'em,' said the old man. 'No, I shall have to select some. The trouble is that those on board will feel it a personal matter if they are left behind.'

"I nearly put my head into the port and shouted: 'Take me!' but I knew that such a breach of discipline would land me in the brig, with no going ashore for a week, perhaps, so I crept back to the fo'c'sle and waited.

"By and by I saw the bos'n's mate come aft and call a man from below. Then he called another and another. But I didn't hear my name. As each man's name was spoken the rest looked down-hearted enough, but kept their eyes fixed on the bos'n's mate, hoping their's would be the next name. At last all were called. Then the bos'n's mate began to walk away, the men following him.

"'Oh!' I said, 'is that all?'

"'That's all, my lad,' said the master-at-arms.

"I tailed on to the line and walked up with the others. That's where I considered myself just a leetle smarter than the rest of 'em. The men were marched up to the mast, where the cap'n and the first lieutenant stood.

"'My men,' said the cap'n., 'I'm going ashore on a rather dangerous expedition to-night. Do you want to go?'

"'Aye, aye, sir,' said every man, and I among them.

"'Who told you to come, youngster?' said the bos'n's mate to me.

"'Don't send me back,' said I. 'If you won't, I'll give you all my tobacco for months to come.'

"'You can't bribe me,' said the bos'n's mate. 'You haven't got your eyes open yet. Go back to your quarters.'

"'What is that, bos'n's mate?' said the old man.

"'I'm only telling him that he isn't needed, sir,' said he. 'We have all that you called for. I've chosen the biggest and oldest and those who have had the most experience.'

"'May I speak to the cap'n?' said I.

"'No; get back to your—'

"'What is it, my lad?' asked the cap'n.

"I just gave one glance at the bos'n's mate. Now, wasn't that like him—our cap'n, I mean? I can see him now, hardly more than a lad, looking at me as if he was 50.

"'Let me go! Oh, do please, sir, let me. Oh, do! Oh, do! Oh, sir, please, cap'n, sir!'

"The cap'n laughed. 'The spirit of the ship!' he said.

"If it was the spirit of the ship, I knew who put it there.

"'Have we room for one more, bos'n?' asked the cap'n, turning to where the bos'n was ordering the boats lowered.

"'Yes, sir,' said the bos'n, 'if he'll stow himself in the bows.'

"'Very well, then, my man,' said the cap'n.

"While the boats were being lowered I ran below just to tell my gun's crew and crow over the rest of 'em, and was on deck again quicker than you could say Jack Robinson.

"We got over the side and stowed ourselves away. There were two boats, three officers and 20 men, and perhaps because I was so young the cap'n ordered me to get into his boat. We none of us knew what the old man was up to, but we had heard the word Smithville, and we knew that Gen. Herbert's headquarters were there, and the report said that there was about a thousand men under arms in the barracks. We didn't right understand it, but we knew it was all right if Cap'n Cushing said it was.

"I can tell you we were as quiet as mice as we passed the forts at the mouth of the river and rowed quietly up to the town. As we passed the forts a steamer was coming down the river. Her lights were extinguished, but we heard her paddle wheels and the throb of her engines, and presently the black mass loomed up just ahead of us. I felt the boat give a sudden lurch, as the cap'n ported his helm to get out of the way of the great thing which would have run us down as easily as I could crush a fly. When we had steered clear of her I heard the old man say: 'That was the Scotia. I meant to try her first if she had been at the wharf, but it would have been foolhardy while she was under way, and perhaps would have separated us from the other boat. I should like very much to call upon the captain of the Scotia. I shall try it, I think, when she returns.'

"The Scotia was a blockade runner which we had often hoped to catch and burn. And now that she was out of the way, I wondered what plan our commanding officer had in his head. As we pulled ashore I saw a big building looming up, which some one said was the hotel. There were one or two lights in it, and I wondered if it was full of confederate officers and soldiers, and if our captain expected to capture 'em with two officers and 20 men, all told.

"We got out of the boats, and the cap'n ordered the men to hide themselves under the bank. Some of us he ordered to come with him, and you may be sure I didn't stay behind. If there was going to be fun, I was going in for it. The first thing we did was to capture some negroes who were at the salt works.

"I heard the cap'n ask: 'Where is Gen. Herbert?' to which the men replied: 'Right up dah, sah, in de hotel, sah!'

"Cap'n Cushing then left some of our men to guard the boats. He said: 'I don't want too many. They would hinder me. I'll take you with me, Jones, and you, Howorth, and one seaman.' He chose, of course, a brawny old fellow who had been with him in various expeditions, but though I was not asked to accompany 'em, I crept along after, for I meant to be in it now, as I told you, if there was to be any fun. The others walked quietly up through the garden, and I followed. The first thing I heard was a window being pushed up gently. I stepped upon the piazza and looked into the room. Cap'n Cushing was already in the room and so were Mr. Jones and Mr. Howorth. There was a lamp burning low. A figure rose up in the bed.

"'Who's there?' said a voice.

"'Gen. Herbert, you may as well get up and come with us,' said Cap'n Cushing.

"'I am not Gen. Herbert,' said the man in the bed.

"'Not Gen. Herbert? Who are you, then?' said the old man, pretty sharply, too. Perhaps you can imagine the tone in which Cap'n Cushing said this. I never heard a voice so full of disappointment in all my life.

"'I am the chief of the engineer forces here.'

"'Where is Gen. Herbert?'

"'He has gone to Wilmington,' said the engineer.

"'Gone to Wilmington!' echoed Cap'n Cushing. 'Well, if we can't find the principal we will have to take one of his accessories. What is your name, sir?'

"'Capt. Reilly, at your service.'

"'Very well, captain. Get up, if you please, and dress, for you must go with us.'

"Just here there was a rush of some one down the stairs outside the door. There was a dash at the window and a quiet scuffle began and a general set-to, and then I saw some one jump off the end of the veranda and run out into the garden. I thought it might be the general, and I sprang out after the fleeing figure, but I looked in vain. I could see no one, the night was so dark. I heard only a rustling among the trees and shrubs and then the person dashed away into the woods near the house. I thought of pursuing him, but I now heard the rest of my party passing through the garden and out of the gate, and, thinking that anything else that I could do would only annoy and delay 'em, and that the person who had dashed out of the window had gone to give the alarm and turn out the whole thousand soldiers upon us, I decided to follow the old man and the officers.

I found out afterward that the person who had run away was the adjutant general, and he was so flabbergasted at being waked up with the noise that he really took to the woods and forgot to give the alarm.

"But, now, just think of a youngster like Cap'n Cushing starting on an expedition with only two boats and 20 men, rowing in past the forts, landing, capturing prisoners and going into the stronghold of the enemy with the purpose of capturing the general commanding. I thought of it as I walked down to the boats and I could hardly believe that had been the cause of our expedition. We went back to the boats and got silently in. The prisoner was, you may be sure, well guarded, with a pistol at his head. Had he cried out it might have been bad for us, but worse for him, for he would have dropped dead in his tracks before we took to our boats.

"When it comes to deliberately sacrificing your life for your country where nothing much is to be gained, a man hesitates. The prisoner hesitated and was saved. The sentry on the wharf was not 50 yards away from us, and we were about 50 yards from the Smithville fort. They were brave men, of course. No one ever belittled our enemy of the confederate army, and it was only that it never occurred to them what daring and dash Cushing possessed that the place was not better guarded. We got silently into our boats and floated down the river.

The men all pulled quietly and steadily. Not a word was spoken, but suddenly a light flashed out from Fort Caswell. A signal light! Ah, then they had discovered us? They had at least discovered that strange boats were in the harbor, and their shots rang out, but wide of the mark. We heard 'em splashing in the distance, but not one came near us. I heard the cap'n say that the papers he captured were not important, but he had the engineer officer in safe keeping enough, and he sent him on the first opportunity to Acting Rear Admiral Lee, at Hampton Roads, Virginia.

"Now, it happened that a short time after this some prisoners were to be exchanged. I was on deck, snoopin' 'round as usual, as the boat pushed off. I didn't ask to go in that boat. Exchangin' prisoners was dull work, for we were protected by a flag of truce all the way to the shore and all the way back again. I noticed few volunteers there were, and just those men were sent whom the first lieutenant picked out and ordered to go. As one of the officers was going over the side with the last instructions Cap'n Cushing called out:

"'Oh, by the way, will you be kind enough to hand Gen. Herbert my card?' The officer seemed surprised, but of course he turned round, saluted, and said: 'Yes, sir,' waiting while the old man fumbled in his pocket for a card. At last he found it. Then he felt for a pencil, and I had the bad manners to cast my eye over his shoulder as he wrote. The card looked like this:

LIEUT. W. B. CUSHING,
United States Navy,
Commanding U. S. S. Monticello.

"Then I saw him scribble over the top of his name 'Compliments of' and underneath the words 'U.S. Navy' I saw that he wrote the words:

"'Very sorry you were not at home when I called. Hope for better luck next time.'

"Now think of that from a lad of 24 to a general commanding a garrison!

"You see, sir, I told you the truth. I had no heroic deeds to relate of myself, for I only looked on and followed where a youngster led. [illegible]

A NEWSPAPER wit speaks of it as the vague peace conference.

WHY is Cleveland like Minneasota? That's easy. She can't get "too much Johnson."

ALASKA has gone for Taft. Somehow we expected Fairbanks to carry the polar regions solidly.

THE financial stringence will not be without its compensations if more people learn the value of a bank account.

UNTIL confidence is fully restored THE GAZETTE will continue to accept checks for subscriptions, job work, advertising or old newspapers.

THE Duluth Herald observes that Governor Johnson's Thanksgiving proclamation proves, among other things, that the Governor is a poet.

BOND issues spell bad news for the party in power. Grover Cleveland is still hearing curses for adopting war measures in a time of peace.

FRANK M. EDDY, former congressman from this district, has branched out as a temperance lecturer, and will make a tour of northern Minneasota.

THE St. Peter Herald states a great truth briefly: "Tear down the high tariff walls and the problem of curbing the combines will cease to be a problem."

HENRY WATTERSON says that the United States would be Mexicanized by electing Roosevelt for a third term. Well, there are worse governments than Mexico's.

THE Oklahoma people are going to keep out liquor until the state is twenty-one years old. There'd be fewer drunkards and ruined lives if this practice became more general.

FRANK M. EDDY says that drinking whiskey is the most foolish habit in the world, and Mary McFadden adds that the worst of it is that the drink habit encourages all the other bad ones.

IN the prospective political upheaval a whole lot of fellows formerly securely fastened to a government job are wondering what the future has in store. The panic of 1893 put 6,000 and 7,000 majorities in the dump heap, and there's likely to be a repetition.

WE have a faint recollection that President Cleveland was severely critizised by the opposition press for issuing bonds in a time of profound peace. And yet there was'nt anything else to do.

KIPLING's son has discovered a "white man's burden" in Canada, and beats the old man when it comes to weird and wandering word-painting. Listen:

"To wait in heavy harness
On fluttered folk and wild."

JIM NANAHAN gives it out cold that none but dyed-in-the-wool Bryan men will go to the national convention from Minneasota. The rest of us seem to be satisfied to let the state convention settle the matter.

THE New Ulm Review very tritely says that James T. McCleary, before making up his mind to again run for congress should not over look the fact that John Lind is still within hailing distance for a speech or two.

THE Stillwater Gazette observes that while it is unfortunate not many of the newspaper men are supplying the needed coin during the flurry that is just passing into history, yet they are doing their share to restore confidence among the people by explaining the true state of affairs and extinguishing all foolish and absurd rumors. The average newspaper man has'nt much coin, but most of them have a little common sense and fairly good nerve.

MARY McFADDEN, the Catholic editress of the "News and Comments" columns of the Duluth News-Tribune, says that "Pope Pius X is quoted as saying that American young people enjoy too much liberty. Some one has been misinforming his holiness. The virtue of women in countries where chaperones are a necessity is not as highly rated generally as that of girls who are given good ideals and are taught early the importance of taking care of themselves."

AN exchange says that if it is true that American girls who have married titled foreign husbands have taken abroad $900,000,000 of American money why not take a hint from the Bank of England and mark up the girls 7 per cent? But the proposition is dishonest. Any body who would mark up the value 7 per cent, or girls who are foolish enough to marry the titled profligacy and poverty of Europe should be promptly arrested for doing business under false pretenses.

EXCHANGE ECHOES

Appleton Press: John D. Rockefeller says he must "answer to the Almighty." We hope the Lord won't have the trouble finding him that the Ohio constables had.

Hallock Enterprise: There will have to be a show down pretty soon by the republican players in the presidential jackpot, for Taft and Cortelyou are both intent on raising the limit, and forcing President Roosevelt to lay down or show his hand.

St. Hilaire Spectator: There is a moral in the recent panic. Don't monkey with the trust magnate when he is skinning the public; it makes him ugly. Just take your medicine and say you like it, and maybe they wont take quite all you have saved.

Flandreau Review: A Sioux Indian named Isaac Buffalo has filed a petition of bankruptcy in the United States court at Sioux Falls. He gives his liabilities at $2,350, and resources as $85. This is but another instance of the Indian's adoption of the white man's methods of doing business.

Hibbing Tribune: While plotting its next great raid into the north country and dreaming of the spoils thereof, it might be well for southern Minnesota to take thought that in the last republican state convention it had a majority of but one vote.

Wheelock's Weekly: It is a rare and beautiful thing to see us editors unite enthusiastically in a resolution demanding that print paper and wood pulp be put on the free list—and then go home and write able editorials in favor of the protective tariff system.

Alexandria Post-News: There is quite a difference of opinion as to whether the duty on lumber affects the prices of the Canadian product. The best way to settle the controversy is for congress to place lumber on the free list and test the matter. It can do no harm and no one will object to the good which might be accomplished.

Stillwater Gazette: While it is unfortunate not many of the newspaper men are supplying the needed coin during the flurry that is just passing into history, yet they are doing their share to restore confidence among the people by explaining the true state of affairs and extinguishing all foolish and absurd rumors. The average newspaper man hasn't much coin, but most of them have a little common sense and fairly good nerve.

Albert Lea Standard: Governor Johnson is powerless to stop the talk connecting his name with the democratic nomination for president. The idea seems to have taken possession of the country that he can get more votes and carry more states than any other man in the democratic party, and that is why his name is on the lips and in the hearts of members of his party who are anxious to win.

MASTER RAIN.

STRIDING, striding over the sea,
Calming the rage of the waves goes be,
Lulling the moan of the mighty
main,
Assuaging Master Rain!

Marching, marching over the land,
Scattering wide with a lavish hand
Drafts for the thirsting seed of the grain,
Bountiful Master Rain!

Never, never a wanderer long;
Ever, ever a-brim with song—
A plaintive, pleading, pleasuring strain—
Musical Master Rain!

Welcome thou when the shadows sleep!
Welcome thou when the dreams are deep!
Bearing peace to peasance and pain,
Merciful Master Rain!

Old as the host of the hills of earth,
Yet as young as the soul of mirth,
Fain we are of thee all of us, fain,
Brotherly Master Rain!

HUDSON.

ROLL to the sea,
Bright river of the mountains!
Poured through the hills
From Adirondack crags,
Buoying the waifs
Of tributary fountains,
Rocking the fleets
That fly a hundred flags!

FORESTS are thine
And fair embowered islands,
Cities are thine
Whose towers touch the skies.
Curve grandly down
Thy goblin haunted highlands;
Lave, silver waved,
The vale where Irving lies.

DEEP breasted stream,
What tales thy hills have told me!
Playmate and friend
In days of youthful glow,
Now, as of old,
In crystal arms enfold me;
Take me again
Within thy cooling flow!

PLUNGING, I watch
Thy deeper waters changing,
Gold lighted green
To amethystine shade;
Strong armed and free,
Thy boundless bosom raging,
My heart in thine
Beats warm and unafraid.

Whose Witness?

When Rufus Choate was United States district attorney, three sailors were before his court for the robbery from their ship of a bag of specie, and one of them turned state's evidence as follows:

"Well, sir, arter feelin' round a bit, they ses to me, ses they; 'Come on, Jack, nu' jine us. It's dead easy, an' it'll make us all rich. So as if we do git ketched we can hire Choate, an' he'll clear us if they find the money in our boots.'"

One could never forget the seriocomic expression on that naturally grave face as Choate, amid suppressed laughter, in which both court and jury had to join, busied himself with the papers upon his table and, turning to the defending counsel, with as much dignity as the situation permitted, said, "He's your witness."

NATURE.

AS a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
Half willing, half reluctant to be led,
And leave his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them through the open door,
Nor wholly reassured and comforted
By promises of others in their stead,
Which, though more splendid, may not please him more:
So Nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings one by one, and by the hand
Leads us to rest so gently that we go
Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay,
Being too full of sleep to understand
How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

—H. W. Longfellow.

HE NEVER SMILED AGAIN.

THE bark that held a prince went down,
The sweeping waves rolled on.
And what was England's glorious crown
To him that wept a son?
He lived, for life may long be borne
Ere sorrow break its chain.
Why comes not death to those who mourn?
He never smiled again!

THERE stood proud forms around his throne,
The stately and the brave,
But which could fill the place of one—
That one beneath the wave?
Before him passed the young and fair
In pleasure's reckless train,
But seas dashed o'er his son's bright hair—
He never smiled again!

HE sat where festal bowls went round,
He heard the minstrel sing,
He saw the tourney's victor crowned
Amidst the knightly ring.
A murmur of the restless deep
Was blent with every strain,
A voice of winds that would not sleep—
He never smiled again!

HEARTS, in that time, closed o'er the trace
Of vows once fondly poured,
And strangers took the kinsman's place
At many a joyous board;
Graves, which true love had bathed with tears,
Were left to heaven's bright rain,
Fresh hopes were born for other years—
He never smiled again!

The polar quest! Life's offer to the strong!
To pass beyond the pale, to do and dare,
Leaving a name that stirs us like a song
And making captive some strange Otherwhere,
Though grim the conquest and the labor long.

Forever courage kindles, faith moves forth
To find the mystic floodway of the north.

—Richard Burton.

OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

WAY down upon de Swanee
ribber,
Far, far away,
Dere's wha my heart is turning eber,
Dere's wha de old folks stay.
All up and down de whole creation
Sadly I roam,
Still longing for de old plantation
And for de old folks at home.

All de world am sad and dreary
Eberywhere I roam.
Oh, darkies, how my heart grows
weary,
Far from de old folks at home!

All round de little farm I wandered
When I was young;
Den many happy days I squandered,
Many de songs I sung.
When I was playing wid my brudder
Happy was I.
Oh, take me to my kind old mudder;
Dere let me live and die!

One little hut among de bushes,
One dat I love,
Still sadly to my memory rushes,
No matter where I rove.
When will I see de bees a-humming
All round de comb?
When will I hear de banjo tumming
Down in my good old home?

All de world am sad and dreary
Eberywhere I roam.
Oh, darkies, how my heart grows
weary,
Far from de old folks at home!

—Stephen Collins Foster.

The other day a young man gave a reason for not dancing, the spirit of which might be made to apply to a good many failures in life. "I should like to dance," he said, "and I should dance, only the music puts me out and the girl gets in my way."—London Tatler.

WHY SO WEAK?

Kidney Troubles May be Sapping Your Life Away. Red Lake Falls People Have Learned This Fact.

When a healthy man or woman begins to run down without apparent cause, becomes weak, languid, depressed, suffers backache, headache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, look to the kidneys for the cause of it all. Keep the kidneys well and they will keep you well. Doan's Kidneys Pills cure sick kidneys and keep them well.

Joseph Gundlach, a cigar maker, living at 319 Broadway N., Crookston, Minn., says: I sincerely endorse Doan's Kidney Pills as the best medicine I know and a sure cure for backache and kidney ailments. For a considerable time I had suffered from pains in my back and through the loins and to this was added a disturbed condition of the kidneys. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and resolved to try them. They proved to be just what my case needed and soon the backache was gone and the kidney secretions were regular and normal. The results of the treatment were so satisfactory that I advise any sufferer from these troubles to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

Egyptian Obelisks.

The obelisk in Central park, brought to this country in 1880, was set up at the entrance of the temple of the Sun at Heliopolis, Egypt, about 1831 B. C., by Thotmes III. Twenty-three years before Christ the Emperor Augustus moved the obelisk, together with its companion, now on the banks of the Thames, London, to Alexandria, from which place it was brought to New York at the time designated above. Of Egyptian obelisks some forty-two are known, though many of these are broken or otherwise practically destroyed.—New York American.

A Lesson For Two.

There is a legend in a certain daily newspaper office which is instructive. Arrives an article in the composing room from a well known reviewer. Not a man there can read it. The "copy" is returned as impracticable to the editor. In a fit of impotence he sends it back to the writer. "Unless clearly written no further contributions can be received." The reviewer politely replies: "I have received back my manuscript with an undecipherable scrawl attached. May I request an explanation?" Editor and contributor now both employ a typewriter

"Hospital nurses have many peculiar requests made of them by their patients," said a staff nurse of an east side hospital, "and one of the funniest came to me the other day. In my ward was an old woman who had, among her other troubles, a badly swollen knee, for which the doctor prescribed an ice bag. I was preparing to put it on when the patient saw the bag and shivered in anticipation.

"'Must I have that cold thing on me?' she asked.

"I told her it was the very best treatment for her, but she protested still.

"'It is the cold of it I hate,' she said. 'If you must put it on, nursie, dear, please warm it a bit.'"—New York Press.

A Significant Prayer

Couldn't Toss With Them.

While the late Lord Goschen was chancellor of the exchequer under Lord Salisbury it was proposed to bring out one pound notes. Mr. Goschen, as he was then, was rather doubtful of the value of such notes, and he consulted a well known financier as to the advisability of the innovation. "It would be a great mistake," said the financier. "Why?" queried Mr. Goschen. "Well, you see, you can toss with a sovereign, but you can't with a one pound note," was the reply, and the one pound notes were shelved.—Bellman.

Strangely Worded.

Some of the applications for relief sent to the local committees by sufferers from bush fires are strangely worded, says the Melbourne Argus. Here is an extract from one by a widow: "I have in family four dairy cows, two pigs, a horse and three children, all these being by my first husband, and two goats in full milk and a baby by my second husband. All of the animals was lost in the fire."

A SONG TO LYDIA.

I KNEW that you were coming back!
Shall I tell you how?
Today a wild bird swung and sung
On a blossomed bough.
Far and high his greeting rose
Gainst the sunrise flame,
And all the notes of all his song
Tangled in your name.

I knew that you were coming back!
Shall I tell you why?
Today a new rose broke in bloom
'Neath the noon blue sky.
Rare and red it beckoned me,
Bending as I came,
And all the sweet of all its bloom
Only breathed your name.

I knew that you were coming back!
This is how I knew:
Bird and rose and earth and air
Gave me news of you.
Green leaves merry in the wood,
Glad waves on the sea,
And all the winds of all the world
Sang your name to me!
—Theodosia Garrison.

THE MAIDEN'S CHOICE.

GENTEEL in personage,
Conduct and equipage;
Noble by heritage;
Generous and free.

BRAVE, not romantic;
Learn'd, not pedantic;
Frolic, not frantic—
This must he be.

HONOR maintaining,
Meanness disdaining,
Still entertaining,
Engaging and new;

NEAT, but not finical;
Sage, but not cynical;
Never tyrannical,
But ever true.
—Henry Carey.

A WOMAN'S WISH.

WOULD I were lying in a field of clover,
Of clover cool and soft and soft and sweet,
With dusky clouds on deep skies hanging over,
And scented silence at my head and feet.

Just for one hour to slip the leash of worry,
In eager haste from Thought's impatient neck
And watch it coursing in its heedless hurry,
Disdaining wisdom's call or duty's beck!

Ah, it were sweet where clover clumps are meeting
And daisies hiding, so to hide and rest;
No sound except my own heart's steady beating,
Rocking itself to sleep within my breast.

Just to lie there, filled with the deeper breathing
That comes of listening to a wild bird's song!
Our souls require at times this full unsheathing—
All swords will rust if scabbard-kept too long.

And I am tired—so tired of rigid duty,
So tired of all my tired hands find to do!
I yearn, I faint, for some of life's free beauty,
Its loose beads with no straight string running through.

Aye, laugh, if you will, at my crude speech,
But women sometimes die of such a greed—
Die for the small joys held beyond their reach
And the assurance they have all they need!
—Mary Ashley Townsend.

MY BOOKS.

THEY dwell in an odor of camphor,
They stand in a Sheraton shrine;
They are warranted "early editions,"
These worshipful tomes of mine.

IN their creamy "Oxford vellum,"
In their redolent "crushed levant,"
With their delicate watered linings,
They are jewels of price, I grant.

BLIND, tooled and morocco jointed,
They have Zaehnsdorf's daintiest dress;
They are graceful, attenuate, polished,
But they gather the dust no less.

FOR the row that I prize is yonder,
Away on the unglazed shelves,
The bulged and the bruised octavos,
The dear and the dumpy twelves—

MONTAIGNE with his sheepskin blistered,
And Howell the worse for wear,
And the worm drilled Jesuits' Horace,
And little old chopped Moliere.

AND the Burton I bought for a florin,
And the Rabelais foxed and flead—
For the rest I have never opened,
But these are the books I read.
—Austin Dobson.

THE IRISH PIPES.

I HEARD the piper playing,
The piper old and blind,
And knew its secret saying—
The voice of the summer wind.

I heard clear waters falling,
Lapping from stone to stone;
The wood dove crying and calling,
Ever alone, alone!

I heard the bells of the heather
Ring in the summer breeze,
Soft stir of fir and feather
And quiet hum of bees.

The piper drew me yearning
Into the dim gray lands,
Where there is no returning,
Although I wring my hands.

There to the piper's crooning
I saw my dead again,
All in a happy nooning
Of golden sun and rain.

You piper kind and hoary,
Your pipes upon your knee,
If I should tell my story,
The things you piped for me,

The folk would leave their selling,
And blithe their buying go,
If I could but be telling
The things you let me know.
—Katharine [illegible]

DOUBT.

IN love, if love be love, if love be ours,
Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers:
Unfaith in aught is want of faith in all.
It is the little rift within the lute,
That by and by will make the music mute,
And ever widening slowly silence all.
—Alfred Tennyson.

CREED AND CROWN.

A CREED is a rod,
And a crown is of night;
But this thing is God,
To be man with thy might,
To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit,
And live out thy life as the light.

Would Suit Him Better.

Aunty—Willie, an angel brought your mamma such a nice new brother for you last night. Wouldn't you like to see the dear little baby?

Willie—No; but I'd like to see the angel.—Punch.

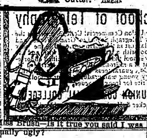
—Harper's Weekly.

The Next Time.

Friend—I sympathize most deeply with you on the loss of your wife. I regret so much that I was not able to attend the funeral.

Widower—Don't mention it, my dear fellow. Come next time.—[illegible] Rire.



Miss Brush—Is it true you said I was actually ugly?

Razor—I did.

OLD SORES FED AND KEPT OPEN
BY IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

Whenever a sore refuses to heal it is because the blood is not pure and healthy, as it should be, but is infected with poisonous germs or some old blood taint which has corrupted and polluted the circulation. Those most usually afflicted with old sores are persons who have reached or passed middle life. The vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to decline, and the poisonous germs which have accumulated because of a sluggish and inactive condition of the system, or some hereditary taint which has hitherto been held in check, now force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body. The place grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding tissue until it becomes a chronic and stubborn ulcer, fed and kept open by the impurities with which the blood is saturated. Nothing is more trying and disagreeable than a stubborn, non-healing sore. The very fact that it resists ordinary remedies and treatments is good reason for suspicion; the same germ-producing cancerous ulcers is back of every old sore, and especially is this true if the trouble is an inherited one. Washes, salves, nor indeed anything else, applied directly to the sore, can do any permanent good; neither will removing the sore with caustic plasters or the surgeon's knife make a lasting cure. If every particle of the diseased flesh were taken away another sore would come, because the trouble is in the blood, and the BLOOD CANNOT BE CUT AWAY. The cure must come by a thorough cleansing of the blood. In S. S. S. will be found a remedy for sores and ulcers of every kind. It is an unequalled blood purifier—one that goes directly into the circulation and promptly cleanses it of all poisons and taints. It gets down to the very bottom of the trouble and forces out every trace of impurity and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. changes the quality of the blood so that instead of feeding the diseased parts with impurities, it nourishes the irritated, inflamed flesh with healthy blood.

I was afflicted with a sore on my face of four years' standing. It was a small pimple at first but it gradually grew larger and worse in every way until I became alarmed about it and consulted several physicians. They all treated me but the sore continued to grow worse. I saw S. S. S. advertised and commenced its use and after taking it a while I was completely cured. My blood is now pure and healthy from the effect of S. S. S. and there has not been any sign of the sore since S. S. S. cured it.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of forty-eight and 40-100 dollars with interest on said amount since the 20th day of February, A. D., 1907, at the rate of 5½ per cent per annum since that date.

And whereas, the terms and conditions of mortgage hereinafter describes provides that if default shall be made in the payment of said sum of money, or the interest, or any part thereof at the time and in the manner in said mortgage specified, the said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns are authorized to declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable.

And whereas the assignees of said mortgage have declared the whole amount secured by said mortgage due and payable prior to the time of giving this notice.

That there is due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice on said mortgage hereinafter described the sum of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, which said mortgage was duly executed and delivered by Andrew O. Letvig, as administrator of the estate of Mary Jane Letvig, deceased, mortgagor, to Andrew A. Olson, mortgagee, bearing date the 20th day of February, 1907, with the power of sale therein contained, was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota on the 23d day of February, 1907, at [illegible] o'clock p. m., in book 14 of mortgages, on pages 252-253.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Andrew A. Olson to Sabille Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings by a written assignment bearing date the 11th day of October, 1907, and recorded in the office of said Register of deeds on the 18th day of October 1907, at 2:30 o'clock P. M. in Book [illegible] [illegible] proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: The Northeast Quarter of section numbered twenty-five (25), in township numbered one hundred [illegible] ([illegible]) North, Range [illegible] ([illegible]) west of the 5th P. M. in the state of Minnesota less the Railway Right-away and other lands of said quarter sold during the life time of said Mary Jane Letvig, leaving a balance in said above described premises of 124 and 71-100 acres, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said County and State, on the 7th day of December, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of [illegible] hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, with interest, and taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorneys' fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of forclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

October 23d, 1907.

D., 1905, at [illegible] o'clock [illegible] in Book 35 of mortgages on page 332 and

Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable, and

Whereas under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained the said mortgagee and holder of the said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, and [illegible] claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred Forty-three and 95-100 ($1343.95) dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The east half of the east half of section twenty-seven (27) in township one hundred fifty (150) North of range forty-three (43) west of 5th Principal Meridian, containing according to the United States survey one hundred sixty (160) acres, be the same more or less in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments [illegible]

Wanted Hot Ice Bag.

"Hospital nurses have many peculiar requests made of them by their patients," said a staff nurse of an east side hospital, "and one of the funniest came to me the other day. In my ward was an old woman who had among her other troubles a badly swollen knee, for which the doctor prescribed an ice bag. I was preparing to put it on when my patient saw the bag and shivered in anticipation.

"'Must I have that cold thing on me?' she asked.

"I told her it was the very best treatment for her, but she protested still.

"'It is the cold of it I hate,' she said. 'If you must put it on, nursie, dear, please warm it a bit.'"—New York Press.

A Significant Prayer

Couldn't Toss With Them.

While the late Lord Goschen was chancellor of the exchequer under Lord Salisbury it was proposed to bring out one pound notes. Mr. Goschen, as he was then, was rather doubtful of the value of such notes, and he consulted a well known financier as to the advisability of the innovation. "It would be a great mistake," said the financier. "Why?" queried Mr. Goschen. "Well, you see, you can toss with a sovereign, but you can't with a one pound note," was the reply, and the one pound notes were shelved.—Bellman.

Strangely Worded.

Some of the applications for relief sent to the local committees by sufferers from bush fires are strangely worded, says the Melbourne Argus. Here is an extract from one by a widow: "I have in family four dairy cows, two pigs, a horse and three children, all these being by my first husband, and two goats in full milk and a baby by my second husband. All of the animals was lost in the fire."

A SONG TO LYDIA.

I KNEW that you were coming back!
Shall I tell you how?
Today a wild bird swung and sung
On a blossomed bough.
Far and high his greeting rose
'Gainst the sunrise flame,
And all the notes of all his song
Tangled in your name.

I knew that you were coming back!
Shall I tell you why?
Today a new rose broke in bloom
'Neath the noon blue sky.
Rare and red it beckoned me,
Bending as I came,
And all the sweet of all its bloom
Only breathed your name.

I knew that you were coming back!
This is how I knew:
Bird and rose and earth and air
Gave me news of you.
Green leaves merry in the wood,
Glad waves on the sea,
And all the winds of all the world
Sang your name to me!

A WOMAN'S WISH.

WOULD I were lying in a field of clover,
Of clover cool and soft, and soft and sweet,
With dusky clouds on deep skies hanging over,
And scented silence at my head and feet.

Just for one hour to slip the leash of worry
In eager haste from Thought's impatient neck
And watch it coursing, in its heedless hurry
Disdaining wisdom's call or duty's beck!

Ah, it were sweet where clover clumps are meeting
And daisies hiding, so to hide and rest;
No sound except my own heart's steady beating,
Rocking itself to sleep within my breast.

Just to lie there, filled with the deeper breathing
That comes of listening to a wild bird's song!
Our souls require at times this full unsheathing—
All swords will rust if scabbard-kept too long.

And I am tired—so tired of rigid duty,
So tired of all my tired hands find to do!
I yearn, I faint, for some of life's free beauty,
Its loose beads with no straight string running through.

Aye, laugh, if you will, at my crude speech,
But women sometimes die of such a greed—
Die for the small joys held beyond their reach
And the assurance they have all they need!

—Mary Ashley Townsend.

MY BOOKS.

THEY dwell in an odor of camphor,
They stand in a Sheraton shrine,
They are warranted "early editions,"
These worshipful tomes of mine.

IN their creamy "Oxford vellum,"
In their redolent "crushed levant,"
With their delicate watered linings,
They are jewels of price, I grant.

BLIND tooled and morocco jointed,
They have Zaehnsdorf's daintiest dress;
They are graceful, attenuate, polished,
But they gather the dust no less.

FOR the row that I prize is yonder,
Away on the unglazed shelves,
The bulged and bruised octavos,
The dear and dumpy twelves—

MONTAIGNE with his sheepskin blistered,
And Howell the worse for wear,
And the worm drilled Jesuit's Horace,
And little old chopped Moliere,

AND the Burton I bought for a florin,
And the Rabelais foxed and flea'd—
For the rest I have never opened,
But these are the books I read.

THE IRISH PIPES.

I HEARD the piper playing,
The piper old and blind,
And knew its secret saying—
The voice of the summer wind.

I heard clear waters falling,
Lapping from stone to stone;
The wood dove crying and calling,
Ever alone, alone!

I heard the bells of the heather
Ring in the summer breeze,
Soft stir of fir and feather
And quiet hum of bees.

The piper drew me yearning
Into the dim gray lands
Where there is no returning,
Although I wring my hands.

There to the piper's crooning
I saw my dead again,
All in a happy nooning
Of golden sun and rain.

You piper kind and hoary,
Your pipes upon your knee,
If I should tell my story
The things you piped for me,

The folk would leave their sellin
And bid their buying go,
If I could but be telling
The things you let me know.

OLD SORES FED AND KEPT OPEN
BY IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

Whenever a sore refuses to heal it is because the blood is not pure and healthy, as it should be, but is infected with poisonous germs or some old blood taint which has corrupted and polluted the circulation. Those most usually afflicted with old sores are persons who have reached or passed middle life. The vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to decline, and the poisonous germs which have accumulated because of a sluggish and inactive condition of the system, or some hereditary taint which has hitherto been held in check, now force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body. The place grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding tissue until it becomes a chronic and stubborn ulcer, fed and kept open by the impurities with which the blood is saturated. Nothing is more trying and disagreeable than a stubborn, non-healing sore. The very fact that it resists ordinary remedies and treatments is good reason for suspicion; the same germ-producing cancerous ulcers is back of every old sore, and especially is this true if the trouble is an inherited one. Washes, salves, nor indeed anything else, applied directly to the sore, can do any permanent good; neither will removing the sore with caustic plasters or the surgeon's knife make a lasting cure. If every particle of the diseased flesh were taken away another sore would come, because the trouble is in the blood, and the BLOOD CANNOT BE CUT AWAY. The cure must come by a thorough cleansing of the blood. In S. S. S. will be found a remedy for sores and ulcers of every kind. It is an unequalled blood purifier—one that goes directly into the circulation and promptly cleanses it of all poisons and taints. It gets down to the very bottom of the trouble and forces out every trace of impurity and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. changes the quality of the blood so that instead of feeding the diseased parts with impurities, it nourishes the irritated, inflamed flesh with healthy blood. Then the sore begins to heal, new flesh is formed, all pain and inflammation leaves, the place scabs over, and when S. S. S. has purified the blood the sore is permanently cured. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Write for our special book on sores and ulcers and any other medical advice you desire. We make no charge for the book or advice.

I was afflicted with a sore on my face of four years' standing. It was a small pimple at first but it gradually grew larger and worse in every way until I became alarmed about it and consulted several physicians. They all treated me but the sore continued to grow worse. I saw S. S. S. advertised and commenced its use and after taking it a while I was completely cured. My blood is now pure and healthy from the effect of S. S. S., and there has not been any sign of the sore since S. S. S. cured it.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of forty eight and 40-100 dollars with interest on said amount since the 20th day of February, A. D. 1907, at the rate of 5½ per cent per annum since that date.

And whereas the terms and conditions of mortgage hereinafter described provides that if default shall be made in the payment of said sum of money, or the interest, or any part thereof at the time and in the manner in said mortgage specified, the said mortgagee, his heirs, executors and assigns are authorized to declare the whole amount secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable:

And whereas the assignees of said mortgagee have declared the whole amount secured by said mortgage due and payable prior to the time of giving this notice.

That there is due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice on said mortgage hereinafter described the sum of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, which said mortgage was duly executed and delivered by Andrew O. Letvig, as administrator of the estate of Mary Jane Letvig, deceased, mortgagor, to Andrew A. Olson, mortgagee, bearing date the 20th day of February, 1904 with the power of sale therein contained, was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota, on the 23rd day of February, 1904, at 4:00 o'clock p. m., in book 14 of mortgages, on pages 251-253.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Andrew A. Olson to Sabille Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings by a written assignment bearing date the 11th day of October, 1907, and recorded in the office of said Register of deeds on the 15th day of October 1907, at 2:30 o'clock P. M. in Book 15 of mortgages at Page 410; and no action or proceedings having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be forclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The Northeast Quarter of section numbered twenty five (25), in township numbered one hundred fifty two (152) North of Range forty five (45) West of the 5th P. M in the state of Minnesota less the Railway Right-away and other lands of said quarter sold during the life time of said Mary Jane Letvig, leaving a balance in said above described premises of 124 and 71-100 acres, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the Conrt House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said County and State on the 7th day of December, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of nine hundred sixty-two and 86-100 dollars, with interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorneys' fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated October 23d, 1907.

D., 1903, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 35 of mortgages on page 112 and

Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable, and

Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of the said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, and

Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred Forty-three and 95-100 ($1343.95) dollars, and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, namely: The east half of the east half of section twenty-seven (27) in township one hundred fifty (150) north of range forty-three (43) west of 5th principal meridian, containing according to the United States survey one hundred sixty (160) acres, be the same more or less in the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesote, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 14th day of December, A. D., 1907, at eleven o'clock a. m., on that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt of one thousand three hundred forty three and 95-100 ($1343.95) dollars, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy five ($75.00) dollars attorney's fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

NIAGARA.

THE thoughts are strange that crowd into my brain
While I look upward to thee! It would seem
As if God pour'd thee from his hollow hand
And hung his bow upon thine awful front
And spoke in that loud voice which seem'd to him
Who dwelt in Patmos for his Saviour's sake
"The sound of many waters," and had bade
Thy flood to chronicle the ages back
And notch his centuries in the eternal rocks.

Deep calleth unto deep—and what are we
That hear the question of that voice sublime?
Oh, what are all the notes that ever rung
From war's vain trumpet by thy thundering side?
Yea, what is all the riot man can make
In his short life to thine unceasing roar?
And yet, bold babbler, what art thou to him
Who drown'd the world and heap'd the waters far
Above its loftiest mountains? A light wave,
That breaks and whispers of his Maker's might!

—John G. C. Brainard.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

I AM dying, Egypt, dying!
Ebbs the crimson life tide fast,
And the dark Plutonian shadows
Gather on the evening blast.
Let thine arm, O queen, enfold me;
Hush thy sobs and bow thine ear;
Listen to the great heart secrets
Thou, and thou alone, must hear.

Though my scarred and veteran legions
Bear their eagles high no more
And my wrecked and scattered galleys
Strew dark Actium's fatal shore,
Though no glittering guards surround me
Prompt to do their master's will,
I must perish like a Roman—
Die the great triumvir still.

Let not Caesar's servile minions
Mark the lion thus made low.
'Twas no foeman's arm that felled him,
'Twas his own that struck the blow;
His, who, pillowed on thy bosom,
Turned aside from glory's ray—
His, who, drunk with thy caresses,
Madly threw a world away.

Should the base plebeian rabble
Dare assail my name at Rome,
Where the noble spouse, Octavia,
Weeps within her widowed home,
Seek her; say the gods bear witness,
Altars, augurs, circling wings,
That her blood, with mine commingled,
Yet shall mount the thrones of kings.

And for thee, star eyed Egyptian,
Glorious sorceress of the Nile,
Light the path of Stygian horrors
With the splendors of thy smile;
Give the Caesar crowns and arches,
Let his blood the laurel twine;
I can scorn the senate's triumphs,
Triumphing in love like mine.

I am dying, Egypt, dying!
Hark! The insulting foeman's cry,
They are coming. Quick, my falchion;
Let them front me ere I die.
Ah, no more amid the battle
Shall my heart exulting swell.
Isis and Osiris guard thee—
Cleopatra, Rome, farewell!

—General W. H. Lytle.

SCYTHE SONG.

MOWERS, weary and brown and blithe,
What is the word methinks ye know,
Endless overword that the scythe
Sings to the blades of the grass below?
Scythes that swing in the grass and clover,
Something, still, they say as they pass;
What is the word that, over and over,
Sings the scythe to the flowers and grass?

HUSH, ah, hush, the scythes are saying,
Hush and heed not, and fall asleep;
Hush, they say to the grasses swaying;
Hush, they sing to the clover deep!
Hush—'tis the lullaby Time is singing—
Hush and heed not, for all things pass!
Hush, ah, hush! And the scythes are swinging
Over the clover, over the grass!

—Andrew Lang.

THERE IS NO UNBELIEF.

THERE is no unbelief.
Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever sees 'neath winter's field of snow
The silent harvests of the future grow
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says "Tomorrow," "The unknown,"
"The future," trusts the power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when eyelids close
And dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

There is no unbelief.
And day by day and night, unconsciously,
The heart lives by that faith the lips deny.
God knoweth why.

—Edward Bulwer Lytton.

CONSOLATION.

WE sigh for days that are no more,
We mourn the loss of passions dead;
We sing the threnodies of yore
And weep the tear of pleasures fled.

Yet o'er the pathways of today
Some lingering roses still may lean,
And where our doleful footsteps stray
Sweet flowers be springing, all unseen.

Alert, the ear may catch the trill
Of bird song caroled in the tree,
And voices from the air to fill
The soul with present ecstasy.

Above the dreaming, did we hear
The sterner tone of duty's call
To sympathy with things anear
That wait our joyance more than all—

Soon would we breathe the purer thought
That sets the stagnant pulse amove,
And to our lifted hands, unsought,
Will come the answering touch of love!

—John Troland.

AN ENCOUNTER.

WHO cares for the burden, the night and the rain,
And the steep, long, lonesome road,
When at last through the darkness a light shines plain,
When a voice calls hail, and a friend draws rein
With an arm for the stubborn load?

THOUGH his way lie over the prairies green
And mine up the sunrise hill,
Though no more in my path may his light be seen
And I never may travel the leagues between,
His succor aids me still.

FOR life is the chance of a friend or two
This side of the journey's goal,
Though the world be a desert the long night through.
Yet the gay flowers bloom and the sky grows blue
When a soul salutes a soul.

—Harriet Monroe.

THE HAPPY KING.

THE king of Spain is happy—not because he wears a crown;
Not because he walks on velvet and his paths are shod with down;
Not because he wields a scepter and is greeted as "Your grace"
By the silver gartered gentlemen of high and haughty place;
Not because the masses greet him with their glad "Long live the king,"
For in these jocund voices often sounds the traitor's ring!
The king of Spain is happy just because in dreams of rest
He saw a little baby dreaming on a mother's breast!

The king of Spain is happy, as all kings of men are glad
When the household rings with revel of the lips of Little Lad,
When babyhood in blossom pours the wonder of its bloom
Through the palace and the hovel like a rose of old perfume;
The king of Spain is happy that a little life in glee
Has come to hear the dreamy song and dance upon his knee,
And grow in strength around him and go forth with sword in hand
To keep the truce of kingship for the glory of the land!

The king of Spain is happy—not because his phalanx led
On the fields of splendid battle, treading down the kingly dead;
Not because his banners glistened o'er the ramparts of the foe
And there came a wind of wailing from the lips that wept in woe;
Not because he heard the trumpets waken on the hills of morn
The triumph of the pennants that his conquering hosts had borne:
The king of Spain is happy that the dawn of love has smiled,
And the tender hand that leads him is the hand of Little Child!

—Baltimore Sun.

THE SUNRISE NEVER FAILED US YET.

UPON the sadness of the sea
The sunset broods regretfully;
From the far, lonely spaces slow
Withdraws the wistful afterglow.

SO out of life the splendor dies,
So darken all the happy skies,
So gathers twilight, cold and stern,
But overhead the planets burn.

AND up the east another day
Shall chase the bitter dawn away.
What though our eyes with tears be wet?
The sunrise never failed us yet.

THE blush of dawn may yet restore
Our light and hope and joy once more.
Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget
That sunrise never failed us yet.

—Celia Thaxter.

THE LAND OF EVENING.

DOWN to lands of evening, where the little shadows fall,
Down to lands of evening when the bells of sunset call,
Down to lands of evening from the workhouse of the day,
Oh, lovely are the roses scattered all along the way!

Down to lands of evening, all so sweet and all so still,
The dew upon the meadows and the blue upon the hill;
Down to lands of evening with a love song in the breast,
And little rosy songsters waiting in the sweet home nest!

Down to lands of evening from the roaring traffic loom,
Dreaming through the buttercups and dancing through the gloam;
Down to lands of evening from the half forgotten strife,
To the little sweetheart mother and the bloom of baby life!

—Anonymous.

CROSS PURPOSES.

I LAID my plans with care
And meant to win and wear,
Despite the din and frown,
A fadeless laurel crown;
To carve my name deep, bold,
Upon the mount of gold.

I SEE within your eyes
An unconcealed surprise.
Sneer not, nor wonder why,
Dared I to aim so high.
I did not fail. Love came,
And I deserted fame!

—Times-Democrat.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

WHAT love do I bring you? The earth
Full of love were far lighter,
The great hollow sky full of love
Somewhat slighter.

EARTH full and heaven full were less
Than the full measure given—
Nay, say a heart full—the heart
Holds earth and heaven!

—Harriet Prescott Spofford.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Telegraphic Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and other business offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All the Fargo banks employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers and stenographers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement by business men.

Our Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk, or bookkeeper. The new course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by the Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high-grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

A Telegraphic and Railroad Course (under the direction of an old train dispatcher) furnishes operators and station agents for the G. N., N. P., Milwaukee and Soo roads. The train wires run into the school, all their blanks are furnished and R. R. auditors lecture and give instruction on R. R. accounting. The roads guarantee positions to all D. B. C. graduates.

I ain't feeling well today,
 Somthing wrong I must say,
Come to think of it, that's right,
 I forgot my Rocky Mountain tea
  last night.—W.A. Schreiter.

Our merchants are receiving large consignments of goods suitable for the holiday trade, and it is quite evident Santa Claus expects to make Red Lake Falls his headquarters this year.

Constipation, indigestion drive away appetite, and make you weak and sick. Hollister's Rocky Mountain tea restores the appetite, drives away disease, builds up the sysem 35 cents, tea or tablets. W. A Schreiter.

Parties cutting ice on the river should see to it that a fence is put up around the hole as it is not only dangerous to any who might be skating in that vicinity, but such an act is against the laws of the state. Due caution should be taken before some life is lost by drowning.

Harvesting in this neck o' woods is a thing of the past for this year, but the farmers are at a loss to know just what to do with their grain. Some are holding their wheat for a higher price, while others are taking the bull by the horns and using their own best judgment about the matter.

Last Saturday was "coffee day" at E. Chatel's Cash Grocery and it proved a great success in every particular. A demonstrator from the house of G. H. Conrad Co. was here and served hot coffee to the thirsty throng who flocked thither all day long for a cup of their most delicious brand of coffee. As a result of the "coffee spread" Mr. Chatel reports an exceptionally large sale on coffee, a fact we a pleased to note.

Next Thursday we will be called upon to give thanks for the many favors bestowed upon us during the past year, and while enjoying a sumptuous feast of roast turkey, cranberry sauce and mince pie, let us not forget the less fortunate and in some way seek to make them feel that the time has not been idly spent, even though the year has not been the most prosperous, but to hope that the future might be one of great joy and blessing to them.

Have You Chosen Your Winter Apparel ? ?

If not, think these facts over

IT'S worth something to choose garments where there's nothing but best quality to choose from; and plenty of it. If you are undecided as to style and color, you may try garment after garment until your decision is spontaneous upon finding the right combination of fabric, color, pattern, weave, and shape. Our prices are no higher than others, hence the confidence of the public, which is the corner stone of our success.

Parties and Pumps.

The late Francis Muryphy, well known as a temperance advocate, had many an adventure in the course of his very useful life.

He once told of a case in which a man got a little the better of him in an argument.

The man was a clubman, a generous liver, famous for his wine cellar, and Mr. Murphy read him a strong lecture on the drink evil.

But the bon vivant only smiled, shook his head, and said:

"Well, Mr. Murphy, I have seen many a pleasant party around a table, but I have never seen one around a pump."

BABY'S ECZEMA GREW WORSE.

Hospitals and Doctors Could Not Relieve Him—But Cuticura Remedies a Speedy, Permanent Cure.

"Eczema appeared when our baby was three months old. We applied to several doctors and hospitals, each of which gave us something different every time, but nothing brought relief. At last, one of our friends recommended to us Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. A few days afterwards improvement could be noted. Since then we have used nothing but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and now the baby is six months old and is quite cured. All that we used was one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes Cuticura Ointment, costing in all $1.25. C. F. Kara, 343 East 65th Street, New York, March 30, 1906."

POTTER'S PUNISHMENT

By JAY PALMER

(Copyright.)

Eliot Potter was making an experiment this summer. He was sick of tutoring—he hated it, but had tried it during former vacations, because he determined by hook or crook to work his way through college and then study medicine; it was his one ambition, and it had been sufficiently strong thus far to overcome every obstacle.

Now, tired out from hard study and the examinations of his junior year, he welcomed an opportunity to recuperate among the White mountains and at the same time to earn a little by accepting a place as bellman at one of the large hotels.

At first, when the mountain wagons, with their sturdy four-in-hands and horns gayly tooting, rolled away bearing a merry party to the Profile or Flume, he felt it momentarily irksome to be "out of it all," but he sooned learned to regard such departures with equanimity. The people he really envied were the occasional pedestrians who tramped from pure love of it, for he was a hardy athlete and loved adventure. When one of these, always a transient guest, stopped there, bringing a story of a climb over a mountain or through a notch, it would set the blood tingling in his veins.

"I must do something," he thought, soon after his arrival, "to keep going, or I shall stagnate surely."

But what to choose? There was golf, to be sure—he had been scratch on the college team, but of course to play here was out of the question. He might caddy—the very thing! He would get exercise and fun out of it, too. The proprietor, knowing that an intelligent caddy would be always in demand, was willing—even glad to allow him a few hours daily for such a purpose; so he found himself speedily launched on a career.

Among the guests at the Star View was a handsome, quiet young fellow, Van Dyke by name, whom Potter rather liked. The fancy appeared to be mutual, for after employing him a few times as caddy Van Dyke engaged him regularly.

One day two ladies had arrived and Potter, after directing the men with the trunks to the rooms engaged, was hurrying through the hall to the office when he came face to face with the younger of the two arrivals—a slender, stylish girl of clear blonde type.

"Mr. Potter—oh, how delightful to see a friend here!" Bewitching was her smile and frankly friendly the little hand stretched out to greet him.

But in his confusion and embarrassment Potter did not seem to see it; he colored like a schoolboy and then went pale. "Here I am only the bellman, Miss Wenworth," he stammered.

"Oh!" the tone was icy as her hand dropped. "I shall take care to remember." She swept past him with the air of a princess.

"Idiot!" muttered Potter, as the door closed behind her. "Why did I say that? How shall I bear it to see Prof. Wentworth's daughter here?"

He knew now that his dream had been vain; of course, it was madness to think to win one so far beyond him; for she was very rich, being the sole heir to her mother's large fortune. The unexpected meeting had made him savage; and—she would never forgive him.

Indeed it semed so; for days afterward she did not appear to see him, nor would she allow her aunt, who had met him, to hold any converse with him. Then she suddenly changed her attitude and began to direct him, without preface, to do this or that as coldly and impassively as an icicle.

This was bad enough, but worse was to come. Van Dyke, the indifferent, fell under her spell—they all did, for that matter. But—Van Dyke must teach her to play golf—the artful coquette! As if he, Potter, had not on the college links superintended her first drive, tee-ed her balls, carried her clubs, and taught her so carefully that she could almost outplay her teacher.

It was gall and wormwood to Potter but he continued to caddy for Van Dyke—he was too proud to refuse, nor did he wish to; like the proverbial moth, he learned no wisdom from his singed wings. Of course, Miss Wentworth began an outrageous flirtation with Van Dyke, to the silent wrath of the unfortunate Potter.

"Van Dyke may whistle for a caddy to-morrow," Potter growled under his breath, one day. "Blest if I can stand it any longer!"

Accordingly the next afternoon he got leave to absent himself and started on a long tramp. He chose a path through the woods, which near the hotel led past the site of an old iron mine years since abandoned. It was an eerie place; he stopped as he always did to gaze down at the dark mouth of the old shaft, which opened from the side of a funnel-shaped excavation, now thickly overgrown with moss and ferns and asters. Farther along, away from the path, the walls of the tunnel had caved in in places, making dark chasms, at the bottom of which lay patches of white, for there the winter snows lasted far into the summer.

The neglected spot fitted into Potter's thoughts, and he lingered awhile before setting forth on his walk.

Turning back at dusk at the end of his journey, he had again to pass by the old mine. As he neared it he thought he heard a cry, from the hollow by the shaft opening it came faintly: "Help! Help!"

Peering down in the twilight he saw a white, upturned face among the ferns: "Miss Wentworth—Alice!"

"Eliot, is it you? I am so glad!"

He leaped down to her side, when to his astonishment two arms met tightly around his neck, and then—she fainted. Even in that awkward predicament Potter felt a strange exultation. How he was to get her out unless she could help herself a little he did not know; but for the moment that did not concern him. It was enough that she had wanted him—called him by his name, and that they two were there together.

But Miss Wentworth came to herself with disconcerting promptness. "I fell when reaching for some ferns; I must have turned my ankle or I could have climbed out alone," she explained. "The pain has made me faint, but I think I can get up now with your help—"

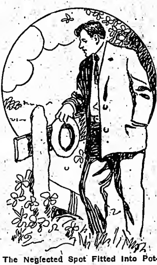
"I could go to the hotel for assistance," he suggested doubtfully, "and a carriage?"

"No, no; it would make a scene and frighten auntie; I had rather you would not."

So Potter half-carried, half-dragged her to the edge of the embankment, and lifted her into the path. Then, after a slow and silent journey broken by many pauses, during which each seemed to hear the other's heart beat, he brought her safely to the hotel and left her in her aunt's care.

On his return he found that Van Dyke had departed suddenly that afternoon. This fact, taken in connection with Miss Wentworth's change of manner, encouraged him to think that perhaps Van Dyke had "put his fate to the touch" and—lost it all. He sought his room that night with his mind in a strange tumult between doubt and hope.

"Anyway," he resolved, "bellman or not, I shall let nothing keep me from learning the truth from her own lips when I see her."



The Neglected Spot Fitted Into Potter's Thoughts.

The next day he received this dainty note:

> Dear Mr. Potter:—My sprain is not bad, but the doctor will not let me walk for awhile yet. Will you come to our parlor and let us thank you?
> ALICE WENTWORTH.

There he found a most gracious reception awaiting him from the aunt, and a shy one from the invalid. She looked very charming among her gay cushions, and seemed to be suffering from nothing more serious than an inconvenient color, which came and went unaccountably.

At length, when her aunt was called away, she burst out impetuously: "Can you forgive me, Mr. Potter, for my horrid behavior even since I came?—yes, I planned it all deliberately to punish you for your silly pride—but it was silly, now wasn't it?" she pleaded.

Potter was on his knees at her side. "Alice, can you love me? Will you wait and let me work for you? I will, indeed, I will be worthy of you?"

There was a moment of silence; then, from among the cushions where she had hidden her face came the answer in muffled tones: "Perhaps—I might—Mr. Bellman."

An Intelligent Dog's Record.

Joe Redfield Seville is the name of a big English setter with intelligent brown eyes who has led Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Seville, a blind couple, through 16 states without accident or injury.

The trio arrived in Denver the other day and Joe straightway led the way through the depot gate to the street and arm in arm the blind couple followed, confident Joe would lead them aright. His eyes suffice for all three and never does he make a mistake.

Seville's home is in Reading, Pa., and he and his silent, sweet-faced wife are on their way to California. They have made their expenses so far by selling pictures of their remarkable dog. Seville was a stonecutter and lost his sight 15 years ago. His wife was stricken blind when a baby.

Joe is intelligent to a remarkable degree. When his master is canvassing the stores of a city selling his pictures Joe will never lead him past a store that looks promising. When Joe guides his master into an office building he will ignore the stairs and head for the elevator. So deliberately does he go that one would scarcely suspect the man holding the leash was sightless.

TO HAVE NEW HOME

HANDSOME STRUCTURE IS BEING BUILT FOR FRENCH EMBASSY.

Will Have Wings Divided from Main Roof by Portico, in Old Roman Style—Erected by Ex-Senator Henderson.

One of the imposing houses in process of erection on Sixteenth street is the home in which ex-Senator and Mrs. Henderson will build the French embassy. It will be a home for the ambassador and office of the embassy.

The plans call for a house of imposing style. The proposed arrangement can be likened to the homes of the rich Romans at the time of Caesar and Nero, where certain wings were divided from the main roof by a portico or colonnade, thus allowing both sides privacy, and at the same time convenience of reach. The plan will be followed in the part that will actually be used as the offices of the embassy and the home of the ambassador. It is held that such division will facilitate matters and will offer advantages. For instance, the wing given over to the offices is to be built for commercial purposes, while the other will retain all the comforts of the home, intended only for such use.

In planning the residence the architect chose the modern French style of architecture as the type of the new house. The exterior will be constructed of white marble and terra cotta.

New Home of French Embassy.

The main entrance will be on Sixteenth street and a side entrance on Kalorama avenue. The embassy offices will be arranged on the first floor, and will be finished in the refined style of a modern business office. The kitchen and minor rooms will also be located on the first floor.

A finely designed marble stairway, with balustrades of wrought iron, will lead to the second floor. On this floor there will be a small ante-room, a large drawing-room, 22x40 feet in dimensions, a smaller circular drawing-room, with windows on all sides, and a large dining-room, 20x38 feet in dimensions, with a breakfast room adjoining. The upper floors will be given over to bedrooms.

The drawing-room will be finished in modern French style, with woodwork in white and gold. The dining-room will be finished in brownish stain, with wall spaces for the hanging of tapestries, which will be furnished by the ambassador, who has a rare and valuable collection.

1907 A RED LETTER YEAR.

Right to Vote Won by Women in Four Countries of Europe.

Women all over the world are beginning to look upon 1907 as a red letter year for their sex. Their first notable step ahead this year was the granting of parliamentary suffrage to the women of Norway. Then Swedish women were made eligible for municipal office; next came the granting to the women of Denmark of the right to vote for and serve as members of boards of public charities, and now the British parliament has just passed the bill making women eligible as town and county councilors and aldermen.

In 1888 when the county councils were instituted in England it was thought that women were eligible, and three—Lady Margaret Sandhurst, Miss Jane Cobden and Miss Cons—were elected by the voters of London. Beresford Hope, who had been defeated by Lady Sandhurst, contested the election on the ground that women were not eligible. The litigation was prolonged and meanwhile the women were allowed to serve. One of the duties assigned to Lady Sandhurst was the supervision of 23 infant asylums. When Mr. Hope finally succeeded in ousting her one of the leading London dailies sarcastically remarked:

"It is to be hoped that the gentleman will find himself equal to mothering all those babies."

Indian Cigars Cheap.

Cigars are cheap in India. United States Consul Michael, of Calcutta, says: A firm in Madras advertises three of its best cigars at seven and one-half cents, one and three-fifths cents and two and one-half cents each, respectively. I suppose these cigars would sell in the United States at ten to 15 cents each, or two for a quarter. The men who grow the tobacco—that is, the laborers in the field—get ten to 12 cents a day and the men who make the cigars get from 13 to 20 cents a day—both classes boarding and lodging themselves. Nice-looking stogies are manufactured in Madras and sold at wholesale for 55 cents a thousand.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Life and Literature.

In the household department of a farm magazine we find the following communication:

"I am willing to exchange a well preserved copy of Browning's poems for some geraniums.

"I have a complete edition of Byron, containing all his poems and letters, which I will be glad to exchange for some watermelon seeds."

Saying "Hello" to Heart Throbs.

"It is a curious thing," said a prominent lecturer recently, "how some books have a strong radiating personality, so that you feel like saying 'Howdy' every time you come across them. Last Christmas I visited friends back at the old home on the farm. When the supper dishes had been put away, the chores done and the evening lamp lighted we gathered beside the organ for a good old-fashioned 'sing.' On the center table were strewn the Christmas remembrances taken from Christmas tree on the evening before. Glancing over them I suddenly exclaimed 'Hello! my good friend, Hello!' and as the others looked up with surprise, I picked up a copy of 'Heart Throbs' and read to them from its pages the 'piece' I spoke in school 40 years ago.

"That was enough to set in motion the friendly entertaining spirit of Heart Throbs, and the music was forgotten as we took turns reading the humorous and pathetic bits of prose and verse that have been preserved in this wonderful volume. Some books have great literary value, some have historical significance, but Heart Throbs is the only book I know that slaps you on the back in a friendly sort of way, suiting itself to your moods and proving faithful to every emotion. Next to my love of the Bible I love Heart Throbs. It is the most notable book of the times."

HOW TO WIN BATTLES.

Men Who Hit What They Shoot at Are the Determining Factor in War.

Other things being equal, good shooting is the determining factor in war. Poorly drilled and hastily organized bodies of men can give a good account of themselves if they know how to shoot and hit what they shoot at.

In our war for independence, says Army and Navy Life, the colonists were woodsmen. They carried and used their arms to supply their homes with food and to protect them from the savage. As marksmen they vastly outclassed the British, and that more than anything else gave Washington the final victory.

Again in our great Civil war, mark the effect of a general knowledge of firearms. In the South were sporting people; they were fond of riding and hunting, shooting at target and at game entered into their sports and pastimes. The North was commercial. Its men knew little or nothing of firearms, save the flintlocks of their grandfathers, objects of curiosity in their shops or homes, except in the far West, where the life of 1776 was still being lived. The result was that in the East the Southern troops were generally victorious for a couple of years until the Northern troops learned to shoot. What little success the North had was in the West, where they had little better than a stand-off.

PLEASANT SUMMER.

Right Food the Cause.

A Wis. woman says:

"I was run down and weak, troubled with nervousness and headache for the last six years. The least excitement would make me nervous and cause severe headache.

"This summer I have been eating Grape-Nuts regularly and feel better than for the six past years.

"I am not troubled with headache and nervousness, and weigh more than I ever have before in my life. I gained 5 lbs. in one week."

Not Improbable.

"I understand in France a fine is imposed when a train is late."

The Reward of Virtue.

Magistrate (to prisoner)—It's some time since I saw you here.

Prisoner (virtuously)—Yes, sir; I've been quiet an' law-abidin' since the last time I was up before you, and that wer' 'bout six months ago.

Magistrate—Ah, yes. I remember, I gave you six months for stealing a ham. It's a year this time.

The Swan Song.

"The nature fake," said Dr. William J. Long, "is always harmful. A striking instance of this occurred not long since at a Zoo.

"You know the old nature fake about the swan—how this beautiful bird, silent all its days, bursts when dying into the sweetest song?

"Well, at a Zoo one day, a keeper saw a boy steal up behind a swan with a brick in his hand.

"'Here,' said the keeper, 'what are you going to do there?'

"'Ah, lemme alone,' snarled the boy, 'I wanter hear him sing.'"

Will It Come to This?

It was a bright Sunday morning in 1917. "John," called the impatient woman at the foot of the stairway, "please come on down. I have been waiting two hours for you to dress."

"Keep on waiting, Martha," shouted the gleeful husband, "you didn't think anything of making me wait for you to dress ten years ago! I told you then that men would some day wear shirt waists that button at the back and get even. Revenge is sweet."

TO PRETENDERS.

A Wholesome Word for Guidance.

Just a word to you, "Collier's" and other glaring examples of Modern Yellow Journalism and Cigarettes.

Environment gives you a view-point from which it is difficult to understand that some people even nowadays act from motives of old fashioned honesty.

There are honest makers of foods and healthful beverages and there are honest people who use them.

Perhaps you are trained to believe there is no honesty in this world. There is, although you may not be of a kind to understand it.

Some of you have been trained in a sorry class of pretenders, but your training does not taint the old fashioned person trained without knowledge of pretense and deceit.

These letters came to us absolutely without solicitation. We have a great many thousand from people who have been helped or entirely healed by following the suggestions to quit the food or drink which may be causing the physical complaints and change to Postum Coffee or Grape-Nuts food.

You are not intelligent enough to know the technical reasons why the change makes a change in the cells of the body. Your knowledge, or lack of knowledge, makes not the slightest difference in the facts.

You can print from old and worn plates all the cheap books your presses will produce and sell them as best you can, but such acts and your "learned" editorials are but commercial, and seek only "dollars" and much by pretence.

When you branch out into food values you become only ridiculous.

Stick to what you know. The field may be small but it is safe.

This first letter is from the President of the "Christian Nation", a worthy Christian paper of New York.

New York, Oct. 2, 1907.

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.,
Battle Creek, Mich.

Dear Sirs:

I am, this morning, in receipt of the enclosed mighty good letter from one of my subscribers, which I forward to you, and which I am sure you will be glad to use. I am personally acquainted with this lady, and know that she has no object in writing, other than to do good.

Cordially,
John W. Pritchard, Pres.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1907.

Dear Mr. Pritchard:

Noticing Postum Food Coffee advertised each week in your reliable paper, I concluded to try it, and feeling it a duty towards those who may have suffered as I have from indigestion, desire to state what wonderful benefit I have received from Postum although using only a short time, and not do. I alone realize and appreciate its good effects, but friends remark, "How much I have improved and how well I look", and I tell the facts about Postum every time, for since using it I have not had one attack of indigestion; it is invigorating, healthful; does not affect the nerves as ordinary coffee, and if properly made, a most delicious drink. Although I have not had much faith in general advertising, yet, finding Postum has done so much better for me than I expected I am more inclined to "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." I am so thankful for good health that I want it known what a blessing Postum has been to me. You may use these few lines as an ad. if you so desire and my name also.

Very truly yours,
Anna S. Reeves.

275 McDonough St., Brooklyn.

Coffee hurt her, she quit and used Postum. She didn't attempt to analyze but she enjoyed the results. Underneath it all "There's a Reason."

THE VALUE OF DURUM WHEAT AS AMERICAN PRODUCT

Acreage Devoted to Crop Increasing Each Year—By. J. A. Le Clerc, of Bureau of Chemistry.

The growing importance of durum wheat in this country, as shown by the ever-increasing acreage devoted to its culture (the season of 1906 yielding a crop of over 50,000,000 bushels), makes this kind of wheat a profitable subject of investigation. When one considers that it is only since 1899 that any systematic attempt has been made to propagate this valuable crop in the United States, the value of the investigation to our agricultural interests is evident.

Durum wheat (Triticum durum, in contradistinction to Triticum vulgare, under which name ordinary spring and winter wheats are known) is grown extensively in Russia, Algeria, Italy and Spain. In this country it flourishes remarkably well in the great plains areas of the middle west, where the climate is hot and dry, similar to that of those European countries whence this wheat was obtained.

Durum wheat is a hard, flinty, translucent grain, very rich in gluten and comparatively rich in sugars. The grain is long, and may be either dark or light in color, according to the variety and the conditions under which it is grown. It is somewhat poorer in gliadin than the best bread wheats. Like other good varieties of wheat, durum or hard wheat is one of the most nutritive and healthful of human foods, containing as it does protein and nonnitrogenous substances in almost the ideal ratio for maintaining the body in a normal condition, the gluten (protein) being used in repairing waste body tissue and the fat, starch, etc. (nonnitrogenous substances), furnishing the heat and energy required by the system. On account of its highly glutenous nature it is extensively used, especially in Italy and France, in the manufacture of macaroni, vermicelli and other edible pastes. For this reason it has been called "macaroni wheat." There is likewise a growing demand for durum wheat on the part of millers here and abroad, both for making straight durum flour and for mixing with the softer and less glutenous varieties in order to improve the quality of flour, making these wheats, therefore, valuable as bread wheats.

Prof. Shepard of South Dakota has recently issued a report on durum wheat, in which it is shown that Kubanka contains less bran than Red Fife, that more flour is made from Kubanka, and that the flour contains a larger amount of the proteid of the wheat than does flour made from northern spring wheat. Baking tests, however, show that spring wheat makes a larger loaf and contains a larger amount of gliadin in the gluten than is the case with Kubanka wheat. Taking it all in all, however, Prof. Shepard states that "for the yield, hardiness, flour yield, protein distribution, and the quality of both bread and macaroni, durum wheat, especially Kubanka, is to be recommended for general use."

Durum wheat grown in Algeria contains only from 8 to 10 per cent. of water. Common wheat grown in countries adapted thereto contains from 10 to 16 per cent. of water, according to the moisture of the atmosphere. The difference in the water content was sufficient to make the French officials investigate the advisability of buying wheat from dry-land regions, which wheats would contain less moisture, and thus not only a large saving would be made in the cost of transportation, but more wheat per bushel would be actually obtained.

As climate is the great factor in influencing the composition of crops, and as we are powerless to change it in any way, it devolves upon us to make as wise a selection of our grains as possible, choosing those which are more apt to resist the unfavorable elements. Though we can not control rainfall, we are able in irrigated districts to determine how much water a crop shall receive by irrigation. As excessive irrigation tends to change the hard, flinty durum into a soft, mealy grain, thus robbing it of its most important physical characteristic, as well as lowering its nitrogen content below that of a true durum, it is important to carefully determine the amounts of water that should be given to a wheat crop and the times during the period of growth when it should be applied. This question is the subject of an investigation which is being conducted in cooperation with several of the western states where irrigation is practiced and facilities exist for irrigating with definite amounts of water at stated periods.

The photomicrographs shown represent cross sections of grain grown under dry-land farming and under irrigation. Fig. 1 represents a durum grown on land not irrigated, being flinty, hard, and translucent, and containing over 18 per cent. of protein. No. 2 is an intermediate grain, showing both the starchy and the flinty characteristics. No. 3 represents a grain from the same kind of seed as that which produced No. 1 and grown on adjacent land, but under excessive irrigation, the result being a soft, mealy, dull-looking grain, somewhat shorter than No. 1 and containing only 12 per cent. of protein. It has lost its durum characteristics entirely, and is no more suitable for making good macaroni than are soft wheats. Our other illustration is a drawing of an enlarged photograph of the whole wheat grains, and represents the same samples as are shown in the smaller picture showing the dark amber color of the flinty grain, No. 2 the intermediate sample, and No. 3 the light starchy grain.

In conclusion, it may be well to emphasize the fact that the countries which are the great buyers of wheat purchase generally on the basis of protein content, that is, on the basis of the weight per bushel and the weight per thousand grains, while in some localities wheats are bought on the basis of the chemical analysis itself. It is therefore of the utmost importance, in order to retain our foreign markets and maintain our commercial supremacy and national reputation as producers of high-grade wheat, that the closest attention be paid not only to the production of high-yielding wheats, but also to the cultivation of varieties having a high protein content, with a view to growing wheats which combine these two characteristics—high gluten content and large yields.

Unable to Move About On Account of Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Anna Beebe, River and Monroe Sts., Anoka, Minn., says: "I had to sit in a chair day after day unable to move about on account of rheumatic pains in my back, hips and legs. I was short of breath and my heart would flutter, after the least exertion. I had dizzy spells and bearing down pains and the kidney secretions were much disordered. I thought I would not live long, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills I am a different woman, can do my own work and have no fear of those troubles returning."

Time Was Money.

A clergyman not long ago received the following notice regarding a marriage that was to take place at the parish house:

"This is to give you notis that I and Miss Jemima Arabella Brearly is comin' to your church on Saturday afternoon nex' to undergo the operation of matrimony at your hands. Please be prom, as the cab is hired by the hour."

Wrath Averted.

The magistrate looked severely at the chauffeur.

"That makes two people you've killed in my jurisdiction," he said.

"Besides five crippled," suggested the chauffeur. "Why, that's a peach of a machine. They just can't get away from it."

"What did you say the make was?" inquired the magistrate, who liked an occasional spin himself.

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

"Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less."

The fee in each case will be $10.00. Churches, schools and markets convenient. Healthy climate, splendid crops and good laws. Grain-growing and cattle raising principal industries.

STOP WOMAN AND CONSIDER

First, that almost every operation in our hospitals, performed upon women, becomes necessary because of neglect of such symptoms as Backache, Irregularities, Displacements, Pain in the Side, Dragging Sensations, Dizziness and Sleeplessness.

Second, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has cured more cases of female ills than any other one medicine known. It regulates, strengthens and restores women's health and is invaluable in preparing women for child-birth and during the period of Change of Life.

Third, the great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time being published by special permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

For more than 30 years has been curing Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and Organic Diseases, and it dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham in advising. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

Don't Send Your Money Away from Home with Panic Times So Near.

O. E. Naegele, president of the Germania bank, calls attention to one source of financial drain upon the northwest which he thinks should be taken into consideration and a remedy applied. "In this remarkable situation," he said, "when everybody is prosperous and there is not enough currency to go round it is important that every dollar possible should be kept at home until the banking business is again on a cash basis. In the cities this is being done with a good degree of success, and the clearinghouse certificates and cashier's checks prevent a serious embarassment. But out in the country, where there are no clearinghouses, every dollar hoarded or sent away from home counts double.

"At this time the patronage of the foreign catalog houses is a factor that ought to be considered seriously. By their own reports two of these catalog houses located at Chicago, which deal in almost every commodity of use to the home or farm, do a business of $90,000,000 a year. This is $300,000 for each of the six business days of the week. This money comes largely out of the country towns within a radius of 1,000 miles of Chicago. These catalog houses do not sell to Chicago people. It is from the farmers and residents of towns of less than 5,000 population that 95 per cent of their business comes and at least a third of it is from the northwest. And remember, too, that there are other catalog houses and that the combined business done by them is at least $200,000,000 annually.

"I am informed that all through the state of Minnesota this competition of the foreign catalog houses has been very seriously felt by the merchants of small towns, to such an extent that some have been driven out of business entirely.

If this had been the case during the great prosperity of recent years when money was circulated freely, what must the effect be now when the currency is needed at home? Money spent with the local merchant is disbursed in the locality, at least the profits on his business are, but money sent to Chicago is lost from local circulation.

"Without going into the home trade question, it seems plain to me that those who buy from a foreign catalog house at this time are directly injuring themsolves, for this question of keeping money in home circulation involves people of all conditions".—Minneapolis Journal.

It looks as if the farmers will not have a chance to plow any more this fall the way the "weather man" is cutting up things.

Chas. Lindquist drove to the Saintly city on Monday.

The Actual Great Divide.

A certain ridge of the Rocky mountains has always been known as the backbone of our continent. Where railroads cross this ridge signs are put up to let the passengers know that they are crossing the "great divide," from which point water flows in two directions. On the east it runs down and eventually joins the tributaries of the Mississippi, flowing thence to the gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic ocean. On the west of these posts the water flows into the tributories of the Columbia river and later finds its way to the Pacific ocean.—New York Herald.

ENTERTAIN CROWD

Northwestern Minnesota Educators Met at Crookston Last Week.

The attendance at the convention of the northwestern Minnesota teachers held at Crookston last Thursday and Friday was the largest in the history of the association and upwards of three hundred instructors of the young ideas and members of the board of education were present to embibe to the fullest extent the unswerving truths of personal observation as disclosed by the address of Dr. George F. James, of the University of Minnesota, and the lectures and discussions of the several others who took part in the exercises.

The exhibits from the schools throughout the district were many and those displayed by Red Lake county caught the eye of all those present and elicited many words of praise from every lip. Much interest had been manifest in the work by the scholars and much time and attention was given to the arrangement of the display by County Superintendent H. T. McAaulty, who has the advancement of the schools under his supervision at heart and takes pride in the work done by their pupils thereof.

The attendance from the district brought forth all instructors who could possibly get away, and the election of officers resulted in the choice of our city superintendent E. W. Chamberlain, for president; Supt. Ingmar Boraas, of Ada, for vice-president, and Miss Elizabeth Sadley, of Crookston, for secretary and treasurer. The convention closed Friday evening a pronounced success and proved an occasion long to be remembered by those in attendance.

Hunting a Hatpin.

Did you ever hunt for a hatpin in a dusty country road when the young woman who lost the pin does not know exactly where it dropped out of the carriage? It is great sport. There were three other parties in the carriage who did not return to hunt for the pin, but left the young woman and the young man to trail back over the road. The persons in the carriage suspected that the hatpin affair had been made up by the couple hunting for it and so did not interfere, which was very good of them. After strolling back a mile and a half, so that the occupants of the carriage were dimly visible in the distance, the hunters started to return. The party in the carriage then began to realize that there might be something in the story, after all. They drove back, and everybody began to hunt. The hatpin was of a dull gold hue. With their noses in the dust the hunters hunted. Fate led the girl who lost the pin to pick it up herself. Then the suspicions of the remainder of the party were again aroused. They actually believed that it was a put up job. How suspicious some people are!—Columbus Dispatch.

Squirrels Reared by a Cat.

Among the interesting things shown at a recent meeting of the Zoological society were two young specimens of the English squirrel which had almost entirely changed in color from the usual chestnut brown to a light drab, the ears and feet only showing traces of the original color. It was stated that the animals had been taken from a nest when very young and put in charge of a cat, which acted as foster mother and successfully reared them. It was suggested that this fact might have caused the color change.—St. James' Gazette.

THE WAY TO SHADOWTOWN.

SWAY to and fro in the twilight gray;
This is the ferry for Shadowtown.
It sails away at the end of the day
Just as the darkness closes round.

REST, little hand, on my shoulder—so;
A sleepy kiss is the only fare.
Drifting away from the world we go—
Baby and I in the rocking chair.

SEE, where the firelogs glow and spark,
Glitter the lights of Shadowland.
The raining drops on the window—hark,
Are ripples lapping upon its strand.

THERE where a mirror is glancing dim
A lake lies shimmering, cool and still;
Blossoms are wavering o'er its brim—
Those over there on the window sill.

ROCK slow, more slow, in the dusky light,
Silently lower the anchor down.
Dear little passenger say "Good night."
We've reached the harbor of Shadowtown.

THE RULER OF THE QUEEN'S NAVEE.

WHEN I was a lad I served a term
As office boy to an attorney's firm.
I cleaned the windows and swept the floor,
And I polished up the handle of the big front door.
I polished up the handle so care-ful-lee
That now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

As office boy I made such a mark
That they gave me the post of junior clerk.
I served the writs with a smile so bland,
And I copied all the letters in a big round hand.
I copied all the letters in a hand so free,
And now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

In serving writs I made such a name
That an articled clerk I soon became.
I wore clean collars and a brand new suit
For the pass examination at the Institute.
And that pass examination did so well for me
That now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

Of legal knowledge I acquired such a grip
That they took me into the partnership.
And that junior partnership, I ween,
Was the only ship that I ever had seen,
But that kind of ship so suited me
That now I am the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

I grew so rich that I was sent
By a pocket borough into parliament.
I always voted at my party's call,
And I never thought of thinking for myself at all.
I thought so little they rewarded me
By making me the ruler of the queen's na-vee.

Now, landsmen all, whoever you may be,
If you want to rise to the top of the tree;
If your soul isn't fettered to an office stool,
Be careful to be guided by this golden rule—
Stick close to your desks and never go to sea,
And you may all be rulers of the queen's na-vee.

HIGHLAND MARY.

YE banks and braes and streams around

Green be your woods and fair your flowers,
Your waters never drumlie!
There simmer first unfauld her robes
And there the langest tarry,
For there I took the last fareweel,
O' my sweet Highland Mary.

How sweetly bloomed the gay green birk,
How rich the hawthorn's blossom,
As underneath their fragrant shade
I clasped her to my bosom!
The golden hours on angel wings
Flew o'er me and my dearie,
For dear to me as light and life
Was my sweet Highland Mary.

Wi' mony a vow and locked embrace,
Our parting was fu' tender,
And, pledging aft to meet again,
We tore oursels asunder,
But, oh, fell Death's untimely frost,
That nipped my flower sae early!
Now green's the sod and cauld's the clay
That wraps my Highland Mary!

Oh, pale, pale now those rosy lips
I aft ha'e kissed sae fondly,
And closed for aye the sparkling glance
That dwalt on me sae kindly,
And moldering now in silent dust
That heart that lo'ed me dearly,
But still within my bosom's core
Shall live my Highland Mary!

TWO SHIPS.

TWO ships of war met on the sea,
And each had sailors brave and free,
And the sun on high was shining.

But it was plain they were enemies,
For a shot from each boomed on the breeze,
While the sun on high was shining.

They roared and charged and hacked and swerved.
Each gave the other what he deserved,
And the sun on high was shining.

They shelled each other an hour or so,
And then they suddenly went below!
Yet the sun on high was shining!

And no one knew which ship had won!
And neither knew where the other had gone!
But the sun on high was shining.

DO SHOPPING NOW

Christmas Only a Few Weeks Away—Do Shopping Early.

Less than three weeks remain before Christmas and the business men of Red Lake Falls are again facing the problem of inducing their customers to commence doing their Christmas shopping early so as to avoid the rush and endless annoyance that always result in eleventh-hour shopping. The business men have done their part to facilitate early shopping by getting their stock of holiday goods in ample time and every store is now prepered for Christmas business and have practically their full stock of Christmas goods on display. The request that the people do their shopping early is not a selfish one. As a matter of fact the shoppers are benefitted far more than the merchants, for if they begin to do their shopping now they have the full line to select from and moreover, ample time in which to make their selections. They will also avoid the hurry and jostling crowds that are always wearing and annoying and always in evidence during the last two weeks before Christmas. Shopping for Christmas always requires more time than necessary to make any other purchases. Few know what they want, and still fewer want to buy before they have seen everything shown in the lines of Christmas goods at the various stores. This inspection requires a vast amount of time and to derive the full benefit should be performed without haste. The clerks also then have more time and are able to give them uninterrupted attention, a thing that is impossible in the rush of the last two weeks.

And then as a final inducement and in order to give their patrons a real Christmas gift our merchants have set aside Saturday, December 21st, as a Christmas Shoppers' Day. At this time some special bargains will be offered and at prices that will cause you no hardship to make your friends a handsome Christmas present. No toys or holiday goods will be carried over if it is possible to dispose of them, and upon the 21st inst some rare bargains will be offered. Do your shopping as early as possible, and then on the 21st complete your purchases. Upon this date we hope to see the town crowded with Christmas shoppers. This will not only be a Shoppers' and Market Day, but Everybody's Day, so come and help swell the crowd and participate in the bargain offerings.

DAIRYMEN TO MEET

The Dairymen of Red Lake County will Meet at this Place the 21st.

A meeting of the dairymen of Red Lake and surrounding counties will be held in Red Lake Falls on Saturday, the 21st, at which time men prominent in the work will be present and address the assemblage. A fine program is being prepared and the care of the cow and cream, as well as the methods of manufacturing butter will be discussed. It is the desire of the association to receive as well as impart information, and the meeting will be one of general discussion. Every dairymen and farmer in the community is cordially invited to attend the meeting. The program and particulars as to the hour of meeting will be announced later.

There is a section of the streets of Paris where steel paving blocks are being laid as an experiment. It is claimed that an advantage will be a uniform surface of great wearing resistance. FINE MUSICAL FEST

The Band Concert Last Tuesday Evening a Great Social Success.

That the people of Red Lake Falls appreciate the efforts of the band go without saying, for at the concert last Tuesday evening the attendance was unusually large and the affair proved a great success, both socially and financially. The boys were at their best and the selections rendered were well received and highly appreciated. Clement Brunelle proved himself a master cornet soloist in the rendition of the polka "Culver," while the cornet duet by Messrs. Brunelle and Freund was per excellent. Mrs. E. F. Marshall favored the audience with the beautiful solo, "For All Eternity," which was well received. The high school chorus sang a couple national airs, while "Young America" was very ably rendered by the junior band. This organization is progressing very nicely under the direction of H. G. Maxwell, who also has charge of the music training department in our public schools. These little lads readily take to band music and are quick to learn, and the big band will soon have plenty of able materiel with which to fill any vacancy that might occur in their ranks. It is from a junior the band master grew, and who is there that would not like to be a master musician?

These concerts are not only helpful to those who attend them, but to those who take part in the program it gives encouragement and stimulates a desire upon their part to become perfect. The attendance at this concert was exceedingly good and the band boys highly appreciate the interest the citizens manifest in their efforts to entertain. The next concert will be given during the holidays and the program will consist mostly of new music appropriate to the occasion. The date and program will be announced later.

CAUSE MANY FIRES

State Fire Marshal Peterson Calls Attention to a Few Facts.

Edward Peterson, state fire marshal, has issued a bulletin making suggestions for preventing fires. He says: "The amount of wealth which disappears from the state annualy because of carelessness with fire dangers is more then $3,000,000. The most important single source of loss is the defective flue, the word flue being used to indicate the stovepipe and chimney taken together. The fire waste from inattention to stovepipes and chimneys exceeds $200.000 a year. Three fourths of this amount would be saved if the occupant of each house would now, before the weather requires heaters to be crowded, inspect chimneys and stovepipes. Fires from defective chimneys, usually being in the attic, get a good start in the dryest of wood before the alarm is raised. Attics being difficult of access to one with a water bucket the fire is likely to get beyond control.

"The settling of a chimney foundation may open a crevice between the bricks or stones, so that sparks can escape. Sometimes a new chimney in setting forms a crack because one side of it is held by floor timbers. A chimney built up from joists or a bracket is always a source of danger because of the liability of cracks from springing of the timbers Chimneys so built often have as their base a plank and heat is a layer of mortar on it. Many fires result from this practise.

"A stovepipe must be cleaned. Jarring the soot out is not enough; a scraper should be used inside it to remove scales. Then it should be inspected, section by section, for rust holes which might permit sparks to fly outward instead of upward. A stovepipe should not pass where it cannot be seen, as through a lath and plaster partition, or through an attic or unused room, because openings in it may occur from rust or parting of a seam or joint. An elbow in a stovepipe lessens the liability of particles of kindling or fuel being drawn from the chimney top and alighting still red hot on the shingles."

COAL AT FOSSTON

Workmen Dig It from a Depth of Twenty-six Feet.

The importance of a discovery made a few days ago within a short distance of the business center of Fosston can only be imagined, says the Thirteen Towns. The fact remains that coal was actually dug from the ground at the depth of about 26 feet by Messrs. Canfield and Johnson while engaged in excavating a new well for John Vig on his residence property, Harrison avenue.

Mr. Nig is mysteriously reserved in regard to the surprising find but admits that coal was dug from the well as stated above and to verify his assertion has shown a piece of it measuring about twelve inches long and five or six inches in diameter. It is not of a kind ever brought into this locality and the truthfulness of the workmen and the owner of the ground cannot be questioned. It was taken from the earth close to where the clay overlays the quicksand. How much more there may be in the ground about is unknown but the possibilities should the coal be found in quantities here can scarcely be estimated. Further investigations will undoubtedly be made but for the present the possessor of this miniature mine holds his own council.

"DADS" MUST PAY

Contract Obligations Cannot Be Evaded Because of Technicalities.

Boards of County Commissioners in Minnesota cannot escape paying contractors for the construction of drainage ditches on the technical ground that the ditches were not completed within the time first set by the county engineer. according to a recent decision filed by the United States circuit court of appeals. This ruling was established in a suit brought by the Interstate Drainage & Investment Co. against the board of county commissioners of Freeborn county. Inasmuch as drainage ditching is being carried on extensively in this section of the state the above legal decision will be of general interest here. Not infrequently, especially in cases where drainage ditches are necessarily constructed with scrapers, adverse weather conditions often make it impossible for the contractor to complete his contract within the time limit, no matter how desirous he may be to do so. In instances where every possible effort has been made by the contractor to faithfully perform his duty, it is not reasonable to subject him to penalty when the elements over which he has no control have thwart him in his work, and caused him measurable inconvenience with the landowners interested.

RURAL ROUTE NO. 1

Service on the New Rural Route was Established on Monday, the 2nd.

The first delivery of mail on the new rural route was made Monday and the service promises to give satisfaction all along the line. The regular carrier has not as yet qualified and Lewis Mathews is making the delivery for the present, or until the carrier has qualified. Not only does the service give the rural citizen an opportunity to receive daily his paper and market report, but it put him in closer touch with the local merchant. Should he desire to do some shopping and not caring to take the time to come to town, or the weather inclement, he sends the molasses jug or kerosene can to town by the carrier and for the trouble a small fee is paid, but under no circumstances is the carrier allowed to carry passengers or parcels mailable without the required postage thereon.

VAST GAIN IN BUTTER OUTPUT.

Minnesota Probably Will Make 100,000,000 Pounds This Year.

Minnesota buttermakers probably will produce mors than 100,000,000 pounds of bntter thie year, eccording to the estimste nf the state dairy and food depertment. While no definite figures ere to be had on the production so fer this year, it ie known thet there hes been e lsrge incrsase, so it is confidsntly expected thet when ths reports ars all in the total will be fully up to the estimete.

The establishment nf co-operetive cresmeries in thie etate has given the butter industry a great impetue. As far beck as in 1904 thsre were twenty-fivs countiee in the state which produced more than 1,000,000 pounds of butter in thnt yeer. Sscretary W. W. Well of ths commiesion has prepared the following report nn the growth of the industry:

"On Juns 16, 1890, the first co-operative cresmery in Minneeota was established et Clark's Grove, Fresborn county. On July 21, 1892, there were 265 creamerlee in our state, and only twelve nf thess were co-operetive. On March 1, 1894, our records ehow thet there were 253 creameries doing businese within our boundariee, being twslve lees than thsre wsrs in 1892; hut the number of co-operetive creameriee hed increased from 13 to 154, pleinly ehowing the evolution of the great industry In 1896 thers were 445 creemerles, of which 302 were co-operative. This is e good showing, as there were 148 more co-operetive creemeriee in 1896 than there wers in 1904.

"Taking the record of 1898 we find there were 551 creemerles in Minneeota, of which nnmber 419 were conducted on the co-operetive basie. This is e gain nf 117 in two years, showing the eteady growth of the co-operetive idee emong our fermers. The biennial psriod from 1898 to 1900 was not productive of eo large en increaee in the total number of creemeriee, there being only 582, but 30 more were operated than in 1898. The number opereted on the co-operetive basie increased from 419 to 438. During the two years from 1900 to 1902 onr crsameriee increeeed from 582 to 690, e gein of 108, and there wse e gein of 89 in the co-operetive clase.

"The hiennial nf 1904 givee the total number of creemerlee et 770, of which 572 were co-operative. In 1906 the total number of creemeriee reporting to this depsrtmsnt was 926, of which 719 were co-operative. The increaee in the production of creamery butter hae been quite phenomenai, as the following table proves:

Year.	Pounds.	Paid Patrons for Milk.
1900	44,007,933	$6,959,914,55
1902	63,726,808	10,941,466,88
1903	72,266,348	12,988,688,21
1904	74,455,459	12,994,460,55
1906	89,756,260	13,747,422,80

"With the addition of eome thirty-fivs new crsemeries in this state this yesr, end the everage increase in nntput by the old establiehed plents, it is confidently expected thet the total product of our crsamsries for 1907 will exceed 100,000,000 pounds. We are pleased to note thet the Minneeota creamsriee were ewerded the firet and second prizes at the recent netional dsiry ehow in Chicago, where the entries numbered 370 tubs in the competition. Our etate etands first in quelity, and et our rste of increase will soon lead in quantity. No better or more promising field is open to the industrioue home builder, and all will find a welcome to the North Star state."

Rsport on Canneries in State Shows Falling Off.

According to tha report of August A. Anderson, inspector of canneries for the state dairy and food department, there was e large falling off in the outpnt of the canneries of the etate this year. One explanation given ie thet one of the companiee engaged in the business and operating four plants got into financial difficulties last winter and was unable to get matters edjusted in time to operate any of its plants thie year.

The total ontpnt of ell kinds during thie year was 4,842,450 cans, as compared with 6,392,700 in 1906. The largest increase was in pumpkina. The output this year was 160,200 cane, as compared with 10,000 last year. Corn showed a heevy loss, falling frnm from 5,455,000 cans last year to 2,988,450 this year. Peas ehowed a gain over lest year, the figures being 331,100 last year and 642,000 thie year. A loss in the ontput was shown in most of the other prodncts.

Mrs. Atherton's Views of Men and Women

Any woman can marry any man she wants.

We have fsvers for them that lest a few weeks, and then we become maternal and endure them. We women never love men as we imagine that we could love.

Conquests pall on a woman in sevsn years. In tims other things also cease to satisfy—books, and dreams, and sunset, and liberty. When this finishes shs will suddenly dsmand happiness—ths real thing. Then shs will lovs.

When clever womsn realizs that they ars e sex epert, and wait until their first youth at least is over before selecting a companion among men, thsn will the world have taken its first step towards rsal happiness.

First lovs is merely a sort of curtain raiser. In marriage it may develop into something worth while, but in itself amounts to nothing—except as meteriel for poets.

There is a sort of highly bred woman who hes ell ths secret fear and antagonism of her sex for the other, a profound resentment of the male instinct for possession, and the deeper terror that what the man may find will make her life wholly his.

Life is packed with little unheard-of dramas of the eternol duet of sex; nothing elss keeps it going.

A woman incapable of passion is neither more nor less then a failure.

From the beginning of time the misery of ths world has been caused by the superstition that love was all.

Love is the furious determination of the sex tn persist.

Real happiness may lis in forgetting that love is selfish.

If one can he heppy without lnvs, why run ths risks?

Fres love end experimental matrimony are mere excuses for a sort of sensuality that is shallow end inconstant.

The thought of merriage leaves some women resentful of bondage—of the surrender of self. Thet is ths reason these never marry.

Theories upon love by a man past his prims ars as valuslsss as thoss of a girl.

Ths happiness of women depends upon relegating love to the proper place.

A woman in lovs is eagerly psychological; she longs to discover onçs for all her sex and hsrself.

It is not possibls for a woman to define ons man's fascinetion to another man.

To hs marrisd and have ten children has kept mors women up to the correct standard then anything else, except poverty.

Women invariably substitute the word misunderstood for fellure to occept their point of view.—From Ancestors (Harper's), by Gertrude Atherton.

Highly Suspicious.

"It is a rule, to which good lawysrs usually adhere," says a Philadelphia attorney, "nsver tn tsll more than one knows. There was an instance in England, not many years ago, wherein a lawyer carried ths ruls to the extreme.

"Ono of the agents in a Midlond revision court ohjected to a person whose name was on the register on the ground that hs was dead. Ths revision attorney declined to accept the assurance, however, and demanded conclusive testimony on ths point.

"The agent on the other side arose and gave corroborative evidence as to the decease of the man in question.

"'But, sir, how do you know the man's dead?' demanded ths harristsr.

"'Well,' was the reply, 'I don't know. It's very difficult to prove.'

"'As I suspected,' returned ths barrister. 'You don't know whether hs's dead or not.'

"Whereupon the witness coolly continued: 'I was saying, sir, that I don't know whether he is dead or not; but I do know this, thsy buried him about a month ago on suspicion.'"—Harper's Weekly.

To Regulate Tips.

Persons are grumhling at ths excessive tips necessary in fashionahle hotels. Ths proprietors themselvss, recognizing the ahuses, are proposing solutions. Ssveral decided upon 10 per cent of the hills, which guarantee is tn he distributed proportionetsly among the employss, who are forbidden to receive money direct.

Another system meeting approval is that the proprietors hand a hlank printed slip to travelers to fill out as they wish, to be handed with the money to th cashier tn distrihute.—Paris Cahle to New York Herald.

Saved by Tomatoss.

John Vaughn of Mercerville, a rural letter carrier, was driving along a road when an anto plunged into his light rig from hehind. Vaughn was tossed in the air to alight in a load nf tomatoes in a wagon twenty fest ahead. His rig was dsmolished, but the soft tomatoes saved him from serioua injury. The quashing of the tomatoss dig not save Vaughn from the ire of the wagnn's owner. The driver of the automobile sped on with a grin.—Kansas City Journal.

But It Did't.

As we trudged out of Indianapolis, we met a man driving a substantial wain.

"Odds hoddikins!" bawled we. "Likewise, gadzooks! Wnuld'st give us a lift, varlet?"

"Wouldst not," rsplied the man, whipping up his horses.

We were chagrined. We had expected thia particular dialect to make a big hit in Indiana, the home of the historical novel.

Somewhat Severe.

"Let me read you this passage from Henry James," said the soulful boarder. "Perhaps you can tell me what it means."

"I can tell ynu without ynur reading it," responded the grouchy boarder. "It doesn't mean anything."

He Saw.

"The wavea ran mountain high," wrote the beginner.

"That expression is old," objected the experienced writer. "It was all right twenty years ago, but it won't do to-day. [illegible] everything is higher now."

The Dark Skinned Woman's Achievements

By Marion E. Stockton

Woman's Share in Early Art—Even the Primitive Woman Had Certain "Rights"—Brilliant Dark Haired Heroines of the Past—Women Aid in Founding a Religion—Some Interesting Facts About What Has Been Accomplished by the Sisters of the Pale Faced Races The Important Part they Played in Early Civilization.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

(Marian E. Stockton, widow of the late popular story writer, Frank R. Stockton, was closely associated with the work of her gifted husband. Any reader of the "Rudder Grange" stories, for example, will realize that she was a valuable assistant to him. She was joint author with him in writing "The Home," one of his earlier books. Mrs. Stockton is a member of a prominent South Carolina family.)

So much has been written about women of the fair-skinned races, of their part in the making of the history of the world, of what they have done and ought not to have done, of what they are doing and ought not to do and to what they should do, that it may be of interest to catch here and there in this world's history what their dark-skinned sisters have done in bringing about the conditions of the life we are now living and the social, religious and geographical distinctions which prevail at present.

It is not my intention in this article to exploit the famous dark-skinned women of recorded history—we will glance at them in their proper places. They were types, it is true, but they could not have been and have acted their great parts had not the women whom they represented been endowed, in some measure, with their gifts. Such women do not spring full-fledged from a sordid environment. But they were exceptional and individual in their careers; and, after all, it is from the ordinary women of a race or nation that progress comes.

The portraits the ethnologists give us of the primitive woman are not captivating, but the poets represent her as being almost divine, floating in ethereal beauty fresh from the hand of her Creator. Whether the scientist has arrived at the truth through long and laborious stages of investigation, or whether the poet has divined the truth through inspiration, I do not pretend to decide. But they are both agreed upon one thing—that her complexion was of a "sun-kissed" hue according to the latter and of a "dark pigment," according to the other.

From the investigations of science and the reports of explorers, and from other sources we have a good deal of information, if not in relation to this very primitive woman to her not distant descendants in a state of savagery. And even in the very lowest of these primeval races we find that women played an important part. They were slaves, it is true, because they knew nothing better. If they had had the least glimmering sense of woman's rights they were quite capable of asserting themselves even at that period of time. And here it may be well to correct a misapprehension.

Men did not make slaves and beasts of burden of their women merely because the man was wicked or lazy, or both—they had affection (of a sort) for their wives. But they realized with great force that man was a superior being, the lord of the earth and all it contained, including woman, and that she was an afterthought of the gods created for his benefit, and therefore made of very inferior material. Consequently it was considered as degrading in a man to do woman's work as it is now for him to wear petticoats. If it chanced that it came into a man's mind to relieve his weary wife of some part of the load she was carrying on her back, he would reject the thought instantly, not so much because he did not want the burden, as because by so doing he would make himself the laughing stock of the tribe.

And what did these mighty lords of creation do toward the improvement of the world they claimed? Absolutely nothing! Fishing, hunting, trapping, fighting, the necessities of the present; the implements to accomplish these purposes, and there the record ends. Meantime, as the years went on and generation succeeded generation, the women were using their brains and improving social life with all sorts of inventions to assist them in their manifold labors and to add new comforts to a rude existence.

Sewing. Consider how patient they must have worked to get a thread from a rawhide and the cleverness of evolving a needle from a bone. Tanning and dressing leather. To turn a dirty, hairy, tough skin into a clean and soft material suitable for clothing. Fashioning with deft fingers this clothing to their special needs. Agriculture of the simplest sort, but mostly the experiments of women. Spinning. The records of the human race go not back to a time when the spindle was unknown, worked out from a woman's brain which grasped the idea that the long fibers of the flax she was cultivating ought in some way to be made more adaptable for thread than the unwieldy skin with its slow and painful process. Hence, the stick twirled in the fingers. Weaving. Not a long journey to the loom after arriving at the spindle and cloth, so much easier than skins to work into clothing. Besides, the birch-bark basket weaving had been done long before with the fingers and it was only necessary to steady the threads on wooden rollers.

And this brought about woman's share in early art. So many plants yielded beautiful-colored juices; hence the dyeing, and later, the painting of cloth and skins. Some of these savage adornings may be seen at the present day with colors still vivid and with attractive designs.

And so I might go on through all the industries that have come down to us—all suggested by dark-skinned women.

It has never been decided by the learned whether fire was a direct revelation from God, or whether man discovered it accidentally. In the absence of any authentic information on the subject I venture the opinion it was discovered by a dark-skinned woman. As she was the one who had the most use for fire it is reasonable to suppose that she it was who chanced (in a fit of temper, perhaps) to rub two of her stone knives together with great violence and velocity and was surprised with the divine spark. However this may be, it was women who immediately availed herself of this all-important discovery, and being tired of meat and fish dried in the sun, conceived the brilliant idea of laying it on the hot coals. And thus she started in a long career down the ages the roasts and ragouts and chowders and fricandeaus that have given pleasure and dyspepsia to millions of her descendants of all colors.

There is literally no end to this branch of the subject, but I have said enough to convince any rational mortal that a creature capable of all this could not have been held in utter contempt by contemporary men. Inferior she was considered, as a matter of course, and she was, to a great extent, a commodity to be bought and sold; but, running through all the savagery, there is found a strong thread of respect for women. Even in the lowest tribes they had some rights which they were not at all backward in enforcing; and among the more advanced peoples they had many well-defined rights which no man could in any case take from them. The men privately sought their advice to take the council and exploit it as their own wisdom; they were admitted to some of the solemn feasts; and, sometimes, they armed themselves and went to the battlefield. This, however, seems rarely to have occured in the very early ages.

Such was the dark-skinned primitive woman and such were her achievements.

Drifting down the long stream of time, we suddenly come upon the brilliant vision of the queen of Sheba. Out of the darkness of the dark continent she emerges, robed in splendor, invested with power, endowed with wit and fancy, moved by an intelligent curiosity—a woman capable of appreciating not only the glory of Solomon but his wisdom also. She dazzles us for a brief moment and then disappears into the darkness whence she came and leaves no trace. But it requires no imagination—simply common sense—to follow her into that mysterious land and find a nation of women, not so exceptionally endowed, perhaps, as this great queen, but women of strong character, and vigorous intellect, capable of dealing with the problems of their time. Otherwise there could have been no queen of Sheba.

In the twilight of history we note the appearance of a remarkable Assyrian queen or, more plausibly, several successive queens, who were new types in that olden world. They were not only successful warriors, but they were engineers, mathematicians and architects. They turned the courses of rivers, spanned them with bridges and confined their waters within bounds; they raised great monuments and built temples and public edifices. The name Semiramis is synonymous with every kind of greatness.

Coming down to the Christian era, we find one of the most interesting studies of womankind of any color or any age in the Arabians. Those dark-skinned women, with no possible way of cultivating intellect, the women of a brutal race of men, in a degrading environment, fenced in with customs hostile to them, changed the face of the habitable globe and founded a great religion! Mohammed himself declared, persistently and often, that he would never have been able to achieve success but for his wife Cadijah. This plain, faithful, sensible woman never faltered in the darkest hour, encouraging in weakness and restraining in excess. And when the creed he taught was accepted by the Arabs all the women threw themselves into it with such energy that nothing could stand before them.

They even organized companies of women soldiers and, leading them into battle, fought with a savage cruelty that might have been expected, but also with a heroism most surprising. And all through the Mohammedan conquest women are prominent; sometimes like unto the judicious Cadijah; sometimes like the beautiful and wicked Ayesha, who came near dividing the armies into hostile camps; sometimes like the savage Henda drinking the blood of the enemies of the faith. It is all wonderful. And, as the Christian woman reads the record, she marvels how it was possible that so much good and evil purpose, so much that is noble and heroic, could have been expended with such energy on a religion that does not tend in any way to exalt womanhood.

I have not space to tell of the Chinese woman whose story we glean from legends and glimpses into the histories of their dynasties, while she herself looks at us out of the past with an impressive silence. Nor to dwell upon the East Indian woman, who, with her seductive charm and romantic, poetical nature, conquered great conquerors and ruled through them.

We pass down the centuries and enter, at last, into our own land to be immediately confronted by a dark-skinned maiden whose name and history are familiar to every school child.

Was there in all this newly discovered country but one Pocahontas? She happened to be the one who fell in love with a white man, and, thus, moved to save from destruction the little white colony, has become immortalized. Whether or not this is to be regarded as a meritorious act on the part of this Indian maiden depends upon the point of view, whether that point be Indian or English. But there is no doubt that she was intelligent and attractive and of a sweet nature—a very loveable creature. If you find a well-molded and decorated vase standing in the midst of crude ugly pottery of a past age, you may be reasonably certain that a further diligent search will reveal similar vases. And so, while Pocahontas may have been somewhat more highly gifted than the other young women of her tribe, she was of their kith and kin and not a solitary figure. There has arisen no Cooper for the Indian woman.

It is probable that the Indian tribes in the east with which the early settlers were familiar were less cultured then those found on the Pacific coast at a later date. Among these their women—subject and inferior, of course were of much importance. They had so improved the comforts of existence by quite a range of culinary preparations, clothes and blankets for warmth and various devices for increasing the happiness of their lords, that they had won a position of some dignity and exercised a large and beneficent influence, not asserted and probably not publicly acknowledged, but far-reaching in its effects in civilizing their race.

COMPLAINT IS NOT NEW.

Other Ages Have Said "There is No Time for Leisure."

"Leisure," a woman declared the other day, "is neither a fact nor a possibility—it is scarcely even an ideal. It is a word that in the dictionary should be marked obsolete."

Whether or not the majority of people would agree with her in considering leisure no longer an ideal, it can not be denied that leisure is a rare possession in the first decade of the twentieth century. The common theory seems to be that we have bartered it for telephones and automobiles, for speed and society and business.

Fifty years ago, we say, or a hundred, or a hundred and fifty, life was much simpler and less hurried. Yet, as a matter of fact, a hundred years ago exactly the same complaint was made. It was in 1797 that the famous Mrs. Grant, of Laggan, wrote of that "insatiable love of change—that restlessness, which is, I think, a great and growing evil of the age," and complained that the hours of her young friends were so "engrossed and divided" that there was no time for reading and conversation. Doubtless, could we but look back, we should find the same complaint made in the eighth century as in the eighteenth.

So far from leisure being less possible now than in past years, the average woman, as a recent economic writer has pointed out, never before had so good an opportunity to enjoy it. Gas and electricity, ready-made clothing, prepared foods and numberless household inventions have reduced her work to a fraction of that done by her grandmother. Instead of candle and soap-making, spinning and weaving, salting down the year's meats and making her husband's shirts by hand, she spends hours each week in shopping, amusements, study, fancy work or society, according as inclination and opportunity dictate.

Yet—she has no leisure. After all, is it not frequently because she does not desire leisure so much as she wishes for some other things? The "simple life" is an achievement, not a chance gift, and leisure, to quote another woman's definition, is "merely the art of having time."—Youth's Companion.

The Revolt of Betsy.

Two-score years ago there lived in a Pennsylvania town an ill-mated couple, both as to size and compatibility. The wife was much the larger and stronger, and, in the words of their narrator, "the husband, though a small man, was a nagger and a pestarer." He always provoked the quarrel, and when he went too far his irate spouse would revolt. She would retaliate with such splendid vigor that the husband would call in the neighbors as arbiters, and when they began to take evidence he would invariably thus explain matters: "I struck Betsy in all pleasantness and she got mad," or "I poured water down Betsy's back in all pleasantness and it made her mad."

Scotsman Wanted.

Scotsmen are immigrants of the finest quality, and they bring abundant cash in the pockets as well as begin to accumulate cash as soon as they arrive. This is the type of immigrant Australasia needs, and as both New Zealand and Australia can offer vastly more than Canada, we ought, sooner or later, to see a stream of canny Scotsmen with the hardy bodies, shrewd brains and the well-lined pockets of their race setting in our direction.—Melbourne Life.

CLUBS FOR RAILWAY'S EMPLOYES VIEWED AS SAFETY APPLIANCES

Clear Heads and Healthy Bodies Are the Aim of the Chain of Institutions Along the Southern Pacific.

> "I hereby certify that I am a bona fide employe of the Southern Pacific company, and I hereby agree to conduct myself as a gentleman while enjoying any of the privileges of the club."

This is the only certificate of membership to be required of the men who will use the chain of clubhouses that the Southern Pacific company is building along its lines in Nevada, California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. Railway clubs are no new thing, but the Southern Pacific's are different. There is nothing of the conventional, the severe, or the hideous about the clubhouses. No expense is spared to make them beautiful as well as useful and comfortable, both without and within. Usually the style of architecture is determined by the surroundings. There will be a hint of old Spanish architecture in one, and of the log cabin in another.

The explanation as to why the company is spending thousands of dollars on these clubhouses is simple. The expenditure might properly be charged up to improvement of service and safety appliances. Modern railroading requires men with clear heads and strong muscles. The railroad believes that it will be more likely to keep its men in this condition if it provides comfortable quarters for them, with opportunities for healthy recreation and companionship.

The bed rooms of the clubs, arranged so that they may be darkened during the day for men who have night runs, are spread with immaculate linen. The bath rooms, toilets and washrooms are models of inviting cleanliness. There are card rooms, writing and reading rooms, billiard, pool and lounging rooms, all artistically furnished. Mr. Harriman is the Carnegie of the Southern Pacific railway club, which are supplied with books, as well as periodicals and daily papers. The fiction department of the library, which contains practically every current book of importance, is operated on a circulating system and gives each club the benefit of a large number of volumes.

Club stationery is furnished for members, and an effort is made to induce the men to keep in touch with their families and to continue home ties, however much their employment may keep them away from their own towns. Opportunities for study are offered and every inducement is made to the men who take advantage of these opportunities to improve their education.

In competition with the railway clubs, the saloon, which was formerly the only place the men had to go, has proved a failure, the best testimony to this effect being found in the consistent opposition of saloonkeepers wherever clubs are located. There is the same freedom in the railway club that the man formerly found in the saloons—and a great deal more comfort. No iron-clad rules are made. The men meet in the clubs on the equal footing of gentlemen. There are no membership fees and no deductions from the pay-roll for club maintenance. Trifling fees are charged for beds, bath and billiard room—about enough to cover wear and tear and no more.

A Southern Pacific official who has from the start been closely associated with the establishment of the clubs, sums up their purpose in this way:

"The object is to raise the tone and character of the men by offering opportunities for healthful and moral recreation, and to make them feel that their own success, the success of the company, and the safety of the people who are served depends on each individual doing his part well, not because he has to do it, or is paid to do it, but because it is right."

RECREATION AS WELL AS HEALTH AND COMFORT Are Provided for in the Southern Pacific Club Houses.

MODERN INDIAN ROMANCE.

Will the Girl Educated at Carlisle, Refuse to Be Brought for Four Ponies?

Unsuccessful in his suit to win the hand of an Indian maiden, who is in the Carlisle Indian school, Charlie Red Horse, whose name in the Ute language is unpronounceable, sat in the Union depot last night awaiting the departure of an east-bound train, having in his pocket a scrawled letter from the girl's parents on the New Mexican Ute reservation telling that the girl had been sold to him for the sum of four ponies. The question now arises, and Charles has evidently overlooked it, whether or not the girl who has enjoyed four years' schooling in Carlisle will be willing to marry him, simply because the Indian went through the primeval custom of handing over four ponies to the girl's parents, who are in need of stock.

There is much of Indian romance connected with the story of Charlie and his fair Ute maiden of Carlisle, whose name he pronounced in the Ute language, but did not know the English interpretation. Both were children together on the reservation years ago. The girl was placed in the Carlisle school when she was fifteen years old, while Charlie was appointed as one of the Indian police on the reservation. When Charlie concluded that it was about time for him to marry, he began looking for a bride among the maidens of the Utes on the reservation, and, finding none whose beauty compared with she who had gone to the Indian school years before, he concluded that he must win the affections of the girl at Carlisle. Consequently, two months ago he went to the school, obtained a hearing with the girl, received no encouragement, and concluded that the best thing for him to do was to work in the American way, and with the sanction of the prospective parents-at-law. In consequence he hurried to the reservation, looked up the poor and aged parents of the girl and set about winning their sanction to his marriage with their daughter.

The contract was finally made through the handling over by Charlie of the girl and set about winning their vation. With the letter from the parents in his pocket he is now on his way to the Indian school, where he will present the written wishes of the parents to the girl with the hope that she will return with him. Charlie says that he can care for her in the best manner, and this is not doubtful, as the police on the reservation are usually the most prosperous of all the Indians. Anyway Charlie left Denver last night with high hopes of his ultimate success. It is Charlie's intention to bring the girl back to the reservation, presupposing that she is willing to come, for it is hardly probable that a sale such as Charlie concluded with the parents will hold good with a girl who is about to graduate from the great school.

Master Richard—I don't want to go to heaven; I want to go with father!

Dining With a Vegetarian Duchess.

The duchess of Portland and her daughter are strict vegetarians. "I always feel so greedy when I dine with her grace," confessed a friend of the duchess once. "She drinks no wine and eats only vegetables. It makes one appear a perfect cannibal."

Skim milk, biscuits, butter and cheese are the only items on her grace's menu at lunch, while invariably for breakfast, more skim milk, lettuce and a boiled egg from her daily repast year in and year out.

That Law Again.

For miles and miles the through passenger train has plodded along in the wake of the slow freight. The travelers grow irksome and even petulent.

"Conductor," says one of the boldest of them, "why do you not get that freight to take a siding while we go by it?"

"Under the new Hapburn law," explains the conductor, sadly, "we are not allowed to pass anything."

A Desirable Fault.

"One more question," said the trust magnate to the applicant. "How is your memory?"

"Very hazy," replied the latter.

"Good," cried the magnate. "The job is yours."

Joys of Absence.

"Aren't you awfully lonesome without George?"

"I haven't time to be. I spend the mornings reading his letters and the afternoons answering them."

Amenities of the Loop.

"That's a magnificent voice of yours," said the sarcastic passenger. "You ought to have it trained."

"I am having it trained, sir," said the guard; "elevated railroad trained. Step lively!"

The Important Feature.

Miss Knox—What! She certainly wouldn't have the face to wear a bathing suit like that?

Miss Newitt—I don't know, but she thinks she has a figure.

No Great Danger.

"I risk my life every time I appear," declared the acrobat, who had gone into vaudeville.

"It ain't that bad with me," admitted the monologue artist. "I do tell some awful old ones, but still——"

Not Likely.

"Can't Dick and Mabel patch up their quarrel?"

"I'm afraid not. I proposed they should patch it up, but Dick said he didn't care a darn."

SINCE "In God We Trust" has been taken off of our gold coin why not put it on the cleaning house certificates.

IT is easy for William J. Bryan to get a nomination. It is too bad that some of this phenomenal success does not appear on election day.

SENATOR FORAKER is out in the open as a candidate for president. He will likely stay there. No one seems desirous of taking him in.

LAFOLLETTE is not popular with the predatory politicians of Minnasota, and this ought to be a strong endorsement with the rank and file.

IF the government is going to guarantee bank deposit the Brown's Valley Tribune suggests that it also guarantee subscription accounts. Why not?

THE Windom Citizen says it is mighty convenient to have a local merchant who will trust you when you can't get the currency to send a catalog house.

THE Hartford Courant suggests that instead of "In Gcd Wo Trust," on our coins wo substituto something containing maro truth—"The lovu of money is tho root of all evil."

THE Hibbing Tribuna describes a Johnson republican as "a particularly zealous democrat." Then we might us well give up the old-fangled notion that Minnesota is a republican state.

A NEW YORK man has discovered a way to mako clothes out of paper. But, that's nothing compared with the feat of New York bankers in finding a method to make money out of paper.

IT is one of the inexplicablo problems of high financo how Wall street is able to buy $50,000,000 worth of Panama canal bond and yet cannot furnish $10,000,000 to move tha western crops.

THE panic offers a good excuso to the standpatters for refusing to revise the tariff. But, perhaps, it is just as well. Nobody would want such a revision as tho present congress would give.

VICE-PRESIDENT FAIRBANKS is in hard luck. On the heels of the cocktail incident comes the announcement that Senator Platt has risen from the grave long enough to endorse his candidacy.

A PASTOR at Bluffton, Ind., discouraged by the indifferenco of his congregation, and having exhausted other means of bringing tho recalcitrant within hearing of tho gospel in the early evening bogan tolling the church bell. The people hastening from every quarter to ascertain who was dead, but there was noone physically dead, but thero wero many who were spiritually defunct from every appearance. The actions of this ingenious pastor might be fallowed with good effect by othera in many communities.

MR. DOOLEY asked Mr. Hennessey whother he thought that Roosevelt wants a third term and he answered. "I do not. But he's a good deal like Hogan. I wanted him to stay an' keep me comp'ny wan night. 'I've got to go,' says he. 'It's just as well,' says I. 'Dorsey says he's comin' around at ten to throw ye out,' says I. 'Thin I'll stay,' says Hogan. As th' matther stands at prisint th' on'y people that can't ilect him are those that are agin him." Dooley seems to know the president quite as well as he does Hogan.

THE commercial club of St. Paul ought to ha able to find more important things to take its attention than to get up a big banquet for John D. Rockefeller, one whose smallest of offences was to go into hiding for several months to escape tha sheriff armed with a subpoena says tho Fairmont Sentinel. Of coursa we all understand that the object of tha banquet is merely to give President Roosevelt a backhand slap and to try to bolster up tho bell weathers of predatory wealth. The samo old gang have started in to discredit President Roosevelt by the same methods they used to discredit Bryan a decado ago.

A. B. STICKNEY: The national bank system, with its public examination has been landed by congressmen, senators and president as tha acme of safety, entitled to the confidence of all individual depositors, yet during the forty-five years of their existance, the congress have never provided, and the presidents have never recommended, legislation which would permit the government funds to be deposited in such banks upon the same terms that they urge the people to deposit their money in such banks. Again I say, "let congress provide a system of banks which are good enough to hold the funds of the government on deposit as well as the funds of the peoplo."

J. W. OLSON, state superintendent of instruction, believes that the school children of Minnesota are entitled to as much fresh air as the state demands for those confined in tha eleemosayary and penal institutions, and he is going to see if they are getting it. The graded and high schools of this state are to be examined as to this feature and for the purpose he has provided Inspectors Aiton and Challon with the necessary testing instruments. The purity of the air is also to be inquired into. Tests so far made show that in many of the schools the air in the school rooms is not at all what it should be. Where found to be extremely bad, demands for improvement will be made at once. In other cases suggestions will be made. Good ventilation is one of the requirments under the state aid law, and where it is not provided tho aid can be denied.

A Dangerous Deadlock,

that sometimes terminates fatally, is the stoppage of liver and bowel functions. To quickly end this conditinn without disagreeable sensations, Dr. King's New Life Pills should always be your remedy. Guaranteed absolutely satisfactory in every case or money back, at W. A. Schreiter's drug store. 25c.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Owatonna Journal-Chronical:—Judging from the fuss made by a lot of the state newspapers over the attorney general's affort to enforce the new freight rate legislation the standard of official conduct in Minnesota must have fallen pretty low. Otherwise why such excitement over an official's doing something when, had he left it undone, there would have been a still bigger row raised, and he knew it.

North Branch Review: An eastern dispatch says that the landlords of buildings on Wall street have determined to rout out all swindlers from their premises. There will be lots of rooms to rent.

Aurora News: Through it all there is one consolation. The two or three promoting breweries will not be so anxious to put in new blind pigs.

Eveleth Star: The mining check passed in Eveleth with the same ease and smoothness that the glittering gold has always passed during the pay day season.

Virginia Enterprise: Down in Michigan it is proposed to limit the number of saloons to one for each 1,000 inhabitants. In Virginia we have about seven or eleven to the thousand, and each one separately and all collectively think they should run the affairs of the city to suit themselves. And under the present administration they have certainly made their "think" stick with admirable success.

Ortonville Herald Star: Absolute fairness requires the admission that Canada suffered no more in proportion to her location from the past rather unfavorable season, than many parts of the United States. But why seek a location that must of necessity be in constant danger when so much other country is open to settlement where less strenuous conditions are the exception and not the rule?

Zumbrota News: We are not so vitally interested as to what the president rubs off a $10 gold piece as we are in the fact that they dont go half so far with the paper trust as they used to.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: A report comes floating up from the Twin Cities that the Republicans are to "get together" and reorganize the Republican party of Minnesota. The Ore would respectfully suggest that the job be let out to others than Twin City politicians.

Stillwater Gazette: We beg to announce that not a dollar of our superfluous or other cash is concealed in cast-off socks, old teapots, vacant or unused chimneys, discarded stoves or old boots, but all—yes, all—is deposited in the banks of this city. Patronize home institutions.

With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.
They cure backache.
They cure every kidney ill.

Mrs. Jacob Palham, living in Red Lake Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and received great relief from them. I was suffering from a very lame back and at times sharp pains across my kidneys were so severe that I could hardly do my work. I felt bad all over and did not know what to do to find relief. I finally sent to W. A. Schreiter's drug store, and procured a box. The pain in my back disappeared and I have had no return of it since. I am still using Doan's Kidney pills and am confident that they will cure me. I hope that others suffering from kidney complaint will give them a trial."

THE SCULPTOR TURNED.

His Answer to the Art Critics In Rural France.

At Chalon-on-the-Saone stands the monument executed by Morcean-Vauthier and Berard to commemorate the national defense—a superb cuirassier who carries across his saddle the body of a color bearer who yet clasps in his arms his broken standard.

On the eve of the unveiling the municipal council, presided over by the mayor, repaired to the foot of the statue to examine and see if it should be accepted.

"Are you not going to clean off this green mold?" asked the mayor of the sculptor.

"But, monsieur," replied the sculptor, "that is verdigris."

"Verdigris! Verdigris!" said the mayor. "I understand that very well. Parbleu! I know that this is verdigris, but it is dirty. If I had a kitchen outfit of that color I would have it scoured. That must be cleaned up. You'll have to make that shine."

"But, monsieur" —

At that moment, a member of the council having struck the body of the bronze horse with his cane, they all cried out, "This sounds hollow!"

"Your bronze is hollow, monsieur," said the mayor.

The unhappy sculptor then took great pains to explain that all bronze statues were hollow. The mayor maintained an air of defiant incredulity and as he passed around the monument said, "It appears to me you have hardly detailed the hair in the tail."

This was too much for the sculptor. "I wished," he said, "to screw natural hair into his tail like the hair used in children's hobbyhorses. It would have taken six months to have done so, and I reflected that it would have cost you too much."

And the municipal council of Chalon agreed with the justness of this observation.—Paris Cor.

A Real Wonderland

South Dakota, with its rich silver mines, bonanza farms, wide ranges and strange natural formations, is a veritable wonderland. At Mound City, in the home of Mrs E. D. Clapp, a wonderful case of healing has lately occurred. Her son seemed near death with lung and throat trouble. "Exhausting coughing spells occurred every five minutes," writes Mrs. Clapp, "when I began giving Dr. King's New Discovery, the great medicine that saved his life and completely cured him." Guaranteed for coughs and colds, throat and lung troubles, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Told of President McKinley.

The love which Mrs. McKinley bore her husband was so much the ruling passion of her life that she was extremely sensitive about him. In spite of herself she was jealous even of the demands which the public made upon his time. Her love was matched by a most unusual devotion on the part of the president, as this incident illustrates. Colonel John N. Taylor of East Liverpool, O., a lifelong friend of Mr. McKinley, who was known in Washington as "the man who had a latchkey to the White House," took his little granddaughter, Pauline Taylor, aged three, to the executive mansion for a visit.

She climbed upon Mr. McKinley's knee and soon discovered his watch. Then she pried open the back of the case, as if looking for something.

"Why, Mr. President," she lisped, "it's empty! My papa has my mamma's picture in his watch."

Mrs. McKinley's face fell on the instant, but the president was not found wanting.

"I carry my wife's picture in my heart, Pauline," he said quietly, and Mrs. McKinley was all smiles again.—New York Tribune.

Badly Mixed Up.

Abraham Brown, of Winterton, N. Y., had a very remarkable experience; he says: "Doctors got badly mixed up over me; one said heart disease; two called it kidney trouble; the fourth, blood poison, and the fifth stomach and liver trouble; but none of them helped me, so my wife advised trying Electric Bitters, which are restoring me to perfect health. One bottle did me more good than all the five doctors prescribed." Guaranteed for blood poison, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney complaints, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50c.

Miss Smith—I see that the legislature has passed a law prohibiting the women from wearing stuffed birds or feathers on their hats. Aunt Maria—It ain't fair. I've heard of how the men in the cities wear swallowtailed coats, and they never say a word against it.—Bohemian.

Why Do Doctors Differ?

As an illustration of the old saying that "doctors will differ" the following is related by a physician of unquestioned veracity: In the course of a lecture which he was delivering before a number of students he had brought in by the mother a child six months old, which, he stated, was suffering from a very peculiar affection, and he requested five of the students present each separately to diagnose the case.

The first gave it as his medical belief that the child was suffering from incipient pneumonia; the second, after examination, pronounced it incipient diphtheria; the third staked his reputation upon its being peritonitis; the fourth called it marasmus, while the fifth said it was malaria. When they had each made a careful examination the lecturer said:

"Well, gentlemen, have you anything further to say in regard to the case?"

"Nothing more than has been already said," was the reply from each.

"Well," said he, taking the little one and holding it before them, "this is a child that has never had a day's illness since its birth. It is the most perfectly healthy child that I have ever seen."—London Answers.

RAISED HIS WAGES.

The Way an Employer Got Square With a Faithless Assistant.

A story is told in Milwaukee concerning an elderly German who conducted a good sized manufacturing plant on the south side. He had an engineer at his factory who had been with him for fifteen years and the old gentleman had implicit confidence in him. It was with a profound shock that he discovered finally that the trusted engineer was "grafting" most shamefully.

The proprietor thought it all over for a long while and then sent for the engineer. When that functionary arrived the following dialogue took place:

"Ah, John! Good morning, John. How long hof you been vorking by this place?"

"Fifteen years."

"Ach, so. And vot are your wages?"

"Twenty-five dollars a week."

"M-m-m. Vell, after today it vill be $5 a veek more."

The engineer thanked his employer profusely and withdrew. A week later the old gentleman sent for him again and the same conversation ensued, ending with another $5 a week raise. The third Saturday he sent for the engineer again, and after the same questions and answers he raised his salary another $5 a week.

On the fourth Saturday the engineer was again summoned before the boss.

"How long have you been vorking here, John?" asked the proprietor.

"Fifteen years," replied the engineer, who by this time had grown to expect the weekly question and salary raise as a regular thing.

"And how much voges are you getting?"

"Forty dollars a week."

"Ach, so? Vell, you are fired."

"Fired!" exclaimed the engineer, almost fainting. "Why, you have been raising my salary $5 at a clip for the last three weeks."

"Sure I have," roared the Teutonic boss, all his indignation flaring out at once. "And the reason that I did it vas that it shall make it harder for you for vhen I fire you, you loafer!"—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

SILVER KING OF THE SEA.

The Feats That a Tarpon Will Perform When Hooked.

If you have never seen a tarpon imagine the Mediterranean sardine that you take from the box for lunch lengthened out to six or seven feet. Give it two enormous staring black eyes, a supercilious lip of the most grotesque shape coming down and twisting up again, a mouth that can be thrown so wide open that thirty feet distant when the fish is in the air you can see blue sky down its throat and out through the arched gills. Give the fish a greenish back and a long spine at the dorsal, a powerful sardine-like tail and equip its belly and sides with scales which look more like newly minted trade dollars than anything else, dollars often twice their natural size, into which the purest molten silver has been dropped, scales that flash thousands of rays in every direction, scales that gleam, corruscate and in the full glare of the sun form so many sunbursts to dazzle the eye and confuse the excited angler.

I have taken the "sabalo" under various circumstances and have seen it leap along the outer Florida reef and down by the Rio Grande, where it forms in gigantic schools and moves south in winter, and everywhere it is the same sensational equilibrist, the same air climber and sky scraper when hooked or snared. What the sensations of the tarpon are when hooked it would be difficult to say, but I fancy it is frightened and leaps in the direction away from the pole center, and no two leaps are alike.

It may go directly up into the air, carrying a big wave with it, and lash the air, or it may go out of the water head first, rising like a ray of light ten or fifteen or more feet, then fall gracefully. Every possible position I have seen the frightened tarpon take, from standing on its tail as upright as a soldier to exactly the opposite direction, and an old angler informed me that he had seen a tarpon make a lateral leap of thirty feet.—Charles F. Holden in Recreation.

A Little Too Original.

"You New Yorkers are wonders," said the man from the west here for a brief stay and seeing everything from the Bronx to the Bowery. "Nothing is impossible here—at least I saw vines twined across the sky last night. It was in a restaurant in Forty-second street," he continued. "The ceiling is painted sky blue, and there are little electric lights set to look like stars. Also there are the clouds floating about, but then there are the vines that kill the otherwise very neat illusion. Originality is all right, but vines hitched to a sky is too much for a man from the west."—New York Globe.

The Main Point.

Mrs. Scrapleigh—They say, my dear, that the new rubber plant, the Ficus pondurata, is extremely beautiful. It has a glossy velued leaf— Mr. Scrapleigh (who has strained his back lugging the house plants around)—I don't care anything about its glossy velned leaves. What does the dum thing weigh?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Great Financier.

Cholly—Harry is a great financier. Chapple—Yass! Cholly—He borrowed sixpence from me yesterday to take him to the city to see a man that he knew he could borrow a pound from, and with that pound he flew off to stand a dinner to another man whom he borrowed a hundred from.—London Telegraph.

ALL HALLOW EVE.

A Tradition Handed Down From the Ancient Druids.

The observance of Halloween, or All Hallow eve, is a tradition handed down from the ancient Druids, who celebrated their harvest festival on the last day of October. The next day was All Hallows' or All Saints' day, and so they called the festival All Halloween.

The gay games of modern times are not much like the solemn rites of the Druids, but a connection may be traced between the supernatural beliefs of the ancients and the burlesque attempts to pry into the mysteries of the future which our own Halloween fun represents.

Long after the time of the Druids simple minded country people continued to believe in charms and witchcraft and especially claimed that on the night of Oct. 31 witches and goblins held revel and fairies danced about in the woods. From these spirits or their manifestations it was believed that the future could be foretold and human destinies discovered. As our celebration of the occasion is merely a whimsical adaptation of all this, there is one thing clear at the outset—to a successful Halloween party the young guests must bring a large stock of imagination, a zest for merriment and an unfailing fund of good humor, for many Halloween tricks result in turning the laugh on one or another, and this must be accepted in a gay, good natured spirit. Old fashioned Halloween parties were held in the kitchen, and where this is practicable it is a good place for many of the games. But all of the rooms used should be decorated with trophies of the harvest. Pumpkins, apples, grain stalks and autumn leaves offer materials for beautiful and effective trimming, and if desired draperies of red and yellow cheesecloth and ornamentations of red and yellow crape paper may be added. Jack-o'-lanterns are of course a necessity.—Carolyn Wells in St. Nicholas.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by James Sutor and Wanda Sutor, his wife, mortgagors, to De Nederlandsch-Amerikaansche Hypotheek Bank (The Netherlands American Mortgage Bank) of Uithuizen, The Netherlands, Mortgagee, bearing date the 6th day of December, 1905, with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 7th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. in Book 12 of mortgages at page 31, and

Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said mortgage that if default be made in any of the terms and conditions thereof, the mortgagee or holder of the said mortgage might declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable, and

Whereas, under the terms and conditions of the said mortgage and power of sale therein contained, the said mortgagee and holder of the said mortgage has duly elected and hereby does elect to declare and does hereby declare the whole principal sum of the said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, and

Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable thereon at the date of this notice the sum of Six Thousand Two Hundred Eighty-Five and no 100 Dollars ($6285.00.), and the power of sale having become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statutes in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by the said mortgage, namely; The East Half of the South West Quarter (E½ SW¼), West Half of the South East quarter (W½ SE¼), the West half of the North East quarter (W½ NE¼), and the East Half of the North-West quarter (E½ NW¼) of section number twenty-three (23), and the South-East quarter (SE¼) of section number fourteen (14), all in township one hundred and fifty-two (152), north of range forty-five (45), west of the Fifth Principal Meridian in Minnesota, containing four hundred and eighty (480) acres according to the United States Government survey thereof, be the same more or less, in Red Lake county, in the State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 11th day of January, A. BAD BLOOD

THE SOURCE OF ALL DISEASE

Every part of the body is dependent on the blood for nourishment and strength. When this life stream is flowing through the system in a state of purity and richness we are assured of perfect and uninterrupted health; because pure blood is nature's safe-guard against disease. When, however, the body is fed on weak, impure or polluted blood, the system is deprived of its strength, disease germs collect, and the trouble is manifested in various ways. Pustular eruptions, pimples, rashes and the different skin affections show that the blood is in a feverish and diseased condition as a result of too much acid or the presence of some irritating humor. Sores and Ulcers are the result of morbid, unhealthy matter in the blood, and Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders that will continue to grow worse as long as the poison remains. These impurities and poisons find their way into the blood in various ways. Often a sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, leaves the refuse and waste matters to sour and form uric and other acids, which are taken up by the blood and distributed throughout the circulation. Coming in contact with contagious diseases is another cause for the poisoning of the blood; we also breathe the germs and microbes of Malaria into our lungs, and when these get into the blood in sufficient quantity it becomes a carrier of disease instead of health. Some are so unfortunate as to inherit bad blood, perhaps the dregs of some old constitutional disease of ancestors is handed down to them and they are constantly annoyed and troubled with it. Bad blood is the source of all disease, and until this vital fluid is cleansed and purified the body is sure to suffer in some way. For blood troubles of any character S. S. S. is the best remedy ever discovered. It goes down into the circulation and removes any and all poisons, supplies the healthful properties it needs, and completely and permanently cures blood diseases of every kind. The action of S. S. S. is so thorough that hereditary taints are removed and weak, diseased blood made strong and healthy so that disease cannot remain. It cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., and does not leave the slightest trace of the trouble for future outbreaks. The whole volume of blood is renewed and cleansed after a course of S. S. S. It is also nature's greatest tonic, made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and is absolutely harmless to any part of the system. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Book on the blood and any medical advice free to all who write.

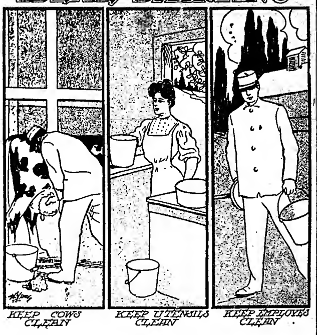
IDEAL DAIRYING



I understood "ideal dairying" to mean the condition of the milk producing industry that we would like to see in vogue. My ideal therefore is practical. It refers to the great bulk of market milk and not to a dairy herd and those whose trade is limited or whose owner can as well run it at a loss as a profit. I mean no criticism of certified milk or other such high class dairies. They have their useful place and they are increasing in importance, but they are beyond any ideal that we may expect to realize in the production of the great bulk of market milk for some years to come.

Milk production is an industry in which many thousands of citizens are making their living. Its methods of conduct have been about the same for many years. It represents an investment of hundreds of millions of dollars. Radical changes cannot be made suddenly in such an enormous enterprise. For a present-day ideal I would describe conditions that are now to be found on some of the better dairy farms that are sending milk to the general market and doing so at a profit. The fact that a dairyman must make a profit from his business is often overlooked. Many people seem to think he should be a philanthropist—or at least carry on his business at a loss.

The production of milk may be discussed conveniently under five headings, representing five distinct points that should be guarded. These are:

1. The health of the cow.
2. The cleanliness of the cow and her surroundings.
3. The condition of the utensils.
4. The cleanliness of the employes (including their health).
5. Cooling and storing the milk.

1. Cows that produce milk for human food should be in good health. A competent dairyman can usually tell if a cow is not in good health and he will recognize any of the common cow ailments except tuberculosis, and he should always withhold from the market any milk given by such a one. He should have a veterinarian pass upon the health of his herd at least once a year. The value of the tuberculin test is well known and it should be used by a rapidly increasing number of dairymen. But it would be unwise, in my judgment, to compel its use in all dairies within a short time. There are not enough competent veterinarians to test all cows in a short period of time, nor are our laws so effective now that unreliable work and recontamination can be sufficiently guarded against. Here is an instance where cow owners need to know the facts. When they understand the true value of tuberculin and how its use may save them from heavy losses, as well as assure safer milk, they will want this test.

Measures for protecting the health of the herd include light and ventilation in the stables. Every stable should have an abundance of direct sunlight and fresh air. If dairymen understood the importance of these agents, new windows and ventilators would be installed at a rapid rate. It would be well if every dairyman knew the details of some carefully conducted experiment along these lines, which has shown the better results in a dairy where light and fresh air were abundant as compared with another where these aids to health were lacking.

2. The cow and her surroundings should be kept clean and this requires intelligent labor or expert supervision. Wholesome milk cannot be produced in dirty places. Many producers are honest in their belief that a little foreign matter falling into milk does no harm if the milk is well strained. They do not know that organic matter is laden with objectionable types of bacteria and these organisms constitute the chief harm and that the soluble part of the contaminating material is next in importance and the stuff that cannot get through the strainer is the least important. If dairymen did but appreciate what it means to plant a lot of bacteria in milk as well as they appreciate what it means to let a lot of weed seeds get into their fields—then it would be easier to enforce the simple rules of cleanliness.

It is not necessary here to tell how to clean a cow or a stable but these are the things of importance rather than the breed of cow or the cost of the stable. Some rich but misguided people have spent fortunes on prize winning animals and fancy buildings and are yet unable to produce good milk—because they or their employes do not know what it means to keep a clean dairy. Unless one has studied the subject he will overlook many a point that seems trivial but is vital. The dust in the air is one of these. For good results special care must be taken to keep the air free from dust. It is very bad practice to brush cows just before milking, or to feed dry hay at that time. Loose ceilings and partitions are responsible for quantities of dust that are invariably found in too many stables. If dairymen knew the "raft theory" of Tyndoli by which the carriage of bacteria on particles of dust floated in the air is made very plain, then it would be easy to reduce this objectionable condition.

3. The kind of utensils used and their care are factors having much to do with the quality of milk. The chief trouble is in the lack of cleaning and sterilization. All utensils should be thoroughly cleaned and exposed to live steam or boiling hot water until practically sterile, and then cared for in a way to prevent further contamination.

Many persons merely rinse with warm water, which does little good, or they may sterilize the utensils carefully, then expose them to dust. Such defects are due more often to ignorance than to willful negligence. Frequently it is found that with the same amount or less work better directed, much better results can be had. It is very important to avoid the use of contaminated water for any dairy work. Disease germs have sometimes been transmitted to milk by impure water used for cleaning.

I must not omit mention of one utensil that is coming into use in the interest of ideal milk. It is the small-top milking pail. Most of the stable contamination finds its way into milk when the pail is under the udder. This can be largely excluded by reducing the size of the opening through which it falls.

4. The employes must, of course, be healthy. They should have clean hands and wear overall suits when milking. It is found by experiment that a quiet milker gets cleaner milk than one who is rough and vigorously shakes the udder and surrounding parts.

5. Some would say that the cooling of the milk is the most important of all requirements. It is vital but not more important than the other four headings. The milk should be cooled promptly to 50 degrees Fahrenheit or lower and kept cold until delivery. Unless an exceptionally cold spring is available every dairy which sends milk to the market should be provided with ice.

Very briefly I have given my idea of what would be ideal milk production for our cities and towns, but this is only half of the story. Good milk must be properly cared for after it leaves the hands of the producer or its chief value is lost. We need ideal transportation and ideal delivery. We need also ideal care of milk in the homes where milk is bought by the pint or the quart and where many of the troubles charged against the dairymen have their origin.

And again, we want purchasers who want ideal milk. For a moment look at the question from the dairyman's standpoint. Many dairymen are in position to ask why they should exercise greater care and increase expense of production (labor or closer attention to details is money) when they cannot improve their market one cent's worth by so doing. We need milk consumers and milk dealers who will show some appreciation of ideal milk.

The saddest and most astonishing exhibit of disregard of the fact that some milk may be better and more wholesome and worth more than other milk is shown by most of our public institutions which buy milk. Especially are the hospitals remiss in this matter.

TUBERCULOSIS A COMMON DISEASE AMONG SWINE

Comparative Effects of Infected and Pasteurized Skim Milk When Fed to Healthy Pigs.

Tuberculosis is of frequent occurrence in hogs, and, apparently, the number of hogs so affected is on the increase. So true is this in some sections of the country that packers are cautious about buying hogs from those localities. The carcasses of tuberculous animals are often so thoroughly infected with the disease as to be unfit for food, and consequently are a source of loss to the packer. Where animals are slaughtered without being subjected to careful inspection the diseased meat is very certain to be unwittingly used for food. A knowledge of the sources of infection is of primary importance to those who must undertake the responsibility of checking it.

It is known that the same bacillus which produces tuberculosis in cattle also produces the disease in hogs. The exact extent to which cattle are the cause of its presence among hogs is, however, not known. Naturally, milk is commonly considered one of the main carriers of the disease. Many instances can be cited of droves of hogs fed at some time in their lives on whole milk, skim milk or buttermilk that when slaughtered have shown a large proportion infected with tuberculosis.

At present there is a great deal of interest taken in all that concerns milk as a source of tuberculous infection. The importance of pasteurizing milk to be used for pig feeding is demanding considerable attention.

For the purpose of investigating some phases of this subject directly associated with the use of milk, an experiment was undertaken by the Iowa Agricultural college, under the direction of W. J. Kennedy, E. T. Robbine and F. W. Bousko of the college faculty.

In this investigation the following objects were sought:

1. To test the effect of feeding to pigs skim milk known to contain virulent bacilli of bovine tuberculosis.

2. To test the effect of feeding pasteurized skim milk to pigs.

3. To determine whether there is any difference in the susceptibility of pigs fed tuberculous milk on pasture and in small dry yards.

Forty pigs were divided into four lots of ten each and fed from July 24, 1906, to February 5, 1907, each lot being fed a ration of corn meal and shorts equal parts by weight with the following differences in the treatment of the lots:

Lot 1 was kept on timothy pasture and fed pasteurized skim milk.

Lot 2 was kept on timothy and fed skim milk containing bacilli of bovine tuberculosis.

Lot 3 was kept in a small dry yard and fed pasteurized skim milk.

Lot 4 was kept in a small dry yard and fed skim milk containing bacilli of bovine tuberculosis.

The skim milk fed to each lot of pigs was pasteurized at the Randall creamery. The heating was done by steam, the temperature only and not the time being controlled. The temperature is usually 200° F. All the lots were fed equal quantities of every lot of milk used. All the infected material, therefore, fed in the milk of lots two and four was purposely introduced for this experiment. It was the original plan to use only pure cultures of the bacilli of bovine tuberculosis for infecting the milk, but as these could not be obtained in sufficient quantity and of undoubted virulence, fresh, tubercular bovine animal tissue was also used. In this way there could be no doubt that the pigs of lots two and four actually ingested virulent tubercle bacilli. The milk fed these two lots was not all infected, but only at intervals of a few days or weeks. Each time the infectious material was thoroughly mixed with the milk in the trough just before the pigs were turned to it so none of the utensils except the troughs of the infected lots were contaminated. Altogether, infected milk was fed to lots two and four seven times—on the following dates: September 25, September 27, October 18, November 1, November 12, November 14 and November 19.

One feed of milk was infected with one liter of glycerin broth culture of bovine tubercle bacilli 500 c. c. being used for each lot of hogs. The other feeds of milk were infected with bovine tubercular tissue, mostly lungs and livers. Microscopic examinations of the tubercles were made to verify the disease. This material was hashed in a meat chopper and mixed with the milk at the rate of three to five pounds to a feed.

The results of the inspection, after slaughter, show that the pigs fed infected milk were all affected with tuberculosis; also that lot one, fed pasteurized milk on timothy pasture had two infected pigs, one case being so severe that the carcass was condemned.

Although the pigs of lots three and four were always in adjoining pens, with only an open fence to separate them, none of the pigs of lot three had tuberculosis, while all of lot four had it, so it seems that the disease is not likely to spread beyond the limits of the pen in which the infected animals are kept. The pigs of lot one were separated by a lane a rod wide from the pigs of lot two, so it does not seem probable that they received their infection from lot two. It is possible that the pastures on which the pigs of lots one and two were kept had been previously infected with the tubercle bacillus from pasturing other stock so affected, and that the two infected pigs of lot one contracted the disease in that way. Or, it is possible that they may have obtained it through the pasteurized milk, although if they did it is strange the infection was not more general, as every lot of milk was equally divided among the four lots of pigs. Frequent tests of the milk showed that the pasteurization had been thoroughly done, so that this source of infection is not at all probable. Of course, it should be borne in mind that although the pigs were probably free from tuberculosis at the beginning of the experiment, it is not absolutely certain that none were affected. So, while the exact source of infection of the two pigs of lot one cannot be determined, it seems most probable that, since none of the pigs similarly fed in dry lot were infected, the blame should be attached to other stock that may previously have frequented the pasture of lot one. The results indicate, however, very clearly that pigs in a dry lot are no more likely to contract bovine tuberculosis than are pigs in pasture, either from yards in which cattle have previously been kept or from infected pigs occupying adjoining quarters.

There was, in a general way, about the same degree of infection among the pigs of lot two on pasture and lot four on dry lot, so that the more favorable conditions for general thrift and growth of the pigs on pasture apparently had no influence with the disease. Noting the infection of the individual pigs, it is seen that every pig infected at all at time of slaughter was affected in the glands of the cervical region; all but one were affected in the bronchial region; about 80 per cent. were affected in the portal and mesenteric glands; one-half had affected livers, while only 20 to 30 per cent. had affected spleens; 20 per cent had tuberculous areas on the insides of the ribs and other parts of the body, and only 20 per cent. had affected lungs. It is, indeed, characteristic of the disease in hogs that it is present in the cervical glands if it is present at all, and it is not at all certain to be found in the lungs.

As has previously been noted, the records of the weights, feeds and gains of the pigs in the several lots indicate that, while pigs affected with bovine tuberculosis may show by their outward appearance no perceptible difference from healthy pigs, their feeding qualities are nevertheless to some extent injured, so that they make smaller gains and are likely to require more feed for 100 pounds gain than healthy pigs. The gains made by the infected pigs enforce the same thought.

The results of this experiment indicate:

1. That pigs fed milk containing virulent bacilli of bovine tuberculosis are very likely to become quickly and seriously infected with the disease.

2. That properly pasteurized creamery skim milk is a safe feed for pigs.

3. That pigs confined in small dry yards are no more susceptible to tubercle bacilli taken in the food than are pigs on pasture, while at the same time they are fully as resistant as are pasture-fed pigs to tubercle bacilli from other sources.

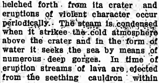
PRIVATE CAR FOR FISH.

From Vehicle Commissioners Will Distribute Finny Tribe.

The new Minnesota game and fish commission car is expected to arrive in St. Paul next week, when the side track running to the fish hatchery is completed, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press. The grading for this track is now being done and the Burlington road has agreed to put in the siding at once. A house also will be built in which to store the car when not in use.

The car is 70 feet long and dark orange in color. The compartment in which the cans of fish will be kept is 32 feet long and has a tank at the front end in which a supply of fresh water will be kept. Adjoining this is the refrigerator, where ice will be stored to be used in keeping the water in the cans cold. Pipes will be run from the water tank around the car so that they can be replenished with a fresh supply of water when needed. The car has a capacity of 200 cans and the water tank is above the level of the tops of the cans as they stand on the floor of the car.



Minnesota Fish Car.

Beyond them is the engine room from which a supply of air will be provided for the cans. Next come the kitchen, toilet room, heater and then the parlor compartment with five berths and the dining-room.

The car is equipped with six-wheel trucks, according to specifications approved by railroad engineers for passenger coaches.

At present the commission can ship only 20 cans at a time, and this keeps the men on the road much of the time, while with the new car they can haul 200 cans at a load and supply the demand along one line of road in a single trip.

RAILROAD AROUND A VOLCANO.

Stretch of Track That Will Cost Much Money to Build.

The stretch of road that runs from Tuxpan in the state of Jalisco to Colima, Mexico, is one of the most expensive pieces of railroad building in America. It will cost more than $3,000,000 gold to build this forty-three miles of road. The unreliable antics of the Colima volcano had to be taken into consideration in selecting the route. Jets of steam are constantly belched forth from its crater and eruptions of violent character occur periodically. The steam is condensed when it strikes the cold atmosphere above the crater and in the form of water it seeks the sea by means of numerous deep gorges. In time of eruption streams of lava are ejected from the seething cauldron within the mountain and this molten mass follows the courses marked out by the waterways and pours down upon the more level land far below. The gorges, or barrancas, as they are called in Mexico, are 300 to 600 feet in depth and 100 to 2,000 feet across.

It has been a stupendous task to get the necessary machinery, such as steam shovels, into the almost impenetrable region. All machinery had to be knocked down and carried along narrow mountain trails upon the backs of burros. Frequently when impassable barrancas were reached the loads had to be let down to the bottom of the gorges by means of ropes, and carried across to the other side by Mexican laborers, and then hoisted to the trail on the other side, to resume the journey upon the backs of the patient burros.—W. D. Hornaday in Moody's Magazine.

New Cars Were Lost.

Several years ago the Lehigh Valley road invested in a bunch of new box cars of a certain pattern and in the shipment there was a shortage of three cars. They could not be traced. Seven months after the shipment one of these cars was discovered in Chicago and had made two trips to San Francisco. It was a year before the second car was rounded up, well worn, while months later it was discovered that the third missing car had been smashed in kindling in a wreck.

It is a wonder to the ordinary observer that these knight errant box cars ever get back home. Some of the cars are gone for months, and it has been charged that in times of shortage many of the roads are not particular about sending cars back home.

British Railroad Figures.

From the official railway returns issued at London it appears that British railway capital last year increased by only £2,500,000, the smallest number recorded since the construction of railways began. The total capital invested in British railways amounts to £1,286,000,000. On this the average interest paid last year was 3.46 per cent—not a large return.

Road Grows Own Ties.

The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad has gone into tree growing in order to provide for its future supply of crossties. The Santa Fe has adopted the eucalyptus as the most suitable species for the purpose because of its rapid growth, great density and durability, and is now planting 100 acres in a ranch of 8,000 acres in southern California to eucalyptus seedlings.

A VALUABLE HOME RECIPE.

Will Break Up a Cold in 24 Hours or Cure Any Cough That Is Curable.

Mix one-half ounce of Concentrated oil of pine with two ounces of glycerine and a half pint of good whisky. Shake thoroughly each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

The renowned throat and lung specialist who established a camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine, and whose remarkable cures there attracted international attention, declares that the above formula is one of the very best remedies obtainable for an acute cold and that it will strengthen the lungs, relieve coughs and heal the bronchial tubes. Also, that it will cure any case of lung trouble not too far advanced if the patient will assist by plenty of outdoor exercise, inhaling deep, long breaths every few minutes.

The ingredients are procurable of any good prescription druggist and easily mixed at home and should take its place as one of the most valued remedies in the family medicine chest.

Inquiry at one of the leading druggists elicited the information that Concentrated oil of pine is put up for dispensing only in half-ounce vials securely sealed in round air tight cases intended to protect it from heat and light. The oils sold in bulk and the patent medicines put up and labeled "Oil of Pine," are to be avoided because owing to their impurities they produce nausea and are useless as a medicine, besides they sometimes leave permanent kidney trouble.

"My baby's face and neck were covered with itching skin similar to eczema, and she suffered terribly for over a year. I took her to a number of doctors, and also to different colleges, to no avail. Then Cuticura Remedies were recommended to me by Miss G—. I did not use it at first, as I had tried so many other remedies without any favorable results. At last I tried Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent Pills, and to my surprise noticed an improvement. THE CAFE REVOLUTIONIST.

He Isn't Doing Business Any More in Havana and Is Discouraged.

Maj. Herbert J. Slocum of the Second United States cavalry has been detailed in Cuba for some years. It was he who brought the guardia rurale in that country up to a point of efficiency, so that the island is safer now than ever before.

He and his guard have been very keen after the persons who plot insurrection, and as a result the few remaining recalcitrants have had a miserable time of it recently.

Some one commented upon the fact that there were no more parties of revolutionists to be seen about the cafes in Havana talking blood and drinking coffee.

"No, we've stopped the cafe revolutionist," said Maj. Slocum.

"How do they like the change?" he was asked.

"They don't like it at all. They don't think we play the game fairly.

"Every well conducted revolutionist thinks that a cafe is the place to plot in. But since we've driven a few of them out to the mountains in the rainy season revolutions have dropped away off in popular favor.

"It isn't such fun plotting in the wet and there's no one around to see what a hero you are."

WHAT WAS IT

The Woman Feared?

What a comfort to find it is not "the awful thing" feared, but only chronic indigestion, which proper food can relieve.

A woman in Ohio says:

"I was troubled for years with indigestion and chronic constipation. At times I would have such a gnawing in my stomach that I actually feared I had a—I dislike to write or even think of what I feared.

"Seeing an account of Grape-Nuts I decided to try it. After a short time I was satisfied the awful thing I feared but was still bad enough. However, I was relieved of a bad case of dyspepsia by changing from improper food to Grape-Nuts.

"Since that time my bowels have been as regular as a clock. I had also noticed before I began to eat Grape-Nuts that I was becoming forgetful of where I put little things about the house, which was very annoying. But since the digestive organs have become strong from eating Grape-Nuts, my memory is good and my mind as clear as when I was young, and I am thankful." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. WESTERN CANADA A WINNER

THE CROP OF 1907 IS AN EXCELLENT ONE.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta Farmers Doing Well.

Tho interest that Western Canada has aroused for some years past is growing in intensity. The conditions of the crop of 1907 are such that results can be spoken of with some degree of certainty. The yield of grain will be about 80,000,000 bushels and the price the farmers will realize for it will be upwards of seventy million dollars. The oat crop was good in most places, and the crop of barley will be very remunerative. Those who know of the generally unsatisfactory conditions during the seeding, growing and ripening period in the United States during the past season, will look with righteous distrust on any statement intended to give the impression that Western Canada conditions were so much different. Generally, they were not, but the conditions of a highly recuperative soil, long and continuous sunshine, are conditions possessed by Western Canada and not possessed by any other country on the Continent. This is why it is possible to record today a fairly successful crop, when in most other places the opposite is the case. The yield in all grains is less than last year, but the higher prices obtained more than offset any falling off in the yield. Take for instance the Province of Saskatchewan the wheat crop will be worth $21,135,000. Last year the same crop was 35 per cent. larger and the quality better. The yield was worth $24,000,000. Oats and barley are very important factors in all three central Provinces. At Gladstone, Manitoba, returns from one farm were $27 per acre from the wheat land, $35 per acre from oats, and $30 per acre from barley. The yield of wheat at Dauphin, Manitoba, was 20 to 24 bushels to the acre but not of a very good grade, but the yield of barley in that section was good and so was the quality and price. At Meadow Lea, Manitoba, 15 to 20 bushels to the acre were thrashed, bringing a round dollar on the market. At Oak Lake, Manitoba, on some fields where 21 bushels were expected, twelve and fifteen was the result; others again where twenty was looked for gave twenty-two to twenty-five. One special patch south of town on J. M. McFarlane's farm went as high as thirty bushels to the acre. At Sbcho, Saskatchewan, oats yielded from 60 to 65 bushels to the acre. Sem Wunder threshed 2,500 bushels from forty acres. The sample is good and weighs well. At Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, W. Bibby threshed 97 bushels of oats to the acre, and two others were but little behind. Wheat here reached 35 bushels. At Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, from a quarter section all in crop, Alex. McKinnon of Ingleside threshed an average of 33 bushels No. 1 Northern. I. J. Grant had 190 acres, yielding 6,000 bushels of the same grade. These illustrations taken from widely distant districts (and thousands of others could be produced) show that the year 1907 has not felt the serious effects from severe winter, late spring, or unfavorable conditions during the growing season that might have been anticipated. ECONOMY IN DRESS

WELL-DEFINED PLAN IS FIRST REQUISITE.

With This It Is Quite Possible to Be Smartly Gowned on All Occasions at Comparatively Small Expense.

The woman who wants to dress well and modishly on a moderate allowance must follow a well-defined plan. She should first take account of the present articles in her wardrobe, then decide on what she will need to enable her to look well turned out on all occasions for the coming season. Her first list will be apt to be far too long and costly for her resources, but by cutting off nonessentials and managing for combinations that will fit in with her several gowns or suits, considerable variety of effect will be possible with a very limited number of independent toilets.

This "cutting of the coat to suit the cloth" need not result in any apparent economy; on the contrary, it often produces a distinct gain in style and individuality, but the women who practices it must be able to say "no" to her inclinations when their indulgence clashes with her plan, and she must understand her limitations. Her color range should be quite limited, and, above all, becoming and suited to the demands of her environment. She cannot afford to indulge in freak fashions or in extremes of any sort, but she should take advantage of every bit of up-to-date modishness in small accessories such as hats, gloves, boots and neck fixings that her means will permit, only remembering that a few really nice well-selected articles give much better results than many things of a more ordinary sort.

Every one knows one or two people who manage to appear as smartly turned out as their more opulent friends at a fraction of the cost. Very often, indeed, their costumes will possess a certain distinctive charm that the others are unable to purchase at any price, and paradoxical as it may sound, these women are not the ones who spend the most time in contriving their outfits. A well-defined plan of dressing saves time as well as money.

Consciously or otherwise, the women who dresses exceptionally well at little cost has reduced the matter to a science. She buys only what she considers essentials, though these may often take the form of very smart fripperies. A well-chosen veil may be expensive, but enable a last season's hat to do further service when otherwise new headwear would be necessary, and her smart small belongings are what enable her to make her few gowns fit in well for any of the many occasions where they must serve.

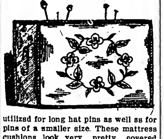
There is no haphazard in her well-considered scheme, and she patronizes bargain counters only when their wares will fill a definite want in her wardrobe.

Probably experience has impressed her, as it has failed to do in the case of less clever women, with the folly of purchasing anything simply because it is cheap. She knows that this form of buying is both extravagant and annoying if indulged in without sufficient consideration.

BEST FORM OF PIN CUSHION.

Mattress Design Certainly Offers the Most Conveniences.

Of all the many different forms in which pin cushions are made, the oblong mattress shape, thoroughly well stuffed, is always one of the most successful, possibly because it can be utilized for long hat pins as well as for pins of a smaller size. These mattress cushions look very pretty covered with detachable linen cases, which can easily be removed for washing from time to time. A mattress cushion of this kind is shown in our sketch covered with very pale blue linen, and adorned with a wreath of wild roses and foliage worked in pale shades of pink and green; a pale green cord outlines the cover. The same idea can be carried out, of course, in linen of any shade, or in silk or satin, if preferred, embroidered either with flowers or with initials.



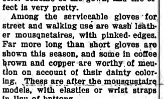
NEW GLOVES AND SLEEVES.

Models of the Past Season Still Remain in Fashion.

For novelty's sake, it is well to have one or two frocks or separate bodices made with the long, close, wrinkled sleeve, but the short bodice sleeve, the three-quarter sleeve and all the rest of near-elbow models are as modish as they have been for a year past.

Gloves will be a question of interest as long as the discussion over sleeves continues. The smartest models are, as usual, of glace or suede in pale grays and fawns and in cream and white. It is strange that, despite the purple craze, comparatively little is shown in this tint in fashionable armwear. Where one is faithful to the one-color scheme to the minutest detail, of course, the gloves follow the color scheme of the gown, and the effect is very pretty.

Among the serviceable gloves for street and walking use are wash leather mousquetaires, with pinked edges. Far more long than short gloves are shown this season, and some in coffee brown and copper are worthy of mention on account of their dainty coloring. These are after the mousquetaire models, with elastics or wrist straps in lieu of buttons.



The vogue of the short skirt has a great deal to do with the strong demand for attractive footwear this season.

Though the shoes and hosiery shown for the long skirt are perhaps more elaborate than they have been for seasons, yet the woman in the short skirt is more particular about having her footwear faultless.

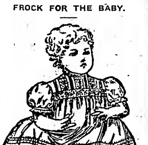
A surprising number of smartly gowned women are displaying high French heels and sheer silken hose, with gowns of ankle length, while others prefer the Cuban heel and hose a trifle more substantial.

Low shoes will be worn as long as the weather permits, and, from one extreme to the other, the high boot will take its place.

Suede boots having 15 buttons are shown and are one of the sensational innovations for winter.

Judging from the display in the custom shoemakers' windows the extremely high shoe will be the fancied style during the winter season.

FROCK FOR THE BABY.



Veiling, Viyella, cashmere, silk, lawn and many cotton materials are suitable for making this little frock. The skirt is gathered to a square yoke under a band of insertion. The yoke is composed of strips of the material tucked, each strip being divided by insertion. The foot is trimmed above the hem with insertion and three tiny tucks.

Materials required: One and three-fourths yard 40 inches wide, and about three yards insertion.

Braiding Must Be Black.

No matter what color your winter frock may be the braiding must be black, and a touch of some black, flat fur will give it all the chic of an imported gown.—Vogue.

Simple Corset Cover.

In these days of the lace, net and lingerie waist one's corset covers must be pretty and well fitted. The slipover corset cover is one which suits many figures and it is easy to make.

The front is made without any tucks and the fullness is obtained when the corset cover is tied in front and at the waist. The neck and sleeves are finished with beading and lace. The back of the corset cover reaches just to the waist and is fastened in a belt made of strong embroidery beading through which ribbon an inch wide is run.

The front of the corset cover reaches a little below the waist line and is held in place by the ribbon, which is tied around the belt. This corset cover is made in two pieces, front and back. As one can tell by its name, it slips over the head and has no opening either front or back.

Old Gowns.

If you are going to freshen up an old gown, or, for that matter, an "old room," don't use trimmings or materials that look new. The beauty of real rugs, tapestry, and hangings, and fine brocade is that they never look new and they never look old. Always match in color the oldest part of a gown that needs freshening up or a room that needs going over, and you need never fear the sunlight or the eyes of the critic.

New and Liberal Homestead Regulations in

WESTERN CANADA

New Districts Now Opened for Settlement

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Some of the choicest lands in the grain growing belts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have recently been opened for settlement under the Revised Homestead Regulations of Canada. Thousands of homesteads of 160 acres each are now available. The new regulations make it possible for entry to be made by proxy, the opportunity that many in the United States have been waiting for. Any member of a family may make entry for any other member of the family, who may be entitled to make entry for himself or herself. Entry may now be made before the Agent or Sub-Agent of the District by proxy, (on certain conditions) by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

"Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less."

The fee in each case will be $10.00. Churches, schools and markets convenient. Healthy climate, splendid crops and good laws. Grain-growing and cattle raising principal industries.

Child Life in France.

Modern France is the stronghold of the family system. See a French family at dinner in a restaurant, or for that matter at home. You will never see a gayer, livelier function. There is such a frank and unassumed sense of community about the whole thing. The boys adore their mother, the girls their father, the parents take such a whole hearted delight in their children and the children are so happy and respectful. It is a sight of which every Frenchman may be proud of.

Then, again, French parents love to play the part of a lesser Providence to their children. Nowhere in the world are so many or such varied toys for children made and sold as in Paris. The stranger is often astonished at the fact that no child ever crosses his path who does not bear something novel, something ingenious in the shape of a plaything.

A Narrow Escape.

There is at least one man who learned a lesson without losing any money during the recent financial upheaval. It is probable, however, that he lost some sleep. He was a curb broker, and he had a "hunch" that the bank in which he kept his money was about to follow in the wake of the Knickerbocker Trust company. So he withdrew his account and put it into the Trust Company of America, and the next day came the run on that bank. There are fewer details to be had from the broker than if his "hunch" had turned out otherwise."

Going Some.

Monday Aaker's Business college sent Miss C. Johnson into a position as stenographer in the office of Attorney Lesell, LaMoure; to-day, Tuesday, Gudrun Lund goes into a similar position in the office of President Bogstad, Moorhead. Six A. B. C. students have gone into positions the last few days. Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

A Helping Hand.

When the foreign missionary had concluded his talk he made the usual appeal for contributions, however small. Coming up to the platform with several others, a small boy mounted to the level of the lecturer and, hastening toward him, said:

"Please, sir, I was very much interested in your lecture, and—and"—

"Go on, my little man," said the missionary encouragingly. "You want to help in the good work?"

"Not exactly, sir," said the boy. "What I want to know is, have you any foreign stamps you don't want?"—Success Magazine.

An Easy Mark.

Theodore—It's all right, darling; I have met your father and we took to one another at once. He even went so far as to borrow £10 of me. Surely he can't refuse me your hand after that. Edith—Dory, I'm afraid you've made a mess of it. Pa told me about the £10 and said I'd better give you up; that you were too easy going.—London Scraps.

Her Opportunity.

"I've come to give notice, ma'am."

"Indeed?"

"And would youse give me a good reference, ma'am? I'm going to Mrs. Jones, across the way."

"The best in the world, Maggie. I hate that woman."—Life.

Courage, like cowardice, is undoubtedly contagious, but some persons are not liable to catch it.—George D. Prentice.

About the only thing a man can do without trying is to fall.—Chicago Record-Herald.

"Hear! Hear!"

The parliamentary "Hear, hear!" was not always an expression of approval. So one learns from Dr. Murray's dictionary. The phrase was originally "Hear him, hear him!" used as an exclamation to call attention to a speaker's words. We have a record of its use in 1689 and as late as 1763. A member of the house of commons in 1768, being interrupted in a speech by a "Hear!" retorted, "That very word, 'Hear!' I dread of all others," and a member in 1770 referred to its use as "disorderly." The unabridged form, "Hear him!" was in use so late as the beginning of the century. Lord Stanhope tells us, in his "Life of Pitt," that when that statesman reappeared in the house of commons in May, 1803, after a long absence in opposition, he was hailed as he passed up the gangway with cries of "Hear him!" Francis Horner, who was in the strangers' gallery, noted as a remarkable thing that when Pitt rose to deliver his memorable speech on that occasion he was cheered—met with cries of "Hear him!"—before he had uttered a word. We have warmer blood nowadays.—London Chronicle.

It Looked Suspicious.

Five-year-old Lewis had on several occasions successfully evaded his nurse and paid surreptitious and delightful visits to the workmen on an apartment house in process of building at the corner of his block. As the result of his observations there he unconcernedly and without prejudice emitted a choice and varied assortment of profanity at the luncheon table. His shocked mother tried to impress upon him that never, never again must he repeat such words. But Lewis either lacked discrimination or his parent's warning had not been sufficiently impressive, for a few days afterward he vented a notable addition to his vocabulary of expletives. His mother this time waited not for speech, but promptly and firmly seized the young man and washed his mouth out with soapsuds, which she had already demonstrated as an effectual spiritual cleanser.

A few days afterward Lewis was watching the nurse giving his six-weeks-old sister her bath, and when nurse carefully washed out the little mouth Lewis asked interestedly, "Nurse, has baby been saying naughty words?"—New York Times.

When the Time Came.

Maud—Oh, Ethel, and what did you say to him when he proposed to you? Did you say what you said you were going to the other day? That was a noble speech, just suited to crush the boldest man. And did he slink away like a whipped dog?

Ethel—Well, not exactly. You see, I didn't say just that. I—I—well—er—er—well, you see, I said "Yes."—London Express.

Hunting a Hatpin.

Did you ever hunt for a hatpin in a dusty country road when the young woman who lost the pin does not know exactly where it dropped out of the carriage? It is great sport. There were three other parties in the carriage who did not return to hunt for the pin, but left the young woman and the young man to trail back over the road. The persons in the carriage suspected that the hatpin affair had been made up by the couple hunting for it and so did not interfere, which was very good of them. After strolling back a mile and a half, so that the occupants of the carriage were dimly visible in the distance, the hunters started to return. The party in the carriage then began to realize that there might be something in the story, after all. They drove back, and everybody began to hunt. The hatpin was of a dull gold hue. With their noses in the dust the hunters hunted. Fate led the girl who lost the pin to pick it up herself. Then the suspicions of the remainder of the party were again aroused. They actually believed that it was a put up job. How suspicious some people are!—Columbus Dispatch.

A Painful Possibility.

When the teacher called the class for geography she noticed that Eben Wilkins, her dullest pupil, wore a particularly cheerful smile.

"You look as if you knew your lesson today," she said encouragingly.

"Yes'm, I do," he answered briskly. "The answer to the first question is 'north,' and the next is 'Alaska,' and the next is 'United States,' and the next is"—

"But that is not the way to learn your lesson, Eben," and the teacher struggled for a properly severe expression. "You must skip about. That is what I shall do in asking the questions."

Eben looked as if the joy of living had departed once for all.

"But supposing I didn't skip about just the way you do," he said plaintively, "then I'd be all mixed up."—Youth's Companion.

They Won't Talk Shop.

"There is just one line of trade that men cannot be induced to talk about in public places," said the city salesman. "That is women's fashions. I saw a man in the car a little while ago that I wanted to interview the worst way, but I knew it would be impossible to get a word out of him. He deals in cloaks and suits, and, like all the rest of the men who handle women's garments, he fights shy of the subject in street cars on the ground that nothing makes a man look quite so ridiculous in feminine eyes and the eyes of other men as to discuss from a business standpoint the length of women's coats, the color of their gowns, the shape of their hats and the size of their sleeves."—New York Globe.

The Walking Delegate.

When it first became a part of my duty to come in constant and direct contact with employers and trades union men, it was with little comprehension of the intensely human elements that persist, however the industrial environment changes. For example, it was a cause of much surprise to hear a very active business agent—"walking delegate," if you like—in telling the story of a labor trouble he had been handling and upon which a good deal depended remark that he couldn't follow it up on a certain day because it was his last chance to buy Christmas presents for the babies. Previously looked upon as a sort of impersonal economic automaton, he suddenly became understandable in the light of what he really is—simply an honest, somewhat narrow, tender hearted, pugnacious, jolly good fellow.—H. Robbins in Atlantic.

Poor Portugal.

Poor, proud, sunken Portugal! It is difficult for her to realize that she was ever an intrepid nation, and there is something distinctly pathetic in the manner in which a present day Portuguese will revert several centuries in his pride of patriotic achievement. Vasca da Gama was Portugal's and Camoen. There can be no doubt that she has been great. Let her people derive from the fact such solace as they may. Yet in spite of this natural national feeling and the many evidences of past glory still existing throughout the land the Portuguese, with a very few exceptions, have no true appreciation of their ancient treasure. When questioned about anything archaeological or historical they invariably say that it is muito antigo (very ancient), apparently quite satisfied themselves with such vague assurance.—Isabel Moore in Atlantic.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, dated the second day of November, 1903, and recorded in the office of Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, on the 29th day of March A. D., 1904, at five o'clock p. m., in book twenty-nine (29) of Mortgages on page three hundred fifty-five (355), whereby John N. Miller and Lizzie K. Miller, his wife, who were the mortgagors therein, mortgaged and conveyed to L. S. Hackney, who was the mortgagee therein, the following described property, situate in the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, to-wit:

> The south half of the ne¼ of section number five (5) in township number one hundred fifty-three (153), north of range number forty-four (44), west of the fifth principal meridian containing eighty (80) acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, to secure the payment of the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars and interest thereon, at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, according to the terms of their certain promissory note, bearing even date with said mortgage and payable five years after date, with interest at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, payable annually.

Said mortgage contained a provision, that should any default be made in the payment of any annual installment of interest due thereon or in the payment of any taxes thereafter to be assessed thereon, previous to the day appointed for the sale of lands for state taxes in the state of Minnesota, then and thereupon the whole sum, for the security of which said mortgage was given, shall become immediately due and payable at the election of the said mortgagee.

Said mortgagors have defaulted in the payment of the sum of four and 81-100 ($4.81) dollars of the annual interest due thereon, on the second day of November, 1906, and in the payment of the sum of twenty-eight ($28) dollars, being the entire installment of interest due thereon, on the second day of November, 1907, and in the payment of the taxes assessed thereon for the year 1905, and are still in default therein.

There is claimed to be and is actually due on said note and mortgage, at the date of this notice, the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars, principal; thirty four and 35-100 ($34.35) dollars interest; nine and 45-100 ($9.45) dollars paid by said mortgagee for the taxes of 1905 after said premises had been sold for taxes, with sixty five cents interest thereon; twenty-five ($25) dollars, attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage, to be paid in case of a foreclosure thereof, in all, amounting to the sum of four hundred sixty-nine and 45-100 ($469.45) dollars, due thereon at the date of this notice, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover said debt or any part thereof.

Now, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale, in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, said mortgage will be foreclosed and the property above and therein described will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, on the 18th day of January, 1908, to satisfy and pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and the costs and expenses of said sale.

USE PRINTER'S INK

The Local Merchants have Received their Xmas Goods and so Advertise.

The local dealers have been busy the past few days unpacking their holiday goods and putting the same on display that Christmas shopping may be made easy. The store windows about town show art and taste in their display, and those passing along the streets are sure to stop and let the eyes feast upon the many beautiful articles of seasonable selection. Among those who have made a special effort to supply their trade with toys and articles suitable for seasonable tokens, and who are anxious that the trade should know of their offerings, are

Henry W. Anderson, the popular jeweler, who has on display a handsome line of jewelry and silverware suitable for Christmas tokens and "friendship retainers." He is also offering his odds in Japanese chinaware at cost to close out to make room for a new line of hand painted china.

Brunelle Bros., the local cigar manufacturers, are busy these days supplying the trade with holiday boxes of cigars, the brands of which they call particular attention in an enlarged space.

E. Chatel, the Cash Grocer, tells of the fine assortment of new goods just received, and calls special attention to his chinaware and crockery, and to the chromos to be given away.

The First State Bank has enjoyed a prosperous and steady growth during the past year and they solicit your banking business with the assurance of safety and reliability.

"The Christmas Store" is that of Franz F. Freund, and he is headquarters for everything in candies, fruits, nuts, toys, post cards, fancy chinaware, etc.

The First State Bank of Brooks has their financial statement for the perusal of our readers this week.

Gercenu & Zaiser, the Busy Store, have some special bargains in groceries, cloaks, ribbons, etc., for the shopping day trade. You can well afford to wait for this event.

The Hunt Hardware Co. are preparing for inventory and have a number of "specials" for Christmas Shoppers' Day, besides a special discount in various lines.

Special offerings in silver knives and forks is the theme of G. A. Kankel's advertisement, and none should fail to read it carefully.

Theo. LaBissoniere, of the Big Store, has numerous special offerings for the holiday trade, besides a special discount on clothing.

The Merchants State Bank gives a comparative statement showing a steady growth, which goes to show that conservative banking merits increased patronage.

J. N. Nimesgern, the north side general merchant, has special offerings in Columbia graphophones, toys, dishes, etc.

The Red Lake Falls creamery will run all winter, and they want ALL the cream of the country tributary.

W. A. Schrieter, as usual, will be headquarters for Santa Claus and has his drug store packed with holiday goods suitable for all needs.

Matt Skale, the north side general merchant and traders' friend, has a few words calling your attention to his mammoth stock of furs, clothing and furnishings suitable for Christmas presents.

W. T. Spillane has his confectionery store packed with toys, candies and novelties to please the older ones as well as the children.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: When a man will diet it's with something he won't eat anyway.

The more a girl's photograph looks like an angel the more surprised her family would be to know it.

A woman can never get so fat that she doesn't wonder how some other woman's dressmaker can fit her.

It's the man who hasn't any balance in the bank who makes the most fuss about it cashing only small checks.

Even when a man is in such a hurry at breakfast that he can't look at his newspaper he believes it helps him to catch his train not to let anybody else touch it.

A Chemical Mystery.

Some years since a meteor that fell in Mexico attracted attention from scientists all over the world because there was some reason for thinking that it might be a fragment of a lost comet. A scientific investigation proves that golden grain belt beer is rich in nutrition and nerve food and a pure, wholesome drink that aids digestion. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

XMAS SHOPPER DAY

It Promises to be an Occasion when Bargains in all Lines are Rife.

Our merchants are busy these days waiting upon the trade that usually precede a Christmas rush, and are working overtime preparing for Christmas Shoppers' Day, which promises to be a great success and the crowning event over all market days which have been held in Red Lake Falls during the past two seasons. The stores are packed with holiday goods of every variety and shopping so far has been far in advance of former years, and as Saturday, the 21st, draws near the assortments become broken and selecting presents the last few days before Christmas will become more difficult. However, the day set aside for Christmas shopping will find on display the many specials designated by our dealers in their advertisements prior thereto, and all who avail themselves of these opportunities will find "Christmas presents in their stockings," so to speak.

Special inducements are offered those from a distance who do their trading in Red Lake Falls, and a ready market for all grains and produce is always to be found here. Wood, also, has been selling readily this fall at good prices, so none need hesitate about making Saturday, December 21st, their Christmas shopping and trading day. Watch continually the advertisements of our merchants and let not distance stand between you and "Santa's headquarters" when it comes to doing your holiday shopping. Bring the little tots in and let them feast their eyes upon the holiday displays about town, and then so far as possible see that their letters to Santa Claus are properly "stamped" so none will be disappointed Christmas eve. Remember how longingly you waited from year to year for Christmas to come when a mere lad, and if you have prospered this year make glad the hearts of your children by some token appropriate to their age. Christmas Shopper's Day provides these tokens, so remember the date, come early and bring your family.

PRONOUNCED INSANE

Judge Tarrant was Summoned to Act on Case.

Probate Judge N. W. Tarrant was summoned to Thief River Falls on Monday to decide upon the sanity of one Joe Wickum, who was held in custody by the police awaiting the Judge's arrival. This was the third time the fellow was brought before the board and while he seemed rational both times before, he was off his balance right Monday. He was pronounced insane and on Tuesday evening was conveyed to the hospital at Fergus Falls by Sheriff Lewis A. Nelson, assisted by Patrolman Jas. Farr, of Thief River Falls. On their return home yesterday morning Sheriff Nelson and Mr. Farr arrested a young woman at Crookston for stealing, and she was taken before Judge Bishop, of the Municipal Court at Thief River, and given a hearing, but we failed to learn of her disposition ere going to press.

NEW DITCH LAW VOID.

Unconstitutional to Take Property for Private Purposes.

The ditch law passed by the last legislature was laid away on the shelf last week in an opinion handed down by the supreme court, in which Justice E. A. Jaggard declares chapter 191 of the laws of 1907, the new ditch law, to be unconstitutional and void.

The new law gave the owner of wet lands the right to drain them across a neighbor's land. If the men whose land was affected by the drain offered an objection it was up to the town supervisors to appraise the damage.

William Pautzke of Rockwood attempted to dig a ditch across the land of Charles Schubert, who entered a protest, on the ground that the new law permitted the taking of private property for private purposes.

BANKS SHOW GAIN

Southern Red Lake County Shows No Signs of Financial Distress.

Red Lake can justly lay claim to bring one of the most prosperous counties in the state. The bank statements issued this week in response to the call by the superintendent of banks shows unusual growth of deposits and resources. This condition can be accounted for on no other theory than that the people of the county have had a favorable year.

In Red Lake Falls the two banks exhibit total resources of $411,881,77 while the deposits aggregate $356-721,16. This is an increase in resources of $41,000 since last spring.

The First State Bank of Brooks, the newest bank in the county, is a lusty infant, showing resources of $56,901.59, and deposits of $45,662.-44.

At St. Hilaire the Merchants State Bank, managed by C. L. Hansen, has resources of $135,689,04 and deposits of $121,769.05.

The First State Bank of Plummer has resources of $49,086.24 and deposits of $36,642'97.

The statements of the Thief River banks are not at hand, but we understand they show about the same ratio of growth.

The five banks of southern Red Lake county have total resources of $653,558,54; total deposits of $560,-895,62, and total cash assets of $140,777.59. This is a growth of about 18 per cent in the last six months.

This condition of our local financial institutions is gratifying, and is abundant proof that our people are becoming well-to-do.

The local bank have never suspended cash payments, and money for any legitimate purpose is paid out as freely as before the beginning of the financial flurry.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN EPITOME

IMPORTANT EVENTS AT HOME AND ON FOREIGN SHORES BRIEFLY TOLD.

Washington Notes.

R. F. Duckworth of Atlanta, Ga., chairman of the executive committee of the National Farmers' union, and C. T. Ladson met President Roosevelt and Secretary Cortelyou and discussed remedies for financial depression.

The consul at Lourenzo Marquez reports that the governor general will soon publish a decree calling attention to a law and giving all missionaries teaching in schools six months in which to qualify for teaching in the Portuguese language.

The establishment of at least one brigade post is foreshadowed in the authorization of Quartermaster General Aleshire of the equipment of Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, with accommodations for one regiment of cavalry and one of mountain artillery.

At a meeting of senators from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana an amendment of the interstate commerce law was agreed upon in response to the demand of the shippers of lumber of the northwest, prohibiting any increase of railroad rates until such shipper shall be given an opportunity to be heard.

"You can bet your North American life that the battleship fleet will sail from Hampton Roads on its voyage to the Pacific on the morning of Dec. 16. The vessels will get under way just as soon as I receive the president's order to set sail." In this characteristic manner Admiral Robley D. Evans answered the reports recently current that there would be a delay in the assembling and consequent departure of the fleet from the date originally set.

Personal.

Capt. E. K. Dorn, now on the retired list of the navy, has been appointed governor of Guam, vice Commander T. H. Potts.

Dr. Arnold Schwyzer of St. Paul has been appointed Swiss consul to Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana.

May Yohs, the former Lady Hope, who eloped with Putnem Brodlee Strong of New York, and went to Japan, is now playing in a 10-cent vaudeville theater at Sacramento, Cal.

Grant Richards, one of the best known of London publishers, has arrived in New York. Mr. Richards said he believed the time was coming when American writers would be as popular in England as Englishmen.

Henry I. McCrea, son of Capt. Henry McCrea, one of the best known American naval officers, now in command of the battleship Georgia, has resigned from the navy, in which he held a commission as paymaster, to go on the stage.

Addison C. Gumbert, known to all old-time followers of baseball, may be the first mayor of Greater Pittsburg. Gumbert during the time he was a ballplayer, pitched for the Boston, Chicago and Pittsburg clubs. Since he retired from baseball, ten years ago, he has been prominent in politics. He is now sheriff of Allegheny county.

The United States national museum at Washington has placed on exhibition a specimen "leaf" of a thornless cactus developed by Luther Burbank of California. The perfecting of a cactus without thorns means the providing of a valuable forage plant which will grow as well in arid as in moist regions.

Crimes.

Three men were assassinated as they stepped from a train at Clio, Ark. The murderer is unknown.

Roy Pell, convicted of the murder of John Lepley of Gifford, Iowa, was sentenced to twenty-five years in the Fort Madison penitentiary.

Louis M. Dyke, president of the defunct Atcila National bank, charged with misappropriation of funds, pleaded guilty at Birmingham, Ala., and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Physically wrecked through excesses, George F. Miller, aged forty-eight years, once a brilliant lawyer and private secretary to Samuel J. Randall of Pennsylvania, committed suicide at St. Louis by taking a dose of whisky and morphine.

J. E. Reeves, head of a chain of supply stores and cotton warehouses at Griffin, Vaughn, Jackson, Glenville and Nurcroee, Ga., has absconded, carrying with him a sum of money supposed to be over $100,000, the larger portion of which he procured by selling cotton stored in his warehouses by farmers. A large reward is offered for his apprehension.

The federal grand jury at Des Moines ordered an indictment drawn against Sears, Roebuck & Co. of Chicago, charging them with using the mails illegally. The investigation leading up to the indictment was instituted by the Des Moines Retail Merchants' association.

Horace S. Davis, fifty-three years old, a prominent business man of Kalamazoo, Mich., was shot through the heart and killed by a burglar. Davis had grappled with the intruder when the latter threatened to kill Mrs. Davis.

Maddened by the belief that her husband's affections had been stolen from her by Mrs. Sallie Brown, Mrs. Annie B. Maith of Baltimore shot and killed Mrs. Brown.

Peter Steffenson, the Fort Keogh, Mont., soldier who was on trial here for cutting Frank Cassy with a knife about a month ago, was acquitted. He admitted using the knife, but pleaded self-defense.

Steve Adams, the jury in whose trial for the murder of Fred Tyler reported a disagreement, was admitted to bail at Rathdrum, Idaho. Bail was fixed at $20,000. Attorney Darrow for the defense announced the bond would be provided within a few days.

The jury in the case of Louis Serre, charged with murder in the first degree, returned a verdict of not guilty at Great Falls, Mont. The killing with which Serre was charged occurred last August in All Nations saloon, where Serre shot Leon Neveux, proprietor of the saloon, killing him almost instantly. Serre pleaded self-defense.

Accidental Happenings.

In defense of his mother, Peter Lindermier of New York, aged seventeen years, grappled with his father, and during the scuffle the elder man was shot and killed.

The tug Escort of Port Dalhousie, Ont., was struck by the barge Harrison in tow of the steamer Westmount, off Niagara point, and sunk. Three of the crew were drowned.

An unidentified woodsman was struck by a work train on the Atlantic & Lake Superior railroad near Atlantic, Mich., and killed. The man evidently had gone to sleep on the track.

Alpheus Stotbewer, halfback on the Wellington, Kan., football team, ran into a buggy on the side line in a game in his home town and suffered concussion of the brain. The injury may prove fatal.

One man was killed, several persons were injured and traffic on the upper end of the Lenox avenue branch of the subway in New York was blocked as a result of a collision between two eight-car trains.

Fire originating from an unknown source burned two infant children of Patrick Mason of Menominee, Mich., while the mother was away from home. The oldest child, aged three years, died several hours later, while the younger child may recover.

From Other Shores.

The government of Guatemala has issued a special decree prohibiting the return to that republic of Chinese who leave it.

The second trial of Maximilian Harden, editor of the Berlin Die Zukunft, charged with libeling Count von Moltke, has been fixed for Dec. 16.

Sig. Tittoni, the Italian minister of foreign affairs, has presented to the chamber of deputies for ratification the Italo-Mexican general treaty of arbitration which was concluded during the last Hague peace conference.

John Harley, a Britisher who went to Japan in 1864, has brought suit against the Japanese government for 1,000,000 yen damages for having impounded opium imports by him in 1875 while allowing Dutch firms and other foreigners to import the drug.

Under instructions received from Washington data regarding the French postal savings bank system are being compiled at Paris for the American postmaster general, Gen. von L. Meyer, in connection with his recommendation for the establishment of postoffice savings banks in the United States.

A special dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Lisbon by way of the frontier describes the capital as being outwardly calm as a result of the royal decrees forbidding political gatherings and newspaper comment on the political situation, but, says the correspondent, it is extremely difficult to foresee what may happen.

General News Items.

Nine troops of the First cavalry and two troops of the Sixth cavalry will sail for the Philippines Dec. 5 on the transport Thomas.

The revised Chilean tariff will go into effect Jan. 1. The bill authorizes the president to reduce by 50 per cent the import duties on woolen and flaxen textiles, footwear, galvanized iron and sugars.

Dress reform, proposed by the faculty of the Nebraska state university, was defeated at a meeting of the students. The women voted solidly against the elimination of ribbons and gay colors.

"With New Mexico admitted to the Union as a state by itself, the project of a ship canal from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico will be advanced by the votes of its United States senators and congressmen," declares Gov. Curry of New Mexico.

History repeated itself on Franklin field at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania winning the annual football game with Cornell, the score this year being 12 to 4. It was Pennsylvania's thirteenth victory in fifteen games played with the Ithacans.

A clock has just been installed in the observatory of the Case School of Applied Sciences in Cleveland, the mechanism of which is so accurate that the clock will not vary more than fifteen one-thousands of a second from the exact time in twenty-four hours.

During the Thanksgiving ball of the Mercantile club, an exclusive Hebrew social organization of Wheeling, W. Va., while the guests were enjoying a waltz, Ollie Reed, an insurance agent, suddenly clutched the arm of his partner, grew pale and dropped to the floor dead.

THE STATE DAY BY DAY

News of Interest.

MACALESTER TO ENTERTAIN.

State Oratorical Association Meeting Will Be Held in St. Paul.

Macalester college at St. Paul has been selected by the State Oratorical association to entertain the association when the annual contest is held this year. J. Todd Guy of Macalester is the president of the state association, and will preside at the contest.

A committee composed of W. M. Fisk, chairman, and John McEwen and Robert S. Wallace, with W. M. Hobart, president of the local association, and Mr. Guy, as president of the state association as members ex officio, will have immediate charge of the contest.

The colleges represented by the State Oratorical association are St. Olaf, Carleton, Gustavus Adolphus, Hamline and Macalester. Each college will send a representative selected by its local oratorical association.

The committee will endeavor to secure the St. Paul Auditorium for the occasion, and thus give the speakers the benefit of the largest building in the Northwest. A special train will be arranged from Northfield to accommodate students from Carleton and Gustavus Adolphus. Bands and glee clubs from the colleges will furnish the music.

CROP YIELD GREATER.

Insane Hospital Farm Productions Is Reported.

The crops on the insane hospital farm at Fergus Falls have generally fallen below last year's average, although some lines show an increase. The farm, which is the largest in the state, raises practically everything in the garden line required by the 1,550 patients, supplies them with milk and furnishes a partial supply of beef and other articles. The report of the year's products has just been filed with the superintendent and shows the following amounts of the various lines of produce: Asparagus, 550 bunches; beets, table 955 bushels; cabbage, 7,400 heads; celery, 1,200 bunches; sweet corn, 360 bushels; field corn, 1,200 bushels; cucumbers, 200 bushels; peas, 90 bushels; parsnips, 540 bushels; rhubarb, 14,225 pounds; tomatoes, 220 bushels; onions, 725 bushels; potatoes, 9,000 bushels; ensilage, 300 tons; hay, 312 tons; pumpkins, 300; horseradish, 300 gallons; barley 2,000 bushels; oats, 4,400 bushels; pork, 38,000 pounds; veal, 870 pounds; beef, live weight, 41,700 pounds; milk, 49,600 gallons.

SPOUSE DEMANDS MONEY.

Wife Says Husband Threatened Her Life When She Refused.

Because his wife would not consent to put a little money she had left to her in the bank in her husband's name, Albert Glaser was in court at Winona on the charge of threatening to kill her. He was compelled to furnish bonds in the sum of $100 to keep the peace for six months. He is a bricklayer and earns good wages, and Mrs. Glaser thinks she should keep her own money in her own name. Because she held to this opinion, she alleges, he beat her severely and then threatened to kill her. Mrs. Glaser said she did not want her husband punished, but wanted such action taken as would assure her safety.

FIND JOBS FOR MANY.

State Free Employment Bureaus All Do Big Business.

The three state free employment bureaus are all doing a big business, according to Labor Commissioner W. H. Williams. They placed 3,300 people during the month of October. Since Aug. 1, when the St. Paul and Duluth bureaus were started, the three places have found work for over 19,000 people.

Conditions now are the reverse of what they were a short time ago. Up to Nov 1 the demand for labor exceeded the supply. Now the supply is in excess, and the bureaus are accumulating waiting lists. Owing to the labor demand on the iron range and on the lakes, the Duluth bureau bids fair to do the bigger business of the three being operated.

MANY STUDENTS BELOW.

First Warnings Are Sent to Those Who Are Deficient.

Warnings have been sent to the university students who have been below in their studies so far this year. The first three months of the college year has been completed and several students have failed in such large percentage of their work that unless they brace up by the end of the semester they will be dropped from the rolls. In the academic department thirty-seven students have failed in three or more subjects, which is enough to cause them to be dropped. In the same department 135 more have failed in two subjects. In the engineering department 14 out of 137 students have failed in the physic classes.

State Loans Funds.

The state board of investments met at the capitol and approved loans to school districts aggregating $35,025. One loan of $12,000 to a Crow Wing county school district was for refunding a loan made some years ago, and the others were all for school purposes. The loans authorized were as follows: Beltrami, $500; Aitkin, $1,600; Wright, $175; Marshall, $1,000; Mille Lacs, $1,000; Clay, $1,600; Douglas, $500; Yellow Medicine, $1,000; Murray, $12,000; Red Lake, $1,050; Stearns, $3,000; Crow Wing, $12,000.

TO REORGANIZE THE GUARD.

It Is Suggested That the State Have Three Regiments.

Officers of the national guard of Minnesota were in conference with Gov. Johnson and Adjt. Gen. Wood recently looking to the reorganization of the guard so as to bring it up to the requirements of what is known as the Dick law.

Gen. Joseph Bobleter, Col. C. C. McC. Reeve, Maj. Spear and Gen. Lambert were present.

The three regiments in Minnesota at present consist of nine companies each, and to bring them up to the requirements of the Dick law necessitates the organization of three more companies for each regiment, or nine in all. Without them Minnesota cannot secure the $43,000 aid which the federal government gives.

Under the old arrangement the regiments and companies were located in a haphazard manner, but now a reorganization is contemplated by Gov. Johnson that will make their location more uniform. He suggests a regiment, the First for the Twin Cities; another, the Second, for the southern part of the state, and the Third for the northern section. This would wipe out one company of the Third, now located in St. Paul. It would be transferred to the First instead. Because of the absence of armories in the smaller cities the formation of the nine additional companies and the location of the same is somewhat of a task. To reduce the number it was suggested at the conference to make a company of infantry out of the company of engineers now located in St. Paul, which would give the two cities five companies each, but it met with vigorous opposition. The artillery are against the change as they now have a battalion, with Maj. Lambert as the officer in charge.

No decision as to the changes contemplated or the location of the new companies to be created was decided upon, but it is expected that arrangements will be decided upon this week. The work must be done before the first of the year.

Though the Twin Cities have the largest armories in the state, even they are lacking in room. In the case of St. Paul the drill hall is in use every night, being apportioned out to the six companies. Any addition will call for new facilities. It is expected that three of the new companies will be assigned to the two cities.

STOP SALE OF SICK CATTLE.

State Board Adopts More Stringent Regulations.

A number of changes in the regulations of the state live stock sanitary board were made at a special meeting in the secretary's office in the old capitol at St. Paul. The principal changes relate to tuberculosis in cattle and hog cholera.

The change in the tuberculosis regulation is for the purpose of fighting more effectively the progress of this disease. It is now provided that whenever any cattle have been inspected and found to be free from tuberculosis, or when so tested have been found to contain any tuberculosis cattle which are removed, the owner of the cattle shall not introduce any new cattle into the herd which have not been tested with tuberculin and found free from tuberculosis, either by the state board or the local board having jurisdiction in the territory in which such cattle are usually kept.

The owners are also required within ten days after the removal of the infected cattle to disinfect those parts of the interior of the building in which the infected cattle were kept.

The regulations also require that all cattle which show clinical symptoms of tuberculosis must be quarantined at once and the entire herd tested with tuberculin within thirty days. Owners of cattle affected with tuberculosis shall not receive any compensation from the state for cattle killed on account of this disease when the owners have failed to comply with the regulations.

Under the new regulations all hogs shipped for breeding purposes must be inspected for hog cholera before shipment. This does not apply to hogs shipped to stockyards for slaughter, because they are inspected at the destination before being killed. The regulations also prohibit the taking of breeding hogs out of railroad shipping points, where they have been sent for the purpose of sending to the stockyards for slaughter.

While there have been a number of outbreaks of hog cholera this year, Dr. M. S. Whitcomb, secretary of the board, states that the number is less than last year, and that with the new regulations he feels that the board will be better equipped than ever for stamping out or reducing the number of cases of this disease.

LAYING THE FOUNDATIONS.

State Building Dirt Roads, Later to Be Surfaced With Gravel.

State roads built this year under supervision of the highway commission are only foundations for permanent surfaced roads. George W. Cooley, state highway engineer, is busy checking up the reports and inspecting roads, and says that about thirty counties have used the highway commission funds this year for building state roads. He inspected two miles of road in Traverse county recently. It is a good graded and drained road, which may be surfaced with gravel later. It cost about $1,000, of which the state puts in $300. This is the style of work generally being done under the state supervision. All culverts put in on these roads are permanent structures of either steel or concrete.

Counties that have not spent any money on roads get none of the state help, and the money apportioned to them will go back in the fund for distribution next year. Counties that set no money aside for this purpose will get none of the state distribution next year, and the counties that are awake on the proposition will benefit accordingly.

Mr. Cooley heard from L. W. Page director of the department of road building in the agricultural department at Washington. He agrees to give government co-operation and some money for the experiment in improving a sand road by cultivating clover and forming a loam. The department of plant industry will also take a hand to suggest other vegetation that may give good results when rotted and mixed with sand.

CONVENTION OF CLUBS.

To Perfect Federation of Commercial and Business Organizations.

Plans for a convention of the commercial clubs and business organizations of the state, to be held for the purpose of forming a federation, have been nearly perfected by Secretary C. P. Stine of the St. Paul Commercial club. A meeting has been called for Jan. 16 at 10 o'clock, when delegates from the different organizations will gather at the old capitol.

Invitations are now being sent out by Secretary Stine, who is being heartily seconded in his efforts by Gov. Johnson and Mayor Smith, as well as by members of the local Commercial club. Every commercial club and business organization in the state is being invited to send two delegates to the convention. An attractive and instructive program has been arranged, and it is expected the convention will last about two days.

The object of the meeting is to perfect a permanent federation of all the commercial and business organizations of the state in order that they may cooperate for the development of the state as a whole. Working together, it is believed they can accomplish much towards advertising the state, attracting immigrants, promoting drainage and in other ways benefiting the whole commonwealth.

Both Gov. Davidson and Mayor Smith have written letters strongly indorsing the movement and expressing their willingness to co-operate in every way possible towards making it a success.

STACY REPORT IS TRIMMED.

State Board of Audit Says Little Is Material.

Recommendations for legislation and criticisms against county officers are not matters for the state board of audit, as the board decided at a lengthy session in St. Paul.

This board consists of the governor, secretary of state and attorney general. Its duty is to examine the state treasurer's office four times a year to see that state funds are intact and the books properly kept. The public examiner is supposed to examine the treasurer's office every year. This time the board of audit asked E. N. Stacy, deputy public examiner, to make the examination. His report finds the state money and accounts in good shape, but criticises the delay of counties in remitting state collections, and also the lack of uniformity in computing interest on state deposits. It also finds flaws in the bonds of several banks.

The meeting was held in the governor's office and was executive. Mr. Stacy was present and explained his report. The members of the board agreed that there were some good things in the report, but that very little of it had any place in the records of the board of audit.

RAILROADS HAVE A GOOD YEAR.

Gross Earnings in Minnesota Show Increase of More Than $7,000,000 Over Preceding Year.

The gross increase of the railroads during the fiscal year ending on June 30, 1907, on business credited to Minnesota show an increase of more than $7,000,000 over the same figures for the preceding fiscal year, according to the railroad reports to the railroad and warehouse commission. The gross earnings for last year were $88,666,374.56, as compared with $81,584,237.05 for 1906, a gain of $7,082,137.51 in spite of the fact that the reduced merchandise rates were in effect for the greater part of last year and the 2-cent passenger fare rate was in effect for two months of that period.

The gross earnings of the railroad operating in Minnesota on the business of their entire lines also shows a large increase over the preceding year. The gross earnings for the year just ended were $480,423,972.06, while for 1906 they were $433,355,683.33, a gain of $47,068,288.73.

While the gross earnings tax is based on the earnings for the calendar year and not the fiscal year, if this increase is maintained for the rest of this year, the increase in the gross earnings tax paid by the railroads for this year will be about $280,000, based on an increase of $7,000,000.

That the increase in earnings was general on all of the roads with hardly any exceptions is shown by the following table of the comparative Minnesota earnings of the roads for the last two years:

DRAINAGE LAW VALID.

Decision in Case Where Owner of Land Enjoins Digging of Ditch.

The constitutionality of chapter 230 of the Laws of 1905, the general drainage law, was upheld by the supreme court in the case of M. J. and W. S. Millar against Jorgen Jensen and others, appealed from Clay county. This was an action to restrain the defendants from digging a ditch through the plaintiff's land. An injunction against the defendants was issued by a court commission, and the district court ordered the injunction dissolved, from which order the plaintiffs appealed, the supreme court affirming the lower court.

The defendants had entered into a contract with the county commissioners of Clay county to construct this ditch which ran through the plaintiff's land diagonally. The plaintiffs allege that to farm their land to the best advantage all parts of it must be readily accessible to the buildings, a condition not possible with the ditch as planned. They asserted that the purpose of the ditch was not to benefit the public health, but to drain agricultural land bordering on their land.

The defendants alleged that the ditch had been established in accordance with chapter 230 of the Laws of 1905, by the county commissioners on a finding that its construction would be of public utility and conducive to the public health. The condemnation proceedings were tried in the lower court, and the damages to the plaintiffs were assessed by a jury, and the plaintiffs' motion for a new trial was still pending when the injunction was granted.

The supreme court holds that it was within the discretion of the lower court to dissolve the injunction and affirmed the order of the lower court.

NEW TAX FORMS.

Commission Asks County Auditors for Suggestions.

The state tax commission has issued some new forms for applications for abatement of real and personal property taxes. They are being sent out to the county auditors for examination with a request that the auditors criticise them and make such comments and suggestions as they feel proper. The forms are of those applications which will be submitted to the tax commission after the tax lists have been passed upon by the town or city boards of review. The new forms are arranged with a view to getting all of the necessary information in concise form without any unnecessary detail.

Mrs. A. Banhoft, residing on a farm two miles east of Trosky, hanged herself. She was a widow with a family of children. The family arose as usual and the children went out to do the chores. They returned soon after daylight to find no breakfast, but their mother hanging from a bedpost.

David T. Lambertz, fifty years old, a laborer, committed suicide on the old Fort Snelling reservation at St. Paul. Capt. Day found the body hanging from the limb of a tree.

Beaten.

Hereupon the widows and orphans whom we had plundered proceeded to call down the customary curses upon our heads.

"And upon your children and your children's children, unto the fourth generation!" they cried.

We gave them a rude stare and burst out laughing.

"Ever hear of a family as rich as we are now become having any children?" We sneered, and you should have seen how beaten they looked.

A Case of Beer.

"I'm not expecting any package," said Mrs. Hamlet to the driver of the delivery wagon, who was persistent.

"This is the number," insisted the driver, looking at his book again. "Name's Hamlet, ain't it?"

"Yes."

"No. 74?"

"That's our number."

"Then it's for you."

"I think not. It must be a case of mistaken identity."

"No, mum. It's a case of beer."

"Those financial investigations are very interesting." "They are," answered the man who is selfishly ambitious, "only there are too many explanations of how the trick was done and nothing reliable about what the next good things will be."—Washington Star.

CONGRESS HEARS FROM PRESIDENT

MESSAGE DISCUSSES RECENT FINANCIAL STRINGENCY AND ITS CAUSES.

FINANCIAL REFORM IS NEEDED

ANTI-TRUST LAWS, INTERSTATE COMMERCE AND TARIFF DISCUSSED.

The following is a synopsis of the president's message:

In opening his message the president refers to the financial stringency as follows:

"No nation has greater resources than ours, and I think it can be truthfully said that the citizens of no nation possess greater energy and industrial ability. In no nation are the fundamental business conditions sounder than in ours at this very moment; and it is foolish, when such is the case, for people to hoard money instead of keeping it in sound banks; for it is such hoarding that is the immediate occasion of money stringency. Moreover, as a rule, the business of our people is conducted with honesty and probity, and this applies alike to farms and factories, to railroads and banks, to all our legitimate commercial enterprises.

"In any large body of men, however, there are certain to be some who are dishonest, and if the conditions are such that these men prosper or commit their misdeeds with impunity, their example is a very evil thing for the community. Where these men are business men of great sagacity and of temperament both unscrupulous and reckless, and where the conditions are such that they act without supervision or control and at first without effective check from public opinion, they delude many innocent people into making investments or embarking in kinds of business that are really unsound. When the misdeeds of these successfully dishonest men are discovered, suffering comes not only upon them, but upon the innocent men whom they have misled. It is a painful awakening, whenever it occurs; and, naturally, when it does occur those who suffer are not to forget that the longer it was deferred the more painful it would be. In the effort to punish the guilty it is both wise and proper to endeavor so far as possible to minimize the distress of those who have been misled by the guilty. Yet it is not possible to refrain because of such distress from striving to put an end to the misdeeds that are the ultimate causes of the suffering, and, as a means to this end, where possible to punish those responsible for them. There may be honest differences of opinion as to many governmental policies; but surely there can be no such differences as to the need of unflinching perseverance in the war against successful dishonesty."

Interstate Commerce.

"No small part of the trouble that we have comes from carrying to an extreme the national virtue of self-reliance, of independence in initiative and action. It is wise to conserve this virtue and to provide for its fullest exercise, compatible with seeing that liberty does not become a liberty to wrong others. Unfortunately, this is the kind of liberty that the lack of all effective regulation inevitably breeds. The founders of the Constitution provided that the national government should have complete and sole control of interstate commerce.

"Only the national government can in thoroughgoing fashion exercise the needed control. This does not mean that there should be any extension of federal authority, for such authority already exists under the Constitution in amplest and most far-reaching form; but it does mean that there should be an extension of federal activity. This is not advocating centralization. It is merely looking facts in the face, and realizing that centralization in business has already come and cannot be avoided or undone, and that the public at large can only protect itself from certain evil effects of this business centralization by providing better methods for the exercise of control through the authority already centralized in the national government by the Constitution itself. There must be no halt in the healthy constructive course of action which this nation has elected to pursue, and has steadily pursued, during the last six years, as shown both in the legislation of the congress and the administration of the law by the department of justice. The most vital need is in connection with the railroads. As to these, in my judgment there should now be either a national incorporation act or a law licensing railway companies to engage in interstate commerce upon certain conditions. The law should be so framed as to give to the interstate commerce commission power to pass upon the future issue of securities, while ample means should be provided to enable the commission, whenever in its judgment it is necessary, to make a physical valuation of any railroad.

The Anti-trust Law.

The president points out the need for additional legislation looking to the proper control of business concerns engaged in interstate commerce, this control to be exercised for their own benefit and prosperity no less than for the protection of investors and of the general public. He says:

"The anti-trust law should not be repealed; but it should be made both more efficient and more in harmony with actual conditions. It should be so amended as to forbid only the kind of combination which does harm to the general public, such amendment to be accompanied by, or to be an incident of, a grant of supervisory power to the government over these big concerns engaged in interstate business. This should be accompanied by provision for the compulsory publication of accounts and the subjection of books and papers to the inspection of the government officials. A beginning has already been made for such supervision by the establishment of the bureau of corporations.

"The anti-trust law should not prohibit combinations that do no injustice to the public, still less those the existence of which is on the whole of benefit to the public. But even if this feature of the law were abolished, there would remain as an equally objectionable feature the difficulty and delay now incident to its enforcement. The government must now submit to irksome and repeated delay before obtaining a final decision of the courts upon proceedings instituted, and even a favorable decree may mean an empty victory. Moreover, to attempt to control these corporations by lawsuits means to impose upon both the department of justice and the courts an impossible burden; it is not feasible to carry on more than a limited number of such suits. Such a law to be really effective must of course be administered by an executive body, and not merely by means of lawsuits. The design should be to prevent the abuses incident to the creation of unhealthy and improper combinations, instead of waiting until they are in existence and then attempting to destroy them by civil or criminal proceedings.

"A combination should not be tolerated if it abuse the power acquired by combination to the public detriment. No corporation or association of any kind should be permitted to engage in foreign or interstate commerce that is formed for the purpose of, or whose operations create, a monopoly or general control of the production, sale or distribution of any one or more of the prime necessities of life or articles of general use and necessity. Such combinations are against public policy; they violate the common law; the doors of the courts are closed to those who are parties to them, and I believe the congress can close the channels of interstate commerce against them for its protection.

Prohibit Unhealthy Competition.

"Among the points to be aimed at should be the prohibition of unhealthy competition, such as by rendering service at an actual loss for the purpose of crushing out competition, the prevention of inflation of capital, and the prohibition of a corporation's making exclusive trade with itself a condition of having any trade with itself. Reasonable agreements between, or combinations of, corporations should be permitted, provided they are first submitted to and approved by some appropriate government body.

"The congress has the power to charter corporations to engage in interstate and foreign commerce, and a general law can be enacted under the provisions of which existing corporations could take out federal charters and new federal corporations could be created. An essential provision of such a law should be a method of predetermining by some federal board or commission whether the applicant for a federal charter was an association or combination within the restrictions of the federal law. Provision should also be made for complete publicity in all matters affecting the public and complete protection to the investing public and the shareholders in the matter of issuing corporate securities. If an incorporation law is not deemed advisable, a license act for big interstate corporations might be enacted; or a combination of the two might be tried. The supervision established might be analogous to that now exercised over national banks. At least, the anti-trust act should be supplemented by specific prohibitions of the methods which experience has shown have been of most service in enabling monopolistic combinations to crush out competition. The real owners of a corporation should be compelled to do business in their own name.

"To confer upon the national government, in connection with the amendment I advocate in the anti-trust law, power of supervision over big business concerns engaged in interstate commerce would benefit them as it has benefited the national banks. In the recent business crisis it is noteworthy that the institutions which failed were institutions which were not under the supervision and control of the national government. Those which were under national control stood the test.

Would Benefit All.

"National control of the kind advocated would be to the benefit of every well-managed railway.

"Those who fear, from any reason, the extension of federal activity will do well to study the history not only of the national banking act but of the pure food law, and notably the meat inspection law recently enacted. The pure food law was opposed so violently that its passage was delayed for a decade, yet it has worked unmixed and immediate good. The meat inspection law was even more violently assailed. Two years have not elapsed, and already it has become evident that the great benefit the law confers upon the public is accompanied by an equal benefit to the reputable packing establishments. The latter are better off under the law than they were without it. The benefit to interstate common carriers and business concerns from the legislation I advocate would be equally marked."

Pure Food Law.

"Incidentally in the passage of the pure food law the action of the various state food and dairy commissioners showed in striking fashion how much good for the whole people results from the hearty co-operation of the federal and state officials in securing a given reform. It is primarily to the action of these state commissioners that we owe the enactment of this law, for they aroused the people, first to demand the enactment and enforcement of state laws on the subject, and then the enactment of the federal law, without which the state laws were largely ineffective. There must be the closest co-operation between the national and state governments in administering these laws."

Currency Laws.

The president again calls attention to the condition of our currency laws and urges on congress the need of immediate attention to this matter. He says:

"We need a greater elasticity in our currency; provided, of course, that we recognize the even greater need of a safe and secure currency. There must always be the most rigid examination by the national authorities. Provision should be made for an emergency currency. The emergency issue should, of course, be made with an effective guaranty, and upon conditions carefully prescribed by the government. Such emergency issue must be based on adequate securities approved by the government, and must be issued under a heavy tax. This would permit currency being issued when the demand for it was urgent, while securing its retirement as the demand fell off. It is worth investigating to determine whether officers and directors of national banks should ever be allowed to loan to themselves. Trust companies should be subject to the same supervision as banks; legislation to this effect should be enacted for the District of Columbia and the territories.

"Yet we must also remember that even the wisest legislation on the subject can only accomplish a certain amount. No legislation can by any possibility guarantee the business community against the results of speculative folly any more than it can guarantee an individual against the results of his extravagance."

The income account of the nation is in a most satisfactory condition. Nevertheless, the president says, there is an evident and constantly growing feeling among our people that the time is rapidly approaching when our system of revenue legislation must be revised.

The Tariff.

"This country is definitely committed to the protective system and any effort to uproot it could not but cause widespread industrial disaster. In other words, the principle of the present tariff law could not with wisdom be changed. But in a country of such phenomenal growth as ours it is probably well that every dozen years or so the tariff laws should be carefully scrutinized so as to see that no excessive or improper benefits are conferred thereby, that proper revenue is provided, and that our foreign trade is encouraged. There must always be as a minimum a tariff which will not only allow for the collection of an ample revenue but which will at least make good the difference in cost of production here and abroad.

The question should be approached purely from a business standpoint; both the time and the manner of the change being such as to arouse the minimum of agitation and disturbance in the business world, and to give the least play for selfish and factional motives. The sole consideration should be to see that the sum total of changes represents the public good. This means that the subject cannot with wisdom be dealt with in the year preceding a presidential election, because as a matter of fact experience has conclusively shown that at such a time it is impossible to get men to treat it from the standpoint of the public good. In my judgment the wise time to deal with the matter is immediately after such election."

Income Tax and Inheritance Tax.

"When our tax laws are revised the question of an income tax and an inheritance tax should receive the careful attention of our legislators. In my judgment both of these taxes should be part of our system of federal taxation."

Compulsory Investigation of Industrial Disputes.

"Strikes and lockouts, with their attendant loss and suffering, continue to decrease. For the five years ending Dec. 31, 1905, the number of strikes was greater than those in any previous ten years and was double the number in the preceding five years. These figures indicate the increasing need of providing some machinery to deal with this class of disturbances in the interest alike of the employer, the employe, and the general public. I renew my previous recommendation that the congress favorably consider the matter of creating the machinery for compulsory investigation of such industrial controversies as are of sufficient magnitude and of sufficient concern to the people of the country as a whole to warrant the federal government in taking action."

National Inspection of Grain.

"The grain producing industry of the country, one of the most important in the United States, deserves special consideration at the hands of congress. Our grain is sold almost exclusively by grades. To secure satisfactory results in our home markets and to facilitate our trade abroad, these grades should approximate the highest degree of uniformity and certainty. The present diverse methods of inspection and grading throughout the country under different laws and boards result in confusion and lack of uniformity, destroying that confidence which is necessary for healthful trade. Complaints against the present methods have continued for years and they are growing in volume and intensity, not only in this country but abroad. I therefore suggest to the congress the advisability of a national system of inspection and grading of grain entering into interstate and foreign commerce as a remedy for the present evils."

Forestry.

On the subject of forestry the president says:

"We are prone to speak of the resources of this country as inexhaustible; this is not so. The mineral wealth of the country, the coal, iron, oil, gas and the like, does not reproduce itself, and therefore is certain to be exhausted ultimately, and wastefulness in dealing with it to-day means that our descendants will feel the exhaustion a generation or two before they otherwise would. But there are certain other forms of waste which could be entirely stopped—the waste of soil by washing, for instance, which is among the most dangerous of all wastes now in progress in the United States, is easily preventable, so that this present enormous loss of fertility is entirely unnecessary. The preservation or replacement of the forests is one of the most important means of preventing this loss. We have made a beginning in forest preservation, but it is only a beginning.

"Every business man in the land, every writer in the newspapers, every man or woman of an ordinary school education, ought to be able to see that immense quantities of timber are used in the country, that the forests which supply this timber are rapidly being exhausted and that, if no change takes place, exhaustion will come comparatively soon, and that the effects of it will be felt severely in the every-day life of our people. Surely when these facts are so obvious there should be no delay in taking preventive measures.

Inland Waterways.

"The conservation of our natural resources and their proper use constitute the fundamental problem which underlies almost every other problem of our national life. We must maintain for our civilization the adequate material basis without which that civilization cannot exist. We must show foresight, we must look ahead. As a nation we not only enjoy a wonderful measure of present prosperity but if this prosperity is used aright it is an earnest of future success such as no other nation will have. The reward of foresight for this nation is great and easily foretold. But there must be the look ahead, there must be a realization of the fact that to waste, to destroy, our natural resources, to skin and exhaust the land instead of using it so as to increase its usefulness, will result in undermining in the days of our children the very prosperity which we ought by right to hand down to them amplified and developed. For the last few years, through several agencies, the government has been endeavoring to get our people to look ahead and to substitute a planned and orderly development of our resources in place of a haphazard striving for immediate profit. Our great river systems should be developed as national water highways; the Mississippi, with its tributaries, standing first in importance, and the Columbia second, although there are many others of importance on the Pacific, the Atlantic and the gulf slopes. The national government should undertake this work, and I hope a beginning will be made in the present congress; and the greatest of all our rivers, the Mississippi, should receive especial attention. From the Great Lakes to the mouth of the Mississippi there should be a deep waterway, with deep waterways leading from it to the East and the West. Such a waterway would practically mean the extension of our coast line into the very heart of our country. It would be of incalculable benefit to our people. If begun at once it can be carried through in time appreciably to relieve the congestion of our great freight carrying lines of railroads. The work should be systematically and continuously carried forward in accordance with some well-conceived plan.

"I have appointed an inland waterways commission to study and outline a comprehensive scheme of development along all the lines indicated. Later I shall lay its report before the congress."

Panama Canal.

"Work on the Panama canal is proceeding in a highly satisfactory manner."

Postal Affairs.

"I commend to the favorable consideration of the congress a postal savings bank system, as recommended by the postmaster general. The primary object is to encourage among our people economy and thrift and by the use of postal savings bank to give them an opportunity to husband their resources, particularly those who have not the facilities at hand for depositing their money in savings bank. Viewed, however, from the experience of the past few weeks, it is evident that the advantages of such an institution are still more far-reaching. Timid depositors have withdrawn their savings for the time being from national banks, trust companies, and savings banks; individuals have hoarded their cash and the workingmen their earnings; all of which money has been withheld and kept in hiding or in the safe deposit box to the detriment of prosperity. Through the agency of the postal savings banks such money would be restored to the channels of trade, to the mutual benefit of capital and labor.

"I further commend to the congress the consideration of the postmaster general's recommendation for an extension of the parcel post, especially on the rural routes."

Presidential Campaign Expenses.

"Under our form of government voting is not merely a right but a duty, and, moreover, a fundamental and necessary duty if a man is to be a good citizen. It is well to provide that corporations shall not contribute to presidential or national campaigns, and furthermore to provide for the publication of both contributions and expenditures. There is, however, always danger in laws of this kind, which from their very nature are difficult of enforcement; the danger being lest they be obeyed only by the honest, and disobeyed by the unscrupulous, so as to act only as a penalty upon honest men. The need for collecting large campaign funds would vanish if congress provided an appropriation for the proper and legitimate expenses of each of the great national parties, an appropriation ample enough to meet the necessity for thorough organization and machinery, which requires a large expenditure of money. Then the stipulation should be made that no party receiving campaign funds from the treasury should accept more than a fixed amount from any individual subscriber or donor; and the necessary publicity for receipts and expenditures could without difficulty be provided."

The Army.

Of the army the president says:

"Its standard of efficiency and instruction is higher now than ever in the past. But it is too small. There are not enough officers; and it is impossible to secure enough enlisted men. We should maintain in peace a fairly complete skeleton of a large army. A great and long-continued war would have to be fought by volunteers. But months would pass before any large body of efficient volunteers could be put in the field, and our regular army should be large enough to meet any immediate need. In particular it is essential that we should possess a number of extra officers trained in peace to perform efficiently the duties urgently required upon the breaking out of war."

The Navy.

In the opinion of the president it would be most unwise for us to stop the upbuilding of our navy, in view of the fact that the proposition for the limitation of armaments met with no favor at all at the Hague conference. He says:

"To build one battleship of the best and most advanced type a year would barely keep our fleet up to its present force. This is not enough. In my judgment we should this year provide for four battleships. But it is idle to build battleships unless in addition to providing the men, and the means for thorough training, we provide the auxiliaries for them, unless we provide docks, the coaling stations, the colliers and supply ships that they need. We are extremely deficient in coaling stations and docks on the Pacific, and this deficiency should not longer be permitted to exist. Plenty of torpedo boats and destroyers should be built. Both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, fortifications of the best type should be provided for all our greatest harbors."

NORWAY.

Bjorn Bjornson, the son of Bjornstjerne Bjornson, has resigned his position as director of the National theater of Christiania and will spend the winter in Rome with his famous father. He has proven himself, according to all reports, a son worthy of his father, having labored with distinguished ability to elevate the theatrical art to a high plane, just as his father has labored to elevate the literary standards of his country. His position as director of the National theater was an exalted one and has been held in the past by his father, Henrik Ibsen and other great men. Perhaps none is in a better position to champion high artistic ideals than the director of that theater, just as in the United States no one can do more in raising the standard of art—music and the drama—than the directors of the great theaters of New York—the theaters that set the pace for the rest of the country.

Like Michelsen, Bjorn Bjornson resigned his position because of ill health, and as in the case of the great statesman, the people of Norway are earnestly hoping for his speedy recovery, as he is one of the men that his fatherland needs. If restored to health by next summer, it is probable that he will visit the United States and make a lecture tour among his countrymen on this side of the Atlantic.

A most interesting dispatch from Christiania deals as follows with the tourist traffic of Norway:

Since Prof. Yngvar Nielsen, in 1886, made an estimate of the money spent annually in Norway by foreign tourists, no such reports have been prepared until a few days ago, when the director for the Tourist Traffic association sent out a report covering 1906. Prof. Nielsen, for 1886, estimated the number of visitors at 14,000, who spent 5,500,000 kroner. In 1906 the number was 34,350, and the money more than 12,000,000 kroner ($3,216,000).

"This sum is, in the report, divided into several groups. Norwegian steamers crossing the North sea received as their share of the sum about 450,000 kroner for passage and board. For hotel accommodation and traveling in the country some 7,370,000 kroner were used.

"The large foreign tourist steamers ('floating hotels' as they are called) and private pleasure yachts brought in about 1,200,000 kroner. Fourteen of these floating hotels visited the country during the year. Of these six were British, five German, one Danish, one French and one Dutch. Together these fourteen steamers made fifty-one trips and brought about 8,500 passengers. The chief purchases made by such ships consists of fresh meat, fresh fish, canned goods, fresh fruit and berries and vegetables. Such purchases are estimated at 2,000 kroner for each ship or 102,000 kroner in all, whereto must be added about 100,000 kroner for coal. The purchases made ashore by the passengers of such steamers are estimated at 470,000 kroner, and their trips across the country and minor excursions to some 380,000 kroner. For the privilege to hunt and fish foreigners paid during the year about 1,400,000 kroner, and for other purchases spent some one and a half million kroner. The Norwegian mail and telegraph made 85,000 kroner on the visitors. The largest portion of the money is, of course, taken in during the summer season. Only some 300,000 kroner is credited to the winter season.

"As to nationality the British is still leading, with the Germans as a good second. Their numbers were 12,700 and 7,500, respectively. Every third tourist was an Englishman, the report says.

"Divided according to occupations there were 1,870 in public service of their respective countries, 1,240 lawyers, 540 clergymen, 2,800 professors and teachers, 1,355 physicians, 1,325 military officers, 1,580 artists and musicians, 1,370 large manufacturers, 2,470 industrial managers, architects, engineers, etc., 5,270 merchants, 4,240 people of independent means (coupon-cutters), 2,620 students, etc.

"For the year 1907 no report has been published as yet, but despite the nasty summer, they all claim that the results of this year's tourist traffic are sure not to be below, rather above, those of 1906."

The search for gold continues in Finnmarken, and the government is lending a helping hand. But, while the prospects are brighter than they were last year, no rich ore has yet been found.

SWEDEN.

On account of the damage to the crops by heavy rains, the districts of Vesternorrland and Vesterbotten, in Northern Sweden, are facing a food famine. According to an official report the rye harvested there this year weighs only 54 kilograms per bushel as against 112, the standard weight. Consequently the bread made from such rye is black and almost worthless as food. Furthermore, it is announced, there is no milk, as the cows have been slaughtered to supply food. The authorities in those districts have requested that the government abandon the grain toll this year and take other steps to aid the stricken territory.

I mentioned last week the fact that there is dissatisfaction in Sweden over the treaty recently entered into by Norway and the four great powers of Europe—England, France, Germany, Russia—guaranteeing the integrity of Norway as a free and independent nation. Now I am able to present an editorial from the Dagblad, one of the leading papers of Stockholm, which gives in a frank and manly manner the Swedish point of view in this matter. The Dagblad says:

"This is Norway's own concern, but it must not be ignored that a general feeling of dissatisfaction has been evoked here by the idea that the treaty is, directly or indirectly, aimed against Sweden. The enlightened public opinion of Europe will doubtless accept the word of our government when it reiterates and emphasizes its honest and peaceful intentions. M. de Trolle, the Swedish minister for foreign affairs, a short time ago made the definite declaration that it was not Sweden's policy which rendered necessary the guarantee sought by Norway. As we are not in possession of the text of the treaty, or of the documents bearing on the negotiations preceding its signature, we cannot judge with certainty whether and to what extent the four great powers have deemed it necessary to intervene against Sweden in the policies of the Scandinavian peninsula. But, in any case, the appearance of such a treaty is a serious obstacle to the future improvement in the relations of the two countries which is the aim of Swedish and Norwegian statesmen and which is always the aim of the Swedish government.

"If they cannot work together they must at all events work on parallel lines. Looking at the matter from this standpoint, Sweden can only regard with regret the efforts of Norway to place herself under the guarantee of the powers, for the fact remains that these powers will be able to find occasion to control Norway's relations. While negotiations were in progress with Norway, the question was asked by one power whether Sweden did not also desire a guarantee. This question was answered definitely in the negative by the Swedish government, which has the whole nation with rare unanimity behind it. In view of the observations made on the Swedish side, as well as abroad, it was to be expected that a guarantee treaty made without Sweden would be regarded as directed against Sweden. The justice of this statement is as difficult to deny as to deny that Sweden has long given real and binding tokens of loyalty to Norway, while Norway on her side has found no occasion for showing her loyalty to us."

It may be added that the press of Norway is by no means silent on this subject, and the editorial pages of the leading journals of the two countries will probably contain considerable interesting reading matter on this subject during the next few weeks.

DENMARK.

The old and antiquated firearms borne by the veterans of the wars of 1848 and 1864 have been distributed among those venerable heroes, but the government had too few of them to go around. This was a grateful act on the part of the government and is highly appreciated not only by the veterans thus remembered, but also by the Danish people in general.

Prince Erik, the third son of Prince Valdemar and Princess Marie, who is 17 years of age, has announced that, unlike his two elder brothers, Aage and Axel, he will not enter the Danish navy, but will make agriculture his profession. This is something new for the royalty of Denmark, but the parents of the boy and King Frederick are going to let him have his way. They have not yet decided, however, where he shall begin his agricultural studies, for study he must, of course, and that most thoroughly, as in Denmark agriculture is recognized as a science.

—Willard Dillman, Minnetonka Record.

THE man who predicted a mild winter seems to have the best of the argument so far.

A MAN doesn't mind losing a hundred dollars on a bet, but ten dollars in taxes is a big item.

IF the prohibition wave is going to sweep over Minnesota, the proposed inland waterway may become an absolute necessity.

SOME wag reports that real money is so scarce in New York that the babies are cutting their teeth on clearing house certificates.

THE Duluth Herald remarks that Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois and Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island are again in session at Washington.

BUSINESS seems to be pretty well disturbed anyway, so why not revise the tariff? Might as well get rid of all the cankers at one operation.

A DECLINE of about $7,000,000 in the treasury receipts for November shows that the financial disturbance has affected even Uncle Sam's income.

THE papers all speak of the president's message as "a subdued utterance." The panic seems to have taken a good deal of the strenuosity out of Teddy.

THE Princeton Union suggests leaving the politicians at home and sending the country editors to the national conventions. How fortunate that none of the editors is a politician.

A REPUBLICAN newspaper suggests the nomination of S. R. Van Sant for governor, advancing the argument that he is the only man the republican party has been able to elect in recent years.

ANDREW H. OSTREM, of Bagley, has received the appointment of inspector of steam heaters and steam boilers of the Sixty-first senatorial district to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of H. E. Zimmerman of Ada.

IF the prohibitionists get real busy in congressional affairs next year two or three republican members from Minnesota may have cause for uneasiness. For instance Jim Tawney will have trouble enough over the tariff issue without losing the votes of a couple of thousand republican anti-saloonists.

THE Fairmont Sentinel professes to believe that Cortelyou will be the republican candidate, but possibly the wish is father to the thought. We cannot believe the republicans so absolutely bereft of judgment. Cortelyou would be as badly beaten as Parker. The sign is not right for the reactionary.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, the Indiana poet, declares that the panic has not hurt him but coin has become so scarce through Indiana that the babies are now cutting their teeth on certified checks. Because of the hardship worked upon the infants, Mr. Riley believes that a special session of congress should be called or some other extraordinary measure undertaken to afford relief to the little ones.

BOB DUNN'S Princeton Union declares:

"To be consistent the republican newspapers that are urging Governor Johnson as a suitable candidate for the presidency must support him for a third term as governor, provided he is a candidate. If Mr. Johnson is the right man for president he certainly is good enough for a third term as governor of Minnesota. In the improbable event of the governor securing the democratic nomination for president he ought to have the electoral vote of Minnesota."

It isn't hard to follow this sort of reasoning. If Johnson is good enough for president, he is good enough for governor again. And as he ought to have the electoral vote of Minnesota in the event of his nomination for president, he ought to be given the popular vote for governor. The Union presents convincing proof that Governor Johnson has "made good."

CONFIDENCE is all right up to a certain point, but beyond that we must have cash, says the Adrian Democrat. The country has discovered that it cannot continue to do business on confidence alone. Checks and clearing house "currency" are all very well for a time, but money talks. It takes the "long green" or the rattling silver to buy bread and meat in the last analysis. The panic through which we have been passing is the result of frenzied finance. People borrowed more than they could pay. Mad speculation was rife on every hand; we were becoming a nation of plungers. Everybody joined in the mad rush for wealth, thinking there was no bottom to the alleged "prosperity." Every dollar of idle money was enlisted in the chase for more riches, and when the money was exhausted, credit was invoked to the very limit. James J. Hill a year ago sounded the alarm and foretold sure financial disaster. He was laughed at and called a "croaker," but he accurately forecasted the financial condition. The day of liquidation has come. Pay day has arrived, and happy is the man who has not risked all his money and credit too. Those who have not been enticed into the financial bog by the will-o'-the-wisp of mad speculation will come out of the crucible unscorched. Those who have used their credit up to and beyond the limit of safe and sound financiering, will suffer.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Austin Transcript: There is a good deal of local option talk among the politicians just now. In the language of a well-known advertisement, "There's a reason."

Perham Enterprise: The LaFollette presidential boom was successfully launched in St. Paul last week. Better have it LaFollette and Johnson as the opposing candidates in the presidential race next year, and the northwest will have no cause to complain, no matter which wins.

Preston Times: Already some of Frank Eddy's over-zealous friends are booming him for governor, but it is hoped that with the return of his reason and former good common sense he will clasp the lid across the mouths of these rattle brains. Glad as the people of this state are that Frank has turned from the wine that is red, and anxious as they are to encourage him in his good resolutions, they will gladly hand him the gubernatorial nomination—not yet. Mr. Eddy can do much good on the lecture platform, and his influence should not be neutralized by making him a seeker after official honors.

Wadena Pioneer Journal: Senator Thomas Platt of New York recently doffed his burial robes long enough to declare that he was for Vice President Fairbanks for president. Mr. Fairbanks is certainly having hard luck in launching his presidential craft. Somehow the breezes are not from the right quarter, nor are the surface or under currents what he or his friends expected. Then, to cap the unfortunate climax, along comes Senator Platt. His endorsement will likely prove to be the last straw.

Bemidji Pioneer: The "greatest show on earth" sold to a rival circus firm for only $400,000! And we gave $20,000,000 for the Phillipine zoo.

Anoka Free Press: The 1-cent daily papers of New York have been forced to raise the price from 1 cent to 2 cents per copy, as a result of trust prices for print paper. Thus it will be seen that it is the people who pay the freight. And yet it is the people who, by their votes, place in power the party that breeds and fosters the trusts.

Little Falls Transcript: A story has been telegraphed from the East to St. Paul to the effect that several Minnesota state senators have met and planned a campaign to send delegates to the Republican national convention which will favor Governor Hughes of New York for president. That is hardly the best start that a candidate could get in Minnesota.

HORSE WHISPERERS.

Men Who Can Control the Most Vicious Animal by Voice.

The horse whisperer might be an unknown quantity in England and Ireland today, but there are not a few men who exercise a wonderful control with their voices over horses which when the dominating influence is absent are apt to literally kick over the traces. In the thoroughbred stables of England and Ireland today there are not a few stablemen and jockeys who succeed in holding in check the vice in horses which in demonstrative manner show that they cannot tolerate the presence of the grooms or attendants.

Nimrod claimed for Count Duval the power and influence of the human voice over the brute creation, but that power was backed up by a lecture to the horse with "his clinched fist in his face."

But the horse whisperer of today avoids all gesticulations and trusts entirely to a combination of sounds or words. There is no bullying done, and the whisperer can face a mad horse with his hands behind his back and apparently at the mercy of the beast that has to come under the charm. One means of keeping remount horses quiet in stations during the South African war was that employed by the yeomen, who sat in a ring of head to head horses singing as loudly as possible and riveting the ears and attention of the otherwise sprawling and hungry animals.

One of the first whisperers to acquire absolute control over fractious equines was Con Sullivan, who migrated in his youth from Kilmallick, where he could trace his genealogy through a long line of snafflers, and became almost exclusively employed by Lord Doneraile. The whisper of this man made an indelible impression upon any horse, bringing the pupil to a degree of docility unattainable in the ordinary course of discipline.

The race horse King Pepin, a famous racer, vicious and reputed to have killed two grooms at the Curragh, once came under his charge. He was wanted to win a race at Mallow, but when saddling time came it found him in one of his unmanageable moods. He reared, plunged and flung out fore and aft until he completely cowed groom and jockey. It was at this crisis that some one recommended that he should be "whispered." As it was the only chance left of taming him in time for the start, his owner gladly availed himself of it, though warned that horses were sometimes thrown into a state of stupor by the process.

Sullivan was soon found, and he was delighted at the opportunity of "whisperin' before so much quality from all parts." "Show us the wild baste," he said, "and we'll soon tache him manners."

When he got within the circle—and a wide one it was—in which King Pepin was playing his antics he walked up to him, approaching the horse from behind. He mumbled some words as he walked which, though not quite inaudible, were as unintelligible as a sermon in the unknown tongue, but they had a most magical effect on the horse, for he stood stock still. Sullivan then patted him on the neck, while he whispered a word or two in his ear, whereupon King Pepin went on his knees and incontinently lay down.

The whisperer then stretched himself on him at full length, took out a pouch containing pipe and tobacco, flint and steel, struck a light and blew a cloud as he lounged on the stomach of this high mettled colt with as much composure as if he were seated on a bench in his favorite taproom. After two or three puffs he got up, beckoned the nag to his legs, saddled him and walked off to the starting post, the horse following and fawning upon him like a dog. He won the race in a canter.—London Live Stock Journal.

Great Falls of the Potomac.

The Great Falls of the Potomac are about fifteen miles above Washington, but the neighboring country has remained so wild and undeveloped that the falls have been difficult to reach. The famous Conduit or Aqueduct road, so called because it is built over the big conduit which brings the national capital its water supply, leads about up to the falls on the Maryland side and there stops. It is famous as one of the best roads in the country, and it is a favorite drive with Washington people and visitors. About halfway up this road crosses a deep gulch by means of the Cabin John bridge, a majestic stone arch built by the government and until recently the longest single masonry span in the world, about 220 feet. This bridge was begun just before the civil war, and a tablet was inserted in its side, giving the name of Jeff Davis as secretary of war. During the war his name was mutilated by soldiers, and now it is entirely cut off.—Pathfinder.

Dawn on the Prairies.

While we ate the eastern sky lightened. The mountains under the dawn looked like silhouettes cut from slate colored paper. Those in the west showed faintly luminous. Objects about us became dimly visible. We could make out the windmill and the adobe of the ranch houses and the corrals. The cowboys arose one by one, dropped their plates into the dishpan and began to hunt out their ropes. Everything was obscure and mysterious in the faint gray light. I watched Windy Bill near his tarpaulin. He stooped to throw over the canvas. When he bent it was before daylight; when he straightened his back daylight had come. It was just like that, as though some one had reached out his hand to turn on the illumination of the world.—Stewart Edward White in Outing Magazine.

John Seemed to Make His Point, but Missed the Chicken.

The old couple were eating their first meal with their son after his return from college.

"Tell us, John," said the father, "what have you learned at college?"

"Oh, lots of things," said the son as he recited his course of studies. "Then," he concluded, "I also studied logic."

"Logic," said the old man. "What is that?"

"It's the art of reasoning," said the son.

"The art of reasoning?" said the father. "What is that, my boy?"

"Well," replied the son, "let me give you a demonstration. How many chickens are on that dish, father?"

"Two," said the old man.

"Well," said John, "I can prove there are three." Then he stuck his fork in one and said, "That is one, isn't it?"

"Yes," said the father.

"And this is two?" sticking his fork in the second.

"Yes," replied the father again.

"Well, don't one and two make three?" replied John triumphantly.

"Well, I declare," said the father, "you have learned things at college. Well, mother," continued the old man to his wife, "I will give you one of the chickens to eat, and I'll take the other, and John can have the third. How is that, John?"—Judge.

MEXICAN CARRIERS.

The Cargadors Can Carry Enormous Loads on Their Shoulders.

Just as one finds the rickshaw everywhere in India, so one finds the cargador in Mexico. He is a beast of burden. In general he is a comparatively small man, with broad shoulders and stout arms and legs. To look at him one would not think he would be able to carry heavy burdens. But the weight he can carry is surprising. You have a trunk you can scarcely move, for instance. You send for a cargador. He gets it upon his back, high up on the shoulders, and he marches off with it as easily as though it were a plaything. A life dedicated to carrying heavy burdens has made this work easy for him. A slightly built Mexican will carry over 500 pounds on his shoulders for short distances.

Until recent years almost everything in the City of Mexico and everywhere else throughout the republic was carried upon the backs of cargadors. If you wanted to move your household furniture you hired a certain number of cargadors. For house moving they generally work in pairs, each pair having a hand truck, which they pick up and carry when it is loaded, for it has no wheels. In the City of Mexico there are still hundreds of these hand trucks, though one may now find plenty of carts, wagons and heavy moving trucks.—Mexican Herald.

JOHN MAKES A HIT

Gridiron Speech Puts Governor Again in the Limelight.

The streets and hotel corridors of Washington are full today of echoes of the Gridiron dinner Saturday night, and Governor Johnson's wonderful speech there, says W. W. Jermane, Washington correspondent of Minneapolis Journal. It created a sensation such as the club has never witnessed in the twenty three years of its existence, say the old members, and has had the effect of bringing Johnson once more to the fore as a presidential possibility. This may sound strange in view of the mortgage Bryan seems to have on the nomination but nevertheless it appears to be true.

One of the guests at the Gridiron dinner was Colonel Nelson, proprietor of the Kansas City Star, the greatest newspaper in the Missouri valley. He has announced publicly that he is now for Johnson for the nomination and will do all that he can in his newspaper and otherwise to break Bryan's hold on Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

Similarly Charles H. Grasty, editor and principal owner of the Baltimore News, the chief afternoon in that city, announced that he, too, is for Johnson for the nomination, and will start a movement for him in Maryland and Virginia at once. Grasty was at the Saturday night dinner.

Governor Johnson made a similar impression upon all the guests that he made upon Nelson and Grasty, As he sat down after concluding his speech, Senator Foraker, who sat fifty feet away. from him, hurried up, reached over the table and extended his earnest congratulations He was quickly followed by Senators Lodge, Senator Paynter of Kentucky, Senator Johnston of Alabama and a score or more of democratic house members.

Then came Secretary Cortelyou, who said he very much desired to be introduced to the governor, and after Cortelyou came Secretary Straus, who also wanted to be introduced. The reception was an ovation, and continued until long after the dinner was over, and it is estimated that of the 250 guests 75 per cent personally congratulated the governor on his speech and on the very favorable impression he had made.

All this, of course, may amount to nothing in a presidential way, but it ought to be very interesting reading to the governor's many friends in Minnesota. It shows clearly the desire of the democratic leaders to break away from Bryan if possible and it shows also the high respect in which prominent republicans hold the governor.

The Washington Herald says editorially today that Gov. Johnson is not an illustration of the old saying that distance lends enchantment to the view, but that the closer one gets to him the better one likes him.

The Only Place He Cared About.

"There was a French count," said a lecturer in the midst of a little sermon on selfishness, "who was traveling from Paris to Monte Carlo. On his journey he stopped at Mentone, where he sent for his valet, who had preceded him and was to have met him at that point. 'Alas, monsieur,' exclaimed the count's courier, 'poor Francois! I have just looked my last upon him. He was killed in a railway accident. His corpse lies on the outskirts of Mentone, cut in a hundred pieces!' 'Ah!' murmured the count, regretfully. 'Then just go back and fetch me the piece that contains my trunk keys.'"

The Old Way and the New.

The young lady from Boston was explaining. "Take an egg," she said, "and make a perforation in the base and a corresponding one in the apex. Then you apply the lips to the aperture and by forcibly inhaling the breath the shell is entirely discharged of its contents."

An old lady who was listening exclaimed:

"It beats all how folks do things nowadays. When I was a gal they made a hole in each end and sucked."—Judge's Library.

What the Poet Says.

After their honeymoon to Niagara falls they came back and settled on the old farm.

"Gracious, Sila!" said Cynthia. "Why are you in such a bad humor?"

"Making butter is blamed hard work," grumbled Silas, removing the beads from his brow.

"Oh, cheer up, Sile! Don't the poet say that it is 'love that makes the world go round?'"

"Yes; but, by gosh, it don't make the churn go round."—Chicago News.

Ventilate Well.

An old writer says, "When men lived in houses of reed they had constitutions of oak; when they lived in houses of oak they had constitutions of reeds." This is a picturesque description of the injury which may come to us from fine houses too closely confined to keep out the fresh air and too heavily curtained, preventing the entrance of sunshine, which is almost if not quite as important as air. But it is not at all necessary to have our fine houses unhealthy, and it requires only intelligence and thoughtfulness to render a brick house as good a promoter of health as a cabin. Fresh air will come into well ventilated modern houses as well as through the open cracks of a house of reeds and sunlight through a window in a palace as well as a hovel.

The Discovery of Iron.

The stone age, bronze age and iron age so overlap one another it is impossible to say just when one begins or ends. Men began to use both bronze and iron long before stone had ceased to be used. In fact, America was in the stone age so late as its discovery by Columbus 400 years ago. It is safe to say that history proper and the iron age were born together anywhere from 8,000 to 10,000 years ago. It is more than likely that men gained their first information concerning the properties of iron through experiments with the pieces of it that had fallen from the sky in the shape of meteors.—New York American.

Energy.

Aubrey de Vere, an Irish poet and gentleman, mentions in his "Recollections" that when ten years old he had a tutor who constantly inculcated in him rectitude, purpose and energy.

The tutor's praise of energy was expressed by the saying:

"There are three letters of more value than all the rest in the alphabet —namely, N R G."

Headed Him Off.

"My wife," began Hicks, "dropped in to see me at the office today and"—

"Sorry, old man," interrupted Wicks, "but my wife held me up before I left home; I can't lend you a cent."—Catholic Standard and Times.

North Side--Red Lake Falls

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

RAISED HIS WAGES.

The Way an Employer Got Square With a Faithless Assistant.

A story is told in Milwaukee concerning an elderly German who conducted a good sized manufacturing plant on the south side. He had an engineer at his factory who had been with him for fifteen years and the old gentleman had implicit confidence in him. It was with a profound shock that he discovered finally that the trusted engineer was "grafting" most shamefully.

The proprietor thought it all over for a long while and then sent for the engineer. When that functionary arrived the following dialogue took place:

"Ah, John! Good morning. John. How long haf you been vorking by this place?"

"Fifteen years."

"Ach, so. And vot are your wages?"

"Twenty-five dollars a week."

"M-m-m. Vell, after today it vill be $5 a veek more."

The engineer thanked his employer profusely and withdrew. A week later the old gentleman sent for him again and the same conversation ensued, ending with another $5 a week raise. The third Saturday he sent for the engineer again, and after the same questions and answers he raised his salary another $5 a week.

On the fourth Saturday the engineer was again summoned before the boss.

"How long have you been vorking here, John?" asked the proprietor.

"Fifteen years," replied the engineer, who by this time had grown to expect the weekly question and salary raise as a regular thing.

"And how much vages are you getting?"

"Forty dollars a week."

"Ach, so? Vell, you are fired."

"Fired!" exclaimed the engineer, almost fainting. "Why, you have been raising my salary $5 at a clip for the last three weeks."

"Sure I have," roared the Teutonic boss, all his indignation flaring out at once. "And the reason that I did it vas that it shall make it harder for you for vhen I fire you, you loafer!"—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

SILVER KING OF THE SEA.

The Feats That a Tarpon Will Perform When Hooked.

If you have never seen a tarpon imagine the Mediterranean sardine that you take from the box for lunch lengthened out to six or seven feet. Give it two enormous staring black eyes, a supercilious lip of the most grotesque shape coming down and twisting up again, a mouth that can be thrown so wide open that thirty feet distant when the fish is in the air you can see blue sky down its throat and out through the arched gills. Give the fish a greenish back and a long spine at the dorsal, a powerful sardine-like tail and equip its belly and sides with scales which look more like newly minted trade dollars than anything else, dollars often twice their natural size, into which the purest molten silver has been dropped, scales that flash thousands of rays in every direction, scales that gleam, corruscate and in the full glare of the sun form so many sunbursts to dazzle the eye and confuse the excited angler.

I have taken the "sabalo" under various circumstances and have seen it leap along the outer Florida reef and down by the Rio Grande, where it forms in gigantic schools and moves south in winter, and everywhere it is the same sensational equilibrist, the same air climber and sky scraper when hooked or snared. What the sensations of the tarpon are when hooked it would be difficult to say, but I fancy it is frightened and leaps in the direction away from the pain center, and no two leaps are alike.

It may go directly up into the air, carrying a big wave with it, and lash the air, or it may go out of the water head first, rising like a ray of light ten or fifteen or more feet, then fall gracefully. Every possible position I have seen the frightened tarpon take, from standing on its tail as upright as a soldier to exactly the opposite direction, and an old angler informed me that he had seen a tarpon make a lateral leap of thirty feet.—Charles F. Holden in Recreation.

A Little Too Original.

"You New Yorkers are wonders," said the man from the west here for a brief stay and seeing everything from the Bronx to the Bowery. "Nothing is impossible here—at least I saw vines twined across the sky last night. It was in a restaurant in Forty-second street," he continued. "The ceiling is painted sky blue, and there are little electric lights set to look like stars. Also there are the clouds floating about, but then there are the vines that kill the otherwise very neat illusion. Originality is all right, but vines hitched to a sky is too much for a man from the west."—New York Globe

The Main Point.

Mrs. Scraplelgh—They say, my dear, that the new rubber plant, the Ficus pandurata, is extremely beautiful. It has a glossy veined leaf— Mr. Scraplelgh (who has strained his back lugging the house plants around)—I don't care anything about its glossy veined leaves. What does the dum thing weigh?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Great Financier.

Cholly—Harry is a great financier. Chapple—Yass! Cholly—He borrowed sixpence from me yesterday to take him to the city to see a man that he knew he could borrow a pound from, and with that pound he flew off to stand a dinner to another man whom he borrowed a hundred from.—London Telegraph.

The Class Struggle.

The class struggle began with the prehistoric tribal wars and can end only when the laborers can be delivered from the inheritance of industrial disaster handed down to them from the fortunes of barbarian warfare. This class struggle was shown in the servile rebellions when slavery had been made the status of the workingman. This class struggle was shown in the labor unions and the strikes when the wage system had been fastened on the toiler, when he had been robbed of any opportunity to use the resources of the earth in his own right, had been refused the right to live without a master and had not been guaranteed even the right to have a master. This class struggle is shown now in the struggle for Socialism, which is no new thing in the world. It is the same old warfare, at last informed as to the nature of the rights of the toilers and equipped with the power of the ballot in the struggle to secure these rights.—John Stuart Mill.

What a Priest Says.

Advancing the cause of Socialism is not the work of factions and giddy heads, as some think who see a scarecrow in every new movement, but is the progress of humanity. I call Socialism the doctrine of love and justice which was taught by Christ. Socialism does not mean tumult and ruin, but food and work for all, a home and clothing for all, a living assured to all, happiness and justice for all.—Father Mario Oddarin, Italy.

RESPONSIBILITY.

It Develops the Power and Ability That Is In a Man.

Responsibility is a great power developer. Where there is responsibility there is growth. People who are never thrust into responsible positions never develop their real strength. This is one reason why it is so rare to find very strong men and women among those who have spent their lives in subordinate positions, in the service of others. They go through life comparative weaklings because their powers have never been tested or developed by having great responsibility thrust upon them. This thinking has been done for them. They have simply carried out somebody else's programme. They have never learned to stand alone, to think for themselves, to act independently. Because they have never been obliged to plan for themselves they have never developed the best thing in them—their power of originality, inventiveness, initiative, independence, self reliance, their possible grit and stamina. The power to create, to make combinations, to meet emergencies, the power which comes from continuous marshaling of one's forces to meet difficult situations, to adjust means to ends, that stamina or power which makes one equal to the great crisis in the life of a nation, is only developed by years of practical training under great responsibility.

There is nothing more misleading than the philosophy that if there is anything in a youth it will come out. It may come out and it may not. It depends largely upon circumstances, upon the presence or absence of an ambition arousing, a grit awakening environment. The greatest ability is not always accompanied by the greatest confidence or the greatest ambition.

There is at this moment enough power latent in the clerks or ordinary employees in almost any of our business houses to manage them as well or better than they are managed today if the opportunity and necessary emergency came to call out this dynamic force.

But how can clerks who remain behind counters measuring cloth, selling shoes or hosiery, year in and year out, ever know what latent power for organization or executive ability, what initiative they possess? It is true that some of the more ambitious and courageous get out and start for themselves, but it does not follow that they are always abler than those who remain behind. Sometimes the greatest ability is accompanied by great modesty and even timidity. Then, again, employees conscious of great ability are often deterred from taking the risk of launching out for themselves because of possible disaster to those depending upon them for daily bread. But thrust great responsibility upon a man, drive him to desperation, and the demand will bring out what there is in him. It will call out his initiative, his ingenuity, his resourcefulness, his self reliance, his power to adjust means to ends. If there are any elements of leadership in him, responsibility will call them out. It will test his power to do things.—Success.

The Last Execution at Tyburn.

The last execution at Tyburn took place on Friday, Nov. 7, 1783, in the person of John Austin, convicted on the preceding Saturday of robbing John Spicer and cutting and wounding him in a cruel manner. In Walford's "Old and New London" it is erroneously said that "the last criminal executed here was one Ryland, who was hanged (sic) for forgery in 1783." William Ryland was executed on Aug. 29, two months before the date of Austin's conviction, and many a poor wretch made the fatal pilgrimage to Tyburn in the interval, hanging by wholesale being the rule in those days. The long procession westward had been attended by such disgraceful scenes that the authorities resolved to hang criminals henceforth outside Newgate prison, straight from the condemned cell. Accordingly on Dec. 3, 1783, the recorder ordered the erection of a scaffold in front of the jail, of which a notice and descriptive engraving appear in the Gentleman's Magazine for the same month, and on the 10th the new hanging place was inaugurated by the execution of ten malefactors.—London Notes and Queries.

Fake Telephone Calls.

The second day after the new maid came the mistress had company. Just before the callers arrived the maid said confidentially:

"Shall I go out and telephone to you while they are here?"

"Telephone?" exclaimed the mistress. "What on earth should you telephone to me about?"

"Oh, anything," responded the maid. "I always did it at the last place I worked and the place before that. The ladies wanted me to. It gave the impression that they were very popular and were overrun with engagements."

But the mistress, remembering many suspicious telephone calls that had interrupted the conversation when she herself had been calling, declined to purchase popularity on those terms.—New York Press.

Fishes That Are Lost.

It is pretty well established that the common mackerel, for example, lays some 50,000 eggs and that out of the number not more than two come to the reproduction stage. Presumably the loss is equally great in the eggs of other fishes. The greater part of this loss occurs, of course, while the young are too small to look out for themselves. By hatching the eggs artificially and maintaining the young until they can shift for themselves it is claimed that in place of one in 25,000 one in a dozen may live to maturity.

Convenient Banking.

The bank examiners of the treasury department have some odd and amusing experiences during their investigations of country banks. At one small and primitive institution an examiner found a deficiency of $100. Of course an explanation was demanded. The cashier made a brave attempt to look wise. Finally he took $100 from a private money drawer. "There, that will fix it," he said.

"How will you enter that to make good the balance?" asked the examiner.

The cashier looked bewildered, but finally said he would not enter it at all.

"You see," he remarked, "that drawer I just went into to make the balance is what we call the 'outs and over' drawer. Whenever we're out of balance we go to 'outs and over' to make things right. Then, again, when the sheet shows more cash than we ought to have the surplus goes to the drawer. Funny the city banks never thought of that scheme."—Harper's Weekly.

Some Notes on "Origins."

"Humpty Dumpty Sat on a Wall," etc., has come down to us from the days of King John. "The Babes In the Woods" dates from the fifteenth century, being founded upon facts, an old house near Wayland Wood, Norfolk, having the whole story in carvings on a mantelpiece. "Little Jack Horner," "Little Miss Muffet, "Old Mother Hubbard," "Mother Goosey" and "Goosey, Goosey Gander" are each traceable to the sixteenth century.

"Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat, Where Have You Been?" belongs to the reign of Queen Elizabeth." Three Blind Mice" first appeared in a music book dated 1609. "A Froggie Would a-Wooing Go" was licensed to be sung as far back as 1609. "Boys and Girls Come Out to Play" and "Lucy Locket Lost Her Pocket" both hail from the period of Charles II. And, last of all, "Cinderella," "Jack the Giant Killer," "Bluebeard" and "Tom Thumb" were published by their author, Charles Perrault, in the year 1697.—London Notes and Queries.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, dated the second day of November, 1903, and recorded in the office of Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, on the 29th day of March A. D., 1904, at five o'clock p. m., in book twenty-nine (29) of Mortgages on page three hundred fifty-five (355), whereby John N. Miller and Lizzie K. Miller, his wife, who were the mortgagors therein, mortgaged and conveyed to L. S. Hackney, who was the mortgagee therein, the following described property, situate in the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The south half of the ne¼ of section number five (5) in township number one hundred fifty-three (153), north of range number forty-four (44), west of the fifth principal meridian containing eighty (80) acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, to secure the payment of the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars and interest thereon, at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, according to the terms of their certain promissory note, bearing even date with said mortgage and payable five years after date, with interest at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, payable annually.

Said mortgage contained a provision, that should any default be made in the payment of any annual installment of interest due thereon or in the payment of any taxes thereafter to be assessed thereon, previous to the day appointed for the sale of lands for state taxes in the state of Minnesota, then and thereupon the whole sum, for the security of which said mortgage was given, shall become immediately due and payable at the election of the said mortgagee.

Said mortgagors have defaulted in the payment of the sum of four and 81-100 ($4.81) dollars of the annual interest due thereon, on the second day of November, 1906, and in the payment of the sum of twenty-eight ($28) dollars, being the entire installment of interest due thereon, on the second day of November, 1907, and in the payment of the taxes assessed thereon for the year 1905, and are still in default therein.

There is claimed to be and is actually due on said note and mortgage, at the date of this notice, the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars, principal; thirty four and 35-100 ($34.35) dollars interest; nine and 45-100 ($9.45) dollars paid by said mortgagee for the taxes of 1905 after said premises had been sold for taxes, with sixty five cents interest thereon; twenty-five ($25) dollars, attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage, to be paid in case of a foreclosure thereof, in all, amounting to the sum of four hundred sixty-nine and 45-100 ($469.45) dollars, due thereon at the date of this notice, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover said debt or any part thereof.

Now, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale, in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, said mortgage will be foreclosed and the property above and therein described will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, on the 18th day of January, 1908, to satisfy and pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and the costs and expenses of said sale.

RHEUMATISM
CAN NOT BE RUBBED AWAY

It is perfectly natural to rub the spot that hurts, and when the muscles, nerves, joints and bones are throbbing and twitching with the pains of Rheumatism the sufferer is apt to turn to the liniment bottle, or some other external application, in an effort to get relief from the disease, by producing counter-irritation on the flesh. Such treatment will quiet the pain temporarily, but can have no direct curative effect on the real disease because it does not reach the blood, where the cause is located. Rheumatism is more than skin deep—it is rooted and grounded in the blood and can only be reached by constitutional treatment—IT CANNOT BE RUBBED AWAY. Rheumatism is due to an excess of uric acid in the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural avenues of bodily waste, the Bowels and Kidneys, have failed to carry off. This refuse matter, coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. The aches and pains are only symptoms, and though they may be scattered or relieved for a time by surface treatment, they will reappear at the first exposure to cold or dampness, or after an attack of indigestion or other irregularity. Rheumatism can never be permanently cured while the circulation remains saturated with irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. The disease will shift from muscle to muscle or joint to joint, settling on the nerves, causing inflammation and swelling and such terrible pains that the nervous system is often shattered, the health undermined, and perhaps the patient becomes deformed and crippled for life. S. S. S. thoroughly cleanses the blood and renovates the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling all foreign matter from the system. It warms and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acrid and corrosive matter in the muscles, nerves, joints and bones, the body is fed and nourished by rich, health-sustaining blood which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. is composed of both purifying and tonic properties—just what is needed in every case of Rheumatism. It contains no potash, alkali or other mineral ingredient, but is made entirely of purifying, healing extracts and juices of roots, herbs and barks. If you are suffering from Rheumatism do not waste valuable time trying to rub a blood disease away, but begin the use of S. S. S. and write us about your case and our physicians will give you any information or advice desired free of charge and will send our special treatise on Rheumatism.

DAKOTA BUSINESS COLLEGE

Every young person needs a business education and it costs no more to get it at this great Business and Telegraphic Training School, under exact office conditions, than at one of the small questionable ones. The results are, however, very different. 350 D. B. C. pupils went to excellent positions in banks and other business offices last year—over 400 will do so this year. All the Fargo banks employ D. B. C. pupils as bookkeepers, tellers and stenographers. No other school offers such evidence of endorsement by business men.

Our Business Course prepares for business life, or for position as clerk, or bookkeeper. The new course in Commerce and Banking (endorsed by the Bankers' Association) will supply bookkeepers for the larger concerns and tellers and cashiers for the Northwestern banks. The Stenographic Course (under an expert reporter) trains high-grade stenographers and court reporters. The stenographers for the U. S. District Court, N. D. Supreme Court and the Cass County Court are D. B. C. pupils. Can any other school offer you this evidence of superior training?

A Telegraphic and Railroad Course (under the direction of an old train dispatcher) furnishes operators and station agents for the G. N., N. P., Milwaukee and Soo roads. The train wires run into the school, all their blanks are furnished and R. R. auditors lecture and give instruction on R. R. accounting. The roads guarantee positions to all D. B. C. graduates.

CORRESPONDENCE

THIEF RIVER FALLS

From the News and Press.

Mrs. N. W. Tarrnat came up from Red Lake Falls for a short visit on Thursday.

A. D. Halin and Miss Anna Hanson, both of Plummer, were married in this city last Saturday.

Mrs. J. J. Padden and daughter, of Red Lake Falls, were in the city last week visiting at the home of Mrs. Kretzschmar.

Mrs. James Meehan and Mrs. Sirine, sisters of Mrs. K. M. Hansea, who have been visiting her some weeks, returned to their respective homes Monday evening.

The curfew is to be more strictly enforced in Thief River Falls, which is certainly a good thing. The council has introduced an ordinance that when enforced, will cause children under sixteen to be at home by eight o'clock in the evening unless accompanied by a person of mature years.

Elias Joringdahl was in from his farm west of town Wednesday and purchased a threshing engine of local dealers, which he will use on his farm for gringing feed and sawing wood on his farm. Mr. Joringdahl is one of this vicinity's successful farmers and considers that he is not up-to date unless he has an engine to do most of his work.

Dr. H. O. Schleben has secured a government appointment that will take both he and his family to Iliamna, Alaska, where they will make their home. The doctor is to be in charge of a reindeer station and will also look after the education of the natives of the vicinity. He will leave for his new post about January 1st, but will go from here somewhat earlier, visiting relatives in the southern part of the state before going further north. Mrs. Schaleben will join her husband some time during the spring.

BRAY.

O. P. Johnson was at Wylie Friday.

Last Friday we had some snow but not enough for sleighing.

John Scholin returned last Tuesday from a trip to Bemidji.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bessler drove to Red Lake Falls Tuesday.

Martin Anderson a former Brayite came down from Crookston Saturday to look over old friends.

Iver Johnson went down to Crookston Tuesday for a few days stay with his brother-in-law, Albin Anderson.

Chas. Englund, Alfred Olson and Richard Larson attended the auction at Landtman's in Black River Tuesday.

A. E. Anderson and Richard Larson transacted business at the "county hub" Saturday returning home via St. Hilaire.

Among the Brayites who were in St. Hilaire Saturday were Chas. Englund, P. Limblom, A E. Anderson, Richard Larson and Oscar Swanson.

Madam Rumor had it down for a wedding on Thanksgiving Day, in our peaceful little burg, but nothing of the kind happened as far as your correpondent knows.

A Real Wonderland

South Dakota, with its rich silver mines, bonanza farms, wide ranges and strange natural formations, is a veritable wonderland. At Mound City, in the home of Mrs. E. D. Clapp, a wonderful case of healing has lately occurred. Her son seemed near death with lung and throat trouble. "Exhausting coughing spells occurred every five minutes," writes Mrs. Clapp, "when I began giving Dr. King's New Discovery, the great medicine that saved his life and completely cured him." Guaranteed for coughs and colds, throat and lung troubles, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

PLUMMER.

From the Pioneer.

Carl Johnson arrived here from Norway a few days ago and is making his home for the present with his uncle, Iver Twedt.

Ralph Green came in from Equality last evening and went to Wahpeton, N. D., to spend a few days visiting with his mother who resides there.

W. A. Swanson was in from Rhoda on Tuesday with a fine load of grain for sale. He says the crops were good with all the people in his neighborhood this year and everybody prosperous.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Johnson, of Mayfield township, left on Thursday evening for LaCrosse and other points in Wisconsin, where they will visit for some weeks with relatives and friends.

Peter Hedea was in from Kratka on Thursday on business. He reports that a movement is on foot to start a creamery in his neighborhood and that one will undoubtedly be started there in the near future.

Hons Holmen left for Ulen on Thursday to spend a few days visiting with his old friends. We understand the real abject of his trip is to secure a life partner but we are not yet fully informed as to who the lady is or when the wedding is to occur.

ST. HILAIRE

From the Spectator.

C. H. Martz left on Wednesday to inspect a new iron bridge being built near Plummer.

George Biscay had the good fortune to shoot a fine large black mink while on his trip Thursday.

Mrs. H. W. Bertelson and daughter, of Fergus Falls, is here this week visiting her sister. Mrs. Geo. L. Austin.

Charley Fellman is the proud possessor of a buckskin hunting jacket and next year the deer will come right in and give up when they see him.

Glenn Shannon accidently shot himself in the left leg with a 32 calibre rifle last Sunday afternoon while he was standing on the county bridge. The bullet went in just below the thigh and was taken out by Dr. Cummings just above the knee. He is doing fine and will be out again in a few days.

P. O. Eckstrom, the well known Black River farmer, had the misfortune to break his left leg just above the ankel, while in a friendly scuffle with members of his family at his residence last Monday evening. Drs. Cummings and Swanson were called and found that both bones were broken. The leg was set and the patient is doing as well as can be expected.

The new equipment for the central exchange of the new telephone is on the road but has been delayed somewhere. so there will be a delay of another week in starting the service. Nearly all the 'phones have been put in and quite a number are connected so many are now enjoying a partial service. Manager Hooper informs us that he hopes to have the system in working order some time the coming week.

A Dangerous Deadlock,

that sometimes terminates fatally, is the stoppage of liver and bowel functions. To quickly end this condition without disagreeable sensations, Dr. King's New Life Pills should always be your remedy. TERREBONNE.

Mrs. Chas. Kankel is improving from her severe illness.

Rev. Fr. Veilleux is spending the week at Crookston, the guest of Rev. Fr. Tapin.

Mrs. A. Wolfe has spent the last week visiting friends at Gentilly and Crookston.

Michel Quesnell and family left Monday for Washington, where they are going to reside.

A girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Regis Gagnon on November 26. Mr. and Mrs. Edward St. Ives stood for the child.

Frank Kirchens left Terrebonne last Saturday to reside permanently with his father near Minneapolis. His sister went a few days previously.

Miss Rose Quesuel, daughter of Stephen Quesnel, was married last week to Seth Jones, newly converted to Catholic religion. The new couple will reside on a farm near Mentor.

Raymond Thibert met with a very severe accident some two weeks ago. His horses ran away and in his effort to hold them, he fell under a heavy load of hay. One of his legs and an arm were broken.

The basket party held on Thanksgiving day for the benefit of St. Antony's church met with great success. There were seventy-six baskets sold for the pretty sum of $136.25. The net receipts amounted to $197.00.

Winter must have slipped by some night while while we were sleeping as this weather looks more like spring weather than anything else.

John Scholin has been busy marketing grain in Wylie during the last week.

E. J. Akerlynd transacted business at St. Hilaire Thursday.

Gust Schalin made a trip to Thief River Falls the first of the week.

O. P. Johnsan drove to Wylie Thursday.

Among the Brayites who were at Wylie Saturday were Thomas Larson, Henry Limblom, Swan Scholin, Ray Lindquist and Oscar Swansan.

Ed Crown and son Willie was at Thief River Falls Friday.

Gust Swanson drove to St. Hilaire Monday.

O. A. Akerlund has received a traveling library of 25 volumes and from now on every body will be busy poring over books during the long winter evenings.

Here's Good Advise.

O. S. Woolever, one of the best known merchants of LeRaysville, N. Y., says: "If you are ever troubled with piles, apply Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It cured me of them for good twenty years ago." Guaranteed for sores, wounds, burns or abrasions. 25c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

PRODUCTIVE POWER OF WESTERN CANADA SOIL

Winnipeg Correspondence.

There has never been one who have doubted the productiveness of the soil of Western Canada, but there are sometimes found those who question the fact of its superiority. During the past season it has been shown that in grain raising qualities it possessed the very best. The late spring prevented grain being sown in many cases before the middle of May. Yet, a large percentage of that sown at that time produced excellent yields. Had it not been for the frost early in August, which visited most of the north half of the continent, there would have been a magnificent yield in every district in Western Canada. Throughout the Southern Alberta district where about 100,000 acres was sown to winter wheat the yield will be enormously large. There are vast tracts of valuable grain growing land in Western Canada that are available for homesteads, the Canadian Government giving 160 acres free, and entry may be made by proxy, by any near relative, thus saving considerable cost to the American who may have entry made in this way. Any Canadian Government Agent will give you the particulars.

Your correspondent has just received the following letter from Craik, Saskatchewan, which bears out the statement made in the first part of this letter.

"Craik, Sask., Aug. 1907.

"May 24th we planted a Dahlia root, which we brought with us from Minneapolis. Aug. 12th, 80 days later, it was in bloom. The plant is now 4½ feet high and covered with blossoms. We never got half as many flowers on it in Minneapolis, even during September and October, although we had more time to attend to it there."

I mention this only as an example of the great productive power of the soil here in Saskatchewan, Canada.

To the Best of His Knowledge.

TO CURE A COUGH OR COLD.

Doctor's Prescription Checks an Acute Cold in a Day and Cures Chronic Coughs.

The following formula is a never failing remedy for coughs or colds:

Two ounces of glycerine, one-half ounce of Concentrated oil of pine, one half pint of good whisky, mix and shake thoroughly each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

This, if followed up, will cure any cough that is curable or break up an acute cold in 24 hours. The ingredients all can be gotten at any drug store.

Concentrated oil of pine comes put up for medicinal uses only in half ounce vials sealed in air tight cases designed to protect it from heat and light. Other oils of pine are insoluble and are likely to produce nausea and cannot give the desired results.

MRS. DONALD McLEAN.

The Growth of Patriotic Societies

By Mrs. Donald McLean

Order of Cincinnati Founded by Revolutionary Officers—Crop of Societies the Result of Centennial in 1876—Refusal of "Sons of Revolution" to Accept "Daughters"—"Daughters" Soon Greatly Outnumber "Sons"—Eligibility Rules for Both Are Democratic—"Colonial Dames" and Other Organizations.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

(Mrs. Donald McLean's name is known very widely not only as that of the head of the New York city chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, but as that of a writer and speaker of ability on topics of especial interest to women. Mrs. McLean is a prominent member of a number of organizations of a social and patriotic character.)

The centennial celebration of 1876 gave an impetus to patriotic impulse as directed toward organization which had lain dormant in a large measure since the years immediately succeeding the war of the revolution.

As all the world knows, the Order of the Cincinnati was formed immediately upon the cessation of that war and just before the disbanding of the continental army. It was composed of the officers who served through the struggle, Washington being the president of the society. It is the only organization in this country promoting the rights of primogeniture, and it is said that Washington hesitated ere granting his approval to such an organization or becoming its president because of the fear that an aristocratic sentiment would be unduly fostered in a democratic country.

However, Washington did consent to take the office, and the organization exists to this day, commanding the respect of all men and not conflicting with the best American spirit. Membership in this society descends from the eldest son to the eldest son (women are barred), and the insignia, which is a golden eagle, cut clear, descends with the membership. In lieu of direct descendants the title and insignia pass to the eldest son of the nearest branch of the family. The portraits and miniatures of many of the revolutionary officers display this badge of the Order of the Cincinnati as their proudest decoration.

This, of course, was the father, so to speak, of all patriotic organizations. It is not, perhaps, widely known that a society was formed directly after the formation of the Cincinnati purporting to represent the very principles of which Washington was such a warm supporter—that is, the democratic as opposed to the aristocratic spirit in the country. This second society was known as the "Veteran Corps of Artillery." It, too, was composed largely of officers of the revolution and men who had made good records in that struggle.

It never grew to such proportions or prominence as the Order of the Cincinnati, though always highly regarded by those who understood it. It now lives in combination with the society formed of the descendants of the heroes of 1812, the title being the Veteran Corps of Artillery and War of 1812. Therefore, this dual-named organization has a membership composed of men descended from ancestors who fought in the two wars of 1776 and 1812. In a few instances the same ancestors fought in both. This was possible if the patriot engaged in the revolutionary war in extreme youth and lived to hardy manhood to fight in 1812.

With the exception, however, of these two societies, formed in the early period of the country's history, all desire for such patriotic organizations seemed to die, until, as has been said, the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence animated the seed of patriotic growth which has since flowered at this end of the new century into full and luxuriant bloom. Within the last few years well-nigh a countless number of organizations, bearing titles significant of historic association, have sprung into being.

Of these "The Sons" and "Daughters of the American Revolution" are the most prominent and numerous in membership. In connecting the title "Sons and Daughters" the writer does that which the "Sons" themselves declined to do, the latter thus exhibiting a lack of that "seeing vision" which Du Maurier proclaims a priceless gift. In other words, the "Sons" did not foresee that a declination to receive the feminine descendants of revolutionary sires would deprive the society Sons of the American Revolution of an able, ardent and achieving element. Therefore it came about that the society Sons of the American Revolution, organized in 1889, exists as one organization and the Daughters of the American Revolution as another.

With the true, clinging nature of women's hearts, the feminine descendants of the revolutionary patriots appealed to the Sons of the American Revolution to be taken within the protecting fold of the masculine society! The latter, however, displayed no embracive inclination and threw the women back upon their own pride and their own resources.

The result was that in October, 1890, there was organized the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The growth and activity of the latter body would seem almost incomprehensible were it not to be remembered that the spirits of the men who "made and preserved us a nation" inspire the souls of their descendants; and woman's enthusiasm, when awakened, outstrips all other and reaches, on flying feet, the goal of high endeavor. The Sons of the American Revolution number several thousand—probably under 10,000. The Daughters of the American Revolution over 30,000.

These revolutionary daughters, having made clear to erring man his mistake in refusing their gentle companionship, now entertain the most amiable feeling toward their brother society. The latter apparently reciprocates, and the two organizations being in perfect harmony, although under separate governments, have become a leaven of patriotism for the entire country. They are represented in every state, city and hamlet. All institutions of learning know them, from the public schools to the universities. All rostrums have welcomed them, from the old-time town meeting to the great assemblages in fashionable halls. Historic spots no longer lie neglected, but are crowned with lasting granite and immutable bronze. The heroes who spilled their blood upon the soil, then consecrated by that red libation, no longer sleep in unknown or forgotten graves. "Their children rise up and call them blessed," and their country is rejuvenated by the proud memories of their marvelous prowess.

Eligibility in either of the above-mentioned organizations rests upon lineal descent from one who served his or her country during the revolution, whether in the army or on the high seas or in giving "material aid" to the infant government. Descent from an officer does not necessarily figure in either society. Descent from a private, unknown save by his name and a record of unflinching service to his country, entitles one to the same regard as though descended from captain, colonel or brigadier general. Thus a truly American spirit is conserved.

Besides the Sons of the American Revolution and the Daughters of the American Revolution, there is a society of the Sons of the Revolution and one of the Daughters of the Revolution. The former claim to have been formed prior to the Sons of the American Revolution. It is a mooted question. It is a fact, however, that the Daughters of the Revolution are an offshoot from the parent society, the Daughters of the American Revolution.

In addition to the societies already named there exist a multitude of organizations of a patriotic nature, each having as an incentive the same loyal purposes toward its native land. Those best known are the masculine society Founders and Patriots and a feminine society of the same name. To be eligible to membership in either of these one must be descended from ancestors who assisted in founding the country during its colonial period and were indubitably loyal to our own government during the revolution.

The two well-known organizations of colonial dames—one the Colonial Dames of America, the other the National Society of Colonial Dames—differ from the organizations just mentioned in that eligibility to membership consists in a descent from one who was prominent in the colonial period, but who was not of necessity, though it is presumed preferably, a patriot during the revolution.

A society closely akin to this, whose membership consists entirely of men, is known as the Society of Colonial Wars. Eligibility consists in descent from one who served in the wars during the colonial period of the country, such as the French and Indian war.

The United States Daughters of 1812 is a society founded upon descent from ancestors, prominent in the country from 1783 and from those who served in the war of 1812.

This brief account of the birth and growth of patriotic societies barely touches upon their excellent achievement; but this is manifestly true: The spirit of devotion to the nation, developed by such organizations, is the "outward, visible sign" which undoubtedly follows such "inward spiritual grace" and causes the existence of such organizations to be a matter of felicitation to the entire country, and the United States is surely proud of its sons and daughters and they in turn are ready to lay their best abilities, whether in peace or war, upon the altar of their country's liberty.

THE WAY OF LOVE.

And Nothing Mattered So Long as They Were United.

Once upon a time there was a man who fell in love with a woman.

And they were married.

After a while the bills came in and the man sat around and thought about them. Then he went to his wife and said: "Dearie, can't you go a little slow?"

And his wife replied: "Alas! I never learned how. I fear that I am naturally extravagant. I don't mean to be, but I am. Tell me that you love me."

"I love you," replied the man.

After a while the stork paid a friendly visit. When the excitement was over and things quieted down, the man took note of certain things that were happening. The servants wouldn't stay. The baby was either overfed or underfed. The spirit of Harmony had slipped out. And the man sat around and thought about it some more. Then he went to his wife and said: "Dearie, there's something wrong with our domestic economy. Things ought to be different. The house isn't run right. Things are not done calmly or systematically. Can't you—"

His wife shook her head.

"I don't know how," she replied. "I never had much order. I can't help it, but—do you love me?"

"I love you more and more," replied the man.

And after another while the woman grew to be an invalid. She refused to take care of herself, and became morose, irritable and incapable of doing much of anything.

And one day, as the man sat and thought, she came to him and said:

"Dearest, I have been a failure. I'm thoroughly incompetent. I haven't done what I should have done. I have been lamentably weak. Aren't you, honestly now, sorry that you married me?"

"No," said the man.

"But I am a failure. You ought to be sorry. Why aren't you sorry?"

And the man smiled as he replied: "Because, sweetheart, if I hadn't married you I never could have loved you as much as I do now."—The Reader.

Revolution in China.

It is reported that the revolutionary movement in China is gaining strength and that secret organizations are increasing in number, especially in the Yangtse valley. Chinese officials say that thousands of revolutionists are concealed in the foreign quarters of the cities, thus placing themselves outside the jurisdiction of the Chinese courts. The revolutionary agitation recently was carried into the army. Murderous plots against the Manchus continue to be discovered in Pekin.

Her Vaulting Ambition.

"The height of my ambition," said the woman who hasn't always had to work but has to now, "is to make so much money that I won't have to recognize every piece of lingerie I possess. I want to have so many pieces of everything that I can take up, say, a skirt to put it on and won't know it is mine because I have had to wear it over and over about a hundred times."

HAVE QUEER JOBS

ODD OCCUPATIONS OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES.

"Chief Poisoner" Has Important Work in the National Museum—Millions of Dollars' Worth of Old Money Destroyed.

While the ordinary work of a government clerk at Washington is that of "shoving the pen," yet there are, nevertheless, many peculiar occupations carried on there under the direction of Uncle Sam.

Thus, for instance, how many have ever heard that the government has in its employ a "chief poisoner." Startling as it may seem, such, however, is the fact. And what does this poisoner poison? Persons guilty of lese majeste? Not yet. This genial poisoner is attached to the staff of the National museum. In this building there are valuable exhibits. Because of their character it is necessary that they should be preserved from vermin, rust and decay. For every class of exhibit the chief poisoner has a different preparation of poison. The books, the stuffed birds and animals, the historical exhibits, and, in fact, everything is deadly poisoned. Even the show cases are treated with some sort of preparation, and woe be it to the hold cockroach or inquisitive ant or mouse that should wander into the National museum. If they should happen to run over the cases they would certainly think they were crossing the hot sands. Besides being a preventive the poison is so adapted that it also acts as a preservative for the articles poisoned.

One would hardly think that money would be willfully destroyed. Yet such is the case in Washington, and the government even pays to have it done. They may have money to burn in many of the cities of the United States, but at the national capital they do not believe in this crematory fad, and so simply tear it up. Thus, more fully, there are several men in the treasury department whose exclusive duty it is to see that all old, canceled and condemned money is destroyed in the immense macerator, which is located in the cellar of the building. Thousands and even millions of dollars are thus destroyed by these men who make it their duty to deliberately destroy money and get paid for it, too. The pulp of the destroyed money is sold and from it is made souvenirs of Washington. Many of these souvenirs contain thousands and thousands of destroyed money. How would you like to be the money smasher?

Have you any idea what the "Imitator" does? His name really tells the story. It is his duty to make an exact imitation of anything the National museum may need. Thus fruit of every description, fishes, models of Indians, etc., are made to order in such a manner as to deceive experts after the closest examination. A story is told of the marvelous skill of an old imitator connected with the museum, but now dead. It appears that this artist invited all of the museum officials to his birthday party. There a bountiful repast awaited them. There was the finest beefsteak, vegetables of all kinds, delicious fruits, wine, cigars, etc. But what was the dismay and astonishment of the guests when they discovered that this entire repast throughout was all artificial—imitated. They were made out of clay, plaster, wax, etc., but copied so lifelike that even the museum officials, accustomed as they were to such imitations, were themselves fooled. Although a real repast was afterwards served, they nevertheless felt chary about eating, not knowing whether this modern wizard might not have played pranks even with the food they ate.

MARRIED AT THE CAPITAL.

International Romance Has Its Proper Culmination.

Miss Mathilde Hannegan and Capt. Goland Clarke, D. S. O., Eighteenth hussars, British army, were married in St. John's church, Washington, recently, by the Rev. Roland Cotton Smith. Following a wedding breakfast at the Shoreham hotel, Capt. Clarke and his bride started for a tour of the world which will last 18 months.

Miss Hannegan, who has been living in London for about 15 years, crossed the ocean in order that her marriage might be celebrated in Washington. She crossed with her cousin, Mrs. E. H. Abbe, and Capt. Clarke followed on the next ship. Meanwhile Duncan Hannegan was on his way across the continent to Washington to give his sister in marriage.

The wedding is the culmination of a romance which began just after the Boer war. Capt. Clarke fought with distinction at Ladysmith and Spion Kop and was rewarded by King Edward with a decoration of the Distinguished Service Order. When he returned to London he met Miss Hannegan.

Miss Hannegan is the daughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Seliman Key Hannegan, who were prominent in the social life of the capital some years ago. Mrs. Hannegan, as Miss Nelson, daughter of the late Gen. Thomas H. Nelson of Indiana, was a noted beauty. Following the death of her parents Miss Hannegan went to London, where she has since lived, except for a short visit to this country several years ago.

NIGHT SWEATS, NO APPETITE, USED PE-RU-NA.

MRS. LIZZIE LOHR, 1155 W. 13th St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I take pleasure in writing you these few lines, thinking there may be other women suffering the same as I did.

"I had my complaints for over a year, night sweats all winter and no appetite. I was run-down so far that I had to sit down to do my cooking, I was so weak.

"I tried many different medicines and doctors also. Nothing seemed to do me any good. The doctors wanted to operate on me.

"At last I wrote to Dr. Hartman. I told him just exactly how I was, and he told me what ailed me and how I should take Peruna.

"I did as he told me for four months, and now I am all cured.

"No one can tell how thankful I am to him, as I had given up all hopes of ever getting well again.

"I am a widow and the mother of six small children who depend on my support. I work all day and seldom get tired.

"I took five bottles of Peruna in all.

"Any woman wishing to know more about my case may write to me and I will gladly tell all about it.

"I thank Dr. Hartman for what he has done for me."

New Boy's Mother—No, indeed, sir. I thinks when they're bad ye should just give 'em a good thrashing.

"FALL IN THE NORTH WOODS."

The Returned Vacation Goer Discusses the Beauty of Snow.

"That rainy day you had here the other day, Tuesday, wasn't it—or Wednesday?" said a man just back from the Adirondacks, "it snowed all day where we were. First time I'd ever been up there in the fall and I don't know but it looked more beautiful all in white than it does in summer when everything's green. Ice there, too, you know, now. Shallow places in the lake where it was frozen over now so that you couldn't get around in 'em any more in a boat. Not such an everlasting sight further north than New York, but away from the salt water and higher elevation, winter there's a good deal earlier than here, of course. The hotel where I stayed closed the day I came away. What? No, not for grief over my departure but because I was the last guest.

"You say the hotels in New York are still keeping open? I see they are, and New York never looked better to me, but do you know I think next year I shall take my vacation in the fall again and go up around where I've just come from, hunting for bear. Yes, sir, they get bear up there as well as deer; don't have to go to Louisiana for bear. But here's my train, I mean street; so long, old man; just now I'm hunting business."

BEGAN YOUNG.

Had "Coffee Nerves" from Youth.

"When very young I began using coffee and continued up to the past six months," writes a Texas girl. "I had been exceedingly nervous, thin and very sallow. After quitting coffee and drinking Postum Food Coffee about a month my nervousness disappeared and has never returned. This is the more remarkable as I am a Primary teacher and have kept right on with my work.

"My complexion now is clear and rosy, my skin soft and smooth. As a good complexion was something I had greatly desired, I feel amply repaid even this were the only benefit derived from drinking Postum.

"Before beginning its use I had suffered greatly from indigestion and headache; these troubles are now unknown.

"Best of all, I changed from coffee to Postum without the slightest inconvenience, did not even have a headache. Have known coffee drinkers who were visiting me, to use Postum a week without being aware that they were not drinking coffee.

"I have known several to begin the use of Postum and drop it because they did not boil it properly. After explaining how it should be prepared they have tried it again and pronounced it delicious."

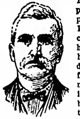
If You Suffer with Your Kidneys and Back Write to This Man.

G. W. Winney, Medina, N. Y., invites kidney sufferers to write to him.



To all who enclose postage he will reply telling how Doan's Kidney Pills cured him after he had doctored and had been in two different hospitals for eighteen months, suffering intense pain in the back, lameness, twinges when stooping or lifting, languor, dizzy spells and rheumatism. "Before I used Doan's Kidney Pills," says Mr. Winney, "I weighed 143. After taking 10 or 12 boxes I weighed 162 and was completely cured."

VENUS DE MILO A FRUMP.

That Is What the Modern Woman Would Call Her.

It is questionable whether the real Greek woman, of that immortal epoch when sculpture meant something more than a decorative end to an architectural means, possessed the chaste loveliness accredited to her in the chiseled remnants left to us. It has ever been the whim of artists to work away from the physical facts of their models toward the ideals of their fancy. The sculptor is usually a proudly careless historian and but a poor reporter. All Greek sculpture doubtless is a highly glorified record of true Greek ethnology. But, granting such a woman as, say, the Venus de Milo did exist in all her bodily and facial perfection, she would meet with but cold reception at the hands of our critics of femininity to-day. Her modern women associates would, I am certain, adjudge the classic lady a frump. Ideals change with the centuries if nature does not.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

TO WED GERMAN DIPLOMAT.

Washington Belle Has Captured Heart of Kaiser's Representative.

A German-American romance which promises to lead to an early and happy consummation is that of Count Hermann von Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg, counselor of the kaiser's embassy, and Miss Isabel May, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry May of Washington.

Miss May is a handsome brunette of many accomplishments, and admirably fitted for life in the diplomatic circle. She made her debut in London five years ago, and has been under the chaperonage of her cousin, Lady Bagot. An aunt of Miss May's is Countess Luis d'Andigne of France, in which country she has also seen much social life. At home she shared in the first season of Miss Alice Roosevelt, served as bridesmaid for Miss Kathleen Neilson, now Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt; also for Miss Alice Thaw, now the countess of Yarmouth, and has always been in the front rank of fashionable life. Through her mother, who was a Miss Coleman of San Francisco, she will inherit a comfortable fortune, although Mrs. May's income is suffering a temporary shrinkage by reason of the San Francisco earthquake and its attendant troubles.

Count Hartzfeldt is the second son of the former ambassador from Germany to Great Britain, and although possessing comparatively small means, has an assured future in diplomacy and is a very interesting and attractive young man. In the event of Baron von Sternburg's early retirement from diplomacy, which seems probable, Count Hartzfeldt would likely remain as charge d'affaires through the coming season. The announcement of the engagement has not yet been made. Mr. May, who is a cousin, not a brother, of the late Mrs. William C. Whitney, is now on a business trip to California. On his return it is expected the arrangements for the match will be concluded.

HAD FUN WITH BRIDEGROOM.

Whispering Stone Did Not Work According to Promise.

Everybody remembers the "whispering stones" in the rotunda of the capitol at Washington, those classic institutions that even Noah and Julius Caesar must have delighted in. "Ladies and gentlemen," reeled off a burly guide the other day just here, to the creatures he had in captivity, "so remarkable are the accoustical properties of this section of this great apartment, that if one person stands right here, and the other just opposite, near the column, upon the exact spot that I indicate, even so widely separated, they may whisper to each other across the distance in the lowest tones, with perfect audibility to each other, while bystanders will be unable to hear a word. Would anybody like to put it to the test?"

A couple, unmistakably bridal, stepped forth. They planted themselves in position—at least they thought they did. But "somebody blundered," likely the groom, women are foxier. The man holding down his supposed "whispering stone" at long range from his bride, in blind confidence in tradition, enunciated sibilantly: "You're the prettiest and sweetest proposition that ever came down the pike!" The blank, unresponsiveness of his coadjutor emboldened him to a repetition, and a louder one: "I say, Skeesicks, you're the sweetest thing that ever came down the pike, and there ain't a woman in this bloomin' bunch of tabbies that can hold a candle to you." The wife never caught a word of the innocent declaration, but the rest of the crowd had their fun. The whispering stone didn't work—especially as the man wasn't standing on it.

Useful "Money Sharps."

The comic papers are constantly parading the money sharps of New York, but it may be news to them that the treasury department has in its employ several of these "money sharps." This seems at first blush impossible and it would seem that the secret service department, which is located in the same building, would not allow it, but the fact remains that they are pleased and greatly indebted to these selfsame sharps because of the assistance they give it in running down of counterfeit coin. From this it will be seen that the sharps referred to are expert counterfeit money detectors, and a simple glance is sufficient to enable them to ascertain its genuineness. And the ladies will no doubt be proud to hear that a woman holds the distinction of being the most rapid and most accurate detector of bad money in the United States. Money that has passed through numerous banks and has been accepted as genuine by expert cashiers and bank tellers is here thrown out as counterfeit at a single glance.

Mrs. Leiter Coming Home.

The Leiter mansion at Washington is being put into order for the homecoming of its mistress in the latter part of this month. To judge from the many cases of goods received, she has been spending much time in the Paris shops. Mrs. Leiter has increased her portrait gallery. Lady Curzon's portrait by Cabanel, which adorns the main drawing room, will be flanked by a group of her three little daughters, painted by Sargent.

Mrs. Leiter intends to regain her reputation of being Washington's most successful hostess. She is bringing a full complement of English servants to aid in carrying out the ambitious programme.

Whole Head and Neck Covered—Hair All Came Out—Cured in Three Weeks by Cuticura.

I let the trouble run along, taking the doctor's blood remedies and rubbing on salve, but it did not seem to get any better. It stayed that way for about six months; then I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about a week I noticed a big difference, and in three weeks it was well entirely and I have not had the trouble any more, and as this was seven years ago, I consider myself cured. TUMORS CONQUERED

Overwhelming Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy Tumor.

The growth of a tumor is so insidious that frequently its presence is wholly unsuspected until it is well advanced.

So called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly periods accompanied by unusual pain, from the abdomen through the groin and thigh.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation or displacements, secure a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, right away and begin its use.

The following letters should convince every suffering women of its virtue, and that it actually does conquer tumors.

Mrs. May Fry, of 836 W. Colfax Ave., South Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I take great pleasure in writing to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I also took the Blood Purifier in alternate doses with the Compound. Your medicine removed a cyst tumor of four years' growth, which three of the best physicians declared I had. They had said that only an operation could help me. I am very thankful that I followed a friend's advice and took your medicine. It has made me a strong and well woman and I shall recommend it as long as I live."

Mrs. E. F. Hayes, of 26 Ruggles St., Boston, Mass., writes:

"I have been under different doctors' treatment for a long time without relief. They told me I had a fibroid tumor, my abdomen was swollen and I suffered with great pain. I wrote to you for advice, you replied and I followed your directions carefully and to-day I am a well woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system."

Mrs. S. J. Barber, of Scott, N. Y., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Sometime ago I wrote you for advice about a tumor which the doctors thought would have to be removed. Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to-day am a well women."

Mrs. M. M. Funk, Vandergrift, Pa., writes:

Deer Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had a tumor and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed it for me after two doctors had given me up. I was sick four years before I began to take the Compound. I now recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound far and near."

Such testimony as above is convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for Tumor Growths as well as other distressing ills of women, and such symptoms as Bearing-down Sensations, Displacements, Irregularities and Backache, etc. Women should remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women. Don't forget to insist upon it when some druggist asks you to accept something else which he calls "just as good."

MASCOT STILL LEADS.

Arthur Zaiser Resigns and New Miller takes Charge.

William Lang, an expert miller from Minneapolis, has been secured to fill the vacancy at the Red Lake Falls Milling Co.'s mill in this city caused by the resignation of Arthur Zaiser, who has been head miller for this institution for a number of years. Mr. Lang has had many years experience in milling fancy patent flour, and it is hoped he may be able to keep the products of the mill up to their high standard. The mill has been doing a splendid business the past few years, with this season a record breaker, and their "Mascot" flour is the pride of every bread-maker in the northwest, and is fast creeping into the territory of the once famous Minneapolis brands. The best of wheat, good milling and guaranteed satisfaction, backed by a reliable institution, has made "Mascot" flour the house-wife's order list whenever good flour is needed. Arthur Zaiser retires from the service of the mill on account of his health, believing a brief vacation and a little free air will do him much good. During the holidays his family will visit under the parental roof at Crookston, after which time Arthur will decide as to his future vocation.

Dairying in Lambert.

Fosston Thirteen Towns: George Charest of Lambert, passed through Fosston on Tuesday's local freight bound for Big Falls with a quantity of dressed meat, it being his intention to use this first shipment to open a meat market within that promising new town in the timber country.

Mr. Charest has been a progressive and successful farmer in Lambert for a number of years and is an enthusiastic believer in the advantages of dairying in northern Minnesota. He talked enthusiastically of the success of the Lambert cheese factory, of which he is the treasurer. For the month of October and the first fifteen days of November he paid out to the patrons of the factory a few days ago over $1,500, making the total amount paid out this season for milk used in the factory about $12,000.

14 cents a pound was realized from the sale of the last shipment of cheese from the Lambert factory, the highest price on record upon its books, and the patrons received $1.42 per 100 pounds for their milk, likewise the record price paid out.

Mr. Charest fully appreciates the great benefit the factory and the different creameries have been to this section of the country, especially for reason of the land being to a large extent flat and low in that locality and not adopted to grain raising.

He has no notion of disposing of his farm and only undertakes his new venture in the butcher business as something of an experiment and as what might be called a "side line," realizing the superior stability of the dairy farm as a dependence.

Made Stove His Bank.

An Iowan who distrusted the other kind loses $4,000 by fire, says a Webster City special to the Minneapolis Journal. Four thousand dollars, which had been hidden in an old stove upstairs, was burned to ashes when the J. J. Moore farmhouse, three miles west of Stratford, went up in smoke. The money belonged to George Cunning of Boone, a son-in-law of Moore. Cunningham went to the Moore home three weeks ago to spend the winter, drawing out $4,000 he had in a Boone bank. While the families were away visiting the house caught fire.

Mr. Skala believes in looking up a market for all lines and then purchasing from the farmers everything marketable, and this bespeaks his success as a general merchant.

Visitors From Space.

Whatever be their origin, it would seem that these solid bodies (meteorites) are hurling through space at velocities which may be anything between ten and forty miles a second. If they come near enough to this earth to be attracted by it, their course is changed and presently they enter our atmosphere. The result is a sudden check to their speed, owing to the intense resistance and friction engendered by contact with the air particles. What happens may be likened to the sudden application of the wooden brake block to the rapidly moving wheel of an express train. Heat is generated in exchange for motion, and the trail of sparks from the checked wheel is represented in the checked meteorite by a luminous trail. We commonly call it a shooting star, and if its mass be small it is possibly altogether dissipated in heat and gas or it may ultimately find its way to our earth as dust. Such "meteoric dust" has been found on the eternal snow of mountains where dust of the ordinary type would be impossible. If, on the other hand, the mass of matter be large, its surface only will be affected by the sudden heat generated, and it may fall to the ground entire or possibly explode and be scattered in fragments over a wide area.—Chambers' Journal.

A Wise Answer.

It takes but an ordinary man to return an angry answer to an insult. The extraordinary man is he who, under such circumstances, holds himself so well under control that he controls his adversary also. Persia once possessed such a man and was clear sighted enough to make him a judge. He was the chief judge of Bagdad in the reign of Caliph Hadee, and his name was Aboo Yusuph. He was a very wise man, for he knew his own deficiencies and was actually sometimes in doubt as to whether he possessed sufficient wisdom to give a just decision in cases peculiarly shrouded in mystery. It is related of him that on one occasion, after patient investigation of facts, he decided that he had not sufficient knowledge to pronounce on the case before him. There was in his presence a pert courtier, one of those men who take long to learn that wisdom and impudence are not closely related.

"Pray, do you expect that the caliph is to pay you for ignorance?" he asked, hoping to place the judge at a disadvantage.

"I do not," was the mild reply. "The caliph pays me, and pays me well, for what I do know. Were he to attempt to pay me for what I do not know, the treasures of his empire would not suffice."

The skull of a human being grows rapidly up to the age of seven years and then very slowly up to the age of twenty. After that its growth ceases.

Blunders of the Types.

An author who has a scrapbook devoted to typographical errors was showing the articles to a friend.

One item concerned a dance. The word "bonnier" was misprinted, with this deplorable result: "There were no bonier ladies present than the mayor's own daughters, and this fact was further emphasized by the perfect fit of the shepherdess costumes they wore."

A country paper, after telling how a cow got in front of a train, said, "As the safest course under the circumstances the engineer put on full steam, dashed into the cow and literally cut it into two calves."

A New York society editor, misprinting the word "chill," published this statement: "Mrs. Astor was unavoidably absent from the reception, being kept at home by a bad child."

Helping the Minister.

A young minister unexpectedly called upon to address a Sunday school asked, to gain time:

"Children, what shall I speak about?"

A little girl on the front seat, who was in the habit of reciting at entertainments, had committed to memory several declamations so that she was always prepared for any occasion. Sympathy and interest shone in her face as she held up her hand and in a shrill voice inquired:

"What do you know best?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

MAKES WORK EASY

Red Lake Falls People Are Pleased to Learn How it is Done.

It's pretty hard to attend to duties
With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.
They cure backache.
They cure every kidney ill.

Mrs. Jacob Palham, living in Red Lake Falls, Minn., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and received great relief from them. I was suffering from a very lame back and at times sharp pains across my kidneys were so severe that I could hardly do my work. I felt bad all over and did not know what to do to find relief. I finally sent to W. A. Schreiter's drug store, and procured a box. The pain in my back disappeared and I have had no return of it since. I am still using Doan's Kidney pills and am confident that they will cure me. I hope that others suffering from kidney complaint will give them a trial."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

When winds shreik high in fiendish glee,
And enters winter with his key,
Protect yourself from disease be free;
Take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea.—W. A. Schreiter.

SAVE THIS ANYWAY.

Put It In Some Place, for it May Come in Handy Some Day.

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on Kidney diseases, who makes the statement in a New York daily newspaper, that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the receipe; try it:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a tespoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here in town is authority that these ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire Kidney and Urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of Rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all disorders and cure the Rheumatism by forcing the Kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid foul decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

Badly Mixed Up.

Abraham Brown, of Winterton, N. Y., had a very remarkable experience; he says: "Doctors got badly mixed up over me; one said heart disease; two called it kidney trouble; the fourth, blood poison, and the fifth stomach and liver trouble; but none of them helped me, so my wife advised trying Electric Bitters, which are restoring me to perfect health. One bottle did me more good than all the five doctors prescribed." Guaranteed for blood poison, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney complaints, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50c.

Andersch Bros., at Minneapolis, have one of the largest and best equipped fur and hide houses in the world. This reliable firm, which has been in business for 18 years, has adopted the policy of buying furs and hides direct from trappers and other producers, and selling only to manufacturers. Any one who has hides or furs to sell should write to this firm for their liberal price quotations, and also inquire about the "Hunters and Trappers' Guide."

This is the season of decay and weakened vitality, good health is hard to retain. If you'd retain yours, fortify your system with Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea, the surest way. 35c, Tea or Tablets.—W. A. Schreiter.

DELAY IN STATE AID

Funds Lacking to Pay Special State Aid at Present Time.

County Superintendent McAnulty has received a letter from State Treasurer Clarence C. Dinehart regarding the special state aid to schools.

Heretofore the special state aid was paid at the same time as the regular school apportionment. This year it cannot be done and Treasurer Dineheart writes in explanation because he has had so many inquires regarding the failure of the special state aid to arrive.

It seems that the state legislature in making the special state aid available in October anticipated the revenues which do not reach the state treasury till March.

The fall months are the "lean" months for the state treasury, and it has therefore been necessary for the state to borrow several hundred thousand dollars in the past.

It has therefore been necessary to borrow this year, and the negotiations were practically completed for a loan of $830,000 when the stringency in the money market came and the negotiations were abruptly broken off, and the money is therefore not available to meet the warrants.

The state officials are using all the means in their power to make the necessary loan now, and when made the money will at once be sent out.

If the loan cannot be negotiated by the state between now and March the school districts getting special state aid will have to wait till the state revenues are available in March.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the First State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., will be held in its banking rooms, on Tuesday, January 14th, 1908, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year.

Returned the Coal.

Most of the Red Lake Falls people will remember John Rue, a carpenter and builder, formerly living here. One night some years ago John heard a noise in his coal bin, and upon investigation found a neighbor helping himself to a hod of fuel. The prowler made the plausible explanation that he had just run out of coal and didn't want to awaken Mr. Rue to apprise him of the fact. This was apparently satisfactory, and nothing more was thought of the incident until several weeks later when Mr. Rue heard another suspicious noise in the vicinity of the coal shed. The same man was there, and upon being confronted by the owner, the culprit explained his presence by the fact that he was just in the act of returning the coal he had borrowed. Presence of mind is an art worth cultivating, even by a burglar.

Why Dairying Pays.

Huchinson Leader: Here is a statement from the United States department of agriculture which should set every farmer thinking:

"A ton of wheat, worth $22, removes from the soil $7.50 worth of plant food. A ton of butter, worth $500, takes less than 50 cents worth of plant food from the soil."

This is proven by scientific tests that cannot be questioned. The profit and the soil preservation is in dairy farming. But still the dread of milking time removes the danger of all the farmers giving up wheat raising and making a shortage in world's bread supply.

To Restore Life.

It is said that a prominent scientist has discovered a method to restore life to animals and people apparently dead by alternately pumping the gas out of the lungs and pumping oxygen in to produce artificial respiration. The best thing to put new life into an ordinary tired, worn out individual is a glass of golden grain belt beer. It is a wholesome nerve food and restores the energy to weary body and brain. A SCHOOL EXHIBIT

The North Side Schools have a Rare Treat in Store for Their Patrons.

On Friday afternoon, December 20th, the public in general is invited to be present at the Christmas programs to be given at the Washington school, and more especially to take in the exhibit of the school work covered thus far this year. The programs are short, beginning in each room sharply at 2:00 and closing at 2:30 o'clock. If you cannot attend the program, you are requested to show your interest in our schools by taking in the exhibit which will be shown from 2:30 until 4:00 p. m. The walls of each room are covered with the handiwork of the children, while the upstair hall is entirely given over to the results of the manual training department of this school. The teachers have been to a great deal of labor in preparing this treat, not for their own benefit, but for the benefit of the public whether you have children in school or not, and it is their desire to have you appreciate their efforts and the efforts of their pupils, your children. There are many who have not seen the inside of our new building who doubtless haven't time to visit our schools more than once a year, make this your opportunity, come and encourage the pupils. They have been busy this week writing invitations and sending them out to all they can reach, but whether or not you have received one consider this article an invitation and join the numerous friends who will be present upon this occasion.

TAX LEVY FOR CITY

County Auditor O'Brien Gives Us the Figures for both the Falls Cities.

The clerical force of the county auditor's office is busy getting the tax rolls ready to turn over to the county treasurer on the first Monday in January, and it was only last week that the tax rate was figured out for this city as well as Thief River Fall, and the tax extended on the books. The total valuation for the entire county has not as yet been ascertained, but will be given at a later date.

The assessed valuation for Red Lake Falls is $257,308, which includes both real and personal property, and with a levy of 69.3 mills will give the city $17,081.45 for school and general purposes. The school rate is 32 mills, and the state tax, state school, county and city levy totals 37.3 mills.

The assessed valuation for Thief River Falls is $570,205 for both real and personal property, while their levy amounts to 50.3 mills, thus giving them $28,681.31 for school and general purposes. Their levy for school purposes is 26 mills, and 24.3 mills for state tax, state school, and county and city levy.

MUCH BUTTER IS SOLD SHORT.

Inspectors Say Weights Are Not as Marked.

Owing to the fect that the iawe on the eubject are not eufficiently etringent, the etate dairy and food department at its next eession will probably ask the legislature to enact such regulations as will prevent the giving of short weights in the eale of buttar. Frequent casee of ehort weight are found, but under tha present lawe oonsidershia difficulty is experienced in proeecuting the offendere.

During the past few daye Inspector J. G. Fowler of the dairy and food department has found a number of casee in which ehort weights bave been given in the sale of butter. This is true of jar butter ae well as prints. In fact it has been found that in a majority of casee the pound prints are leee than ona pound in weight. Tbe greatest impoeition upon tha public ie found in butter sold in jars, in many casee the purchaeer buying what ie represented to be a five-pound jer finding himeelf ebort haif a pound.

Ont of a few reports of inspectors picked out at random it was found that the weight of the butter eold in jars es five pounds ranged from four pounde and eix ounces to four pounde and fifteen ouncas. Many of tha reports showed tha jars to be ehort six, eeven and eight ouncee.

It ie probabla that tha legielatura will be aeked to pass a law requiring the marking of the weight on all packeges of butter, whether in jars or printa, eo that when a shortsge is discovered the proeecution of the seller will be an casy matter. If the dealers are required to mark the weight on eech package it is believed the difficultiee in the prosecution of dealars giving ehort weight in bntter ealee will be overcoma and tha prsvalence of this form of frand quickly etamped ont.

WOULD REACH SKYWARD.

Some idsa of the importance of the dairy intereets of this etate may be gained from soma intereeting figures compiled by Secretary W. W. Wall of tha atata dairy and food department with reference to the production of hntter by the banner bntter county of tha atate dnring the past seven yars.

Thie county hea produced in that period more then 28,000,000 pounds of butter. If thia wara all packed in the ordinary bntter tub, containing twenty pounds of hutter, aach haing twalva inches high, and the tubs were placed in a column, they would reach 255 miles in the air.

In the making of this butter 100,567,957 gallons of milk were used, a liquid volume which, if flooded into a vessel large enough to hold it, would float the battleship Maine.

WOMAN IS WEIGHMASTER.

Brainerd is probably the only city of 10,000 population in Minnesota, if not in the United States, which has a woman weighmaster. The city council has elected Miss Winifred Smith to fill the vacancy caused by the death of her father, D. D. Smith. Since his death the daughter has been conducting the agricultural implement and harness business owned by him and has been discharging the duties of weighmaster.

STATE GETS MONEY BACK.

Norman County Repays State for Ssed Loans.

The firet payment of eeed grain loans made by the state under authority of act passed last winter wae made last week by Norman county. The pament wae $4,951.50, being the first payment on ioans aggregating $7,780.80. Similar ioane wera made in the counties of Cley and Wilkin, but nona of thie monay has been repaid ae yet.

The act authorizing these loans appropriated $25,000, or eo much thereof as migbt be necaseary, for the purpose of purchasing seed grain for farmers whoee crope were deetroyed in whole or in part by exceseive rainfall in the years 1905 and 1905. The applications for the loane were made to the county auditors and after being eanctioned by tha county commieeionars as to the amount of each loan and the total to be loaned by the county for this purpoee, the county auditors certified these figures to the etate auditor. The ioane were mada by the etate to the countiee, which promised to repay the amonnts with 4 per cent interest.

The law mada it a misdemeanor for any farmer to diepoee of any of tha crop raieed from tha eeed grain eo procured without firat repaying his loen to the county. It also provided that in case tha crop this year ahould be a faliure, the amount of the ioan should be levied as a personal tax in the next aeeeeement of taxes after Nov. 15, 1907, and ba collected the eame ae other personal taxea, axcept that thera ehould be no exemption from thie tax.

Tbe ioane mede to Clay county aggregated $5,584.75 and to Wilkin conn ty $420.

MANY COWS DISEASED.

Twenty-seven cows that have failed to pass the tuberculosis test under the new milk inspection ordinance at Mankato were shipped to South St. Paul to be slaughtered at the stock yards. Sixteen were found in one dairy herd and five in another. With thirty-seven previously slaughtered there is a total of sixty-four tuberculous cows out of about 300 tested, or one in five. Not half of the cows as yet have been tested, but the work is going on as rapidly as possible.

The State Day by Day

FINE SHOWING BY MARKSMEN.

Capt. Les Announces Scores of Militiamsn.

Dietinguished riflemen's badgee were awarded to Sergeant Major George R. Egbert, Firet infantry; Sargeant Major E. H. Juni, Second infantry, and First Sergeant O. F. Lang, Company B, Second infantry.

The table of percentagee made by the varioue companiee in rifle practica for the eeason, which opene on May 1 and cloeee of Oct. 31, ehows a wide difference, which ie accounted for by the fact that some of the copaniee have ranges at home, while others bava none and receive only credit for their work on the ranga at tha annuel encampment. Tha figuree for the varioue companiee follow:

First Regiment—Company A, 25.44; Company B, 76.25; Company C, 81.43; Company D, 43.31; Company E, 45.55; Compeny F, 50.76; Company G, 35.59; Compeny I, 69.01; Company K, 25.36.

Second Regiment — Company A, 76.71; Company B, 43.48; Company C, 40; Company D, 28.79; Company E, 40.52; Company G, 25.20; Company H, 45.34; Company I, 27.63.

Third Regiment—Company A, 93.32; Company B, 52.45; Company C, 97.77; Company D, 21.05; Company E, 25.03; Company F, 48.46; Company G, 69.91; Company H, 31.70; Company 1, 55.19.

Field Staff and Band—First, 61.85; second, 46.94; third, 59.58; regimental, 52.89; engineering corpe, 19.21.

WARNS AGAINST PESTS.

State Entomologist Washburn Issues a Bulistin.

F. L. Washburn, etate entomologiet, has isened a bulletin warning fruit growers, park boarde and others interested in tha healthy growth of treee and plants againet tha fall web worm and tha etalk borer that works in flower gardens.

Mr. Washbnrn says that the number of the fell web worms was greatly increased this fall and its work of destruction eerioue, particularly in the southweetarn part of Hannapin connty, along the line of the Great Northern road, near Minnetonka. To eradicate this pest he suggests spraying the laavee of the trees with a solution of eix pounds of arsenate of lead in 100 gallons of water. He also advieee deetruction of the web and the worms whenevar thay may be found.

Of the stalk borer Mr. Washbnrn saye that it has been found extensively on food plants and on dahlia, hollyhock, golden glow, gallardia, phlox, delphinium, astsr, daisy, peony, rose and eunflower. His remedy ie to combat the borer in the eummer time by removal and by the use of barbon bisulphide and to destroy all weed growth near gardens.

STATE OVERDRAFT SMALL.

Rsvenus Fund Overdraft Amounts to Only $51,877.94.

The report of State Treasnrer C. C. Dinehart of tha condition of the funds in the state treesury at the end of November shows an overdraft of $51,877.94 in the revenue fund. There is nothing unnsnal about this overdraft, however, as it is expected at thia time of the year and the law anthorizea an overdraft of $600,000. The overdraft will be adjusted when the receipts begin to come into the treasury in large amounts in a few months. The total amount on hand is $743,067.49, and the total of the amounts in the various funds was $794,935.43.

GAME PRESERVE IN THE NORTH.

Northsrn Part of St. Louis County Is Suggestsd.

The establishment of a forest reeerva and game preserve in the northern part of St. Louie county ie suggested by Carlos Avery, executive agent of the state game and fish commiseion. In a recent trip to the tarritory north of Vermillion and Trout lakee in that county Mr. Avery fonnd a great deal of land which he thinks could be readily used for thie purpose.

Tbe land ie rocky, and most of the timher has hean removed, aithough there are eome patehes of timber etill standing. There are too many rocks there to make the land good for agricultural purposes, he saye, and in fact it ie just euch iands as have been selected in many caees for forestry purposee. Game is plentiful in that vicinity, and if tha state would acouire, eay a township, in that pert of the etate it would be an excellent location for a game preeerve and at the same time could be reforested.

Thie land ie north of the district into which the eettlere have been coming in recent yeare, and, he saye, is such ae will not attract eettiers at any time. It ie near the Canadian houndary and a long dietance away from railroad communication. In view of its location and the unfavorable nature of the soil from an agricultural point of view the iand ie believed to be eepecially adapted to use ae a game preserve and a forest reserve in which a naw growth of trees might be started now, which would in time prove a paying investment to tha etate. The presence of the game in the growing forests would not, Mr. Avery eaid, injure the growing pina treee, ae the game do not relieh such plante ae food.

WOMAN TELLS OF HER CRIME.

Slew Father With an Ax—Tried to Kill Herself, but "It Hurt."

Frances Muchenhirn, who killed her 85-year-old father at Delano during a fit of ineanity, wae interviewed at tha village jeil. She spoke quita freely and did not omit any of tha horrible details of the crime.

She said ehe awoke about midnight with a feeling that her father and herself ought to die, after which ehe proceeded to the woodshed, got an ax and crept stealthily to her father's bed and deelt him aeveral blows on tha head and then proeured a hutcher knife and cut his throat from ear to ear and pulled the body to the edge of the bed so thet the blood was caught in a pail which she had placed there, ehe remarking that ehe did not want to have the floor dirty. She also dealt herself eeveral blowe on the head with the intention of killing herself, but deeieted becauee ehe eaid it hurt. After which ehe went to bed and claims to have never elept better in her life. Although her insanity wee of a mild form, she had been an inmete of the insane hoepital on two different occaeions for ehort periode.

She doee not comprehend the enormity of the crime. Coroner A. G. Moffit viewed the remains and decided an inquest was unneceesary. Mr. Mnchenhirn was one of tha old eettlera and an old eoldier, aettling at Deiano in the early '50e. He leavea three sons and two danghters, and was quite wall to do.

DAILY TRAINS ON NEW ROAD

Minnesota & International Promises Good Service to Boundary.

Daily paesenger train eervice between Minneapolis and International Falls, the metropolis of the Rainy river country, began Monday. This ie a branch of the Northern Pacific road penetrating the almost unbroken wildernees of Northern Minnesota. The trains will leave Minneapolis at 8:50 a. m. and will reach International Felie at 11:05 p. m. The time for leaving International Falls is 3:45 a. m., and the train is dne in Minneapolis at 5:40.

The new road opene to Minneapolis a vast territory which is rich in natural resonrces, and in time will be one of the most productive sections of the state. For many years it will be the lumber center of Minnesota, and the farmer will follow the lumberman, for the soil cannot be excelled anywhere in the state. At International Falls, where a constant energy of 300,000 horse power will be available, will be erected one of the biggest pulp and paper mills in the world. Homesteaders are flocking into the new county of Koochiching in large numbers, and are making good from the start.

MOONEY IS INDICTED.

Man Whose Wife Died Last June Must Submit to Murder Trial.

Buffalo, Minn., Dec. 5.—John J. Mooney of Waverly, who has been held since last June on a charge of murdering his wife, was indicted by the grand jury yesterday for murder in the first degree. He will be arraigned Saturday afternoon. After his arrest he was taken to the Hennepin county jail [illegible]

In Minnesota

State News of the Week Briefly Told

Dr. Otto [illegible]ultmeyer of Parkers Prairie died [illegible] age of thirty-one years.

Burglars attempted to blow the safe in the bank of Scandia, but it resisted their efforts and they left after taking 60 cents from the counter.

Fire destroyed the barn and contents belonging to John Lampert of Breckenridge, entailing a loss of $1,000, with insurance of $500.

The large machinery warehouse of P. N. Tannehill of Brown's Valley was destroyed by fire. The loss is $5,000; partly covered by insurance.

Robert Rochileu, the twelve-year-old son of Lester Rochileu, was drowned in Prairie lake, near Lakeville, while skating with several companions.

Mr. Darling, a young man teaching school in Aitkin county, was drowned in Lone lake. He was out hunting and is supposed to have attempted crossing the lake after dark.

John J. Mooney of Waverly, who has been held since last June on a charge of murdering his wife, has been indicted by the grand jury at Sauk Center for murder in the first degree.

R. P. Knobel of Fergus Falls, who was injured in the explosion of a cream separator a short time ago, died from the effects of his injuries. His skull was broken, but he was supposed to be improving.

Herman Prigge was killed on his farm, four miles from Mazeppa, Goodhue county, as a result of his wagon's being upset. The edge of the wagon box struck the man above the ear, breaking his neck.

F. H. Toersing, a farmer living about three miles northeast of Atwater, was accidentally gored by a bull while leading a cow in his yard. The bull rushed between the cow and Mr. Toersing and struck the man in the face with its horns, inflicting a serious wound.

A disastrous fire occurred at Faribault when the dwelling house owned by Mrs. Barron was completely destroyed. The loss is estimated at $10,000; partly covered by insurance. The building was an old landmark, having been built in the early days by Bishop Whipple.

Frank D. Myers, formerly a railroad traveling passenger agent, was found dead in his room at the Nicollet hotel in Minneapolis by the clerk. Coroner Kistler was unable to ascertain the cause of death and could not determine whether it was from suicide or natural causes.

A fire from an unknown source started in the grocery store of P. Germain at Little Falls, and the building and entire stock were burned completely to the ground. The stock was valued at about $500 and the building at about $300. Only a small part of the goods was saved.

Crazed with excitement over the fire which was blazing in her kitchen, Mrs. Grimshaw of Duluth shut her six-year-old boy in an upstairs room, and grabbing her baby, fled down stairs. She was so excited she could not tell the firemen where the child was, and it was suffocated when found.

Swan Swanson, a farmer living two miles north of West Concord, saved the lives of his family from his burning home only by the use of a ladder, which he raised to the second-story window, enabling the persons in the house to escape. Not even the clothes of the family were saved.

Mrs. Maude Ulmer Jones, known throughout the Northwest and in the principal operatic centers for her singing, died at her residence in Minneapolis from cancer. To her friends in musical circles her death came most unexpectedly, as she was supposed to have recovered entirely from an attack last spring.

Carl Holm, the son of a Clay county farmer living twenty miles west of Barnesville, met with a peculiar accident that cost him the sight of an eye. The boy had bought a new rifle and was shooting at marks when one of the bullets struck an object, rebounded and hit the lad in the eye, destroying it entirely. The boy was taken to a hospital in Fargo.

Henry Keller of Sauk Center, former state senator, died at Omaha of Bright's disease. He was sixty-two years of age and was president of the Keller Manufacturing company. Mr. Keller served ten years in the Minnesota senate, from 1887 to 1897, and was well known throughout the state. His wealth is estimated at $800,000. The remains were taken to Sauk Center for burial.

David Hickman pleaded guilty before Justice Ireland at Moose Lake to the charge of stealing $208 from the home of J. E. Carlson, who lives four miles west of Moose Lake. Mr. Carlson had deposited his money in a bureau drawer, thinking it safer there than in the bank, and was, with his family, attending the funeral of Mrs. Soderberg when the theft was committed.

August Bachman, aged forty years, was fatally injured at St. Cloud in falling from a brewery wagon. His back and several ribs are broken and he cannot survive. It is thought that he fell from the wagon after turning the horses too short.

Edith Armstrong of Akeley appeared before Judge Spooner in Memidji and pleaded guilty to having sold intoxicating liquors without a license at Akeley. The court imposed a penalty on the defendant of a $100 fine and thirty days in jail. The fine was paid.

FRUIT MEN HONOR OFFICERS.

Re-elect Them Because of Successful Year Just Closed.

Minnesota's interest in horticulture was shown by the annual report of the secretary of the Minnesota State Horticultural society, read at the meeting in Minneapolis. It showed a membership of 2,230 in the society, 212 of whom have joined during the past year.

A. W. Latham, who has been secretary of the society for sixteen years, gave his annual report. He stated that the work of the society had been most successful during the past year. In speaking of the contest for the $1,000 prize for the propogation of a winter apple he said that three entries had been made during the year, but none had come quite up to the requirements and no prize was awarded. He urged a further trial by all interested in the subject.

According to Mr. Latham, one of the most important events of the year was the purchase of a fruit breeding farm by the university regents. This will be operated by the horticultural department of the experiment station. The society has also purchased a tract of ground near Zumbrota to be used as a trial station, according to the report of Wyman Elliott, chairman of the executive board.

George W. Strand of Taylors Falls, treasurer of the society, read the financial report. The society has a balance on hand of $3,130 and is in a flourishing monetary condition.

The society voted to invite the National Peony society to meet with it in 1909.

The Minnesota State Forestry association held a meeting in conjunction with the horticultural society. S. M. Owen presided, and papers were read by S. B. Detwiler, state experiment station; J. E. Rhodes, Minneapolis, secretary of the Pine Manufacturers' association; Prof. S. B. Green, Platt S. Walker and S. M. Owen. P. V. Collins gave an illustrated lecture on "Picturesque Mexico."

The horticultural society elected officers at the afternoon session. All the former officers were re-elected as a mark of appreciation for the successful year just closed, with the exception of the nine vice presidents. The vice presidents were elected, one for each congressional district, as follows: First congressional district, S. H. Drum, Waseca; Second district, John Bisbee, Medelia; Third district, C. H. Andrews, Faribault; Fourth district, T. F. Forror, White Bear; Fifth district, Thomas Redpath, Wayzayta; Sixth district, Anton Wilwerding; Seventh district, C. C. Selvig, Willmar; Eighth district, S. P. Crosby, Brahem; Ninth district, Prof. William Roberts, Crookston.

"Fruit Breeding at the State Experiment Station" was the subject of the paper given by Prof. S. B. Green before the Minnesota State Horticultural society, and proved one of the most valuable papers of the present meeting.

Prof. Green explained in detail the work being done at the state station. A series of experiments has been going on for the purpose of producing an apple adapted to the climate and possessing essentials not found in other apples in the state. The experiments are not yet completed, but give promise of producing an ideal apple as yet wholly unknown to apple growers.

Other interesting papers were given on "A Year's Experience in Plant Breeding," Clarence Wedge, Albert Lea; "How Members of the Society May Assist the Fruit Breeding Farm," Charles Haralson, Excelsior; "Breeding New Roses," John Monson, Minneapolis; "Growing Seedling Strawberries," H. G. Great, Anoka; "Promising Material for Cross-breeding Plums and Cherries," Prof. N. E. Hanson; "Lines of Experimentation in Horticultura and Their Practical Application," Prof. C. B. Waldron.

The annual report of the seedling committee and the awarding of prizes for seedlings followed. Le Roy Cady gave a demonstration of cross-fertilization and was followed by an orchard symposium in the afternoon.

OPEN STATE FAIR AUG. 31.

The American Association of Fairs and Expositions held its annual meeting at Chicago. The following officers were elected: President, T. J. Wornell of Liberty, Mo.; secretary, Charles Downing of Indianapolis; treasurer, George H. Madden of Mendota, Ill.

Opening dates for the various state fairs were fixed as follows:

Aug. 24, Iowa; Aug. 31, Nebraska, Minnesota, Ohio; Sept. 7, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Michigan and the interstate live stock fair at Sioux City, Iowa; Sept. 14, New York, Kansas, Indiana; Sept. 21, Tennessee and interstate live stock fair at St. Joseph, Mo.; Sept. 25, Illinois, interstate fair at Spokane, Wash., and tri-state fair at Memphis, Tenn.; Oct. 5, Missouri, Montana; Oct. 12, American Royal fair, Kansas City.

BIG CHRISTMAS DINNER.

Inmates of the state institutions will be given a good Christmas dinner as usual. The state board of control is now securing bids on various delectables. Christmas trees will also be furnished and every effort will be made to give the inmates a real Christmas day.

Bids will be asked for this week on oranges, bananas and lemons, 3,350 pounds of nuts, 3,545 pounds of candy, 8,375 pounds of poultry, 223 gallons of oysters and 20 barrels of cranberries.

Clerk of Court Jason T. Kidder of Fergus Falls was struck in the head by a number of stray shot while hunting. The force of the shot was nearly spent, but one pierced his eye-lid and lodged in the eyeball, endangering the sight of one eye.

Gleanings of Important News of Norway, Sweden and Denmark, with Occasional Comments.

By MARTIN W. ODLAND.

SWEDEN.

The financial crisis about which I briefly wrote before is a more serious matter than was at first anticipated. The flush times that have lately prevailed in Sweden have had the same effect there as in the United States—the people have become reckless speculators, pursuing the phantom of wealth altogether too fast. As a consequence, when the shrinkage came, they were unable to extricate themselves and went to the wall. Hugo Valentin, a Swedish correspondent of Stockholm, speaks as follows of the stringency:

"Some time ago a stockbroking firm, Arthur Mattson, failed for a large amount, having extended its dealings in land too far to be able to extricate itself when the scarcity of money began to be felt. It cannot be said, so far as I know, that this firm had done any gambling business, but without doubt it had gone beyond what the capital at its disposal warranted. It is possible that the difficulties of this firm might have been tided over under more fortunate circumstances, but the working of the money screw beginning in Wall street was already felt here. It is possible that the losses in this concern will not be great, but losses there will be.

"But when the cyclone from America came sweeping over Europe, many tottering houses here began to shake on their foundations and some fell with a crash. Among the most sensational failures here in the last days is the one of Karl A. Malmberg, limited, an importing house which deals in colonial goods and American bacon on an extensive scale and which had branches in several provincial towns. It is a business of comparatively recent birth, but has had enormous dealings in these articles and declared good dividends to its shareholders. Now, however, it seems that these dividends had no foundation in any real profit and that the whole concern was a big gamble and last night the managing director and founder of the firm, Mr. Malmberg, was arrested.

"It is scarcely to be believed that he had been able to persuade one of our leading private banks to give his firm a credit of nearly $3,000,000. This shows the size of the business and the credulity of human nature. Luckily for the depositors of the bank in question, the bank itself is a very sound concern, with very large reserve funds, so that the result will only be that the shareholders will have to satisfy themselves with the diminished dividend for some years to come. The bank is Hernosands Enskilda bank and has funds of over $7,000,000. Moreover, the shareholders have unlimited liability, so that the depositors can sleep without bad dreams.

"Our banking situation is generally, I may say, altogether very sound, and even a much worse crisis will not have a disastrous effect on it. For a long time we have seen the storm coming and prepared for it, so one may surely predict that if more failures are to come they would have come sooner or later in any circumstances, but may have been hastened by the present circumstances. In the wake of the Malmberg firm will follow perhaps thirty other firms, mostly in the provinces, but there is no reason to suppose that any sound and solid concerns will be touched. Of course, stocks have fallen a good deal in the last two days and even very good securities have gone down a good deal, but in my opinion not below their real worth, as values have been inflated all round. Now it is only necessary to remain calm and collected and we shall get over the worst with as little damage as possible."

Three hundred delegates, representing the Liberals of Sweden, some of them being former ministers, recently met in Stockholm to consider the question of accepting or rejecting the Lindman proposal, establishing a system of proportional representation in Sweden, which passed the last riksdag, but which must be again ratified by the legislative body to become a law. After a heated debate it was decided by a large majority to bow to the inevitable and accept the Lindman proposal, with the understanding, however, that an effort is to be made to incorporate woman's suffrage in the measure before it becomes law. I have already told of the earnest desire of a large percentage of the people, of both sexes, to bring about equal suffrage, and this action on the part of the Liberal convention is a further evidence of this fact.

As will be remembered, I have already stated in these columns that Sweden was guaranteed her integrity as a nation, the same as was Norway, by the four great European powers, but she declined to enter into such a treaty. Dagbladet of Stockholm endorsed this action and severely censured Norway for making such a treaty with the powers, which, it held, was equivalent to a slap at Sweden.

DENMARK.

Denmark feels more and more the effects of the financial disturbances in the large money centers of the world.

Rev. Bjarre and wife will make a journey to the South of Europe, instead of to Norway, if they can get away.

Julio Carria, consul for Argentine, was a recent visitor in Copenhagen, at which time he proposed to the Danish government that Denmark remove the tariff on Argentine beef, in consideration of the removal by Argentina of the duty on Danish cattle. The experiment of importing beef from Argentina has already been successfully tried in Denmark, and in case the Danish government should make a reciprocity treaty with Argentine, such as Mr. Carria proposed, the United Steamship company would greatly extend its service between the two countries, and establish refrigerator compartments in their ships. The voyage from Argentine to Denmark lasts twenty days.

Alberti, the Danish minister of justice, has begun suit against Simon Koch, the author, for libel. Koch was the minister's opponent in the last parliamentary or "folketing" elections, and in the Social Democrat accused Alberti of lying, when the latter denied the charge that he had sold brick from his factory to Mr. Adolfsen, who, on that account, had been granted a very unusual dispensation from the building law of Denmark.

Alberti has also begun suit against the editor-in-chief of Politiken, Henrik Cavling, because of the publication of some articles in which the minister was accused of giving false information to the folketing in regard to his connection with Maddagspostan, a scandalous paper of Copenhagen.

If these two cases are pushed by the minister, the country will see a couple of the most important libel suits it has witnessed in many years.

NORWAY.

Norway's grand old man, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, has raised a lively "row" at Copenhagen, where he recently delivered a lecture. The incident is related as follows in a dispatch from the Danish capital:

"Bjornstjerne Bjornson's insinuation in a lecture before a Danish student society that the Danish ambassadors in the different countries had secretly worked for the separation of Sweden and Norway has caused anger in political circles here. Only a short time ago the Swedish papers were finally compelled to acknowledge that Denmark's attitude had been one of strict neutrality in the matter and the poet-author's remarks are looked upon as tending to reawaken the resentment of the Swedes against the Danes.

"One prominent politician says that Denmark will not tolerate Bjornson's meddling with the relations of friendly countries. The Copenhagen papers criticise him severely."

A new political party, to be known as the "Church party," was organized at Christiania by representative men from nearly all of the various districts of Norway. Rev. Hartvig Halvorsen of Christiania was elected president of the organization and a full set of minor officials, including men of prominence in various walks of life, were also chosen.

As stated in the constitution adopted, the purpose of the new party is to take an active part in the election of members of the storthing and in local elections for the promotion of the welfare of the Christian church. The movement is evidently a protest against well defined tendencies of the present day in Norway—tendencies antagonistic to the Evangelical Lutheran church.

I said last week that the Grand hotel of Christiania had been destroyed by fire. This was an error. A Grand hotel was burned, indeed, but it was the one at Christiansund—not the celebrated Grand at the capital. The building destroyed was a costly one, however, being one of the finest hotels in Norway. Hotel Norge at Haugesund was also burned to the ground recently.

Ole Flonaes of Salbu celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of his work as a teacher in the public schools of Norway. He was born near Flonaes, Feb. 22, 1836, and was graduated from Klabu seminary in 1857, beginning his services as teacher immediately afterward.

Two young Norwegians, Rubenson, aged 24 and Monard Aas, aged 24, both of Christiania, have broken the world's record in climbing the Himalaya mountains, having reached a point on Mount Kabru 23,000 feet above the sea level. The highest point attained before was 21,000 feet above sea level and was reached by an English expedition. Rubenson and Aas planted the Norwegian flag at the zenith of their climb, which means that old Norway's standard is waving higher up than that of any other nation.

All the air with love is laden,
Where the Yule logs glow and flame,
Hopeful youth and trustful maiden
Softly chant the Master's name,
Now, if there be any sad ones,
Bid their tearful eyes be dried.
Now, if there be thoughtless glad ones,
Be that gladness purified;
For the bells of peace are ringing,
Chiming anthems of the free,
Earth and heaven join in singing
Of the glories yet to be.

Seek the boughs, so green and fragrant,
Let the waxen tapers dance,
Here is hope for prince, for vagrant,
Christ of every circumstance!
Pile the leaping fagots higher,
Let the wide-mouthed chimney roar,
Clash the cymbals, twang the lyre,
Angels wait at every door.
Soft the Day of Peace is breaking;
Gladdest day of all the year;
And sweet Plenty, want o'ertaking,
Spreads a feast of love and cheer.

A BIRD'S CHRISTMAS TREE.

Set It Up Outside the Window and Hang Suet in the Branches.

Why not have a Christmas tree for the birds this winter? We put up such a tree every year, says a writer in Suburban Life. We made a broad shelf outside the window and fastened a small pine tree firmly upon it.

As winter draws near, we fasten some pieces of suet to trees about the house and scatter chaff and hayseed in the yard to bring the birds about. They soon gather to the feast.

Then when it is almost Christmas time we put up our birds' tree and supply it liberally with suet. We cover the shelf with burlap, which helps to hold the chaff we scatter there.

The birds soon find this food, and as the supply is constantly renewed, the window becomes their favorite resort, particularly in snowy weather, when their usual fare is hard to obtain. Jays, chickadees, nuthatches, woodpeckers, snowbirds, song sparrows, tree sparrows and myrtle warblers come to the Christmas tree.

If they are shy at first we use a lace sash curtain, for they cannot see through this, while they are plainly visible from within. It can be removed when they have become accustomed to window feeding.

SMASH MORE NEXT YEAR.

"There are Christmas gifts and Christmas gifts," said Bishop Foss, a few days before his departure for Japan; "but the only acceptable ones are those given with a pure motive.

"In a crockery shop, during the holidays, I once saw the proprietor hand a plainly dressed young woman a $2 bill.

"She looked at the bill and said bitterly:

"'Is that all? And durin' the past year ain't I broken thirty-five tumblers, twenty-six cups, nine meat platters, four saucers, seventy-two plates and thirteen of the mistress' best tureens?'

"'There, there,' said the shopman, soothingly, 'here's another dollar for you. And don't forget me, you know,' he ended with a wink."

Still to Let.

"That house that you finished a few weeks ago is the biggest of the lot," said the real estate agent. "Perhaps that's why it's so hard to find a tenant."

"[illegible]," answered the builder, "[illegible] last, but not leased."

It Was Too Risky

"You keep harmonicas here?" she half-queried as she entered a music store and a clerk came forward to wait on her.

"Certainly, ma'am—a full line of them. Is it a Christmas present for one of the children?"

"No; it's for the old man. He's been playing on the last one for fifteen years and there's only one note left."

"So he plays, does he?" queried the clerk as he handed out the goods.

"From morning till night. He don't have to work, and so he just sits and plays."

"Then he must have a thousand different tunes?"

"No, he hain't got but one. He just keeps playing 'The Old Oaken Bucket' over and over again."

Been Playing on the Last One for Fifteen Years.

"And you must be pretty well acquainted with it by this time?"

"I am. How much is this one?"

"Fifty cents."

"Too high. How much for this?"

"A quarter."

"Well," she said after passing it across her lips half a dozen times. "I think I will take this for his Santa Claus present. It seems all right."

"It is all right. Perhaps he will now learn some other air and substitute it once in a while."

"Mercy, but if I thought so I wouldn't buy this!"

"But why?"

"Because he's got his wind worked up to just the pitch for 'The Old Oaken Bucket,' and if he should switch off onto 'Old Black Joe' he might bust and scatter himself all over the kitchen. I'm not risking any new tunes around my house until after Joseph has made a will leaving everything to me."

SANTA WILL STAY.

There are a lost of people
Who love to wag their jaws
And tell the children plainly
There is no Santa Claus.

No Santa Claus—what nonsense
Down childish throats to ram,
You might as well inform them
There is no Uncle Sam!

ECONOMY.

"What's the matter with that man?" asked the dealer, after the customer had gone out. "He got mad when I tried to sell him a Christmas tree."

"That's Hppem," said one of his neighbors. "He's rich and proud, but stingy. He hangs all his Christmas presents on his family tree."

A Sad Jolt.

"Ah," said the press humorist, "I see you have cut out one of my jokes."

"Ha, ha! [illegible] found it funny, did you?"

"Excuse me for laughing, old man. What I cut out was an ad on the other side of the page."

GOOD KING OSCAR.

The beloved King of Sweden is dead. King Oscar II breathed his last at the royal apartments in Stockholm shortly after nine o'clock Sunday morning, surrounded by the members of his family, including aged queen, Sophia, the Crown Prince Oscar Gustavus, and high ministers of State. His age was 78 years, 9 months. and 17 days. Not only in Sweden, but everywhere Scandinavians live, is his death deeply mourned. King Oscar was a noble-hearted, pure-minded ruler, and under his beneficent reign the people have prospered and even the separation of the two countries was accomplished without recourse to arms. He is succeeded by his son Gustavus Oscar Adolphus, who is nearly 50 years old. He took the oath of allegiance last Sunday, under the title, Gustave V, and adopted the motto, "With the People for the Fatherland."

AFFINITY THEORY BOSH.

The following morsels of wisdom recently appeared in the Pioneer Press, and are the product of the mind of Rev. S. G. Smith. one of the big men in mind and soul in the church life of St. Paul.

"Pick out a girl that is healthy and that you like. That is all that is necessary. This affinity theory is bosh," was the advice given to the male students in one of the classes of Dr. S. G. Smith of St. Paul, at the university yesterday morning. Dr. Smith gave his class in sociology some words of wisdom regarding marriage and the rearing of children.

"One of the tragedies of the world," he said, "is that of spoiled babies. The selection of a nurse for the baby is much more important than the selection of a minister for the soul. Every child born into the world is a new hope. It does not seem to be the custom of society to regard them as such."

He then advised the boys of the class not to look for their affinity. A good healthy girl who the boy likes is the right one for his wife and the minister and professor does not believe in the silly talk about soul affinities that has been circulated throughout the country lately.

In speaking of the developments of the child, Dr. Smith said, "it is as impossible to be born with a perfect character, as it is to be born with a dress suit."

A NEW YORK paper explains that lightning never strikes in the same place because it is never there after the first time.

BOND issue in time of peace! The Little Falls Herald is trying to remember when and where this cry was raised before.

A PARAGRAPHER declares that when a young man asks a girl for her photograph she immediately classifies him as a possibility.

A NAME doesn't count for much. Even Jeff Davis the second can be excused for not selecting a more acceptable cognomen, and should be given credit for telling a few eye-opener truths to the Platts and Depews, and Guggenheims, though he didn't wait until he had wasted ten years of his senatorial career.

AN exchange tells of a well-known editor who dislikes nothing more than superfluous questions. On one occasion the telegraph editor approached him with this query: "Here's a story of a big landslide in the west. Under what head shall I put it?" "You might throw it in with the real estate transfers," caustically suggested the "old man."

JOHN GOODNOW, former consul general to China and a well-known Minnesota politician, died in Spain last week. He was not a great man—but cool and daring and not overly scrupulous in political maneuvers belonging to the old regime of gangsters who ruled the Republican party of Minnesota for twenty years by high-handed effrontery and trickery. It is to the credit of the state and the republican party that the Goodnow type of politicians is fast becoming extinct.

THE presidential race is on. The starters have decreed that the republicans meet at Chicago June 16, and the democrats at Denver July 7. From now until election night we can expect to hear a good deal of national politics, and there is every promise of a red-hot campaign—as warm as the conflict of 1892. The two great parties enter the race under fairly even conditions, with the odds favoring the democrats, owing to the financial situation and uncertainty as to tariff revision. The American people held party ties lightly, and there is always an element of independent voters to swing the pendulum either way.

THE newspapers can easily create a hero of a trust-buster. For instance Frank Kellogg has never really busted any trusts nor is his reputation or training along that line. He is best known as the attorney and apologist of the steel trust—the greatest and most rapacious corporation operating in Minnesota. Kellogg's selection by President Roosevelt is as mysterious and unaccountable as the selection of Elihu Root, another trust lawyer, for secretary of state.

EXCERPT from a statement made by Supt. S. L. Heeter of the St. Paul public schools: "The report is the result of a systematic investigation and the figures given are actual, not in any way estimated. These two thousand boys, all under sixteen years, confessed to their teachers that they smoke cigarettes or a pipe regularly. The boys that smoke stand lowest in their studies and the majority of the troublesome pupils are cigarette victims. The report also enumerates the sources from which the children get their tobacco, and scores the parents who provide their children with smoking materials. The evil effects from this pernicious practise on the part of the school boys is so marked and the work of the teachers so retarded, that it becomes my duty to call the attention of the board of education and the patrons of the schools to the far-reaching consequences of the cigarette. From careful reports already tabulated it can be shown that scores of young boys in the St. Paul schools have lost their self control thru this insidious habit and have become 'cigarette fiends,' with impaired physical developments, premature maturity, weakened intellect and moral and social tendencies."

MAKE IT YOURSELF.

Says Many Persons Here Can Be Made Happy Again By Using This.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood now that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claime that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

The simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after while.

Our home druggists say they will either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them.

BOND RESOLUTION.

Red Lake Falls, minn.
December 14 1907.

Commissioner Daniel Shaw offered the following preamble and resolutions and moved their adoption:

[illegible] pursuance of and in full compliance with the provisions of chapter 258 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for the year 1901, and the several acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, such steps have been duly and legally taken that a public drainage ditch has been duly located and established, partly in the county of Red Lake and partly in the county of Polk, and State of Minnesota, and known as Judicial Ditch No. 4, and such proceedings have been duly and legally taken in the District Court of the Fourteenth Judicial District, duly locating and establishing said ditch, and it has been definitely ascertained and established in accordance with the provisions of the law applicable thereto, that the expense incurred and to be incurred in the locating, establishing and construction of such of said Judicial Ditch as is located within this county of Red Lake, and in such relation to said county of Red Lake as to affect lands therein, within the terms of said legislative acts, will be at least the sum of $16,700; and

WHEREAS: This Board has heretofore duly determined to issue the bonds of this county, for the purpose of paying the expense incurred and to be incurred in locating, establishing and constructing so much of said Judicial Ditch as is located within this county, and in such relation thereto, as to affect lands therein within the terms of said laws, and said bonds have been duly sold: Now, therefore be it

RESOLVED, By this Board of County Commissioners that the sum of $16,700 is necessary to defray the expense incurred and to be incurred in locating, constructing and establishing so much of such Judicial Ditch as is located within this county of Red Lake, and in such relation to this county as to affect lands therein, within the terms of said chapter 258 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for the year 1901 and the several acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto;

RESOLVED, FURTHER, That the negotiable coupon bonds of said county of Red Lake be issued for said purpose in the aggregate amount of $16,700, said bonds to be seventeen in number, sixteen thereof of the denomination of $1,000 each and one of the denomination of $700, all bearing date the first day of October, 1907, and due in ten years from their date, with interest at the rate of six per cent (6) per annum, payable semi annually, on the first day of April and October of each year, both principal and interest payable at the banking house of A. B. Leach & Co., in Chicago, Illinois.

Hourglasses in a London Church.

Nearly everybody is aware that at one time it was the custom in many churches to regulate the length of the sermon by an hourglass, which stood on the pulpit immediately fronting the preacher. Quite a number of these curious relics are preserved in various ecclesiastical edifices throughout the land, but the British and Foreign Sailors' church, situated in what was formerly Ratcliff highway, is the only one possessing four. They are in perfect preservation and are fixed all together in a framework of solid brass.—London Standard.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Red Lake Falls Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

DANGER SIGNAL No 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red. ill-smelling urine full of sediment and irregular of passage.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute; tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the approach of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently.

B. F. Bothun, living on Main St., Thief River Falls, Minn., says: "I am giving Doan's Kidneys Pills my reccomendation in the hopes that it may prove of value to some of the many who suffer from kidney complaint. I have been bothered with this disease for several years, the trouble always beginning with a dull ache in the small of my back which would be soon followed with severe pains and a soreness across the usualle contained a thick sediment if allowed to stand. I felt dull and miserable most of the time and having heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a box. I took them according to directions and am free from pain and distress and my kidneys are more regular in action."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

TWO QUEER ANIMALS

The Marabou and the Hyena of Central Africa.

BOTH VULTURES IN NATURE.

Each Gorges Itself on Carrion, and the Bird and Beast Often Battle For Their Food—Fairylike Plumes That Are as Light as Air.

The ugliest storks in the world are found in southern Asia and central Africa. Their flesh colored heads are only partially covered with stiff, wiry feathers, and hanging on the breast they bear a disgusting pouch, which answers the purpose of a crop. One of the largest of these storks is the marabou. It stalks about the great sandy plains of central Africa with composure and a lordly grandeur, as if it were the most beautiful bird in the world. Its body feathers are of a dull metallic green color, and its wings and tail are dingy black. Looking at the awkward creature, no one would suspect that under its ungainly wings it carried the most exquisite and fairylike little plumes, so airy that it takes basketfuls of them to weigh an ounce. They are pure white and so much desired for trimming that the bird is vigorously hunted by the natives, who sell these dainty feathers to traders for a very large price.

The marabou feeds on carrion, like the vulture. Its throat is very large, and it will greedily eat everything that comes in its way. In the swamps and plains around Khartum, on the Nile, are immense flocks of marabous, and they are so daring as to come to the slaughter houses on the outskirts of the city in search of food, and whole ox ears and shin bones with hoof attached have been found in the crops of specimens which have been killed.

These birds are skillful fishers. They haunt the low marshy islands in the rivers and lakes of central Africa, with elephants, monkeys, flamingoes and many varieties of birds for companions, and gain their principal food from the water. They often go in companies of ten or twelve to fish. Wading in the water, the birds form a circle, which they gradually draw together, gathering the frightened fish in the center of the net, when with their long bills and quick movements they speedily provide themselves with a hearty meal.

Although marabou mammas have been seen proudly parading around with a brood of diminutive downy young ones, so shy and retiring is this bird in its domestic habits that naturalists have been unable to determine when and how it builds its nest. The natives assert that it nests in high trees, but their statement is not confirmed.

In captivity the marabou is lord of the inclosure, and in zoological gardens, where specimens have been confined, no other birds or even small beasts dare approach the feeding trough until the hunger of this impudent bird is satisfied and it has retired to the warmest corner for a nap. The immense strength of its bill makes it a formidable enemy, and when fighting for food it will often overcome the largest vultures and wage successful battles with beasts of prey.

The hyena inhabits the same portions of Asia and Africa as the marabou, and travelers give accounts of terrible contests between these two singular members of the animal kingdom. The hyena is called the vulture among beasts, as it prefers carrion for its food, and as long as it can find dead animals to devour it leaves the flocks and herds in peace. Cowardly by nature, it rarely attacks man or beast unless driven to desperation by hunger.

The striped hyena inhabits the northern latitudes of Africa, Persia and Syria, while the spotted species, which is easily tamed and is sometimes called hyena dog, is found in large numbers in the vast plains of South Africa.

The hyena is a strange looking beast. It has a big head and a heavy, shaggy mane. The hind part of its body is much lower than its shoulders, and its hind legs are short. This odd formation gives it an awkward, shambling manner of walking, which is both ludicrous and hideous.

This creature rarely shows itself by day, but when the shadows of night fall on the plains and forests it comes out from its home among the rocks and caverns in search of food. African travelers are much annoyed by it. When the camp is silent and all are sleeping the hyena comes prowling round, uttering hoarse human cries, and should it fail to find sufficient camp refuse to satisfy its hunger some poor donkey is sure to be torn in pieces by its terribly strong jaws.

Few animals have been the subject of so much superstition. In ancient times it was believed that a dog went mad if a hyena turned its evil eye upon it, and the beast was believed by many to be a wicked sorcerer, who went about in human form by day and at night assumed the shape of a hyena. The poor and ignorant peasantry of Arabia even at the present day believe in the evil eye of this beast and are afraid to shoot it lest they should incur the wrath of the wicked spirit which they imagine walks the earth in this ugly form.

The poor hyena, however, far from being an evil spirit, is a real blessing to the regions it inhabits, as it is a natural scavenger, provided by the kind wisdom of nature to clear the ground of much loathsome and decaying matter, thereby rendering the air sweeter and purer and more healthful.

CHINESE FOOTBALL.

It Is More Like a Prolonged Riot Than a Pastime.

"The first game of football I witnessed upon my arrival in China," one of our consular representatives at home for a visit remarked recently, "I mistook for a very serious riot, and you wouldn't have blamed me either.

"In the first place, I was not aware that the Chinese had any such game, but later found that it is very popular in north China. It is not played as is the American game, and instead of eleven players to the side there are fifty. These northern Chinese are almost giants, and every man on the team will be six feet or over in height and weigh on the average 200 pounds. There are no goals, side lines or halves. The game lasts until one side is the winner, and frequently this is not accomplished before two or three days.

"The idea of the game is to force a small wicker basket, which takes the place of our ball, into the territory of the other side—this territory being one-half of the town—and up and down the streets the fight rages. Each man is equipped with a whistle with which to summon assistance when too hard pressed.

"Stealth as well as main force may be used in getting the 'ball' into the enemy's country, and I know of one clever player who did so by passing over the roofs of the houses. As you may imagine, a hundred giants yelling and fighting in the streets create some excitement."—Harper's Weekly.

SOUL HOUSES.

One of the Queer Customs of the Ancient Egyptians.

Egyptian "soul" houses were curious edifices made probably between the tenth and twelfth dynasties—that is, about 3600 and 3300 B. C. The same principle that caused the warrior's steed to be slain on his grave seems to have actuated the early Egyptians when they built a house for the dead man's soul.

The beginning of the custom was that a mat was laid on the grave, with a pan of food upon it. Afterward this offering was carved in stone as a table of offerings to give permanent satisfaction for the soul. Then to the table was added a shelter copied from an Arab tent. And this gradually was elaborated. The shelter was placed on columns, a hut was put into this portico, chambers were copied, and finally appeared complete two story houses furnished with pottery models of couch, chair, stool, fireplace and the figure of a woman making bread.

The soul was conceived of as ascending from the grave through the ground and requiring shelter while feeding on its everlasting provision, and [illegible] through the earth [illegible] needed [illegible] to go up to the upper floor, and the soul had [illegible] for which a [illegible] was required—

RAISED HIS WAGES.

The Way an Employer Got Square With a Faithless Assistant.

A story is told in Milwaukee concerning an elderly German who conducted a good sized manufacturing plant on the south side. He had an engineer at his factory who had been with him for fifteen years and the old gentleman had implicit confidence in him. It was with a profound shock that he discovered finally that the trusted engineer was "grafting" most shamefully.

The proprietor thought it all over for a long while and then sent for the engineer. When that functionary arrived the following dialogue took place:

"Ah, John! Good morning, John. How long haf you been vorking by this place?"

"Fifteen years."

"Ach, so. And vot are your wages?"

"Twenty-five dollars a week."

"M-m-m. Vell, after today it vill be $5 a veek more."

The engineer thanked his employer profusely and withdrew. A week later the old gentleman sent for him again and the same conversation ensued, ending with another $5 a week raise. The third Saturday he sent for the engineer again, and after the same questions and answers he raised his salary another $5 a week.

On the fourth Saturday the engineer was again summoned before the boss.

"How long have you been vorking here, John?" asked the proprietor.

"Fifteen years," replied the engineer, who by this time had grown to expect the weekly question and salary raise as a regular thing.

"And how much vages are you getting?"

"Forty dollars a week."

"Ach, so? Vell, you are fired."

"Fired!" exclaimed the engineer, almost fainting. "Why, you have been raising my salary $5 at a clip for the last three weeks."

"Sure I have," roared the Teutonic boss, all his indignation flaring out at once. "And the reason that I did it vas that it shall make it harder for you for vhen I fire you, you loafer!"—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

SILVER KING OF THE SEA.

The Feats That a Tarpon Will Perform When Hooked.

If you have never seen a tarpon imagine the Mediterranean sardine that you take from the box for lunch lengthened out to six or seven feet. Give it two enormous staring black eyes, a supercilious lip of the most grotesque shape coming down and twisting up again, a mouth that can be thrown so wide open that thirty feet distant when the fish is in the air you can see blue sky down its throat and out through the arched gills. Give the fish a greenish back and a long spine at the dorsal, a powerful sardine-like tail and equip its belly and sides with scales which look more like newly minted trade dollars than anything else, dollars often twice their natural size, into which the purest molten silver has been dropped, scales that flash thousands of rays in every direction, scales that gleam, corruscate and in the full glare of the sun form so many sunbursts to dazzle the eye and confuse the excited angler.

I have taken the "sabalo" under various circumstances and have seen it leap along the outer Florida reef and down by the Rio Grande, where it forms in gigantic schools and moves south in winter, and everywhere it is the same sensational equilibrist, the same air climber and sky scraper when hooked or snared. What the sensations of the tarpon are when hooked it would be difficult to say, but I fancy it is frightened and leaps in the direction away from the pain center, and no two leaps are alike.

It may go directly up into the air, carrying a big wave with it and lash the air, or it may go out of the water head first, rising like a ray of light ten or fifteen or more feet, then fall gracefully. Every possible position I have seen the frightened tarpon take, from standing on its tail as upright as a soldier to exactly the opposite direction, and an old angler informed me that he had seen a tarpon make a lateral leap of thirty feet.—Charles F. Holden in Recreation.

A Little Too Original.

"You New Yorkers are wonders," said the man from the west here for a brief stay and seeing everything from the Bronx to the Bowery. "Nothing is impossible here—at least I saw vines twined across the sky last night. It was in a restaurant in Forty-second street," he continued. "The ceiling is painted sky blue, and there are little electric lights set to look like stars. Also there are the clouds floating about, but then there are the vines that kill the otherwise very neat illusion. Originality is all right, but vines hitched to a sky is too much for a man from the west."—New York Globe.

The Main Point.

Mrs. Scrapleigh—They say, my dear, that the new rubber plant, the Ficus pandurata, is extremely beautiful. It has a glossy veined leaf— Mr. Scrapleigh (who has strained his back lugging the house plants around)—I don't care anything about its glossy veined leaves. What does the dum thing weigh?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Great Financier.

Cholly—Harry is a great financier. Chappie—Yaas? Cholly—He borrowed sixpence from me yesterday to take him to the city to see a man that he knew he could borrow a pound from, and with that pound he flew off to stand a dinner to another man whom he borrowed a hundred from.—London Telegraph.

The Class Struggle.

The class struggle began with the prehistoric tribal wars and can end only when the laborers can be delivered from the inheritance of industrial disaster handed down to them from the fortunes of barbarian warfare. This class struggle was shown in the servile rebellions when slavery had been made the status of the workingman. This class struggle was shown in the labor unions and the strikes when the wage system had been fastened on the toiler, when he had been robbed of any opportunity to use the resources of the earth in his own right, had been refused the right to live without a master and had not been guaranteed even the right to have a master. This class struggle is shown now in the struggle for Socialism, which is no new thing in the world. It is the same old warfare, at last informed as to the nature of the rights of the toilers and equipped with the power of the ballot in the struggle to secure these rights.—John Stuart Mill.

What a Priest Says.

Advancing the cause of Socialism is not the work of factions and giddy heads, as some think who see a scarecrow in every new movement, but is the progress of humanity. I call Socialism the doctrine of love and justice which was taught by Christ. Socialism does not mean tumult and ruin, but food and work for all, a home and clothing for all, a living assured to all, happiness and justice for all.—Father Mario [illegible], Italy.

THE ONLY WAY OUT.

Socialism the Only Means by Which to Attain Real Democracy.

The condemnation of the existing industrial system is that it brutalizes manhood. Success is measured in dollars. Dividends are of more importance than manhood and character.

Profit sharing has been tried, but with somewhat disappointing results.

The workingmen distrust the large salaried employers and feel that profits are eaten up in salaries.

Trades unions have sprung up, and their existence is justified, for if capital can unite, labor may and perhaps must.

But labor unions are not the final solution. The next natural forward step in social evolution will be the transfer of great consolidated industries from trusts and private capital to public ownership.

Some day the people will own the railroads and coal mines and all the largest necessary businesses of the land—not necessarily the smaller ones—just as today we have public ownership of streets, schools, libraries, postal system, etc.

And if the business is run for the people, not the profit that can be made out of the people, larger wages can be paid, commodities can be purchased more cheaply and the whole standard of living, physical, intellectual, moral, will be raised thereby.

This is Socialism, pure and simple. It is not anarchism. Instead of privileged classes we should have a real democracy, democracy consummated.

FOR THE INDIVIDUAL.

Socialism Insures the Fullest Freedom to Every Human Being.

Let no one be astonished that we bring forward the idea of a national community now, whereas at first we set ourselves to establish the liberty of the individual. The nation, and the nation alone, can enfranchise all citizens. Only the nation can furnish the means of free development to all. Private associations, temporary and limited in character, can protect limited groups of individuals only for a time. But there is only one universal association that can guarantee the rights of all individuals without exception not only the rights of living, but of those who are yet unborn and who will take their places in the generations to come.

If, then, we invoke the nation we do so in order to insure the rights of the individual in the fullest and most universal sense. Not a single human being for a single moment of time should be excluded from the sphere of rights. Not one should be in danger of becoming the party or instrument of another individual. Not one should be deprived of the sure means of laboring freely without servile dependence on any other individual.

Social ownership of property is merely opportunity of action brought within the reach of all.

Socialism will exalt and ennoble humanity. It will level up all men and give new meaning and dignity to life. —Jaures.

Industrial Depressions.

Those who believe that there are indications that a severe industrial depression is due will find by an inspection of the monthly issuance of building permits that in the month of August the building operations in Chicago were $1,000,000 less than in the corresponding month in 1906 and that for the past eight months of the present year there was an aggregate decrease of $7,000,000 in the building permits issued by the city.

This is but one of the many industries in which there is a like indication that one of those industrial panics, which the Socialists alone are able to explain, is approaching.

These periodic convulsions which society is forced to suffer through the operations of capitalism can only be abolished when the industry of the country is freed from the anarchistic organization that now prevails and is systematically run by the workers.—Chicago Daily Socialist.

A Notable Book.

The New York Sun announces that 'Dr. Lewis H. Morgan, well known to American readers as the author of 'The League of the Iroquois' and 'System of Consanguinity and Affinity of the Human Family,' has lately published a comprehensive and suggestive study of 'Ancient Society.'" The joke is on the Sun. Morgan's great book was published a generation ago. The author has been dead for many years. We heartily wish that his books, especially the "Ancient Society," were "well known to American readers." Unfortunately his own countrymen as well as the English have neglected one of the greatest of sociological scientists and have left it to Germans and Russians to appreciate his work. However, it is pleasing to note the fact that at last a reprint has been demanded and that even the Sun has found it worthy of a rather careful review.—New York Worker.

How We Are Drifting.

While the people of the United States have a quasi-republican form of government, the tendency, not only in capitalistic circles, but also in the well to do middle class, is decidedly anti-republican.

While we are supposed to have a democracy, we are hampered by having an uncrowned king and a senatorial oligarchy, and the well to do middle class applauds both.

While we have no hereditary nobility, we have a moneyed aristocracy which has now become hereditary. And it is the most oppressive and contemptible the world has ever seen.—Victor L. Berger.

THE GRASS FENCE.

Thrilling Incident of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The battle of Bunker Hill gave the occasion for many deeds of valor, and since that day we hold a list of names illuminated in our memory. One of these names belongs to the Knight of Derryfield. Do you remember who he was, and can you recall the song of his bravery? Read of it once more and have impressed again on your heart the implicit obedience and perfect courage of the New Hampshire farmers and their captain, John Moor.

When the forty-five men of the little town of Derryfield, N. H., left their homes to fight for the great cause each knew that no men were ever led by a braver man than their beloved Captain Moor. His courage had inspired many of them in the French and Indian war. So, eagerly, when the alarm came in 1795 they marched with him and his drummer boy son to Cambridge, where he was entered a captain in Stark's regiment.

And now comes the battle of Bunker Hill. Behind a fence, piled thick with grass, Captain Moor's company lay as still as death. An order had come from Colonel Stark that not a shot was to be fired until the British passed a stake that was driven a short distance away. With perfect confidence in themselves and their captain, the farmers waited—waited motionless while that beautiful, death dealing pageant of British warriors swept grandly toward them. With the coolness and wonderful precision of a dress parade the old world came to meet the new, the grenadiers and light infantry marching in single file twelve feet apart, the artillery advancing more slowly and thundering out an insolent defiance to the conceited little rebels, while on each side five battalions formed an oblique line to the fence breastworks. The very flower of the English army, full blossomed in learned maneuvers, resplendent in shining arms and waving banners, advanced to meet a little group of men untrained in tactics of warfare, only half armed, clad in homespun, hiding behind a breastwork of grass.

The dead line was crossed. Bang! Bang! Bang! The little rebels were awake at last. Now, not the stake, but a line of fallen bodies marked the dead line. Thunder and lightning belched forth from that breastwork. A fire, intense, steady, killing, and the brave march of the Britishers was checked. A slight recoil, and the officers, dashing up, again urged the line forward. Not for one moment did the grass fence cease its voice of fire and shot. One by one the brave grenadiers and their dashing, gallant officers fell to the earth. The ranks broke and the proud host fled before the meager handful of New Hampshire men. Ah, if we could only have had grass breastworks and Captain John Moor all along the American line!—C. F. Harrison, in Atlanta Constitution.

A Philanthropist.

An earnest east side worker says that not long ago she was approached by an old gentleman who has the reputation of being something of a philanthropist with the request that he be permitted to accompany her on one of her rounds of visits. Much pleased, the worker consented. The destitute condition in which many families were found elicited expressions of deep sympathy from the old gentleman, but to his companion's surprise and regret nothing more material. Presently they came upon a small girl weeping bitterly.

"What is it, my dear?" the old gentleman inquired.

The child raised a tear stained face and pointed into a dark alleyway. "Me mudder sent me to buy some bread, an' I lost my dime in there, an' I'll git licked awful!" she sobbed.

"Poor dear!" he remarked in a tender voice, at the same time putting his hand into his vest pocket. "Don't cry. Here is a match. Perhaps you will be able to find it!"—Harper's.

Misled by Stationery.

"I wrote a note to my washerwoman about a week or two ago asking her please to bring my clothes home," said the woman. "I needed them. I happened to be in a religious concern at the time and used its paper to write the note on. Bertha came yesterday.

"'I've a great notion to discharge you, Bertha,' I told her. 'Why didn't you bring me my clothes? Must I get enough things to wear a year without having them washed on your account?'

"'To tell you the truth,' Bertha apologized meekly, 'you wrote on that theah religious paypah, and I didn't pay no 'tenshan to it. I jes' thought it was some o' them peepul writin' to ask me to come to prayah meetin'. I didn't know it was youah lettah, miss, till yesterday mewnin', when I got tiahd of seein' it around and opened it, so that was why I didn't git heah no soonah with youah clo'es.'"—New York Press.

Moody on the Cards.

One evening in San Francisco Evangelist Moody sat in his room at the hotel playing a game of cards with Mrs. Moody and two friends when a messenger came in with a dispatch. As the boy stood waiting for a reply Mr. Moody suddenly asked, "Won't you sit down, my lad, and have a game of authors with us?"

The boy declined and soon left the room. Hardly had the door closed when Mrs. Moody said, "Why, Dwight, what made you think of inviting that boy to sit down and play with us?"

"My dear," replied Moody, "don't you see, if I had not called the boy's attention to the fact that we were playing authors all the morning papers would certainly have announced under big headlines that D. L. Moody had been discovered in a San Francisco hotel engaged in a game of cards."

The Men Who Skim Grease Off the Sea at Launching Time.

One of the most anxious moments for battleship builders arrives when a new vessel is launched. And, by the way of compensation, this is the time when the tallow salvors are joyous.

The day fixed for the ceremony of launching is reached, and, as usually happens when a battleship is to be launched, a big crowd assembles. The battleship rests on "slipways," down which she will glide from the dock yard into the water. The only thing that prevents the ship from sliding into the water before the proper time is the "dog shores"—large pieces of wood that keep in position the cradle upon which the battleship rests. When the cord that releases the dog shores is cut the battleship glides down the slipways into the water amid the cheers of the spectators and the playing of the band.

The slipways have to be made as smooth and as slippery as it is possible to make them, so that nothing shall prevent the battleship from gliding into the water safely. It is the greasy substance with which these slipways are covered that calls forth the joy of the tallow salvors.

Since the slightest mishap at the launching would almost certainly prove to be a very costly matter, no pains are spared to insure that everything, including the ship, goes smoothly, and the greasing of the slipways is properly regarded as an important task.

The material used in the process is generally tallow mixed with linseed oil or soft soap, and this is smeared on to the ways to a thickness of about two inches. Every inch of the ways must be covered carefully, and a host of men are employed in the work. First of all the tallow is spread on with trowels, so as to give a smooth and flat surface, and then the soft soap or linseed oil is poured on top. Between one and one and a half tons of the mixture is used in the case of a battleship, and the cost of launching amounts to a good sum, something like £800 or £1,000.

The tallow salvors get ready to reap the harvest.

Crowding the water just where the ship is to be launched will be seen a number of small rowing boats belonging to the tallow salvors. As the vessel glides into the water the tallow which has clung to the keel and bottom plates from the ways becomes loosened and floats to the water's surface in great masses.

Then the tallow salvors swarm around. Bared to the shoulder, they reach over the sides of their boats and proceed to gather in as much of the floating tallow as they can. Some of them even have small hand nets to help them, but in any case it is only a question of a few minutes before the boats are covered, both inside and out, with the slippery, oily mixture, while in the center small heaps of fat gradually arise. No ordinary person could remain in the boats, but the tallow salvors are not at all particular. They row off with their loads and dispose of them to the local soapmakers. Sometimes as much as £2 or £3 can be made by a very agile tallow salvor.—London Answers.

Poe's Devotion to His Wife.

No picture of Poe in Philadelphia would be complete, writes E. P. Oberholtzer in Book News, if we do not remember his poetic attachment for his girl wife and his love for high literary ideals, so faithfully evidenced in his own writing and in his criticism of the work of other men. "His love for his wife was a sort of rapturous worship of the spirit of beauty which he felt was fading before his eyes," Mr. Graham wrote after the poet's death: "I have seen him hovering around her when she was ill, with all the fond fear and tender anxiety of a mother for her firstborn, her slightest cough causing in him a shudder, a heart chill that was visible. I rode out one summer evening with them, and the remembrance of his watchful eyes eagerly bent upon the slightest change of hue in that loved face haunts me yet as the memory of a sad strain." Recollecting that when she was gone honest sorrow mingled with the poverty that hung about him like a thick cloud through which no sun shone, we can afford to forgive much in those last misspent days.

"Hear! Hear!"

The parliamentary "Hear, hear!" was not always an expression of approval. So one learns from Dr. Murray's dictionary. The phrase was originally "Hear him, hear him!" used as an exclamation to call attention to a speaker's words. We have a record of its use in 1689 and as late as 1763. A member of the house of commons in 1768, being interrupted in a speech by a "Hear!" retorted, "That very word, 'Hear!' I dread of all others," and a member in 1770 referred to its use as "disorderly." The unabridged form, "Hear him!" was in use so late as the beginning of the century. Lord Stanhope tells us, in his "Life of Pitt," that when that statesman reappeared in the house of commons in May, 1803, after a long absence in opposition, he was hailed as he passed up the gangway with cries of "Hear him!" Francis Horner, who was in the strangers' gallery, noted as a remarkable thing that when Pitt rose to deliver his memorable speech on that occasion he was cheered—met with cries of "Hear him!"—before he had uttered a word. We have warmer blood nowadays.—London Chronicle.

The plant known as vervain, which is not distinguished for beauty and which grows nowadays utterly disregarded, was so sacred to the Druids that they only gathered it for their divinations when the great dog star arose, in order that neither sun nor moon should see the deed.

CATARRH BLOOD DISEASED AND SYSTEM DISORDERED

Catarrh is not merely an inflammation of the tissues of the head and throat, as the symptoms of ringing noises in the ears, mucous dropping back into the throat, continual hawking and spitting, etc., would seem to indicate; it is a blood disease in which the entire circulation and the greater part of the system are involved. Catarrh is due to the presence of an excess of uric acid in the blood. The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels frequently become torpid and dull in their action and instead of carrying off the refuse and waste of the body, leave it to sour and form uric acid in the system. This is taken up by the blood and through its circulation distributed to all parts of the system. These impurities in the blood irritate and inflame the different membranes and tissues of the body, and the contracting of a cold will start the secretions and other disgusting and disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh. As the blood goes to all parts of the body the catarrhal poison affects all parts of the system. The head has a tight, full feeling, nose continually stopped up, pains above the eyes, slight fever comes and goes, the stomach is upset and the entire system disordered and affected by this disease. It is a waste of time to try to cure Catarrh with sprays, washes, inhalations, etc. Such treatment does not reach the blood, and can, therefore, do nothing more than temporarily relieve the discomfort of the trouble. To cure Catarrh permanently the blood must be thoroughly purified and the system cleansed of all poisons, and at the same time strengthened and built up. Nothing equals S. S. S. for this purpose. It attacks the disease at its head, goes down to the very bottom of the trouble and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. removes every particle of the catarrhal poison from the blood, making this vital stream pure, fresh and healthy. Then the inflamed membranes begin to heal, the head is loosened and cleared, the hawking and spitting cease, every symptom disappears, the constitution is built up and vigorous health restored. S. S. S. also tones up the stomach and digestion and acts as a fine tonic to the entire system. If you are suffering with Catarrh begin the use of S. S. S. and write us a statement of your case and our physicians will send you literature about Catarrh, and give you special medical advice without charge. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores.

I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, but no good resulted. I then began S. S. S., and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a short while was cured. This was six years ago, and I am as well today as any man. I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know there is nothing on earth better for the blood than S. S. S. Nobody thinks more of S. S. S. than I do. M. MATSON, Lapeer, Mich.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, dated the second day of November, 1903, and recorded in the office of Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, on the 29th day of March A. D., 1904, at five o'clock p. m., in book twenty-nine (29) of Mortgages on page three hundred fifty-five (355), whereby John N. Miller and Lizzie K. Miller, his wife, who were the mortgagors therein, mortgaged and conveyed to L. S. Hackney, who was the mortgagee therein, the following described property, situate in the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The south half of the ne¼ of section number five (5) in township number one hundred fifty-three (153), north of range number forty-four (44), west of the fifth principal meridian containing eighty (80) acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, to secure the payment of the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars and interest thereon, at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, according to the terms of their certain promissory note, bearing even date with said mortgage and payable five years after date, with interest at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, payable annually.

Said mortgage contained a provision, that should any default be made in the payment of any annual installment of interest due thereon or in the payment of any taxes thereafter to be assessed thereon, previous to the day appointed for the sale of lands for state taxes in the state of Minnesota, then and thereupon the whole sum, for the security of which said mortgage was given, shall become immediately due and payable at the election of the said mortgagee.

Said mortgagors have defaulted in the payment of the sum of four and 81-100 ($4.81) dollars of the annual interest due thereon, on the second day of November, 1906, and in the payment of the sum of twenty-eight ($28) dollars, being the entire installment of interest due thereon, on the second day of November, 1907, and in the payment of the taxes assessed thereon for the year 1905, and are still in default therein.

There is claimed to be and is actually due on said note and mortgage, at the date of this notice, the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars, principal; thirty four and 35-100 ($34.35) dollars interest; nine and 45-100 ($9.45) dollars paid by said mortgagee for the taxes of 1905 after said premises had been sold for taxes, with sixty five cents interest thereon; twenty-five ($25) dollars, attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage, to be paid in case of a foreclosure thereof, in all, amounting to the sum of four hundred sixty-nine and 45-100 ($469.45) dollars, due thereon at the date of this notice, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover said debt or any part thereof.

Now, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale, in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, said mortgage will be foreclosed and the property above and therein described will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, on the 18th day of January, 1908, to satisfy and pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and the costs and expenses of said sale.

CALIFORNIA LEGENDS.

Weird and Thrilling Tales of the Olden Days.

A MINE THAT WAS HAUNTED.

The Ghost of Tom Bowers, an Elusive, Luminous Warning and a Race Between Life and Death—The Building of Lofty Mount Shasta.

A haunted house in the family sends delicious shivers down the spinal cord of the ancestral tree, but even more delightfully spooky is the possession of a haunted mine, and such a boast California can make on the authority of early legend.

Once upon a time in the days of old and the days of gold a miner of the name of Thomas Bowers lived and delved in the vicinity of Pike City.

A shy, silent man was Thomas, doing his prospecting without a partner and even holding aloof from the jolly company of the other miners after the day's work was done. And in the same shy, silent way that he had lived he died—noiseless footsteps across the snow to the brink of the slope where he had been prospecting and at the foot of a landslide his speechless body—alone in death.

After his remains were buried decently and in order there were excited whispers about strange noises at the mouth of the old shaft, and soon, quite incidentally, of course, the mine was abandoned.

The greed of gold, however, taps impatiently at closed doors, and after some little time a thriftless miner hoping for a short cut to wealth undertook to work the old mine again and suddenly surprised his creditors by paying his bills. But things flowed not so smoothly as they seemed. There was many a slip of nerve between nugget and pick. Every morning the miner found that his sluice had been tampered with, that during the night the water had been turned on by unknown hands. Yet the most diligent search led to no discovery, and as a last hope of untangling the clammy mystery the miner one evening inaugurated a watch, well armed with a rifle.

The shadows deepened into darkness, into an absolute blackness. Suddenly while reconnoitering a phosphorescent light attracted his attention, and as he boldly advanced toward it he discovered a placard hung from a tree—a sort of spectral transparency, it seems—bearing the following words: "Notice! I, Thomas Bowers, claim this ground for placer mining."

When the reader's mind had recovered from its earthquake of astonishment the miner made a snatch at the placard. A pricking thrill went through his fingers, as though they had taken liberties with an electric battery. The luminous writing was gone, but in his ears roared the flowing water of the sluice and through the roar the sharp, clear cat tap, tap, of a pick. Again the flash of warning light—and before him stood Tom Bowers.

The California miner is no coward. The rifle was lifted, fired. With a yell of rage the ghost, brandishing pick and shovel in excited arms, pursued the trespasser.

A race between life and death in a new sense was the one that followed—all the way to Pike City. There the other miners, celebrating a new find by a dance in a saloon, were suddenly alarmed by terrified screams. Running out, they found neither man nor ghost, but tossed upon the ground a rifle and a pick and a shovel with the initials T. B. cut in the handle.

A legend of an entirely different type is connected with the same period of California history.

During the rush for gold in the fifties a party came west by the Gila river route. The heat was intense. The supply of water gave out. On the hot, barren sands just below Yuma the dying cavalcade pitched their desperate camp.

In the silence of the early night from one of the wagons came the prattling voice of a little child lifted in prayer:

"Do, dear God, give us water, and I never will be naughty again."

And scarcely had the petition gone up to the stars when the sound of running water was heard, and up from the dry, hot sands bubbled a pure, life giving spring.

The water of this New river, as it was called, swept north for twenty miles, at one place spreading into a deep lake two miles wide, but when migration went by the northern route, the pretty tradition naively ends, no longer needed, the New river's spring dried up.

Perhaps no more desolate spot can be pictured than Death valley, with its terrific heat, its lack of water, the soda dust of its plains strewn with mummified animals and the bleached bones of lost prospectors. But fair and fertile once lay the valley, a flourishing pueblo ruled over by a beautiful queen.

Alas, the beauty was only skin deep, and ambition alone ruled a cold, cruel heart. A palace to surpass the houses of the neighboring Aztecs was her dream, and she cared not how many lives might be sacrificed in speeding the labor.

For miles the tribe carried stone and timber, and when they faltered by the wayside she lashed their naked backs. So sacred was royalty regarded that her people dared not protest, but in her zeal to have the palace erected before accident or possible death she had forced her daughter even to join the throng of workers. [illegible] her own flesh and blood [illegible] turned before sinking down in death from exhaustion and cursed both her mother and the kingdom.

The gods answered quickly. The sun sent down a heat so fierce that the streams dried up, vegetation became scorched, the animals sought new abodes, while queen and people died as though by plague.

But in the midst of the desolation the palace half completed may be seen to this day—if fortune favors the traveler with a mirage.

An amusing ghost story haunts the early history of Santa Barbara island. Such were the awful noises heard by ships in passing that every sailor on board devoutly crossed himself, convinced that it was the headquarters of swimming and flying monsters. Unfortunately for the sailors' yarns, it was latterly discovered that some shipwrecked cats had landed on the island, their numerous progeny living sumptuously on dead fish and the eggs and the young sea fowl.

Long before the first white man entered Kern county that locality was inhabited by a superior race far advanced in arts and devout worshipers of the Great Spirit. In fact, one of their number so excelled in wisdom that the others fell down and worshiped him, and in jealous anger the Great Spirit caused the earth to shake and swallow up the entire population, afterward wiping out every vestige of their idolatry by pouring water into the valley until it became an inland sea.

Later repenting him of the ev . and in impatience over his own vengeance, the Great Spirit threw up the earth smoking with heat into the Sierra Nevada mountains, broke away the hills damming up the lake at its foot and drained off the water into the sea at the Golden Gate. Then he opened the mouth of the earth and released the Jonahs from their long captivity.

Little took they the lesson to heart. No sooner had the place blossomed into beauty again than they fell into idolatry once more, the worshiped chief going so far as to challenge the Great Spirit to single combat. The answer was a thrust of the gage in their very faces. The race was exterminated forever by a horde of savages from the Mojave desert, while a whirlwind swept away all vegetation.

But if we are tracing back to the origin of things we must dig deeper till we reach the legend of Mount Shasta, the very first part of the earth to be created.

The Great Spirit broke a hole in the floor of heaven with a huge rock and went on throwing down more rocks until he could step from the sky upon the top of the pile.

Then caressingly he touched the sides of the heap with his hands, and forests sprang into being. Leaves from the trees he plucked and breathed upon until they fluttered into the air, fleet winged birds. Beasts and fishes he also formed from his staff.

And so in love he became with the mountain of his creation that he hollowed it out into a wigwam, "where he dwelt for centuries, the smoke of his lodge fire being often seen pouring from the cone before the white man came."—May C. Ringwalt in Los Angeles Times.

"The Oaks."

"The Oaks," which gave the name to the popular race, has representation in British drama in the play "The Maid of the Oaks," which was written by General Burgoyne, and after being performed at the author's residence on the Downs was produced by Garrick at Drury Lane in 1775. Burgoyne sold "The Oaks" estate to the sport loving twelfth Earl of Derby, who instituted the Oaks stakes in 1779 and was also the winner. The "Derby" was instituted in the year following. Out of consideration of the fillies taking part in both races the "Derby," which used to be run on the Thursday, was altered in later times to Wednesday to allow a day between the two great events.—Westminster Gazette.

A Helping Hand.

When the foreign missionary had concluded his talk he made the usual appeal for contributions, however small. Coming up to the platform with several others, a small boy mounted to the level of the lecturer and, hastening toward him, said:

"Please, sir, I was very much interested in your lecture, and—and"—

"Go on, my little man," said the missionary encouragingly. "You want to help in the good work?"

"Not exactly, sir," said the boy. "What I want to know is, have you any foreign stamps you don't want?"—Success Magazine.

An Easy Mark.

Theodore—It's all right, darling; I have met your father and we took to one another at once. He even went so far as to borrow £10 of me. Surely he can't refuse me your hand after that. Edith—Dory, I'm afraid you've made a mess of it. Pa told me about the £10 and said I'd better give you up; that you were too easy going.—London Scraps.

Her Opportunity.

"I've come to give notice, ma'am."

"Indeed?"

"And would you'se give me a good reference, ma'am? I'm going to Mrs. Jones, across the way."

"The best in the world, Maggie. I hate that woman."—Life.

EDISON'S THOUSAND-DOLLAR HOUSE

The Great Inventor Says the House of the Future Will Be of Concrete and May Be Built in a Day.

Had certain recent statements ascribed to Thomas A. Edison come from any other quarter they would have been regarded as the babbling of an irresponsible dreamer. From such a source, however, they carry with them an air of authority that demands consideration.

For Edison is a man who has been making such statements now these many years. When he began to say things about electric possibilities that were not even hinted at in the text books the world was not startled out of its habitual calm. When he began to convert these possibilities into realities the same world accepted them wonderingly and called him "wizard."

So it has come to pass that when he gives utterance to some new thought conceived in the secret recesses of his wonderful thinking apparatus we do not scoff at him or refuse to listen. No matter how unsparingly he draws on our credulity—it cannot be denied that we have been subjected to some trying tests—we do not protest. Although our breath may be coming in fitful gasps, we "wait and see."

It certainly makes a fearful drain on our capacity for believing to be confronted with Mr. Edison's latest marvel—the indestructible three-story cement dwelling built in twelve hours at a cost of $1,000.

When we have recovered a little from the shock of such a proposition, made apparently in good faith, we turn expectantly to the facts as they stand now.

On the second floor of Thomas A. Edison's laboratory at West Orange, N. J., there may be seen the model of a very attractive Queen Anne cottage. Apropos of this model, Mr. Edison has recently delivered himself as follows:

"Some time next spring I intend to build a house after that model. By means of a system of molds which I have patented it will be possible for any one who understands the business to erect a house of solid cement twenty-five feet in width and forty-five feet in depth, three stories in height and roomy enough to house comfortably three families. The building will cost not to exceed $1,000.

"The all important feature of the patent lies in the molds. They are of iron and the inside facings are nickel plated and are fashioned exactly like the outside of the model. The material for the house is composed almost entirely of a composition of my own devising, consisting of one part cement, three parts sand and five parts of quarter-inch crushed stone.

"At 6 in the morning we take the movable steel castings to a vacant lot. These are clamped together with bolts, and you have before you a house of iron, with hollow walls. Meantime we are mixing our concrete. The machinery to raise this soft concrete to the top of the iron framework—a big mold, you understand—is ready on the spot.

"By 6 o'clock at night there is your house inside your ironwork. Everything, except the doors and windows, is in place. In six days the iron frame is unbolted and removed. In another eight days the concrete is completely hardened and the house ready to live in—fifteen days from start to finish.

"The only wood used is the strips around the edges of the floors on which to tack down a carpet and those around the wall for the picture molding. All this is put in place in the ironwork before the concrete has been poured in. The tiling around the fireplaces and in the chimneys, the gas and water pipes, are also cast in the same way in the concrete walls. The furnaces, the heating pipes, the bathtubs and closets are all cast with the walls."

All this without so much as the twinkle of an eye to suggest that you are being victimized. Do not flinch; there are further wonders to be told:

"I have built the model of this house on the basis of a laborer owner getting $1.50 per day. The molding forms are of cast iron, and for $1,000 the entire house can be built, this to include heating pipes, staircases of cement, floors and mantels of cement and a cement roof that won't leak. plumbing and even bathtubs will be of cement.

"The durability of the house is unquestionable. It will last forever. Even children may go around with axes and chop as long as they like without doing any material harm.

"Therefore there will be no necessity for repairs. Even the window sashes will be of cement. Aside from the narrow strip of wood intended for the holding of carpet tacks the only wooden thing about the house is the front stoop. I have given it a wooden stoop to make it more beautiful. I have been in consultation with New York architects on the subject of the wooden stoop, and I think it possible to omit that material in the stoop construction. It will cost a contractor $30,000 to get the molds with which to build the house, but then he will be able to build over 30,000 houses with the one set of molds.

The molds can be taken down in a few hours after the house has been finished, and they may be carted to any part of the world in less space than is required for shipping an ordinary derrick. That's what will appeal strongly to commercial economy. In selling contractors the iron castings I shall restrict them in the use of cement that will have no air bulbs. The cement will be poured into the molds until it flows over the top. Then the house is practically finished. I won't sell the molds to any one who does not satisfy me of the quality of his concrete formula. In the great San Francisco disaster the houses which withstood the earthquake were built of cement."

Mr. Edison now makes the announcement that his storage battery proposition has been brought to a condition in which it is of economic value. For years he has been working on this great feature. The Edison works are turning out the new storage batteries at the rate of 300 a week.

This effort to obtain a storage battery that will do more than the work of a horse at less expense has been a long and sometimes discouraging one. After three years of almost constant labor and experiment Edison made a battery which would propel a truck 12,000 miles before a new plate became necessary. This result was gratifying, but it was not enough to drive the horse from the field. The inventor found that in order to run the truck animal out of business it would be necessary to construct a battery that would accomplish 50,000 miles without a new plate.

He has succeeded, he says, in doing this. He has perfected a 50,000-mile battery, and in a few weeks it will be on the market and cheap enough for common use. If half that is claimed for it is realized it will be one of the greatest labor saving devices ever invented. It will be able to carry twice the load of the ordinary truck, will [illegible]

Although Mr. Edison has patented his wonderful concrete house he purposes to let any one who wishes to build it have the right without charge, stipulating only that every person who builds shall use the proper kind of concrete, enforce it with twisted iron rods and turn out an artistic product. He declares that the laboring man is going to get a "square deal" on this improvement. He disclaims all idea of personal gain from the invention and says that he will make a gift of it to the working people of America.

All of which is in line with the declaration made on his last birthday to the effect that all of his efforts hereafter would be exerted solely for the benefit of his fellow men.

—W. E. Emery.

SOME FREAK SOCIETIES.

The Pointed Beards in Paris—To Defend Cause of Fat Man.

"Pointed beards only need apply."

This is the law of the latest Parisian society of freaks—the "Sphenopogenes," as they call themselves.

Its members, who are compelled by the rules of the society to wear pointed beards and mustaches, have banded themselves together for the avowed purpose of promoting perennial joviality.

It is a secret society. Its deliberations are secret; its dinners are secret; its happy evenings are secret, and the names of its members can be seen only in the society's secret books.

The Sphenopogones comprise leading politicians, literary men and artists living in various parts of France. Each member must be elected unanimously, and must, under pain of severe penalties, promise to wear a beard which tapers symmetrically to a point and a mustache also pointed at each end.

Once a month the members dine together. The date and place of meeting are arranged by the "gonfalonier," as the treasurer is called, and the proceedings are kept strictly private, no one being admitted except duly enrolled members.

If any member has between one dinner and another distinguished himself by writing a successful play or a book, or by painting a picture of exceptional merit, or by doing anything to earn public praise, he is greeted with uproarious applause.

After dinner the possessors of the pointed beards give themselves up to conviviality in accordance with the terms of their secret charter.

England, too, can boast of her freak societies. There is, for instance, the Appendicitis society, a fashionable and select circle, the members of which must give proof that they have undergone an operation for appendicitis.

The Society for Putting Woman in Her Proper Place was formed in London a few months ago with the object of combating the movement for womans' suffrage.

There is also a society of bald heads and two or three societies of bachelors, and a few run in the interests of old maids.

In Germany not long ago was formed a Society for the Encouragement of Adipose Tissue, an organization which stoutly defended the cause of fat men.

Every man is said to have his price—but the trouble is nobody but himself knows the private mark.

A Sound Sleeper.

"Della," began Mrs. Newlywed, timidly. "I don't suppose—er—that you would—er—object to my getting an alarm clock?"

"Not at all, ma'am," replied the sleepy cook; "them things never disturb me at all."

A Well Known Instance.

"We are getting up a society for the suppression of useless noise."

"Does noise really hurt a town?"

"Well, it killed Jericho."

Aftermath.

Visitor—How are conditions here? Has confidence returned?

Resident—Conditions are slowly settling down to their former basis, but confidence has not returned. Most of the people still believe it was the children of their next door neighbors that carried away their gates last Thursday night.

What a grand thing the phonograph would have been in the days of the Inquisition!

Orthodox Explanation.

A mother was giving her little girl a bath when she said: "I wonder where this dust on the water came from?"

Small Girl—Perhaps I leak somewhere, mamma. You know, I'm made of dust.

Reams of Testimony.

The leaves in Fall are all aflame,
Likewise aglow.
So many poets make this claim
It must be so.

FROST-PROOF WATERING SYSTEM OF CONCRETE

One Which Will Practically Run Itself in the Winter Time

—By Joseph E. Wing.

Let the central storage tank be a good-sized one, round or square, and in building it a section of cast-iron pipe about ten inches in diameter can be secured and passed through it and at one end connected with a vertical flue or pipe it will be wise. A little fire can be built in this pipe and the chill taken off the water, besides the warmer the tank water is kept the less danger of the watering places freezing.

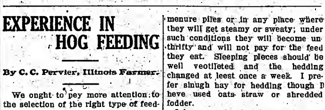
Beside the storage tank, or at some convenient spot, must be a small tank to have float valve and be connected with all the watering places. These of course must all be on the same level. This small tank may be protected by a heap of straw or manure so that frost will not affect it at all. Whenever an animal takes a mouthful of water from a drinking place the water is lowered in this secondary tank and at once a fresh supply comes in from the main tank.

Now for the main problem, the individual drinking places. Perhaps it is impossible to construct them so that they will not sometimes freeze a little at night when not in use. They may be protected with hinged wooden covers that will help greatly.

Lay the pipes supplying them very deep; that will greatly help. Something may be done to prevent frost reaching far down the pipes by providing a return to make the water circulate; the idea is that one or the other of the vertical pipes will have in it a colder column of water, and there will immediately set up a circulation, which will continue steadily as long as there is cooling going on, or heating either. Thus the water will never freeze lower down than the cross pipe in the loop. It would be well, if the digging is not too hard, to put these loops down at least eight feet in the earth.

Then if there is at the bottom a bit of large cast pipe, say four inches, into which the vertical pipes are screwed, all the better, since the circulation will be better. This arrangement will not freeze lower than the cross in the pipe till the whole earth freezes up. If litter is packed around the drinking bowl, and it is covered at night, it will be well-nigh frost-proof.

Care must be observed in these drinking fountains that sediment does not enter the pipes; the bowl may be deep, with chance for sediment to collect below the orifices of the pipes. The illustration shows the coil or return pipes both reaching to the bowl, one higher than the other, and with also a connecting cross below. This lower cross should be of smaller pipe than the vertical, perhaps one and one-fourth inches for the main pipes and one inch for the cross. Then there will always be water circulating, even though the fountain should freeze, which it will not be apt to do. And keep the bowl cleaned out. A brass screen at the end of each pipe would be good. If the bowl is a foot deeper than the pipes all the safer.—Breeders' Gazette.



Design of the System.

EXPERIENCE IN HOG FEEDING

By C. C. Pervier, Illinois Farmer.

We ought to pay more attention to the selection of the right type of feeders, regardless of breed. It took me five years to bring up the average gain per hog to 30 pounds per month from birth to time of sale. If we have 40 young brood sows we would select for breeding stock the 30 which have made the greatest growth and development.

It is very important to have hogs that will grow rapidly and mature easily. Select those that are long in the body, broad across the back, with good hams and shoulders and that stand squarely upon their feet (not those whose hind feet come close together or extend forward under the body.) They should be straight on the top, side lines and under lines. Do not keep breeding stock that will not produce pigs that can be made to weigh 300 pounds at 12 months of age.

There should be a variety of other foods besides corn. Soy bean hay makes a good feed and contains sufficient protein for brood sows. Clover hay is also much relished, and alfalfa is even better; every hog feeder should have some alfalfa hay for winter use.

I have obtained the best results by feeding grain but twice a day, and only what the hogs will eat up clean at each meal. Every basket or shovel of corn is counted and if there is any left uneaten in an hour or two, the amount is cut down at the next meal. In feeding too heavy there is a very large waste of grain.

With soy beans, clover and rape it is easily possible to have a succession of green feed until December. I have used rye and vetch in a successful experiment as a winter food. These may furnish green food almost the year around in central and southeastern Illinois.

Neither a hog nor a steer can stand out in zero weather and shiver while eating without loss of flesh and loss of profit. The feeding floor should, if possible, be on the south side of the building. If necessary, put up a protection six feet high on the west and north to make the hogs comfortable while eating.

Keep the floor perfectly clean or otherwise you might just as well feed upon the ground. This will be easily accomplished if the feeding floor is 75 or 100 feet from the sleeping quarters. Never feed in the shade.

Hogs drink often but little at a time and it is absolutely essential that they have all the water they want and whenever they want it, day and night. I have arranged cement barrels in the ground with cement troughs on either side so the dirt cannot get into the barrels, and a tank heater in one barrel keeps the water constantly open in the coldest weather.

Under no circumstances should pigs be allowed to sleep in straw stacks or manure piles or in any place where they will get steamy or sweaty; under such conditions they will become unthrifty and will not pay for the feed they eat. Sleeping places should be well ventilated and the bedding changed at least once a week. I prefer slough hay for bedding though I have used oats straw or shredded fodder.

I keep wood ashes before the pigs all the time and consider them essential to the development of and strength of bone. We have often made mistakes in thinking we can breed for bone. To make a self feeder for wood ashes, take a drygoods box and put a sloping bottom on the inside of it and and then build a trough next to the ground, leaving enough space for the ashes to work down into it. Put a hinged cover on the box and fill with ashes and salt (four quarts of salt to a bushel of ashes); let the pigs have free access to it all the time. I believe coal ashes are constipating.

I think it necessary to retain flesh on the brood sow by heavy feeding during the suckling period, but the feed must be gradually increased for two or three weeks after farrowing to reach this full feeding.

The feeding of very nutritious slops too soon after the pigs are farrowed creates a flow of milk too fast for the young pigs, causing them to scour. One reason why I defer the farrowing season until May is that the brood sows may run in the grass two or three weeks before farrowing time; nothing will put them in better condition.

Albumen in Milk—Milk albuminoids (nitrogenous matter). Casein, which forms some 85 per cent of the total albuminoids, exists in milk combined with lime in a semi-dissolved condition, and possesses a certain degree of opacity (lack of transparency). It forms with the fat chief ingredients of milk curd, and of full cream cheese. Albumen differs from casein in being completely dissolved in milk, and in separating from the serum when milk is heated to from 158 deg. to 167 deg. Lactoglobulin, mucoid protein and fibrin are other nitrogenous substances which exist in milk in small quantities. Milk albuminoids represent that part of the milk which forms flesh in the growing animal or human being.

Lambs and Cow's Milk.—Lambs can be raised by hand on cow's milk. Do not dilute it, however, for it is already lower in solids than ewe's milk. Feed every two or three hours at first until the lamb is a few days old. The secret of raising lambs by hand is in feeding often and only a small quantity at a time. Of course see that the milk is heated to the proper temperature—about 92 degrees Fahrenheit.

Adventitious.—Adventitious buds are produced on some trees irregularly. They are often found on the surface of the trunk, where it has been bruised or even on the bruised roots.

Not Luck That Wins.—There may be some luck in dairying, but it is not all luck. Most of it is the legitimate reward of intelligent methods.

No Need to Suffer Every Day from Backache.

Mrs. Joannah Straw, 5[illegible] North Broadway, Canton, S. D., says: "For three years I suffered everything with rheumatism in my limbs and a dull, ceaseless aching in my back. I was weak, languid, broken with headaches and dizzy spells, and the kidney secretions were thick with solids. I was really in a critical condition when I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, and they certainly did wonders for me. Though I am 81 years old, I am as well as the average woman of 50. I work well, eat well and sleep well."

Fine Recipe for the Quick Cure of Coughs and Colds.

Mix half ounce of Concentrated oil of pine with two ounces of glycerine and half a pint of good whisky; shake well each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

This is the formula prescribed by the renowned throat and lung specialist who established the camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine and whose remarkable cures attracted widespread attention among the medical fraternity. He declares that it will heal the lungs and cure any cough that is curable and will break up an acute cold in 24 hours. The ingredients can be secured from any prescription druggist at a small cost and is easily mixed at home.

Be sure not to buy the ordinary bulk oil of pine nor patent medicine imitations, as they will produce nausea. The real "Concentrated" oil of pine is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Dayton, Ohio, and is guaranteed under the National Pure Food and Drug Act. It comes put up for medicinal use in half-ounce vials enclosed in round air-tight cases which protect it from heat and light.

Beaver on Elk River.

"The impression that the beaver is almost extinct in this country is a mistake," said George H. Hower of Vancouver, B. C. "On the Elk river, a tributary of the Fraser, in my own province, there are this season thousands of these little animals, whose fur is so valuable, building their winter quarters. The Elk river has always been a favorite spot for the beaver, but this year the influx has been so marked that even the most experienced trapper cannot tell whence they came.

There are now a large number of trappers on the river engaged in catching them as fast as possible. most of the skins are shipped to San Francisco, while some go to Montreal and Toronto. From these cities they will go to other parts of this country and Europe."

BOTH GAINED

Man and Wife Fatten on Grape-Nuts.

The notion that meat is necessary for real strength and the foundation of solid flesh is no longer as prevalent as formerly.

Excessive meat eaters are usually sluggish a part of the time because they are not able to fully digest their food, and the undigested portion is changed into what is practically a kind of poison that acts upon the blood and nerves, thus getting all through the system.

"I was a heavy meat eater," writes an Ills. man, "and up to two years ago was in very poor health. I suffered with indigestion so that I only weighed 95 pounds.

"Then I heard about Grape-Nuts and decided to try it. My wife laughed at me at first but when I gained to 125 pounds and felt so fine, she thought she would eat Grape-Nuts too.

"Now she is fat and well and has gained 40 pounds. We never have indigestion any more and seldom feel the desire for meat. A neighbor of ours, 68 years old, was troubled with indigestion for years; was a heavy meat eater, and now since he has been eating Grape-Nuts regularly, he says he is well and never has indigestion. I could name a lot of persons who have really been cured of indigestion by changing from a heavy meat diet to Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE TREE OF ILLUSIONS

A WIDOW WORDALOGUE

BY ELLEN ROWLAND

"There!" said the widow, balancing herself precariously on the top step of the ladder with the tips of her fingers on the bachelor's shoulder, while she surveyed a pink and gold angel at the very apex of the charity Christmas tree. "It looks stunning, doesn't it?"

The bachelor folded his arms and gazed up at the widow critically.

"Stunning!" he agreed. "But why are the nicest things all at the top—where we can't reach them?"

The widow withdrew her fingers from his shoulder and leaned hurriedly over to transfix a tinsel heart on a side branch.

"They aren't," she said, squinting one eye to ascertain that the heart hung straight. "They only seem the nicest—because we can't reach them. From here," she went on, returning to her scrutiny of the pink and gold angel, "he looks like a real angel, but if we should take him down he'd turn to paper and wax and paint again."

"I wonder," said the bachelor, studying the widow thoughtfully, from the sprig of holly berries in her ruffled hair to the bottom of her ruffled lace frock, "if I should take you down—what you'd turn to."

"Is that butterfly on straight?" asked the widow anxiously, bending to readjust a gilt clothespin with green tarletan wings.

"From here," went on the bachelor, ignoring the deflection, "you look like a reel——"

"It's the illusion," broke in the widow, "which makes anything seem nice. And it's distance that lends enchantment to the illusion."

"I'd rather put up with less enchantment," complained the bachelor, "and less distance, if——"

"Of course you would." The widow jabbed a pin into a paper kitten and fastened it firmly to the tree by one eye. "That's the trouble with a man. He always wants to tear down his illusions, and see what they are made of. From the time when a boy insists on seeing the wheels go round in his father's watch, or on taking his patent mill to pieces to find out how it works, to the time when he insists on knowing what his wife pays for her hats and how she gets the blush on her cheeks and the curve in her waist line, he is forever trying to get behind the scenes of life instead of being satisfied to sit out in the orchestra chair and take things—for what they seem to be. If a woman can possibly idealize a husband or a lover, she will shut her eyes and cling to that ideal, like grim death, even if she may know she is being fooled; but a man is not happy unless he has the facts; and facts about anything aren't—very pleasant."

"Oh, I don't know," the bachelor squinted up at the widow; "there are facts about your pompadour and the tilt of your nose——"

"It was the same way in the Garden of Eden," went on the widow, twisting a string of popcorn about a refractory branch without noticing the bachelor.

"Were you there, too?" The bachelor looked impressed.

"I've always believed," pursued the widow, undauntedly, "that the tree of knowledge was just a Christmas tree, and that all Adam and Eve did was to take down their illusions and find out——"

"That they were paper and paint and wax?"

The widow nodded.

"Yes," she agreed; "and that's what always happens at the end of the honeymoon. The moment the holiday of love is over married people begin tearing down the trimmings off the tree of illusions one by one; or sometimes one of them just kicks the whole thing over and brings it crashing to the ground and there is nothing left but burnt-out candles of hope and broken beads of sentiment and tattered remnants of faith—the paste and paper happiness."

"Stop—That's—That's a Ridiculous Illusion."

"And an awful mess," concluded the bachelor. "Oh, well," he went on tying a tarlatan bagful of bonbons to a high branch, "it's just as wise to clear away all the rubbish at the beginning of the game and get down to realities, isn't it?"

"The turkey dinner and the cranberry sauce, and the boiled onions and —the sawdust?" inquired the widow cynically.

"Yes," agreed the bachelor cheerfully, "they're the substantialities. I can't see," he added, trying in vain to stick a cold candle on a refractory twig, "what people want to string a charity Christmas tree with illusions for, anyway. Orphans, at least, need the realities like——"

"Shoes and stockings and beefsteak and potatoes?" finished the widow scornfully, turning so quickly on the ladder that she almost tilted over. "Of course, you can't see. A man never does see the use of anything he can't eat or wear or—or—understand. Even orphans get enough of the sordid realities of this life. It's the illusions we're all striving for, like ideals and happiness, and love and Santa Claus and things."

"Love and Santa Claus?" repeated the bachelor, staring at the widow blankly.

"Well, aren't they alike?" asked the widow, turning to the tree again and twisting a string of glass beads more effectively.

"Is That Butterfly on Straight?"

"If you mean they're both myths," agreed the bachelor.

"Yes," returned the widow promptly, "and you can never tell what either one of them is going to leave by your fireside."

"But you can be almost certain it isn't what you expected," declared the bachelor cheerfully. "The man who is longing for a real wife generally gets a wax doll or a mechanical toy," he added sadly.

"And the woman who wants a real husband," retorted the widow, "nearly always gets a manikin that never speaks except to say 'Umph' when you prod it, or a tin soldier with a stiff back and a hollow head, or a lot of taffy or paste sentiment——"

"Or nothing at all," interposed the bachelor.

"And then Santa Claus and Love disappear up the chimney or through the window," concluded the widow, "and you've got nothing left but—but——"

"Sawdust and memories," sighed the bachelor.

"And neither one of them is a bit fair," pursued the widow, sitting down on the top step of the ladder and leaning her chin in her hands, "because it's never the most deserving person, the good little boy or good little girl, who fares best, but the one who has the most luck."

"And the most money," added the bachelor, crossing his arms on the ladder and looking up at the widow, "and who can't half appreciate what he's getting."

"Yes," mused the widow, staring thoughtfully up at the pink and gold angel, "I've always believed that Love carried a pack like Kris Kringle, instead of a quiver of arrows—a pack full of husbands and wives that he just deals out at random. That's why tall men get short women and girls with their souls in the clouds marry men with their souls in the kitchen, and poets marry cooks and saints marry sinners and fools marry intellects and widows marry—at all. What are you staring at, Mr. Travers?"

"I—I've got an illusion," stammered the bachelor, coming back to earth again, "that I'd like to take down and——"

The widow got up quickly and began tying things on the tree at random.

"Is it a woman?" she asked, studying a tinsel ball with deep interest.

"I don't know," said the bachelor, "but it's at the very top and it's got on a lace dress and a bunch of holly and——"

"Because if it is," interrupted the widow hurriedly, "and it's still illusive——"

"Oh, very illusive!" broke in the bachelor.

"Then don't try to know all about her," pleaded the widow, "nor get near enough to find out what she's made of, nor to discover the seamy side of her, nor the patches and sawdust and paint."

"There are some women," sighed the bachelor, as he stooped to fasten a red worsted ball to the very lowest branch of the tree, "that you never can get near enough to to find out anything about. They are so intangible. They beckon you with one hand and hold you at a distance with the other and they seem to carry round with them the magic invisible veil. Just as you are about to snatch them in your arms they disappear and elude you. Loving them is like being 'IT' in a game of hide and seek all your life; as for knowing what they're made of——"

"Well," quoth the widow, warmly, "what DO you want to know what they are made of for? The moment you find out they'll be as uninteresting as a Chinese puzzle that has been solved or a game that has been finished. It's the illusive, elusive women who make the game of life fascinating and keep up your interest."

"Oh, I don't know." The bachelor stood off to admire the worsted ball. "I've known chaps who were married to Chinese puzzles for years and they weren't any happier than if they had been tied up to sawdust dolls. You get tired of even working at a Chinese puzzle after you have discovered that you are never going to solve it, and then you go off in search of some nice, easy little thing that is as simple and comfortable as a game of checkers or a sofa pillow. Illusions are all very delightful at a distance, but they are, like ghosts, uncomfortable to have around the house. A man likes something he can understand, and——"

"Feel superior to," interjected the widow.

"Something," proceeded the bachelor, "that doesn't keep him strung up to the guessing point all the time and that he can always be sure of finding in the same place."

"Like an old pipe," suggested the widow.

"Yes, or his razor or his Bible," agreed the bachelor. "The best wives aren't ornaments or mental exercises; they're comforts."

"That you put on in the evening," remarked the widow scornfully, "like your smoking jacket or your carpet slippers, and fling aside after breakfast and forget all about—until you need them again."

"They don't grow at the top of the tree," proceeded the bachelor, "where you have to strain to reach them, but right down on the earth beside you, where you can tuck them under your arm."

"Or in your buttonhole or on the kitchen shelf," added the widow, scathingly.

"Elusive women," pursued the bachelor calmly, "generally manage to elude matrimony. They're good to dream about——"

"And to call on once in a while," interpolated the widow, "when you get tired of your game of checkers or your sofa pillow or your old pipe."

"Yes," cried the bachelor enthusiastically, "they're like the holidays, awfully jolly and distracting—once in a while. I know one of them for instance——"

"If you've quite finished admiring that worsted ball, Mr. Travers," interrupted the widow coldly, "I wish you'd come and help me——"

"She's a delightful person," continued the bachelor dreamily, "when you feel keyed up to the height of her ideals."

"What!"

"And equal to the strain of her conversation."

"Billy Travers!" The widow was balancing dangerously with one foot on the top step of the ladder and one hand gripping a swaying branch.

"But as for marrying her——"

Crash!

The bachelor sprang forward and caught widow, ladder and all with one sweep of his arm.

"How dare you," cried the widow, extricating herself a moment later, "after saying such horrid things about me?"

"About YOU?" The bachelor looked at her in amazement. "I wasn't talking about you. I was talking about Miss Gunning, the plain one with the high forehead and the high ideals. There's nothing about you elusive, nor straining, nor——"

"Tiresome?" asked the widow suspiciously.

"No, nor uncomfortable, nor un-get-at-able, nor anything that a man couldn't tuck right under his arm—like this——"

"Stop!" cried the widow. "That's—that's a ridiculous illusion."

"But this," declared the bachelor, stooping over and touching her lips, "is a perfect reality."

MILLIONS RENOUNCE CHRISTMAS

There are millions upon millions of people in the world who will not celebrate Christmas, and there are other millions to whom Christmas is objectionable.

Take the followers of Mohammed, for instance. They are divided into forty or fifty different sects, among which are the Nousay-rie-yeh. There are about 50,000 of them, and they believe in transmigration of the soul. They believe that men's souls pass after death into the bodies of animals. For them the story of the birth and life of Christ has no charms.

Then there are the Druses, who profess to have knowledge that God has visited the world 234 times, but they do not believe in Christ. For them Christmas has no significance.

It is equally disregarded by Buddhists, Japanese, Chinese, Brahmins and Mohammedans. "There is no God but Allah," say the Mohammedans, "and Mohammed is his prophet." Mohammed's followers also have curious notions in regard to the fate of unbelievers' children. Some believe that these children act as the servants of the faithful in paradise, and Mohammed is recorded as saying on one occasion to his wife:

"If thou desirest I can make thee hear their cries in Hades."

Other Mohammedan authorities, however, dissent from this view and one of them boldly says: "I know that Allah will not torment those who have not committed any sin."

Truth and Quality

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing. Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. To get its beneficial effects always purchase the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

A feeling heart enriches the world much more than the full hand without it.

Worst Case Doctors Ever Saw—Suffered Untold Misery—Perfect Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"My son, who is now twenty-two years of age, when four months old began to have eczema on his face, spreading quite rapidly until he was nearly covered. The eczema was something terrible, and the doctors said it was the worst case they ever saw. At times his whole body and face were covered, all but his feet. I used many kinds of patent medicines, to no avail. A friend teased me to try Cuticura. At last I decided to try Cuticura when my boy was three years and four months old, having had eczema all that time and suffering untold misery. I began to use all three of the Cuticura Remedies. Among the items taken from our news box at the corner of J. P. Harren's store was a programm of the recital given last Saturday evening at St. Joseph's church by Sister Cecilian's pupils. The musicale was a pronounced success and the program was a fine one but time prevents our putting it into type for publication.

The Nimesgern brothers, J. N. and Pete, received the sad news last Saturday announcing the death of Andrew Lilfrig, a brother-in-law. Pete departed that evening to be in attendance at the funeral which was held on Tuesday, while "J. N." was detained at home to look after business during the holiday rush of trade.

F. E. Hunt received a telegram from Little Compton, Rhode Island, last week announcing the death on Thursday of Mrs. Deborah Otis, a sister to his mother. The dispatch announced that the funeral would be held on Sunday, while Mr. Hunt informed us the aged lady was bordering on seventy-five years and was quite wealthy.

Next Band Concert.

The concert to be given by the band during the holidays promises to be the crowning event in the history of this organization. An elaborate program is being prepared and will be ready for distribution Christmas Shoppers' Day, and none can afford to miss this rare treat. The concert is to be held at the opera house Friday evening, the 27th, and the program and a more extended announcement will be published next week.

Bad Eggs are Barred.

Cottonwood Current: Many merchants throughout the state have been caught in the meshes of the pure food law and fined for selling rotten eggs. In a measure the merchant is an innocent party and in many cases the law seems to work injustice. However, there is chance for redress and some of the merchants are availing themselves of the oportunity. At Litchfield the other day a merchant was fined $50 for selling bad eggs. Knowing of whom he had purchased the eggs, he in turn brought suit against the farmer for $100 damages and recovered that amount. Whenever a person—merchant or farmer—sells spoiled eggs, he takes great chances of paying dear for his venture.

Durum Wheat a Benefit.

The annual report of Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture opitomizes the benefits thus far brought to the country from the introduction of durum-wheat. After speaking of the introduction of this wheat by the department of 1899 and 1902, at a cost to the government of $10,000, and referring to the rapidly increasing annual yields since that time, the report says:

"With an average production of about fifteen bushels an acre, durum wheat this year covered an area of over 8,000,000 acres, many of them valueless for agricultural purposes before the advent of this new crop. Its value to the farmer is over twice the entire cost of the department of of agriculture during the current fiscal year, including the weather bureau, the costly meat inspection and the forest service.

PLUMMER.

From the Pioneer.

Helmer Halverson and bride left last Wednesday for Lengby to make their future home.

Peter Borstad returned on Saturday last from Ulen where he has been working during the summer and fall.

Andrew Oldoren returned on Tuesday from Clay county where he has been visiting with old friends for the past couple of weeks.

Cyril Beaudin, of Terrebone, has disposed of his interests here and left on Wednesday with his family for St. Martin, Quebec, where they intend to make their future home.

Mrs. John G. Anderson, who has been at Thief River Falls receiving a special course of treatment for her eyes, returned home last Saturday morning very much improved.

K. K. Sannes was here from Grit the first of the week to take home a threshing rig that he purchased recently. He intends to use the engine for running a feed mill this winter.

Erick Craft was in Thursday from his home west of town and was wearing a regular Sunday smile. His happiness was caused by the arrival of a new baby girl at his home on Wednesday night, All concerned are doing nicely.

THIEF RIVER FALLS

From the News and Press.

Mrs. Hughes was up from St. Hilaire Wednesday for a short visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Yeske of the town of Rocksbury are the parents of a daughter born last Friday.

Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar returned from Red Lake Falls on Monday, having spent a few days there visiting friends.

Joseph Duchcamp left Monday for the Red Lake Indian Agency with three teams of horses and he expects to sell them to the Indians up there.

C. J. Winton, who has been in the city for a few days on business connected with his interests in the lumber company, returned to Wausau, Wis., Tuesday.

Judge of Probate Tarrant came up from Red Lake Falls Monday and spent a day here visiting with friends. He was accompanied by Mrs. Tarrant on his return.

The Elks have been dalayed in various minor ways about the organization of a lodge at this place, but it is now believed that the installation will occur shortly after the holidays.

Michael Kjos, a farm hand employed by P. Engelstad of Rocksbury, has caught three female wolves during the past four weeks in traps he had set. As the bounty on these wolves is $7.50 each, he is making a nice amount of money on the side.

Ellef Gravli, one of the best farmers west of the city, was in town Saturday. He says that during his 25 years residence in Red Lake county he has never seen a fall and early winter that could compare with the past few months for fine weather.

Former residents of this city who recently went west to work in the saw mill and lumber camps of the Pacific coast country are writing to old acquaintances here that they expect to return soon: Owing to the raise in the freight rate on lumber from the west, most of the mills upon the Pacific coast are closed down and there is not much prospects that they will start operations again for a good many months. A job is hard to get out west just at the present time.

Badly Mixed Up.

Abraham Brown, of Winterton, N. Y., had a very remarkable experience; he says: "Doctors got badly mixed up over me; one said heart disease; two called it kidney trouble; the fourth, blood poison, and the fifth stomach and liver trouble; but none of them helped me, so my wife advised trying Electric Bitters, which are restoring me to perfect health. One bottle did me more good than all the five doctors prescribed." Guaranteed for blood poison, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney complaints, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50c.

ST. HILAIRE

From the Spectator.

M. L. Hanson was a business visitor at Crookston last Wednesday evening.

Afton Jackson who has been operating for the Great Northern at Ebro has been transferred to Shevlin.

Daniel Patterson and Dr. J. C. Cummings were up to Thief River Falls on Monday evening to attend a meeting of the Masonic lodge.

[illegible] and Mrs. Jens Nelson and Miss Clara Hoff drove up to Thief River Falls last Wednesday evening to attend a social entertainment.

Gust Nelson, Sever Hoff, Andrew Erickson left on Tuesday evening for Yale, Montana where they have obtained work on railroad construction work.

The creamery is paying the farmers thirty two cents a pound for butter fat for November. It sure must feel good to be a farmer when such prices prevail.

A well known farmer who lives but a short distance from this village had occasion to pay a small bill in a neighboring town recently with a check on the local bank. Realizing the scarcity of currency he took the pains to send the information by letter that the check would draw cash at St. Hilaire. It was not altogether a joke either.

A Dangerous Deadlock,

BRAY.

Halvor Hansson and Alfred Olson transacted business at the county hub Wednesday.

John Scholin drove to St. Hilaire Saturday.

O. P. Johnson was at Wylie Thursday.

A large crowd of young people gathered Saturday evening and proceeded to the home of John Scholin, who was pleasantly surprised. Mr. Scholin was presented with a razor, and the crowd stayed till the wee hours of morning enjoying themselves as only young people can enjoy themselves.

Gust Swanson drove to Wylie Wednesda.

Paul Olson and Charlie Nelson of St. Hilaire were here Saturday and Sunday.

Enough snow fell last Sunday for light sleighing but the way the weather has been lately, Old Sol might make it disappear any moment.

Here's Good Advise.

O. S. Woolever, one of the best known merchants of LeRaysville, N. Y., says: "If you are ever troubled with piles apply Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It cured me of them for good twenty years ago." Guaranteed for sores, wounds, burns or abrasions. 25c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

BIG CROWD ATTEND

The Dairy Meet Was a Big Success and Those in Attendance Highly Pleased.

The meeting last Saturday of the dairymen of this vicinity drew forth a much larger crowd than has ever before assembled in this section of the state upon such an occasion, and every person present was enthusiastic upon the subject of dairying, and reaped much benefit from the experience of others through the discussion of the various topics pertaining to dairying and stock raising. Some two hundred people were present to imbibe to the fullest extent the many rare treats offered, and the program proved most interesting. Meyor J. A. Duffy delivered the address of welcome and turned over to the dairymen the keys to our portals in a most touching manner, while the response by Attorney F. A. Grady was in keeping with the occasion and gave good cheer to the assemblage. Father Fayolle was booked for "feeding cows for profit," and in order to lead up to his point went back into history and gave a brief synopsis of the advance of prosperity, and wound up by saying that to the cow we owe our all, and great care must be exercised in feeding this noble creature for profit. Prof. Robertson, of Crookston, gave some splendid hints on the "silo," its construction and maintainance, while the subject of "clover raising" was ably handled by August Anderson, of this place. Geo. L. Austin, of St. Hilaire, treated upon the "test association," with J. O. Joslin, of St. Paul, taking up the subject of "varying of test." O. A. Storvick, the newly appointed dairy inspector for this district, gave a most interesting talk on "proper feed for the dairy cow." E. J. Cort, of Minneapolis, was unable to attend and his time was ably occupied by the other speakers. The orchestra rendered a number of appropriate selections during the day and won much favor with the audience. The speakers all handled their subjects very creditably and the meeting proved one of great profit to the dairymen and stock raisers. Much credit is due Buttermaker P. L. Malvin, of this place, through whose untiring efforts the success of the meeting was made possible, and it is hoped more such meetings may be held througbout the Red River Valley that our country may become better known to the outside world, thus inducing others to locate among us and share in the profit distribution of the creameries and cheese factories of our land.

A STATE REVENUE

The Source of State Revenue Comes in Real and Personal Property.

Neither the railroads nor the iron properties of St. Louis county constitute the principal revenues according to figures contained in the first annual report of the state tax commission, filed yesterday afternoon with the governor.

In its report the total revenue received by the state during the past year is given at $11, 250, 342, of which $6.692,054 was derived from taxation.

The burden of taxation is distributed as follows, according to the report:

Real and personal property, 81.45 percent.

Railroads, 11,93 percent.

Iron properties, 4.19 percent.

Special interests, 2.43 percent.

The total taxes assessed in Minnesota during the year, state and local, amounted to $27, 408,686.

During the year the board received and gave attention to over eleven hundred application for abatement.

In reviewing its work, the board refers at some length to its valuation of the iron properties of the state and says this work will be continued. Reference is also made to the wide-open tax amendment law which, in the opinion of the board will permit of much hidden property being made accessible to the assessore.

TAXABLE VALUATION.

Red Lake County $200,000 More Than Last Year.

The total valuation of the real and personal property of Red Lake county for the year 1907, as equalized by the state board of equalization (exclusive of exempted property) is $3,263,705, which is about $200,000 more than last year. Since no reassessment was made this year of the real estate, the figures extended being the same as last year, the raise is therefore entirely on personal property. We expect to see a still larger gain next year upon the assessment of real estate, all of which goes to show Red Lake county is now being permanently settled and will continue to raise in value with each successive year.

The Telephone Girl.

When you are incined to speak harshly to the telephone girl because she can't answer twenty calls at once and always give you first chance, just glance at the following toast given her by an Illinois man: 'Here's to the telephone girl—an employe who does the most work and suffers the most abuse for the money she receives, who does the most favors that are unappreciated by those upon whom they are conferred; and who knows more about men than the sociologist does, more about women than the officer of the federation of clubs; more about the manners of children than the teacher does, and who can tell where every lady and gentleman lives. She is seen in all lands and all climes, and speaks all tongues. God bless her."

Notice of Meeting.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Red Lake Falls Co-Operative Creamery Ass'n. will be held in the City Hall, in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minn., on Monday the 6th day January, 1908, at 2 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year and for transacting such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

Still Going Down.

Wadena Pioneer Journal: Last Friday the section men on both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads got another wage reduction, the second since the money stringency came to be felt.

Not long ago the roadmasters were instucted to lay off as many section men as possible. The crews were cut down twice, until now the Great Northern sections here have but a foreman and one man each, while on the Northern Pacific the foreman has two men in his crew.

Last week the order was given that the working hours be reduced from 10 to 9 hours a day. This means that the section men will draw only $1.35 a day. The nine hour day on the section is something new and never before, according to the workers, were they ever reduced in hours.

All over time is cut out. The section men are not paid the old time price for Sunday work in attending to the switch lights. Neither are they given more than common time for night work in case of emergency.

Dairy Statistics.

During 1906 Minnesota produced 1,000,000,000 pounds of milk, and manufactured from it 85,000,000 pounds of butter. These figures have been compiled by the state dairy and food department and will be a part of the bi-annual report shortly to be issued.

The amount of milk was 10 per cent in excess of 1905. As to the butter there was an increase of about 6,000,000 pounds over 1905.

Bids For Wood.

Sealed bids will be received by the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county in the office of the county auditor up to three o'clock p. m., January 8, 1908, for fifty cords of green poplar body wood to be delivered at the county building before April 1, 1908.

The board reserves the right to reject any all bids.

County Auditor.

Sutor Successful.

James Sutor, a former resident and county commissioner of Red Lake county is now well located at N. Yakima, Wash. and is one of the fortunate investors who struck a valuable piece of land that is now on the electric line about two miles from the city limits. The land across the way from him has been sold for $1200 an acre and plotted into acre lots. It is a great deal of satisfaction to us of the Red River valley that the foundations of all these western fortunes were laid in the valley.

Does This Catch You?

The Pine County Pioneer has the following to say on gossip: "Don't criticise others until you know the motive that prompts their action. Many of the best of us would hate to have our lives judged by any one act. If people stop to think twice before speaking there would be mighty little gossip, and the average sewing society would be a dull affair. If men and women were as honest in dealing with others' reputation as they are in dealing with their property, there would be fewer saddened lives than there are now."

Worry Worse Than Fatigue

More people worry themselves out than wear out by work and then when they begin to grow thin from worrying over other things, they worry because they are growing thin. The best thing for nervousness is the regular use of a good malt and tonic at meal time. Take a glass of golden grain belt beer with your meals and at bedtime. It builds up overworked nervous tissues and insures renewed health to body and brain. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the First State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., will be held in its banking rooms on Tuesday, January 14th, 1908, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN EPITOME

IMPORTANT EVENTS AT HOME AND ON FOREIGN SHORES BRIEFLY TOLD.

Washington Notes.

The official call for the Republican national convention, to be held in Chicago on June 16 next, has been issued.

President Roosevelt entertained at dinner at the White House a number of bear hunters from the Louisiana canebrakes.

Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota proposes an increase in the maximum salary allowed rural free delivery carriers from $900 to $1,200.

The department of agriculture has issued a report estimating that the total production of cotton in the United States for the year 1907-08 will amount to 5,581,968,000 pounds.

The Japanese government has chosen Kozoro Takahira to succeed Viscount Aoki as ambassador at Washington, as it desires to send its best man. The Hochi states that the government recalled Aoki for pledging Japan to restrictive legislation as to emigration.

The senate committee on public lands ordered a favorable report on the Hansbrough bill providing for leaves of absence for homesteaders during winter months. The report also ordered a favorable report on the Gamble bill for adjustment of the 5 per cent account of public land states.

Col. George W. Goethals, chairman and engineer-in-chief of the isthmian canal commission, has notified the authorities of his intention to come to Washington soon. Probably the most important matter which will come up for consideration will be that of increasing the width of the canal locks to 120 feet.

Personal.

Harold D. Haddock, for thirty years a prominent resident of Hancock, Mich., is dead of pneumonia.

John Philip Sousa has fully recovered from an attack of ptomaine poisoning and has rejoined his band.

Judge George Baldwin, one of the wealthiest land owners of Wisconsin, died at Appleton, aged sixty-nine years.

J. Marshall Williams, for two years soloist with Sousa's band in New York, died at Chillicothe, Mo., after a long illness.

Maj. William L. Geary, U. S. A., died at the army general hospital at San Francisco, where he has been ill with Bright's disease.

John Broadhead, a pioneer jeweler of Marshalltown, Iowa, and one of the earliest settlers of the town, died suddenly of asthma and disease of the heart.

W. B. Thomas has been elected acting president of the American Sugar Refining company to fill the vacancy caused by the death of H. O. Havemeyer.

Joseph Armstrong, manager of the Christian Science publications and one of the most prominent leaders of the faith in this country, is dead at his home in Boston.

Gen. Alexander Hamilton, grandson of Alexander Hamilton, secretary of the treasury under George Washington, died at his home in Tarrytown, N. Y. He had been ill from la grippe since Thanksgiving.

George Olley, aged 110 years, lacking eighteen days, believed to be the oldest person in New York state, died at his home in Great Bend. Olley was born in Stanton, England, Dec. 25, 1797.

Accidental Happenings.

Three persons were burned to death and another injured during a fire in Boston.

New Berlin, a town situated eighteen miles east of Jacksonville, Ill., was visited by fire. The loss is $75,000.

James Siegeling, aged ten, of Sharon Center, Iowa, was thrown by a skittish pony last night, and his neck was broken. He died instantly.

Crimes.

John Martnick of Fort Atkinson, Iowa, committed suicide by taking two ounces of carbolic acid.

Because he and his wife of two months quarreled over his desire to spend his evening at his bowling club, Jacob Victor killed himself in New York.

Detective Charles C. Jackson of Des Moines, Iowa, was slugged and severely beaten with a blackjack as he was returning from the police station to his home.

For love of a neighbor's wife who did not return the affection, D. H. Broese, a wealthy farmer of Jefferson, Iowa, forty-seven years old, sent a bullet through his brain.

Frank Glick, a machinist of Nashville, twenty-five years old, shot his wife, Mrs. Ruth Glick, killing her instantly. He then shot himself through the head and is dying at the city hospital.

T. Otwey Saldier, manager of the West End branch of the California Safe Deposit and Trust company at San Francisco, committed suicide in the office of the branch bank by blowing off the top of his head with a shotgun.

In an effort to drive from Pittsburg the concerns that advance money on furniture and other articles of the household, charging usurious rates, city detectives raided the offices of nineteen of these money lenders and have warrants for eleven others.

Mrs. Mary Stell was murdered by a burglar at Altoona, Pa. She tried to stop her husband from attacking the marauder, whom they had discovered in their home and had thrown her arms about her husband, when the thief's bullet struck her in the head. The murderer escaped.

Chief of Police John A. Snggs and Night Policeman Lewis Wood of Fort Gibson, Okla., are under arrest, charged with robbing the postoffice at Fort Gibson on the night of Nov. 22, obtaining $400 in cash. The arrest was made by Mayor Rend Lee, after an investigation of the crime.

William Stewert, proprietor of a restaurant in East Iola, Kan., was brutally murdered near his place of business. The body, which was found at daylight, bore evidence of several wounds, any one of which would have produced death. Stewert's partner, W. D. Cresison, confessed to the murder.

Foreign.

Dinizulu, the Zulu king who has been held responsible for the threatening situation in Natal, has surrendered.

Insurgents from Yunchow have penetrated into the province of Kwang Si and have captured three strongholds between Lungchau and Langson. Martial law has been proclaimed in the disturbed locality.

The Brazilian coasting steamer Guasca, 55,000 tons, Capt. Ramos, has gone down off Panagua, Brazil, as a result of a collision with an unknown vessel. Thirty persons on board the Guesca were drowned.

Gen. Lieutey, commanding the French flying column in Algeria, reported that he had destroyed the camp of the Metrsbont Bonthick, one of the leaders of the revolt and who proclaimed a holy war on the frontier.

The condition of Dowager Queen Sophie of Sweden is occasioning anxiety. The strain upon the queen incident to the illness and death of King Oscar was very severe, and since his death she has been almost constantly confined to her bed.

One of Vandyke's masterpieces, "The Erection of the Cross," has been stolen from the Church of Notre Dame at Courtral, Belgium. The thieves carefully cut the canvas from the frame and carried it away. They are believed to have been experts, as special watchmen employed in guarding the treasures of the church observed nothing.

COURSE IN ENGINEERING.

University Regents Add One Year to Former Term.

Five years must be spent by the students in the engineering department of the state university before a degree is granted them. The regents at their annual meeting voted to change the course from four to five years at the recommendation of Prof. F. S. Jones, dean of the engineering department.

The standard of entrance requirements to the pharmaceutical department was raised, and the resignation of Dean Downey of the college of science, literature and the arts not accepted.

President Northrop's annual report was omitted this year. Cashier J. D. Breen gave his annual report to the close of the fiscal year in August. The summary showed total receipts of $612,334.80, against disbursements of $537,771.54, leaving a balance of $74,553.26. Of the receipts $105,895.60 came from the United States government, $265,051.09 from the state and $169,206.88 from students' fees and dues in the various departments.

The major part of the expenditure was for salaries. Instructors get an aggregate of $400,244.62 annually, while the expense incident to running of the university is $104,584.95.

The most sweeping change effected by the regents was the extension of the regular engineering course to five years. In his recommendation for the change Dean Jones said that Minnesota stood alone in the United States in its policy of granting a degree at the end of four years, and the additional year was added in compliance with his request.

In the department of pharmacy the standard was raised to require a complete high school course for entrance.

The matter of a swimming pool for the armory was broached, but the regents thought the innovation too expensive. The matter was referred to the president of the board with instructions to investigate.

The board spent much time in discussion of the proposition to change the location of the heating and lighting plant, bringing it nearer the railroad tracks.

The department of botany was authorized to employ Carl P. Hertley of the University of West Virginia as an expert in ecology.

President Northrop was instructed to confer with the proper authorities looking to the establishment of a weather bureau at the university.

CHURCH FREE OF DEBT.

Organ Fund Also Quickly Is Raised by Subscription.

At the dedication of the new Centenary Methodist Episcopal church at Mankato the congregation raised $10,000 to pay the last installment on the church and to start a pipe organ fund. The pastor, Rev. Peter Clare, stated that the church thus far had cost $26,000 and that $18,000 had been raised to pay for it, leaving a deficiency of $8,000. A subscription was started and $8,500 raised. In the evening Rev. Clare explained that if the congregation would raise $1,500 for a pipe organ he thought that an equal amount could be secured from Andrew Carnegie, as negotiations were pending along that line, and a $3,000 organ could be installed. The congregation immediately raised $1,511.

PLANS EXTENSION OF ROAD.

Shortest Line in State May Be Lengthened Twenty-five Miles.

Plans are on foot for the extension of the Chicago & Lake Superior railroad, running between Cambridge and London, a distance of four miles, to Janesville, passing through Rockdele, Albion and Edgerton and making the total length of the road twenty-nine miles. It is expected that the construction of the extension will begin in the spring. The road is now the shortest one in the state. It does not earn enough to put it within the scope of the 2-cent rate law, and a trip from London to Cambridge via the railroad costs 25 cents. It was built in 1887.

WILL DISCUSS CROPS.

Meeting of Breeders' State Association Next Month.

The Minnesota Field Crop Breeders' association will hold its annual meeting Jan. 15 at the new state capitol, in connection with the meeting of the state agricultural society.

There will be an exhibition of field crop seeds, and the papers will be: "The Production of Grain," by Prof. J. H. Shepperd, Fargo; "Corn Culture," C. P. Harley, Washington, D. C.; "Onion Culture," F. H. Gibbs, Ross Town, discussion led by Arthur Roberer; "Potatoes for Market," Libby, Robbinsdale, discussion led by V. Bailey.

HASN'T THE MONEY.

State Treasurer Tells Why He Is Not Forwarding State Aid Payments.

State Treasurer Dinehart has caused to be sent to every school treasurer in the state a letter explaining his inability to forward them the district's proportion of the state aid to schools, which should have been in their possession a month ago.

The letter was sent out because of some criticism on the part of a number of districts because of the failure of the money to arrive. In all $830,000 is due the counties, but it cannot be paid because of the inability of the state to borrow the money.

As explained by Mr. Dinehart, the fixing of October as the time of distribution of the aid has annually compelled anticipation of the regular revenues which do not begin to come in until March. This necessitates a short-time loan from the banks, and they were being arranged for this time when the negotiations were summarily cut off by the banks, following the suspension of currency payments and their refusal to make any more loans. This refusal is still in effect and consequently nothing can be done until the regular revenues begin to come in. Because of the failure to distribute the money no suffering has resulted, but many are complaining because of the delay. Mr. Dinehart suggests that the next legislature be induced to pass a law changing the date of distribution so as to eliminate the necessity of annual short time loans from the banks.

MIND BECOMES A BLANK.

Good Thunder Man Unable to Explain Mysterious Disappearance.

A strange disappearance and reappearance unexplained, with lapse of memory, has created a sensation at Good Thunder. J. M. McCarthy, who has been the Milwaukee station agent for nearly two years mysteriously disappeared one evening recently and search was made for him for several hours, but without success. About 2 a. m. he appeared at the mill, where he remained for several hours before going home. His condition appearing to be serious, medical assistance was summoned, and it was found that his right arm was broken.

McCarthy is unable to account for his whereabouts the early part of the night or how the injury occurred, his mind apparently being a blank during that time.

His heavy work is thought to have proven too much for endurance. He has resigned and been succeeded by Mr. Gilson of Kimberlee.

BENEFIT LABORING MEN.

Red Wing Business Men to Erect Cottages for Low Rental.

The Red Wing Manufacturers' association has organized the Red Wing Realty company for the purpose of erecting houses at a low rental or sale at cost on easy payments to laboring people. The capitalization is $50,000. Work begins next spring, and the Manufacturers' association has engaged Mrs. Lloyd Wooders on an annual salary to organize and maintain an association of charities for Red Wing and made a liberal donation to begin work. All societies and churches are invited to participate. Money was never lacking in the past, but system was wanting.

Red Wing commercial bodies appointed strong committees and made appropriations to care for the state retail merchants' convention and the editorial association meeting next June.

NEW DITCH LAW VOID.

Is Held Unconstitutional to Take Private Property for Private Purposes.

The ditch law passed by the last legislature was laid away on the shelf in an opinion handed down by the supreme court, in which Justice E. A. Jaggard declares chapter 191 of the Laws of 1907, the new ditch law, to be unconstitutional and void.

The new law gave the owner of wet lands the right to drain them across a neighbor's land. If the man whose land was affected by the drain offered an objection it was up to the town supervisors to appraise the damage.

William Pautzke of Rockford attempted to dig a ditch across the land of Charles Schubert, who entered a protest, on the ground that the law permitted the taking of private property for private purposes.

WANTS A BUILDING.

The State Historical society wants a building of its own. Action was taken at the monthly meeting in St. Paul, and a building committee appointed, consisting of W. G. Le Duc, Hastings; J. J. Hill, D. L. Kingsbury and W. O. O'Brien of St. Paul, and W. C. Williston of Hastings. The matter will be presented to the next legislature. Warren Upham, secretary of the society, explained that [illegible] present quarters [illegible] should have a separate fire proof building. Wisconsin has one costing $550,000 and Iowa a historical building that cost $440,000. [illegible]

MINNESOTA IS THE STANDARD.

Superior Elevators Ask for Grain Inspection.

Superior, Wis., grain and elevator men are desirous of securing Minnesota grain inspection now that the Wisconsin inspection has become established and have taken up the matter with the state railroad and warehouse commission. A. D. Searles and J. H. McMillen of the Globe and the Belt Line Elevator companies respectively held a conference with the commission last week, trying to arrange for the inspection of wheat and flax of their elevators by the Minnesota inspectors.

The inspection of grain at Superior has been the subject of an extended controversy, the Wisconsin authorities insisting that the grain shipped into and out of Superior should be inspected by Wisconsin inspectors. This matter has finally been adjusted by an agreement providing for Wisconsin inspection, but the elevator men still want the Minnesota inspection, particularly of wheat.

They now desire to effect an agreement with the Minnesota commission whereby the West Superior inspectors are to inspect all coarse grains in and out, and to weigh all grains in and out, including wheat. They are to be allowed to inspect, in addition, all such wheat and flax as they are requested to inspect.

The reason the elevator men are so desirous of having the M[illegible] inspection is that this has become so well established as a standard throughout the country that there is some difficulty in marketing the grain without its having been graded by an established authority. As by far the largest commodity in volume of business is wheat, if the Minnesota inspection of this grain can be secured the elevator men will be reasonably satisfied.

SCHOOLS FOR TEACHERS.

Supt. Olsen Sends Out Instruction About Training Schools.

Notices are being sent out by Superintendent of Public Instruction J. W. Olsen to the county superintendents of schools of the holding of the winter examinations for first and second grade teachers' certificates, to be held at the county seats on Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1. Plans are also being made for the teachers' training schools to be held next summer, the letter relating to which, in part, follows:

"Schools will be for four weeks, except where it is clearly apparent that a six weeks school is demanded by local and other conditions. As each of the five normal schools will hold a twelve weeks' session, beginning the early part of June, county superintendents desirous of having their teachers in attendance at these may perhaps conclude that a summer school in their own county would be superfluous. Six weeks schools begin Monday, June 22; four weeks schools Monday, July 6; all close Saturday, Aug. 1.

"If a training school cannot be assigned, or is not desired for your county, we will, at your request, arrange for a week's institute for almost any week between April 1 and Dec. 1, save that of the summer examinations for common school certificates, the dates for which are Aug. 3, 4 and 5. It will be understood that the claims of counties to which a summer school was not assigned for 1907 will have precedence when the next assignment is made."

Hot Grease Starts Fire.

A disastrous fire was narrowly averted at Albert Lea in the department store of Skinner, Chamberlain & Co., the largest retail establishment in the southern part of the state. The tailor in the clothing department had left the current turned on an electric "goose" and about midnight the hot iron set the wood on fire and quite a blaze was in progress when it was discovered by the janitor and promptly extinguished. While the big room was filled with smoke the damage was not large, and the insurance companies will not be called upon to make good. The first floor room is 100x120 feet.

Relatives Want Farm.

The farm left by the late Isaac Wheeler is to be the stake over which a contest is to be fought in the district court. John Williams of Staples and Charles Williams of Verndale, nephews of the old man, have commenced suit to annul the contract whereby the farm was deeded to H. F. Cotton, who had agreed to take care of Wheeler as long as he lived. Cotton had not commenced to care for him at the time of his death, but was fixing up the house to take possession of it. The Cottons now have possession of the house and are occupying it, but many traces of the tragedy are still to be seen about the premises.

State News of the Week Briefly Told.

Mrs. Harry Down, living in the northwestern part of Rice county, was killed by falling off a load of wood.

Charles Bergstrom was struck by a Chicago Great Western passenger train at St. Paul and instantly killed.

A man named Callen, thirty-eight years old, was run over by a Northern Pacific switch engine and killed at St. Paul.

The jury in the Leon Nadeen arson case at Stillwater returned after being out eight hours with a verdict of not guilty.

Samuel Reynolds, vice president of the Northern Cooperage Company of St. Paul, died suddenly at his home in Richville.

Inglehart Hansen, the nine-year-old son of Julius Hansen, was drowned in Gem lake, near Alden. The ice was partly broken up by the recent warm weather.

E. T. Barnard, a prominent furniture dealer of Fergus Falls, was severely injured by falling from a vehicle in a runaway. His arm was broken and his hip crushed.

Xavier de Marre, a pioneer settler of Ramsey county, aged 102, died at Mahnomen. It is reported that he once owned the land where the union station in St. Paul is now located.

Daniel Wall, living at Wheetland, tried to commit suicide three times in one day. He was taken to Faribault and adjudged insane by the judge of probate and taken to Rochester.

Fire completely destroyed the Ballard-Trimble Lumber company's shed and stock at Twin Valley. Loss, $12,000; Twin Valley Implement company's stock, $3,500; C. L. Dahl's warehouse, $1,500.

The postoffice safe at International Falls was blown and the contents taken. There was a small amount of cash, stamps and registered mail, estimated at $650, but few valuables. The postoffice inspector is investigating.

According to the analysis of a competent assayer a good grade of lignite coal has been discovered on the Guhl farm, two miles east of Collegeville. As it is not yet known how far the vein extends, further explorations are being continued.

Louis Bentue, believed to have been a lumberjack, was cut in two by the wheels of a freight train on the Minnesota & International road at Big Falls. It is said that he was intoxicated and fell under the wheels when attempting to board the train.

Fire made a clean sweep of the farm home of D. D. Kronkhite, two miles northeast of Anoka. The residence, barn and all small buildings were destroyed. The loss is $5,000. Kronkhite recently purchased the place. The fire started back of the barn. Incendiaries are blamed, but no one knows their motive.

George Vosberg has been arrested charged with setting fire to a barn belonging to the Faribault Furniture company in June last. He is being held to the district court, which convenes next May. Vosberg denies that he committed the crime, but claims that he saw a certain woman strike the match and fire the building.

In the case of The State of Minnesota vs. Joseph Pachi a verdict of not guilty was returned in the district court in Owatonna. Pachi was charged with assault, and this case was the result of another in which he was concerned. Pachi was formerly convicted of assault, but an appeal was taken to that court, where this verdict was secured and the prisoner given his liberty.

T. J. Moonan, representing the state labor bureau, is closing his inspection of the fourteen counties in Southeastern Minnesota included in his district. He says he finds much child labor employed, especially in Winona, but conditions are becoming better because of the assistance given by the school authorities, and also because employers generally are trying to live up to the law.

A loaded revolver in the hands of the eight-year-old son of Charles Stillwell of Appleton nearly resulted fatally for the two-year-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Sallers. The children were playing in the parlor of the Stillwell home when the gun was discovered, and pointing at his playmate the older boy pulled the trigger. The bullet passed directly into the baby's mouth, coming out through the fleshy part of the cheek.

While Frank Gerow was roaming through the woods near Roosevelt he was shot in the leg by [illegible] who fired a load of buckshot at a deer, killing it and also wounding Gerow, who was in range. Gerow was taken to a hospital in Winnipeg.

The Girl Who Represented Love

By WILLIAM WALLACE COOK

(Copyright.)

I shall be 60 years old to-morrow, my boy, and I'm a hale and hearty old man, as you can see. When I was a youngster, there were few better at rough-and-tumble end having taken good care of myself, I have still much of my strength. What's that? Love, you say? I'm a bachelor and have never felt the "tender passion"—as you young men are pleased to term it. But hold! I'll qualify that statement. Some two years ago, at the age of 58—think of it!—my old heart wermed up with something of a passionate fire, burning for a fitful period, and now—well, all that is left is e heap of cold, white ashes. Shall I tell you of it? Very well; but I warn you there is nothing startling in the story, and it means much, very much to me.

Two years ago, I attended a certain theater in this city, where was being played a strange melange of mirth, music and nonsense called by this modern world an extravagaaza. Well named, because everything about the piece—costumes, play end players—was most extravagant end the very antipodes of realism.

I was with a party of friends, and we occupied a front box. The house was full to overflowing, when the curtain finally rang up on a scene of glitter and a maze of melody. Leening back in my chair I took in the play, making no attempt to keep track of the plot (if there was any), but amply content with the show, the dancing and the singing.

At last I was awekeded out of my dreamy stare with something like a shock. It was as if a beautiful mask had dropped suddenly from a woman's face and showed the grinning skeleton behind. I leaned over to my young friend Granville, and whispered:

"Do you not see the little girl et this end of the stage?—I mean the one in the wings, and dressed in white?"

Granville laughed. "What of it?"

"Nothing," I answered, for that laugh hurt me—went to my heart like a dagger-thrust.

Drawing farther back, I followed the girl with my eyes. She represented Love. A tiny bow was in her hand and a quiver of arrows swung at her back. She sang a song, and I shall never forget one verse of it. It echoed and reechoed in my very soul:

> Love, all hopes and fears above,
> Love that guards its own alway,
> Love that lives and dies for love
> Is the love that lives for aye.

But the face of Love was a pinched, wan little face, and her eyes so large and lustrous, I could not look into them without a feeling almost of dread. Her tiny hands were thin and the blue veins could be traced under the white skin. And then there was something about her face, vague, distant, unfathomable, that told of suffering and deep-seated sorrow.

During all that entertainment, I kept my eyes upon the delicate, slender form of Love with her large, shining eyes and yellow curls, and I sew, distinctly as I see you now, my boy, a dance of death amid the showy settings of that stege.

I felt strangely drawn to this little girl. There are times—perhaps once or twice in a man's life—when all barriers of common-sense and worldly wisdom seem to be broken down and passed over by a woman.

I went to the theater the next night, and the night following, always sitting in the same place, and I was pleased to see that Love, her attention drawn by my earnest gaze, came to notice me.

I was old enough to be the child's grandfather, and such attention as she deigned me went to my desolate old heart with a thrill of happiness and a throb of vague anxiety.

I sent her some flowers, one night. White flowers—a sprey of waxen hyacinths and some lilies, as they best seemed to suit her innocence. That was on the third night; on the fourth night I missed her from the stage and another wore the wings and mantle of Love.

"Where is she?" I asked myself anxiously, and sought an answer to the question from the stage manager after the play was over.

"Oh," said he with a shrug of his shoulders, "you refer to Miss Garston, I presume. She refused to play Sunday night and I discharged her."

I smothered the indignation I felt, obtained the address of Miss Garston and went to her home.

Ah, there was nothing gorgeous there! A shabby tenement, two flights of rickety stairs and a bare, uncarpeted room. A bed stood in one corner and beside it sat an old woman. In a broken glass on a table by the bedside were my hyacinths and lilies.

The old woman's head was buried in her hands. She looked up as I entered.

"Does Miss Garston live here?" I asked.

She looked at me searchingly for a moment and then, dropping her eyes, she pointed without a word to the bed.

I approached end looked down at the fair face of Love. Her eyelids were closed and the long lashes were wet with tears. Her face was deathly white, and a mass of yellow ringlets spread out around it, set it off, with unearthly beauty and sweetness.

"What is the matter?" I queried, turning to the old woman.

She merely laid a finger on her lips. My voice had awakened the girl. The eyelids opened slowly, and she looked at me a moment in childlike wonder. Then she smiled faintly.

"Do you know me?" I asked.

"You are the gentleman that sent me the flowers," she said slowly. "I am glad you came, because I wish to thank you for them. Aunty, this is the gentleman I spoke to you about."

"What is the matter, my little girl?" I said, stroking back the soft, curling hair. "Are you ill?"

She gave a strange look.

"Yes," she whispered, at last, "very, very ill. I have hed a hemorrhage and—"

Her voice choked; I bent nearer her lips.

"Your face is the only kind one I heve seen in many a day. I love you so much!"

God bless her! Impulsively she threw her arms about my neck and kissed me, holding me close, as she whispered: "I cannot get well. Don't tell aunty—but won't you promise to take care of her after—after it is all over? She has no one but me, and then she will be ell alone."

"I Am Glad You Came."

"There, there, my dear child," I said starting up, "of course, I will do anything for you. But where is your physician?"

There was no answer to this question. I understood the metter instantly. They were too poor.

"I'll be back in a few moments," I said, and hastily left.

When I finally returned with a doctor, a low moan wes borne to us at the foot of the rickety stairs. Hastening up, we found the old woman on her knees by the bed. The white pillow was covered with an ensanguined flood—the life-torrent of the little sufferer who lay white and still with the lilies and hyacinths at her breast.

"I can be of no service," said the doctor, and he went awey, leaving the heart-broken old woman and her dead alone with me.

Ah, my boy, my boy! Can you—can anyone—understand the grief I felt for that little, dead child? No, no—it is impossible; but my tears fell fast then, and have fallen many a time since at the thought of her untimely fate, and my heart, which clings so passionately to an awakened love—a love that slumbered so long—holds, also, the ashes of its sainted dead; and the one verse of her song comes back to me like an angelic echo:

> Love, all hopes and fears above,
> Love that guards its own alway,
> Love that lives and dies for love
> Is the love that lives for aye.

Porter Makes Good Tips.

"I would rather be head porter in a good New York hotel than a railroad president," said Robert J. Beills, of Baltimore. "I would be making plenty of money and would not be a mark for the muck rakers. I once went on as clerk in a leading hotel there at a salary of $125 a month, which made me feel quite contented at first.

"But at the same time I started an Irishman not long over also began duty as head porter at a salary of $30 a month. In a few months and while I was still plugging away at my one-and-a-quarter job that Irishman was cleaning up several hundred. I know one month it amounted to $600. Among his tips was a check from George Gould for $50 and one from Mayor Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, also for that amount. That fellow is there still and is still laying away a neat little sum monthly. And if you tried to get him for anything else you would have to come up with a salary something like that paid a life insurance company's president."

Statue Was Too Clean.

Prof. Brutt's recently completed equestrian statue of Karl Alexander, at Weimar, looked too new to suit the sculptor, after it had been unveiled, and, in order to give the work dignity, it was subjected to a patina process. When this was completed the statue was, according to a Berlin paper, a light frog green, and its appearance caused much merriment. The sculptor set men to work taking off what they had put on, and at the end of the day the statue became a bright, metallic rider on a grass green horse. Then the town authorities had a placard fastened on the statue, stating that the municipal government was blameless for what had been done to the work of art. The horse and its rider will be restored to their original bronze condition, and in time will probably assume the tint which it was intended to produce, but for years the memorial will be pointed out as the green one.

OTHER POWERS LEAVE US BEHIND IN AERONAUTICS

Where Will Aerial Navy of the United States Rank in Days When Other Powers Go to War in Skies?

Where will the aerial navy of the United States rank in the days to come when the great powers go to war in the skies?

This question appears to have aroused Uncle Sam from a nap which he has fallen.

A congress of aeronauts met in New York only the other day and heard speeches from a number of men who know something of diplomacy, who read the signs of the times and who, above all, are patriots. These men—Rear Admiral C. N. Chester, U. S. N., and General Allen, U. S. A., among the number—sounded a note of warning which found immediate answer in a recommendation to congress and which has echoed through the country.

In a word the speakers at the congress showed just how America had failed to realize the significance of what her rivals were doing with the airship as an auxiliary to their naval and military establishments. They showed that Uncle Sam had dozed for a moment, and that while his head drooped on his bosom, a toy of yesterday had become a powerful engine which was destined to play an important part in the history of the future.

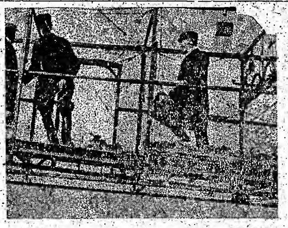
And they showed, too, that the brains and hands which brought about this development were English, French and German, but not American.

America is used to leading, and Americans are not comfortable in the rear rank of any procession, so it did not take the convention of aeronauts long to pass a resolution urging upon congress the importance of providing funds for an aerial fleet. They cheered loudly at a statement of Gen. Allen, who said that he thought Secretary Taft would ask for $200,000 at the next session to maintain an aeronaut branch of the army.

So the matter will come right before congress, and while every effort to increase the strength of the naval or military establishment of the country raises more or less opposition, it is believed that the national lawmakers will not hesitate over a matter which, advocates of the plan argue, involves the prestige of the nation. Senators and representatives are to be appealed to upon patriotic grounds, and the scream of the eagle will doubtless echo through the halls at Washington next month.

Over in France there are a couple of dirigible airships which have been tested officially and found to operate nearly perfectly. "La Patrie" and "Ville de Paris," two steerable balloons, have been maneuvering successfully for some time, and only recently Premier Clemenceau and Gen. Picquart took a voyage in "La Patrie," which served to indicate how seriously official France viewed the airship as a military aid. With Santos Dumont, M. Deutsch, Count de la Vaulx and other enthusiasts working and encouraging work on the aerial problem, and aided by the government, the development of the airship has moved more swiftly in France than in any other European power.

Germany, too, has been very busy. The kaiser, himself, is an enthusiast on the subject of aeronautics and he has lent his aid to every move which had for its object the development of a practical dirigible balloon. As a result Count Zeppelin has produced an airship which recently made the remarkable record of remaining aloft seven hours, during which it wes under complete control.



ON BOARD THE VILLE DE PARIS,
One of France's successful army airships.

Another army airship is making daily flights over Berlin, and recently it circled about the kaiser's palace in the face of a heavy wind, fully 1,800 feet above the ground. This balloon is fitted with a screw and vanes which drive the ship forward at the rate of 45 feet a second. The motor is run by gasoline, which is kept in a receptacle in the framework above the car. There are two small balloons holding compressed air inside the great envelope, and by filling or emptying these the airship is raised or lowered without affecting the main gas bag.

England has been the latest power to join the aerial fleet movement. A few days ago she launched her first war airship at Farnborough, and the flight was a complete success. The British balloon is a cigar-shaped affair, 100 feet long, and is fitted with a more complicated set of sails and vanes than the French and German machines. It was made at the Aldershot balloon factory, but the details of its construction have been very carefully guarded.

Meanwhile war experts, artists and seers have view with one another in depicting the battle of the future, a terrible struggle in the air between the winged fleets of contending powers. The war balloon has been designated as an instrument for dropping high explosives from the clouds upon cities and camps of an enemy, and for serving a belligerent as a means of scouting and observation. The "heavier-than-air" aeroplane — the cloud ship which depends upon its forward velocity to maintain it [illegible] been depicted as the armored cruiser of the sky on which the great guns will be mounted and from which torpedoes and shells will be hurled.

But through it all, Uncle Sam seems to have slumbered until the congress of aeronauts woke him up by calling for federal aid. American inventors have experimented with both kinds of airships, most notably the Wright brothers, whose aeroplane has performed some remarkable feats, but up to date the government has declined to recognize the importance of federal encouragement. Indeed it is reported from time to time that the Wrights are negotiating with a foreign power for the sale of their invention.

nautics is needed far more than a construction department, inasmuch as the

An experimental department of aero-present day airship, with all its startling feats, is far from perfection. While it will undoubtedly play a most important part in the battles of the future, its operation will entail a tremendous risk to the lives of the men who sail it, unless some safety device now unknown, is developed. With this thought in mind, the powers across the sea are straining every nerve in aerial experiments.

Will America ignore a sign of the times so vital in its bearing upon the country's future prestige?

JOHNSON GOT SCRAP BOOK.

Washington's Great Slab Artist Did Not Need That Kind.

When young Johnson, Washington's crackerjack slab artist, began to get his name in the papers day after day, and with such fine write-ups, he was advised by the older members of the club to get himself a scrapbook, so that he could treasure up the words of praise that were being handed to him in bunches.

"It will make swell reading for the folks at home during the off-season also," spoke up Case Patten.

"Yes," said Joe Cantillon, "it's not a bad idea, by any means, Walter, for reading the scrapbook during the winter will no doubt inspire you with a greater desire to be the real goods when we open up at this stand for the season of 1908, when we take the pennant, if you remember."

So, acting upon the suggestions of his comrades and his manager, Walter dug down in his clothes and produced the necessary coin to purchase a book wherein he could paste the press clippings that were so boisterous in his favor.

Not being himself familiar with the stores in the locality of the park, Walter pressed little Dan, the custodian of the clubhouse, into service, and sent him to buy the book for him.

"Here is the best scrap book I could get you, Mr. Johnson," said the lad on his return.

While the clever young pitcher was unwrapping the packet, the other players crowded about and expressed mild surprise at the smallness of the package. When Johnson had finally got all the paper from around his purchase there on the front cover of the book, in great, flaring red letters, were the words:

"Points on Pugilism."

IN HANDS OF RING

ARTIFICIAL VALUE GIVEN WASHINGTON REAL ESTATE.

Government as Well as Residents Is Compelled to Submit to the Extortions of the Owners of Property.

There is no doubt that a real estate ring holds Washington by the throat. Houses have been known to stand idle in Washington for two years at a stretch because the owners would not reduce the rent to a fair price. In the end it is probable that the price will be got by the owner. Homeseekers are not the only sufferers in this respect. The people of the whole country are pouring thousands of dollars into the pockets of the real estate ring in Washington every year in payment of rents for government offices. Shell-like buildings, such as the census office, are frequently made to pay for themselves in the course of four or five years, after which the profit to the owner is simply enormous. The government now, despite the growing number of its buildings, is paying annual rentals which net 4 per cent. income on a total valuation of $28,000,000. The total value of every building in Washington now occupied by a government office, including the ground upon which it stands, is not worth one-third of this amount. If it were not for the government it is more than probable that the owners of many of these buildings would have to scrape the town for tenants at a much reduced rental and in some instances the buildings would never have been erected at all and the ground upon which they stand would be vacant lots.

There is still another angle to the real estate ring in Washington. A bridge and its approaches cost in exneighborhood of the zoological park, which connected a wide break in Connecticut avenue, a fashionable residence street, due to a ravine. The bridge and its approaches cost in excess of $1,000,000. On the city end of the bridge, previous to its construction, the piece of property conformed to the usual high prices which prevail all over Washington. On the suburban end, where, up to that time, no houses stood, the prices were comparatively moderate. Since the building of the bridge large tracts of property lying on the further end of the bridge and along Connecticut avenue for several miles out have been found in well-known hands in Washington, and the prices asked are so far in advance of what this land could have been bought for two years ago as to suggest the question, "What was the bridge built for, anyway?"

There are other ways of gouging money out of householders in Washington, but it would be a long story to recount them. There are associations among practically all the trades, which meet frequently and fix prices, each a sort of local trust in itself. This is not a situation peculiar to Washington by any means, but it is a system carried to a higher degree of perfection, without interference, than in any other city. It has been said jocularly, but there is a really serious side to the story, that when a child is born in Washington the associations meet, give him a local financial rating, which is changed from time to time, and before the youngster is able to talk his prospective earnings from the cradle to the grave have been divided up among the trades of Washington. Experience would seem to indicate that the story is not all fiction.—Exchange.

Must "Tip" or Be Ostracized.

Washington servants may not be acquainted with the term "backsheesh" and they may never stoop to use the term "tip," but they are star specimens of all those two institutions imply. There are more than 100,000 negroes in Washington, a large majority of whom are employed as household servants and in other menial capacities. No one knows the state of a pocketbook better than they do. A poor man may be assured of service given grudgingly as though he were the cause of a loss of time and money to the servant. Let him undergo a change in financial condition for the better, however, and the exasperating manner in which the servants of Washington will hang on his heels would almost drive an ordinary man to drink. Failure to comply with the "unwritten law" on tipping in Washington will result in the victim's being made to feel his position uncomfortably. He will at once become conspicuous by the splendid isolation he enjoys. Nowhere is the ruinous practice of tipping carried to such an extent as in Washington, and to the casual visitor of moderate means, of whom thousands come to Washington every year, it has become almost unendurable.

Unavoidable Delay.

"You can prove an alibi on this charge, can't you?" asked his lawyer.

"Yes'r," said the captured crook; "but we'll have to wait a week or two. The fellies I'm goin' to prove it by ain't out o' jail yit."

Of Course.

WHEN we get used to the "lid" maybe we'll wonder how we ever get along without it.

THE rapid increase of time deposits in Red River Valley banks during the past year is an encouraging sign.

THE Fairmont Sentinel issued a most creditable special edition last week in honor of the dedication of Martin county's new court house.

COMPTROLLER RIDGELY comes out openly for the establishment of a government bank. But Mr. Ridgley will find that the ghost of Andrew Jackson will rise again.

THE Hutchinson Leader takes it for granted that Tom Shevlin has an asbestos scrap book in which he preserves clippings from the country regarding his glorious self.

THE vertical writing fad is about dead, and the St. Cloud Times asserts that "no one defends it except those who teach it and are responsible for its infliction upon suffering humanity.

THE Windom Reporter suggests that you will feel better if you try to find the good in your neighbor instead of the bad. He is just as good as you are, and you will find it out if you try.

ANENT the Dr. Mayo announcement of Governor Johnson's presidential candidacy a St. Paul newswag thinks that inasmuch as the Doctor has cut the Governor open three or four times he ought to have "inside information."

HOPE springs eternal. It was the illustrious Goethe who said: "When fortune lifts me up then I am glad and sing in sweet exaultstion; when she sinks down and lays me prostrate, then I begin to think now it will rise again."

IN view of the reports coming from Washington those days, the Duluth Herald thinks it is about time to institute an inquiry whether this is a government of, by and for the people, by Speaker Cannon and Senator Aldrich, for the large interests.

TAFT is the only Republican mentioned for the presidency who has declared in favor of the revision and reduction of the tariff. We are for tariff revision—and Taft.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

And Taft has dared only to go far enough to use the thread-bare argument—revise the tariff after the presidential election. Taft is for revision for political purposes.

FOR the first time in the history of the state, a woman plead a case before the Supreme Court on Wednesday, and acquitted herself very creditably. She was Miss Essie Winning Williams, teacher of history in the St. Paul Central High school, who graduated from the St. Paul College of Law in 1906. She appeared for R. C. Holbert in proceedings for contempt instituted against him in the Ramsey county court.

SOME people imagine that Minnesota is a Taft state, but we question it. Many of the leading country papers are strongly opposed to him. The Windom Reporter says:

"Trying to make Taft the republican candidate for president by Roosevelt is not unlike Dave Clough trying to nominate his own successor when governor of Minnesota. The result was a democratic governor in Minnesota and it may result in a democratic president. If Taft is nominated the labor vote will rise up and curse him."

THE Fairmont Sentinel expresses the sentiments of the country press in saying:—"The flunkies who run the St. Paul Commercial club invited old skin-flint Rockefeller to come out and be fed and feted by that organization. Rockefeller is the man whom Senator LaFollette denounced as the "greatest criminal of the age," and Ida M. Tarbell furnished the documents to prove the charge. The St. Paul Commercial club has earned the contempt of every citizen of the State."

YOUR banker may seem like a cold blooded proposition at times, remarks an exchange. He may seem to be all interest, discount and exchange. You may get the notion that he is a Shylock and would grind you for your last cent. Such is not the case, but that is all in the manner and surface looks. Your banker, like your family physician, is the man who pulls you out of trouble. He has a heart in him as big as an ox, and when he finds you are honest and deserving, he will go to the limit and take great chances to help you over rough places. He gets that bank look fighting off crooks and people who try to work him for a sucker. Be good to your banker and you will not regret it.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Mankato Free Press: St. Peter, not content with furnishing Minnesota with the majority of its governors, now aspires to give the United States a president.

Hibbing Tribune: Roosevelt keeps declaring that he will not serve if elected—but that's what he did about the vice-presidency, too.

Zumbrota News: A Chicago woman found a baby in a newspaper on the front steps the other morning, but no woman who has lived in Chicago very long is surprised at anything she may see in the newspapers nowadays.

Minnesota Mascot: The Independent Press of Madison thinks that Frank M. Eddy should be kept on probation for a year or two before he is groomed for the office of governor. The Press wants to make sure that Eddy is a sticker in the cold camp before it ties to him. But the question presents itself: Is the Republican party ready to adopt as its standard bearer a man who advocates the principles which Mr. Eddy now stands for? If that question can be answered in the affirmative then verily "the world do move."

Pine City Pine Poker: That was a fine speech of Governor Johnson to the rivers and harbors congress at Washington. It showed a commastery of the subject of water routes as a dominating factor in the development of internal commerce. A comprehensive grasp of public question, however does not wholly explain why staid and conservative editors of the East are indulging in rhapsodies over the new man from the West. There must be something intensely fetching about the personality of this man Johnson of Minnesota.

BOND RESOLUTION.

Red Lake Falls, minn. }
December 14, 1907. }

Commissioner Daniel Shaw offered the following preamble and resolutions and moved their adoption,

WHEREAS: In pursuance of and in full compliance with the provisions of chapter 258 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for the year 1901, and the several acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, such steps have been duly and legally taken that a public drainage ditch has been duly located and established, partly in the county of Red Lake and partly in the county of Polk, and State of Minnesota, and known as Judicial Ditch No. 4, and such proceedings have been duly and legally taken in the District Court of the Fourteenth Judicial District, duly located and establishing said ditch, and it has been definitely ascertained and established in accordance with the provisions of the law applicable thereto, that the expense incurred and to be incurred in the locating, establishing and construction of such of said Judicial Ditch as is located within this county of Red Lake, and in such relation to said county of Red Lake as to affect lands therein, within the terms of said legislative acts, will be at least the sum of $16,700; and

WHEREAS: This Board has heretofore duly determined to issue the bonds of this county, for the purpose of paying the expense incurred and to be incurred in locating, establishing and constructing so much of said Judicial Ditch as is located within this county, and in such resolution thereto, as to affect lands therein within the terms of said laws, and said bonds have been duly sold; Now, therefore be it

RESOLVED, By this Board of County Commissioners that the sum of $16,700 is necessary to defray the expense incurred and to be incurred in locating, constructing and establishing so much of such Judicial Ditch as is located within this county of Red Lake, and in such relation to this county as to affect lands therein, within the terms of said chapter 258 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for the year 1901 and the several acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto;

RESOLVED, FURTHER, That the negotiable coupon bonds of said county of Red Lake be issued for said purpose in the aggregate amount of $16,700, said bonds to be seventeen in number, sixteen thereof of the denomination of $1,000 each and one of the denomination of $700, all bearing date the first day of October, 1907, and due in ten years from their date, with interest at the rate of six (6) per cent per annum, payable semi annually, on the first day of April and October of each year, both principal and interest payable at the banking house of A. B. Leach & Co., in Chicago, Illinois.

RESOLVED, FURTHER, That said bonds and the coupons attached thereto shall be substantially in the following form, with the necessary variations as to number and amounts thereof, to-wit;

Last Wednesday evening, at his rooms in the Geo. F. Henning residence, Rev. Philip A. Schwarz pronounced the words that united in the holy bonds of wedlock Mrs. Gunhaldah Kriel, of this city and Manfred Kress, of Dairyville, Illinois. The bride is well and favorably known here, while the groom has been serving Uncle Sam as a regular in the army for a number of years. The Gazette joins with numerous friends in extending congratulations and best wishes.

A family reunion is being held at the C. Guerin home this week and every member of the family partook of Christmas turkey together for the first time in over eleven years. Those of the family from abroad are Napoleon Guerin, who is here with his family from Maxbass, N. D., and Mrs. Geo. Ewing and daughter, Miss Nora, of Okanagan, from British Columbia. Mrs. Ewing and child were accompanied upon their journey as far as Winnipeg by the father who continued his trip across the waters to Glascow, Scotland, where he will visit with his parents and among numerous boyhood friends for a few weeks.

L. A. Kaufer received a letter the first of the week from his brother Henry, who is located at Calgary, Canada, in which he stated that Northern Minnesota is a garden of Eden compared with the Alberta country. He advises all friends to remain where they are for starvation and famine exists on every hand. Those among the farmers who are able to return to civilization are leaving the country, while the others will exist the best they can. He says most of the Red Lake county people have done fairly well, but thinks all should let well enough alone.

One of the neatest calendars sent out by any firm in the northwest is the one issued by the First State Bank of this city. The design is that of the king of the forests and is befitting the institution from which it goes forth. That the First State Bank is the peer of all banking institutions goes without saying, and one has only to look over the statements of the conditions of the various banks in the shire to verify this statement. The resources are almost double that of any other bank in the great northwest, which bespeaks volumes for the careful attention given to the business by its trustworthy officials.

THE WOMAN'S CORNER

PRETTY IN CROCHET

WORK FOR THE AFTERNOON AT HOME.

Lace Leaves and Spray a Pretty Decoration for Table or Chair —Easy to Make by Following Directions.

First Leaf—Fifteen chain stitches, turn and work a half treble in the eighth from hook, one chain one treble in next, one chain one double treble in next, one chain one double treble in next, one chain one treble in next, one chain one half treble in next, one chain, and catch to the end stitch with single crochet.

Second Leaf—Eighteen chain, a half treble in eighth from hook, one chain one treble in next, one chain one double treble in each of the next five, working the third double treble a little longer than the others; one chain one treble in next, one chain one-half treble in next, one chain one single crochet in end stitch.

Third Leaf—Twenty chain, a half treble in eighth from hook, pass one, one treble in next, pass one, one double treble in next, pass one, one double treble in next, pass one, one treble in next, pass one, one-half treble in next, pass one, one single in end stitch. Fix the leaves in position—see illustration—with a stitch in center.

Stem—Eighteen chain, turn and work a treble in each stitch back to the leaves; work a half treble into each chain round the leaves with a picot at every third stitch. This completes one spray; the others are worked in the same way, and the illustration will show where the leaves are connected

For the Heading—Work chain stitches from point to point, joining with longer or shorter stitches as required to make the work level, and finish with a row of trebles.

HERE'S USEFUL TOILET TIDY.

Place for Small Articles That Should Be Ready to Hand.

Our sketch shows a rather novel form of toilet tidy fitted with five hooks at the back for keys, buttonhooks, scissors, etc. It is simple in construction, and can be made of plain or figured silk, linen or sateen. It will look very pretty in pale blue art linen, edged with a cord of a darker shade of the same color. A piece of stout cardboard cut out in the shield shape shown in the sketch, should be used for a foundation, and this should be covered evenly with linen, and large dress hooks sewn on in the positions indicated. The front of the pocket is embroidered with a pretty little floral design, and there is a loop of cord at the top by which it may be hung upon the wall, or suspended at the side of a looking-glass. A key-rack of some kind in a bedroom is always a useful article, for on it may find a place the keys of those doors, etc., that for safety's sake should be locked up each night before going to bed.

Blouses for Growing Girls.

A wise mother will never lose sight of the fact that the best designs for growing girls of the so-called awkward age are those which are the simplest. Those which allow the freest possible movement are advisable. One little dress which would be pretty made of any woolen goods, which is plaid checked or striped, is made with the skirt in one piece, straight. It may either be gathered or pleated as preferred. The waist is a blouse waist, which is made without tucks or trimming of any kind, except for a little pocket of the material, which may be stitched to the left of the waist.

The sleeves are medium full and are full length. The bottom of the waist is hemmed and has a draw string in it to tie around the waist. A little collar of linen made in the Buster Brown style freshens and brightens the dress, though this may be made of white serge, flannel or cashmere, and be attached to the waist. A little bow tie is worn with it.

Vogue of Filet.

Filet is destined to be the favorite where laces are concerned, and will appear on every garment in some form or other during the coming winter. For evening dress, the long tunic of filet net, cut into sharp points back and front, and weighted with tassels, is one of the most fashionable accessories.

Draping for Blouses.

Many handsome blouses of soft silk are draped with rare old fichus. A stunning one of gorgeous length over a nile green liberty satin blouse, arranged so that it falls down over the shoulders and tops of the sleeves, is held at the waist line by the girdle under which it passes. The ends reach nearly to the hem of the skirt. One of the recent fancies is to dye the lace scarf to match the blouse with which it is to be worn. These are also frequently seen worn over fine white lace or lingerie blouses. It is these little accessories that make the house blouses attractive. For an informal afternoon tea there is nothing that quite equals a pretty little separate blouse. As much elaboration as one desires may be lavished on the fancy blouse; this is why the average woman is loath to see it pass out of existence.

Making Skirts.

The walking skirt of this date is a roomy one, though noticeably short, and many are made of heavy coating, unlined, and trimmed with bands of lighter material. The stitched hem is again in favor and the walking skirt will be seen with as many as 11 stitched rows around the lower portion of the dress. One new model shows a shaped skirt with a seam down the center front, though not to the bottom of the skirt. This seam is slightly hollowed and gives part of the features of a new Parisian skirt in draped effect, only the sides of the front panel are straight and not gathered. The skirts are wide and full, though close fitting over the hips.

A Serviceable Veil.

Veils are one of the most important accessories of the well-dressed woman, and it is well to know that those of English, cross-barred, horsehair, with diamond-shaped single mesh, will outwear any number of ordinary tulle and are far less trying to the eye.

Outre Cloths.

There never fail to be a few examples of bizarre cloths that are dubbed stunning by many, loud and vulgar by others. This year's output on such lines runs into black cloths plaided by different widths of white in lines that are truly gigantesque, the square of 18 inches being prominently defined by a quarter of an inch line of white and another an eighth of an inch intersected through the middle of the square. They resemble in style the large plaidings seen in traveling rugs, and if to be reserved only for traveling coats, wraps, or for two-piece suits they will seem better fitted surely than for any other purpose.

But few tailors would think of using such cloth except as an introduction into parts of a suit, and no doubt they will manage to evolve no little chic out of it, in contrast with a solid black or some very dark color.

Vogue of the Waistcoat.

The woman who is dressing upon moderate means is keenly alive to the dressy responsibilities of the small things of her attire, and to her the waistcoat appeals strongly. She has one made to wear with each coat, and it is only a matter of choice with her whether she puts it on or not. The prettiest of the winter gowns have separate waistcoats, which can be slipped on under the outer coat and buttoned up tightly. Then the coat is put on and secured to the waistcoat with an invisible hook or two.

Choosing a Hat.

When it comes to the choice of a hat do not get a small toque if the features are large, particularly the nose. The tendency with too small a hat will be to exaggerate the size of this feature. Be equally careful should the features be small, not to choose too heavy-looking a hat, and this no matter how tall you are. Large hats may be worn, but they must be light and graceful in [illegible]

USE OF PORTIERES

MUST HARMONIZE WITH THEIR SURROUNDINGS.

Unless in Accord with Other Furnishings of the Room Their Utility Is Destroyed—Suggestions Worth Remembering.

Portieres should beautify rooms, but if the general style, material and pattern of these hangings are not appropriate and in harmony with the surroundings, then they may mar the effect of a whole apartment.

This is particularly true when the doorways of small rooms are to be hung, for unless the draperies are in accord with other fittings abnormal proportions are made and the lines of the entire room rendered grotesque.

In choosing designs for portieres to be used in small rooms, get plain stuff, or when the ceilings are low, striped goods, for the perpendicular lines add height to the ceiling.

Never, unless the room is large, select hangings with big figured devices, for the contrast between the size of the pattern and the room space is so great as to dwarf the doorway.

The apparent weight of such draperies should be governed by the size of the room. If the apartment is small light-weight materials are in better taste than portieres made in sets.

The latter if the figures are woven in self colors or tapestries are not bad, but when crude combinations of colors are seen, or enormous and none too graceful patterns finished with deeply-knotted fringe, they should be passed by in favor of something different. The only fringe suitable now for portieres is the narrow "thumb," either in balls or tassels.

Reps in plain colors, heavy pongee silks, burlaps, denims and other thin materials having just enough weight not to blow straight with each draft are prettiest for doors in apartments. Larger rooms will take tapestries, brocades and velveteens, either figured or plain.

All portieres will wear longer if they are lined—that is, if backed with a material the same shade to give them more body.

USEFUL EVERY-DAY COAT.

Especially Adapted for Girl of from Fourteen to Sixteen Years.

This is a useful every-day coat, that can be worn over any dress; it is in very pale grey fine cloth, lined with silk; the fronts are strapped with cloth.

The collar and cuffs are faced with figured velvet and strapped at the edge. The coat may be worn open or closed.

The hat is of coarse pink straw, trimmed with a soft silk scarf.

Materials required: Two and one-half yards 46 inches wide, four yards silk lining and three-fourths yard velvet for facing.

BETTER THAN USING RICE.

Silver Slippers and Rose Petals in Favor for Weddings.

"Silver slippers and rose petals are taking the place of rice at all fashionable weddings," said a clergyman. "It is a change for the better.

"The silver slippers—to replace the old boots—are about half an inch long. Silver paper cut in the shape of dainty slippers. The rose petals—to replace the rice—are the real thing. Thousands of petals stripped by hand from hundreds of pink roses.

"In great bowls the silver slippers and the pink petals are heaped in the hall, and when the bride and groom emerge, instead of being cannonaded with coarse rice and dirty old boots a sunset cloud, as it were, envelops them, an odorous pink and silver cloud of rose petals and little shining slippers.

"Yes, it is a change for the better, this, and day by day it gains ground."

Woman's Duty.

It is a woman's duty to be socially attractive, not statistically correct.—Home Notes.

For the Tailor-Made.

For the decoration of the tailor made braid, embroidery, buttons and tassels have lost not a whit of popularity. Many of the most becoming hats worn with morning tailor-mades are trimmed with frayed ruches of soft silk. Fur is very much used by the milliner for the present season. One of the smartest and most becoming hats in one of the millinery salons here is a wide-brim shape with high crown and the entire top covered plainly with broadtail. It is trimmed with a wide crushed band of the broadtail and with black feathers. A good many turban browns are composed of mink, and such hats are brightened often with flowers of soft pastel tones. The "dead" shades are very suitable for such hats in both flowers and ribbons.

The Separate White Skirt.

One of the most useful possessions for the girl with nothing a year is a white mohair skirt, but in choosing this it is essential to get a dead white, as cream color will destroy the [illegible]

SMART SUIT FOR WALKING.

Designed with Skirt and Coat and Silk Blouse.

Walking suits are charming and come in a number of smart guises. A French homespun is artistically designed with skirt and coat, and shown with a charming blouse of silk Toscos. The front of the skirt is made with a panel which extends in a loose fold around the bottom, and there is an extra trimming of flat bands of braid above the fold of homespun.

The coat is trimmed with panne velvet, which forms the revers, collars and cuffs. It fastens at the front with a vest of white leather of the softest, finest quality. There is a wide tuck on either side of the back and front, the tucks ending above the waist line in front under bands of the cloth, which are cut in one with the coat. The bands are ornamented with a row of velvet buttons. At the back of the skirt part of the coat is tucked from under the panel, while the shoulder extends over the upper part of the sleeve, the sleeve being attached to the armhole with a tuck. The buttons of the sleeves are finished with cuffs of velvet, as previously mentioned. The cuffs, in turn, are ornamented with crochet buttons and simulated button-holes.

Millinery Violets.

The violets that are worn this winter do not resemble the sweet-scented little purple flower of the woods. In outline they are the same, but there the likeness ends. Our newest millinery violets are very large, very dark, and in color very unnatural. At a little distance they look rather like pansies, but undoubtedly they are effective. For felt hats it is considered necessary to mix silk and velvet flowers, the touch of velvet being sometimes introduced on the leaves also. Another favorite trimming for the cloche hat is an enormous ruche of soft silk, showing fringed edges. The silk must be of the best quality, otherwise when the edges are fringed out they will not sit up properly, and it must be admitted that ruches of this kind run away with a great deal of silk.

Individuality in Styles.

The questions of individuality of style and suitability of color are very important factors of dress.

How often does one see a woman of the athletic type, who looks very smart in tailor-mades, ruin her appearance at a dinner!

She arrives in a flimsy confection of pink chiffon, with her hair elaborately waved.

Such dressing is absolutely unsuited to her strong personality.

Had she chosen a simple gown of white, if she had wound her locks around her head in a heavy plait, her appearance would have been striking.

Green and Blue.

Dark blue serge suits which are always worn have invariably been trimmed with green, but for a change the scheme is to be reversed. For instance, a dull green serge dress is extremely pretty when faced and finished off with a touch of navy blue in not too dark a shade. Many of the new green tweeds have just a suggestion of blue in the weaving in the form of a narrow stripe or a hairline check.

Stylish Gloves.

The American woman, notwithstanding she is generally understood to be the best dressed woman in the world, is being criticised by her foreign cousin for one thing or another. The latest accusation is that the American woman wears her gloves too small.

"They are so much too small at times," writes a Parisian critic, "that the glove fingers scarcely cover two-thirds of madame's finger, and the top button is near the palm of her hand instead of at the wrist line."

Whereas, it is none of this critic's business how Americans wear their gloves, it is an awkward thing to see ladies from any country who wear gloves that are too small.

Fringe to Be Fashionable.

Fringe, which is to become very fashionable, will be adopted in every way, falling over the shoulders, over the hands—in fact, in any effective whole or corner (if I may call it so) on the sleeve. There never was a time when the variety of styles was [illegible]

RYAN'S RISE TO WEALTH.

He Met Many Rebuffs, but Overcame Them All.

Describing the rise of Thomas F. Ryan in Everybody's, Charles Edward Russell says:

"Here was the poor boy facing the world alone, and none was poorer. The Ryans, an old family of the indomitable Scotch-Irish strain, had been utterly ruined by the Civil war. The old estate swamped with debt; the wolf looking in at the window; the boy, sixteen or seventeen years old, let alone with his aged grandmother; the problem of daily bread real and uncompromising before them; all this sounds like the first chapters of an old-time romance, and yet it is but a recital of biographical facts. And there is more to come; as if culled deliberately from the roseate fiction of our youth.

The poor boy, striving to battle with the depressing situation, wins his way to the great city (in this instance Baltimore) to look for work. From one place after another he is turned coldly away. Still he persists. At last, almost at evening, he enters a dry goods store. The proprietor needs an errand boy. He engages young Thomas, whose looks please him, to go to work the next morning at 7 o'clock. Young Thomas takes off his cap and hangs it on a peg. He says:

"'If you please, sir, I would rather go to work now,' and, seizing a broom, begins to sweep out.

"Does it not sound like a page from the old Fourth reader?

"'What are you doing there, little boy?' asked the good banker, looking over the counter.

"'Picking up pins, sir,' said Henry. And on the last page he is taken into partnership and marries the banker's daughter.

"Do not smile. It is all sober, earnest and part of the record of a sober, earnest life. The errand boy labors early and late at $3 a week. Presently he becomes a salesman. Then he is taken into partnership. Eventually he marries the proprietor's daughter. It is the very apotheosis of commercial romance."

SIMPLE DIAMOND TESTS.

A Needle Hole in a Card One Means of Detecting Imitation Brilliants.

"There are few persons," remarked a jeweler, "who are able to purchase a diamond on the strength of their own knowledge and observation and without placing implicit confidence in the man who sells the stone. It is a fact that even pawnbrokers have often been taken in by jewelry and precious stone fakers.

"Although it takes many years of actual observation and experience before one can become a diamond expert, there are a few simple tests which will considerably aid a buyer of diamonds. One test is to prick a needle hole through a card and look at the hole through the doubtful stone.

"If the latter is spurious two holes will be seen, but if it is a diamond only one hole will be visible. Every imitation stone which resembles a diamond gives a double reflection, while the diamond's reflection is single.

"This test is a delicate one because it is difficult to see even a sharp and defined object through a diamond. The single refraction of the diamond also allows one to determine an uncertain stone.

"If the finger be placed behind it and viewed through the stone with a watchmaker's glass the grain of the skin will be plainly seen if the stone is not a diamond. But if it is a diamond the grain of the skin will not be distinguished at all.

"A diamond in solid settings may be identified in the same manner. If genuine, the setting at the back cannot be discerned, but if it be a phony stone the foil or [illegible] will be seen.

"There is no acid which has any perceptible effect upon a genuine diamond. Hydrofluoric acid, if dropped on a stone made of glass, will corrode it, but will not affect a diamond. One [illegible]

A TERRIBLE CONDITION.

Tortured by Sharp Twinges, Shooting Pains and Dizziness.

Hiram Center, 618 South Oak Street, Lake City, Minn., says: "I was so bad with kidney trouble that I could not straighten up after stooping without sharp pains shooting through my back. I had dizzy spells, was nervous and my eyesight was affected. The kidney secretions were irregular and too frequent. I was in a terrible condition, but Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I have enjoyed perfect health since."

BLACK, ITCHING SPOTS ON FACE.

Physician Called It Eczema in Worst Form—Patient Despaired of Cure—Cuticura Remedies Cured Her.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black splotches all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of ——. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in the worst form. Their treatment did me no good. Finally I became despondent and decided to discontinue their services. My husband purchased a single set of the Cuticura Remedies, which entirely stopped the breaking out. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that every splotch was entirely gone. I have not felt a symptom of the eczema since, which was three years ago. Mrs. Lizzie E. Sledge, 540 Jones Ave., Selma, Ala., Oct. 28, 1905."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The Tattooed Name

By ELEANOR HODGENS

(Copyright.)

Whoever has taken a long sea voyage aboard a great ship will remember that there is always a great deal of coupling off among the passengers. Friendships are formed which often last through life—flirtations, open or hidden, are carried on—love affairs are developed that not seldom end in marriage, and all these are observed and commented upon by those sober people always found in a large company, who are merely the onlookers, not partakers.

At the time of the journey which I am about to relate, I was not a very young person, neither was I a very old one; nor did I belong to the sober group of onlookers. It did not seem quite fair to me, therefore, in that long journey out through the eastern seas on our way to Australia via Ceylon, that I should be almost the only unmarried woman who had not formed an interesting friendship with some one aboard.

My cousin, Margaret Emmons, had plunged into a sudden and intense liking for the ship's doctor the very first day out. Her sister Louise was soon seen sitting in far-away, retired corners with a good-looking young wool merchant, on his way out to the colonies, at every opportunity she—or he—could find. Even Mrs. Matthews, the widow of 45, in whose care we three girls were traveling, had found a portly old Englishman so "interesting" that she read pages aloud to him by day, and played whist or paced the deck with him by night.

There were but three first cabin passengers who came on board the vessel at Ceylon, two of whom were plain-faced colonial women for Australia, and the third a young Englishman. I gave a start when I took my place at dinner that night, to find that his seat was next my own. We began almost at once to exchange the civil remarks with which new acquaintances fence, and before 24 hours had passed I had entered upon several interesting conversations with the new passenger, Mr. Dallas-West.

Long Hours of Idleness on Deck We Spent Together.

Days and evenings and long hours of idleness on deck we spent together, and who does not know how acquaintances ripen under such circumstances? But under any circumstances and in any place, this well-bred young Englishman would have been an agreeable companion; here on shipboard therefore, in our little, isolated floating world, he shone out like a bright star.

Though he talked very freely during the hours when we were alone together, he had told me very little about himself except that he had an appointment under the government in India, where he had lived for five years.

"Do you expect to return there?" I asked one evening, as we sat side by side on deck together.

"Oh, I suppose I must—but—but—I hate to think of going back."

"Then you do not like India?"

"Yes, I am fond of the life there. Under—under some circumstances I could find it a paradise."

"You look very good and true, Miss Elwood," he said, after a long silence.

"I—I think I am true," I answered.

"And so sympathetic," he went on, not seeming to hear me. "I liked your face from the first. I—I felt that it was a face in which one could confide."

"Confide?" I echoed.

"Yes; I am sure, for example, that you would feel for a man who had given his heart to a woman and—and—had it thrown back at him."

A cold feeling oppressed me. This was not what I had expected him to say.

"Have you had such an experience?" I asked faintly.

"I have. That is why I am traveling now," he answered in a low voice. "I felt that I must leave India for the present. Forgetfulness—oblivion—that is what I seek. Oh, it will come in time, I am sure. It must come and take this weight of memory from my heart. I do not allow myself to be alone—I do not want to think.

"And yet to think," he broke out, "that I must bear her name engraven upon me forever!"

"Is it so hopeless as that?" I asked gently. "That you must wear her name upon your heart forever?"

"Not upon my heart; no—upon my arm."

"But I do not understand," I said. "Is that girl's name tattooed upon your arm? What an absurd idea? I cannot believe it."

"Then I shall show you, just to prove my folly." He unfastened his cuff and quickly bared his arm to the elbow. There in the white flesh of the forearm, entwined in a wreath of forget-me-nots, was the name "Jessie," written in indelible blue dye.

"Jessie—so that was her name?" I murmured.

"Yes, Jessie," he answered softly, with a long, pensive gaze out over the moonlighted water.

My thoughts that night as I tossed to and fro upon my pillow were not enviable ones. The name "Jessie, Jessie," echoed and reechoed through my brain. How could she have deceived him and scorned the love of a man like that—so handsome, so amiable, so altogether attractive?

"If only her name were not written upon his body forever and forever," I reflected, "I believe—yes—I really believe I might even yet make him 'forget,'" and with this thought sleep came to calm my troubled spirit.

In the few days that followed before we landed at Melbourne, it seemed as if Mr. Dallas-West was also possessed with this belief. Never had he been so kind, so gentle, so tender even. His eyes lost that habit of straying dreamily off over the railing, and fixed themselves with entire interest upon me. He was so constantly by my side that even Margaret, who had never been quite willing to confess his devotion to me, was ready to do so now. Toward the end of the last day, as she and I went below to prepare for landing, she said with a sentimental sigh:

"Ah, me, all our shipboard friendships must now come to an end—all except yours, Elizabeth. I suppose yours will go on forever."

But alas, my shipboard friendship came to an end with the rest. I scarcely realized how this happened, for Mr. Dallas-West and I made many plans to meet again during our travels in Australia. Whether the frustration of these was owing to the miscarriage of my note to his hotel in Sydney in answer to one from him, or whether it was only that destiny took matters into her own hands, I do not know, but for three long months after landing in Australia I did not see Mr. Dallas-West.

In the diversion of rapid travel I had almost ceased to think of the expressive dark eyes of Mr. Dallas-West, when one day at our hotel in Melbourne, I ran straight against him. We stared at each other a moment in bewilderment, and then both burst into explosive expressions of pleasure.

Mrs. Matthews, Margaret and Louise, who had been just behind me, hastened forward to greet him with hurried questions:

"Where have you been? Why have we not seen you?"

I was so eagerly and delightedly scanning his features that I did not at first notice a girlish figure standing shyly behind him. When Mr. Dallas-West saw that my gaze was resting inquiringly upon her a slight color came into his face, and with a quick movement he led her forward.

"This is my wife," he said. "We are to sail in two days for India. Jessie, these are the ladies of whom I told you, who were so very kind to me during the voyage out."

"Jessie!" I gave him a quick look, but he turned his eyes away and busied himself in answering Mrs. Matthews' questions.

"How did it happen?" "When were you married?" "And so you are returning with your bride to India? How nice—like an idyll" "But you must dine with us to-night. Oh—we cannot take no; we must all drink champagne together in honor of your marriage."

They accepted Mrs. Matthews' invitation to dinner, and came again that night to our hotel. It was not, however, until dinner was almost at an end that I had an opportunity to speak alone with Mr. Dallas-West.

"Now tell me," I said in a low voice, "how has it all come about? Did she repent and follow you away from India to Australia?" He stared at me. "Jessie, I mean," I explained.

"Oh, no," he answered a little apprehensively. "Do you not understand? This is not the same Jessie—but another. I met her in Adelaide shortly after I parted from you."

"But how—how—will you explain your tattoo mark?"

"I have already done so, and—and—this leads me to what I have been wanting to ask you all evening. You are so good—so true. I want to ask you not to betray me to her. I—I have told her that I had done it for her. The name, you know, curiously enough, is the same."

"Then you chose her for her name?" I said with a little feeling of relief.

"No, not for her name—for herself," he said, fondly looking across the table at the beautiful young English girl who was his bride.

I followed his gaze to her and my mental comment was, I think, a generous one in view of all that had gone before. "Whatever the first Jessie may have been," was my reflection, "she could not have been half so sweet and lovely as this second Jessie," and I magnanimously resolved that no temptation would ever induce me to reveal to her the real history of her husband's tattooed arm.

THE VICTIM OF HIS OWN LAW.

Predicament of George P. McCabe Should Please Beef Packers.

George P. McCabe, solicitor of the department of agriculture, had an experience a few weeks ago which probably will gratify the beef packers. McCabe was the author of that provision of the meat inspection law which forbids any railroad to transport meats unless labeled "U. S. Inspected and Passed." The agriculture solicitor is a hospitable man. He likes nothing better than to gather a few congenial souls around his board, especially on Sunday afternoon. He has been passing the summer at Garrett Park, Md., a suburb of Washington, and buys all his supplies in the capital city.

During a hot spell some time ago he asked a number of men to dine with him on the Sabbath and told his wife that as the ice box was low it would be wise to replenish the meat supply. Mrs. McCabe dutifully came to Washington and purchased about 70 pounds of roast beef, bacon, lamb, etc. The butcher sent the basket to the railroad station and the baggageman promptly declined to receive it on the ground that it was not marked "U. S. Inspected and Passed."

Mrs. McCabe telephoned to her husband; he tried to turn the wheels of government, but failed—it was Saturday and work ceased at one o'clock—and in order to get the stuff out to his home McCabe had to take it into the passenger car. Upon arrival at Garrett Park there was no vehicle waiting. The solicitor was compelled to load the basket on his shoulder and march along a dusty road and then through what is called "the dreary woods" to reach his house. He toiled for half an hour before he arrived at home, and when he did his friends say he was in an unspeakable frame of mind. One thing is certain, "U. S. Inspected and Passed" is not half as popular in the agricultural department as it was before that blue Saturday.

SKATE ON CAPITAL STREETS.

Clerks Use Roller Skates to Go to Their Occupations.

Roller skating, which in other cities is practically an amusement, is used in a practical way by government employes in Washington. About 25 clerks employed in the post office department who live in the vicinity of Mount Pleasant skate to the office. The clerks formed a party for their first appearance, for the reason that up to this time roller skating has been considered the prerogative of children and not generally indulged in by grown people outside of rinks.

M. O. Chance, chief clerk, led the party, which made its way down Sixteenth street as the most desirable thoroughfare.

It is expected that the organization of this concerted movement in the direction of practical roller skating will place the sport upon a basis similar to that once enjoyed by the bicycle. The miles of smooth asphalt streets in Washington unobstructed by much heavy traffic make it an ideal city for skating. Thousands of young men and women go to work in the departments daily and need not only the exercise which roller skating to the office will give, but the price of car tickets as well.

Work for Senator's Secretary.

Every new congress brings to Washington the meanest man in Christendom. A western senator arranged last summer for the construction of a barn.

"I want the work done as economically as possible," he told the carpenter. "It will save money, won't it, to drive one nail instead of two into each board?"

"Yes," was the reply. "But the barn won't be as strong."

"That's all right," responded the thrifty senator, "you go ahead with the work, using one nail in each board."

When the carpenter finished the senator used a Western Union frank to call his secretary to his home "to do some work which had accumulated." Upon the letter's arrival he disposed of a number of letters and then said:

"Here are four pounds of nails. I want you to drive an extra nail in every plank in that barn."

As the government pays the salaries of senators' secretaries it is readily apparent that the western economist saved something in having him instead of the carpenter drive the requisite number of nails into the barn.

Economical Senator Clark.

Rich as is ex-Senator William A. Clark of Montana, he indulged in various economies while in Washington which attracted considerable attention. Late one night when it was raining cats and dogs Clark entered a car, his umbrella dripping and the bottoms of his trousers soaked. Several passengers knew Clark and began speculating about what they would do if they had his money.

"A carriage for mine on a night like this," observed one.

"A steam yacht to navigate the streets," remarked another.

"I would do exactly what Clark has done," said a third. "A cab would cost 50 cents. My trousers could be pressed in the morning for a quarter. A street car ticket costs 4 1-3 cents. There is a clear profit of 20 2-3 cents, and that to a millionaire means something. Just multiply that sum by 365 and you would appreciate the yearly saving. Little economies make little millionaires."

S.S.S. FOR BAD BLOOD

The most important part of the human system is the blood. Every muscle, nerve, tissue, bone and sinew is dependent on this vital fluid for nourishment and strength necessary to maintain them in health and enable each to perform the different duties nature requires. Even the heart, the very "engine" of life, receives its vigor and motive power from the blood. Since so much is dependent on this vital fluid it can very readily be seen how necessary it is to have it pure and uncontaminated if we would enjoy the blessing of good health. Bad blood is responsible for most of the ailments of mankind; when from any cause it becomes infected with impurities, humors or poisons, disease in some form is sure to follow. Muddy, sallow complexions, eruptions, pimples, etc., show that the blood is infected with unhealthy humors which have changed it from a pure, fresh stream to a sour, acrid fluid, which forces out its impurities through the pores and glands of the skin. A very common evidence of bad blood is sores or ulcers, which break out on the flesh, often from a very insignificant bruise or even scatch or abrasion. If the blood was pure and healthy the place would heal at once, but being loaded with impurities, which are discharged into the wound, irritation and inflammation are set up and the sore continues. Bad blood is also responsible for Anaemia, Boils, Malaria, etc.; the weak, polluted circulation cannot furnish the nourishment and strength required to sustain the body, and a general run-down condition of health results. S. S. S. is nature's blood purifier and tonic; made entirely of healing, cleansing roots and herbs. It goes down into the circulation and removes every particle of impurity, humor or poison that may be there, restores lost vitality, and steadily tones up the entire system. It adds to the blood the healthful properties it is in need of, and in every way assists in the cure of disease. S. S. S. neutralizes any excess of acid in the blood, making it fresh and pure, and permanently cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, and all other skin diseases and eruptions. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Malaria, and all other diseases or disorders arising from bad blood. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired free to all who write.

> Your S. S. S., in my opinion, is as good a medicine as can be had; it simply cannot be improved upon as a remedy to purify and enrich the blood and to invigorate and tone up the system. This spring my blood was bad and I was run down in health, and having seen your medicine highly advertised I commenced its use. Today my blood is in fine condition and my general health is of the best. Am filling position as fireman for a large concern here, and if I was not in good physical condition it would be impossible for me to fill the place. Your S. S. S. has been of great service to me and I do not hesitate to give it the credit it deserves.

PUBLIC NOTICE

TO USERS OF

CALCIUM CARBIDE AND ACETYLENE GAS

The Union Carbide Combide. the owner of United States Letters Patent No. 541, 138 of June 18, 1895, for the product cystalline Calcium Carbide, cautions the public against the use or sale of Calcium Carbide [or carbolite] manufactured by any other person, firm or corporation. All commercial calcium carbide is crystalline.

Especial attention is called to the law which makes the person who merely uses or sells an infringing product just as liable to damages as the manufacture of it. This cautionary notice is given to save innocent parties from litigation and damages to which they will be liable if they use or sell any such calcium carbide (by whatever name it may be called) manufactured by any other person, firm or corporation.

The public is especially advised that important suits have been brought by Union Carbide Company, and are now pending in the United States Circuit Courts in New York and Ohio against parties using and selling the product manufactured by the American Carbolite Company, and that these suits will be followed by such others as may be deemed necessary to protect this company in its patented product, Calcium Carbide. The pending suits are being vigorously pushed by the undersigned with all available energy, and such progress has already been made that a finding and judgment sustaining the rights of the Union Carbide Company may reasonably be expected in the not distant future.

SHAKE IN A BOTTLE.

Advice of Noted Authority. Also Gives a Simple Home Prescription.

Now is the time when the doctor gets busy, and the patent medicine manufacturers reap the harvest unless great care is taken to dress warmly and keep the feet dry. This is the advice of an old eminent authority, who say that Rheumatism and Kidney trouble weather is here, and also tells what to do in case of an attack.

Get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bed time.

Just try this simple home made mixture at the first sign of Rheumatism if your back aches or you feel that the kidneys are not acting just right. This is said to be a splendid kidney regulator, and almost certain remedy for all forms of Rheumatism, which is caused by uric acid in the blood, which the kidneys fail to filter out. Any one can easily prepare this at home and at small cost.

Druggists in this town and vicinity, when shown the prescription, stated that they can either supply these ingrediants, or, if our readers prefer, they will compound the mixture for them.

Badly Mixed Up.

Abraham Brown, of Wintertoo, N. Y., had a very remarkable experience: he says: "Doctors got badly mixed up over me; one said heart disease; two called it kidney trouble; the fourth, blood poison, and the fifth stomach and liver trouble; but none of them helped me, so my wife advised trying Electric Bitters, which are restoring me to perfect health. One bottle did me more good than all the five doctors prescribed." Guaranteed for blood poison, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney complaints, by W. A. Schreiter, druggist, 50c.

A Dangerous Deadlock,

that sometimes terminates fatally, is the stoppage of liver and bowel functions. To quickly end this condition without disagreeable sensations, Dr. King's New Life Pills should always be your remedy. Guaranteed absolutely satisfactory in every case or money back, at W. A. Schreiter's drug store. 25c.

You know as well as anyone when you need something to regulate your system. If your bowels are sluggish, your food distresses you, your kidneys pain, take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. It always relieves. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.—W. A. Schreiter.

Default having been made in the payment of eleven dollars which became due April 16th, 1907 and is due and claimed to be due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Lena Bugge, and Christ J. Begge, her husband, mortgagors, to J. A. Duffy mortgagee bearing date the 16 day of April, A. D. 1903, and with a power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 11th day of August, 1903, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., of said day in Book 26 of mortgages on page 629,

And whereas, pursuant to the terms of said mortgage and condition of said mortgage, by reason of said default, the whole principal sum of said mortgage, to-wit: The sum of $83.00 unpaid, did on the 17th day of April, 1907, become at once due and payable and was so declared by said mortgage, and

Whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable on said mortgage, at the date of this notice, the sum of $83.00 with interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum on $50.00 thereof, since April 25th, 1905, and on $33.00 thereof, since April 16th, 1903, and the further sum of $31.20 with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum since December 16th, 1907, the latter amount being for interest paid by said J. A. Duffy, under the terms of said mortgage, upon a prior first mortgage owned by W. S. Seaverns, default having been made in the payment of the same and said amount by said mortgagors, and

Whereas, the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof:

Now, therefor, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and persuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage first described will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, towit,

West half of the northeast quarter, (W½ of NE¼) of section fourteen, (14), in township one hundred fifty four, (154) north, of range forty-five (45) West, in Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake County, Minnesota, at the west front door of the Courthouse, in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said county and state, on the 8th day of February, A. D, 1908, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at public vendue to highest bidder for cash; to pay said debt of $83.00 and $31.20, and interest on said amounts as aforesaid, and taxes, if any, on said premises, and a reasonable attorneys fee as stipulated in said mortgage, the same being hereby stated and claimed to be the sum of twenty five dollars, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated December 26th, 1907.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, dated the second day of November, 1903, and recorded in the office of Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, on the 29th day of March A. D., 1904, at five o'clock p. m., in book twenty-nine (29) of Mortgages on page three hundred fifty-five (355), whereby John N. Miller and Lizzie K. Miller, his wife, who were the mortgagors therein, mortgaged and conveyed to L. S. Hackney, who was the mortgagee therein, the following described property, situate in the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The south half of the ne¼ of section number five (5) in township number one hundred fifty-three (153), north of range number forty-four (44), west of the fifth principal meridian containing eighty (80) acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof, to secure the payment of the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars and interest thereon, at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, according to the terms of their certain promissory note, bearing even date with said mortgage and payable five years after date, with interest at the rate of seven (7 p. c.) per cent per annum, payable annually.

Said mortgage contained a provision, that should any default be made in the payment of any annual installment of interest due thereon or in the payment of any taxes thereafter to be assessed thereon, previous to the day appointed for the sale of lands for state taxes in the state of Minnesota, then and thereupon the whole sum for the security of which said mortgage was given shall become immediately due and payable at the election of the said mortgagee.

Said mortgagors have defaulted in the payment of the sum of four and 81-100 ($4.81) dollars of the annual interest due thereon on the second day of November, 1906, and in the payment of the sum of twenty-eight ($28) dollars, being the entire installment of interest due thereon on the second day of November, 1907, and in the payment of the taxes assessed thereon for the year 1905, and are still in default therein.

There is claimed to be actually due on said note and mortgage, at the date of this notice the sum of four hundred ($400) dollars, principal; thirty four and 35-100 ($34.35) dollars interest; nine and 45-100 ($9.45) dollars paid by said mortgagee for the taxes of 1905 after said premises had been sold for taxes, with sixty five cents interest thereon; twenty-five ($25) dollars, attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage, to be paid in case of a foreclosure thereof, in all, amounting to the sum of four hundred sixty-nine and 45-100 ($469.45) dollars, due thereon at the date of this notice, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover said debt or any part thereof.

Now, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale, in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, said mortgage will be foreclosed and the property above and therein described will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, on the 18th day of January, 1908, to satisfy and pay said debt, interest, attorney's fees and the costs and expenses of said sale.

Dated November 25th, 1907.

Notice of Expiration of Redemption

OFFICE OF COUNTY AUDITOR, County of Red Lake. State of Minnesota }

To J. W. SCHRAMM:

You are hereby notified that the following described piece or parcel of land, situated in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota and known and described as follows, to-wit: The east one-half (E½) of the northwest quarter (NW¼) and Lots one (1), two (2) and three (3) of Section Seventeen (17), in Township One Hundred Fifty-one (151), Range Forty-three (43), is now assessed in your name; that on the ninth day of May, A. D. 1904, at a sale of land pursuant to the real estate tax judgment, duly given and made in and by the District Court in and for said County of Red Lake on the twenty-fourth day of March, A. D. 1904, in proceedings to enforce the payment of taxes delinquent upon real estate for the year A. D. 1902 for said County of Red Lake, the above described piece or parcel of land was bid in for the State of Minnesota for the sum of eighteen dollars and forty-one cents; that upon the twenty-second day of March, A. D. 1905, said land still remaining unredeemed, and the amount for which the same was so bid in for the State, together with all the subsequent delinquent taxes, penalties, interest and costs, amounting in all, to twenty dollars and eight-one cents, having been paid into the treasury of said county by J. A. Duffy, said land was assigned and conveyed to him by the Auditor of said County, pursuant to the statutes in such cases made and provided; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from said sale exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice, is the sum of Twenty-seven Dollars and Fifty-four Cents and interest on Twenty Dollars and Eighty-six Cents, at the rate of twelve per cent per annum from the twenty-first day of November, A. D. 1907, to the day such redemption is made; and that the said tax certificate has been presented to me by the holder thereof, and the time of redemption of said piece or parcel of land from said sale, will expire sixty (60) days after the service of this notice and proof thereof has been filed in my office.

Witness my hand and official seal this twenty-first day of November, A. D. 1907.

JOHN B. O'BRIEN,
(Seal) County Auditor,
